denominational bodies, as a delightful spirit of unity prevails in the islands. The chief difficulties that religious workers on the islands have to meet is the tendency to materialism growing out of the great commercial prosperity, and that growing out of the influx of foreign labor.

A RUNAWAY CHURCH.

During the recent flood a wooden church with a bell weighing nearly half a ton was deposited on Blennerhasset Island, in the Ohio River. There was nothing to show where the church had come from or what denomination had worshiped in it. The inhabitants promptly secured it, moved it to a desirable sits and will use it for the purpose for which it was intended.

Runaway couples are common enough, and so are runaway horses. ?Even locomotives have been known to break from their couplings and run away along the track. As for the boys who run away to shoot Indians or become cowboys, and the runaway girls who want to go on the stage or make what they call "careers" for themselves, their name is legion. But never before in the history of our country has a church been known to run away.

But this is not the first time that Blennerhasset Island has figured in history. It was the home of the gifted but visionary young Irishman who yielded to the persuasive tongue of Aaron Burr.—New York Herald.

ENGLAND'S MONUMENT TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

For some time preparations for the celebration of the centenary of peace between America and England have been under way, although the celebration is yet more than a year in the future. At the head of the British Committee is Earl Grey, and he announces that their plans include the erection of a monument to George Washington in Westminster Abbey. Of our first President he says: "The lamp of his character has been a beacon which for nearly one hundred and fifty years has enabled struggling humanity to steer through the darkness to a nobler and higher life and for this reason we think that it is only right that we should make use of the opportunity provided by the approaching centenial to do his memory honor on British soil." Steps are also being taken by the British Committee to purchase Sulgrave Manor, the ancestral home of the Washington family, and to maintain it as a place of pilgrimage for American and British visitors. Certainly the American people cannot entertain any doubt as to the friendly attitude of the British government and people toward our own nation.—Christian Advocate.

CHRIST'S WINSOMENESS.

A winsome voice my Master had.
He spoke and strong men rose
And in their fishing garments clad
Stayed not for day to close.
And one who at the treasury sat
Looked up, and seeing, came
And all his gains and friends forgat
At hearing of His name.
So winsome was my Master's voice,
They and the whole wide world rejoice.

A winsome touch my Master had,
The suffering ones arose
And, going as He gently bade,
Pain vanished and their woes.
The sick and the heavy-laden came
And something in His face
Brought rest and healing strength. The lame
Crept close with stumbling pace.
So winsome was my Master's touch,
The whole wide world felt never such.

A winsome smile my Master had,
The little children rose
Though friends and followers forbade,
Him as their own they chose,
And eager ran to His embrace
And straightway had no fear,
For something in His loving face
Assured them they were dear.
So winsome when my Master smiled
His very own were man and child.

—Mrs. Newell Dwight Hillis, in Everyland.

HEALTH HIGHER UP.

This health idea is a big one. It used to be regarded as a matter of sentiment. No so any longer. Now we have public health planks in our big national political platforms, health bureaus in the campaigns. A few weeks ago Governor Craig called attention to the need of more health work in this State, and in President Wilson's short inaugural address he found time to speak on public health in no uncertain terms. Here is what he said:

"We have not studied and perfected the means by which government may be put at the service of humanity, in safeguarding the health of the nation, the health of its men and women and its children, as well as their rights in the struggle for existence. This is no sentimental duty. The first basis of government is justice, not pity. These are matters of justice. There can be no equality of opportunity, the first essential of justice in the body politic, if men and women be not shielded in their lives, their very vitality, from the consequences of great industrial and social processes which they cannot alter, control, or singly cope with. Society must see to it that it does not itself crush or weaken or damage its own constituent parts. The first duty of law is to keep sound the society it serves. Sanitary laws, pure food laws, and laws determining conditions of labor which individuals are powerless to determine for themselves, are intimate parts of the very business of justice and legal efficiency."

Dear Mr. Editor:

I seat myself and take my pen in hand to say that I have always heard that the bit dog hollers and from the way A. D. Shelton hollers I think he must be hit hard. I went through college one day and I try to preach sometimes. But the way I am when anybody shows me where I am wrong I say thank you sir. I do not know much and if somebody knows more and tells me what I don't know I am glad. How am I going to know better if somebody don't tell me.

I thought Mr. Ogburn had a beautiful spirit in the letter what he wrote and said he hoped no body would get mad and here comes Mr. Shelton and gets his back up about something, Maybe he thinks he knows as good as Mr. Ogburn. Well let him know as good. Maybe he does. I don't know.

some folks are mighty funny anyhow. did mr Ogburn say anything about education taking the place of the Spirit. if education makes man a fool he aint no better than the man whats a fool without education and vicer vercer

Peter and John were ignorent but they had been three years to the best theological seminary in the world, and maybe if mr shelton went to one three years he dooldent howl so when somebody told him he had made a mistake. was they his mistakes anyhow. mr Ogburn said some of them was the mistakes of educated men. is that what mr Shelton is kicking about. when a man finds fault with my way of doin and i know more that he do i ins hole up my head and go on and if i think he knows more i say thank you sir and try to do better, but that may be just my way because i don know no better.

Your unble brother
I. Nemo.

Dec. on Brotherhood Call No. 16.

Revs. J. F. McCulloch, D. A. Highfill, W. F. Swain, W. T. Tatten, J. H. Stowe, J. H. Abernethy, N. G. Bethea, and C. A. Cecil, three dollars each. Dr. W. R. Gorrie one dollar. Total, twenty-five dollars

J. A. Burgess, Sec. Treas.

PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENTS.

Flat Rock Ct. ..... May 3 to 4
Stanley Ct. ..... May 9 to 10
Rockingham, ... May 11, 12.
onroe Ct. ..... May 13 to 15
Mecklenburg Ct. ..... May 16 to 18
Charlotte, ... May 19
Thomasville, May 25, 11 A. M.
Piedmont, Mt. Carmel No. 1, May 25 3.P. M.
Welch Memorial, May 25, 8. P. M.
Haw River Ct., June 7 to 8.
Brown Summit, June 8 at night.
Piedmont Ct., June 14 to 15.
Tabernacle Ct., June 21 to 22.

Brethren, it only costs you one cent to publish my plan for your charge. Won't you please do so for my sake. C. A. C.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

April the 9th I left High point for Vance Ct. I reached Henderson at 12:50 on the 10th and found Bro. J. A. Burgess in waiting for me. We arrived at the parsonage in time for dinner. Soon Rev. J. D. Williams called and we had a few pleasant words and we parted. Bro. Burgess and I were soon on our way to New Hope. We spent the night with J. W. Dowlin pleasantly.

On the 11th ot 11 A. M., I preached to a very appreciative audience at New Hope. We drove to Bro. H. S. Fleming's and took dinner, and spent a short while in conversation with the family, and then we made our way to Flat Rock for 3 o'clock services and found the faithful few in waiting for our arrival. The word was presented and the people were very attentive. We drove back to Henderson, and I spent the night with Rev. J. D. Williams, and it is useless to say I enjoyed my visit, and to meet Mrs. Williams and his children. I again took dinner with Bro. B. and wife. At 11 A. M. we started for Harris' Chapel where the quarterly conference was to meet. At 2 o'clock we met, and the conference was called to order, and the business transacted in the usual way, and all business was looked after with some degree of interest. The reports were very good except the financial and that of the Class Leaders. The assessment plan is being put into effect, and I think this will greatly improve the finance on the charge.

Bro. B. and I spent the night with Bro. E. S. Glover.

At 11 A. M. on Sunday we had a splendid service and good congregation at the Chapel. After preaching we held a short business meeting relating to repairing the church which I think ought to be ,and I think will be done during thevear. With just a few there was subscribed nearly $400. Brethren, let the good work continue. I am expecting to hear of the work being commenced soon, some are enthusiastic, and I am sure the pastor wants to see the improvement.

We had 11 miles to drive by 3 P. M. and Mrs. Glover gave us a lunch and we ate along the road.

Our next appointment was at Gilburg at 2. P. M. We reached the appointment a little bit late. There was a splendid congregation present to hear the message and I trust it will have a good effect.

This closed my work on Vance, and the work seems to be in good condition and the pastor is doing pastoral work as well as preaching, and his people are appreciating his work very much. Claims over paid.

Through the kindness of Bro. Burgess I was taken to Mrs. Frank Harris' where I was to spend the night. At 7:30 P. M. Sunday night I met my appointment in Henderson. Bro. Williams commenced his special meeting at 11 A. M. I preached to a well filled house, and apparently the word was well received. Bro. Williams is appreciated by his people, and they realize they have a good pastor and preacher, and if the entire membership will cooperate much good can be accomplished during his ministry. I am hoping and praying there will be a great revival in the church before the present series of meetings shall come to a close.

I had a very pleasant stay with Mrs. Harris and her children during my stop in Henderson. Claim paid.

Granville.

Bro. N. G. Bethea met me in Henderson on the 14th and I went to Dickerson on the train and Bro. E. C. Harris' son met me and took me to their home where I took dinner, after dinner, in the buggy with Bro. Harris we drove to Rehobeth where I preached to a splendid congregation of good hearers. They have greatly improved their church since I last saw it. These are a great people.

Bro. Bethea and I went back to Henderson, and took supper with Bro. C. W. Finch. Soon after supper we were on our way to Mt. Carmel, our next appointment. A good attendance. Preaching over, Bro. B. married a couple, and we drove to Z. T. Garrett's and spent the night.

On the morning of the 13th we drove by the parsonage. We stopped with Bro. E. T. Bobbitt and took dinner. At 2 o'clock we started to Antioch, our next appointment at 3 P. M., and had a splendid service, and a very good attendance considering the number of members belonging to the church.

Spent the night with C. W. Grisson and wife. Back to the pasonage and took dinner with the parson and wife. After dinner we drove to Union Chapel, our next appointment and last appointment on the charge; and this is one of the nicest churches inside in our Conference. It rained so there was not a large attendance; but those that were present gave good attention. We took supper with Bro. H. A. Finch. Here I left the pastor and took the train for Littleton.

This circuit is one of our best fields and any minister might congratulate himself in being assigned to either of the fields named in these notes.

Claim paid.

I reached Littleton at 4 o'clock P. M. Rev. C. J. Edwards met me and took me to the parsonage and I spent the night pleasantly.

Halifax Ct.

On the 17th Bro. Edwards took me into the country 8 miles where Bro. Pritchard met me and we drove 7 miles to Lee's Chapel for the eleven o'clock service. A very good congregation aud they appreciated the message. Here they are going to improve the church. We took dinner with G. L. Knight. Drove six miles to Ringwood for the evening service. A very small attendance; but attentive. Here they are going to paint and improve their church. Took supper with S. M. Lewis, and then drove to Union and preached to the young people, and they were a very appreciative congregation.

At this place they are going to build a new church; the old building is to be sold to assist in putting up the new one. This is not a large, strong membership; but a few willing people can do what appears to be impossible to some. Spent the night with Aunt Peggy Lee. Our next appointment was Eden at 11 A. M. Not a large attendance; but the deficiency was made up in quality, and those present were helpful hearers. At this point Bro. C. E. Whitaker and wife were present, and to me it was a real treat to meet them. After preaching we drove to Bro. J. W. Hardie's and took dinner and a short rest, and then made our way to Brinkleyville. We took supper at the parsonage with Mrs. Pritchard. I met Mrs. Stubbins on her way to Ringwood to visit her parents at Brinkleyville.

Bro. Pritchard's people have nicely furnished the parsonage at Brinkleyville with all the heavy furniture, and many other nice articles to make it pleasant for the pastor and wife, and they appreciate all that has been done for their comfort.

I preached at Bethesda at 8 o'clock to a fairly good congregation; after preaching we returned to the parsonage to spend the night. This was my first time to meet Mrs. Pritchard, and she is a congenial, wide-awake preacher's wife. I was pleased to meet her. A good night's rest. Saturday A. M. Bro. Pritchard took me to Littleton and we took dinner with Bro. Edwards and wife.

My claim over paid.

Littleton Ct.

At 2 o'clock according to appointment we met in Littleton church to hold the second quarterly conference. There was a very good attendance of the officials present, and we had an interesting conference and all reports were good, and the conference decided to hold class meetings once a quarter; which is an advance step in the right direction.

Our quarterly conferences ought to be made more interesting and I believe we would have a fuller attendance. Bro. Edwards was pleased with the attendance and the interest his brethren took in the business of the conference. He and his family and I were invited to take supper with Bro. W. N. Thornton and wife, and we fared sumptuously. Spent the night at the parsonage. Sunday at 11 A. M. I preached at Littleton; at 3 P. M., Weaver's Chapel; at 8 o'clock P. M., at Vaughns. and had good congregations at each place.

Took dinner with Dr. Harrison of Littleton, and supper with Bro. Carter at Vaughns. Spent the night with Walter Vaughn. On Monday A. M. Bro. Edwards and I called to see Rev. D. A. Fishel, and spent a short while very pleasantly with him, he is a very interesting and entertaining character. I have heard much of his being a good preacher, hope to hear him some time.

Our 11 o'clock service was at Corinth six miles from littleton, not a large attendance on account of being busy and sickness in the community; a very good service.

Took dinner with Bro. M. J. Morris, then to our last appointment at Hawkin's Chapel at 3 P. M., and next to the largest week day attendance greeted us on Monday that has been my pleasure to see since I have been traveling the district. These are church going folks, and many others might profit by their example and they are splendid hearers.

After service the pastor and I turned our faces toward Littleton, and soon we landed at the parsonage, and found the pastor's wife feeling better.

Bro. E. and I were invited to take supper at Cooper Hotel, Bro. Cooper and wife are members of our church in Littleton and they made it very pleasant for me, for which I thank them. Bro. Burgess, Williams, Bethea, Pritchard and Edwards and their wives were all very thoughtful to my comfort and pleasure as all other pastor's wives have been. Claim paid.

I will say in closing; all these pastors are using the individual assessment plan for both pastor's salary and general interests so far as I remember and their people are co-operating in this important matter. Some are paying monthly and some quarterly, this is business, and men of any profession who fail to introduce business methods into their work can't hope to succeed.

C. A. Cecil.

High Point, N. C., April 22, 1913.

FROM OUR PASTORS

Granville.

Since my last report we have held our second quarterly conference and there was a creditable turnout of the officials, considering the weather and the bad roads.

Reports from some of the churches were good and some had very little to report because there had been but little done.

We are making some progress and everything seems to be moving forward now as the weather opens up.

Bros. C. W. Grissom of Antioch and E. C. Harris of Rehobeth are the nominees for delegate to our Annual Conference.

The fence around the parsonage is now complete and presents a nice appearance to the passer by as well as being a great help to the inmates of the parsonage. The old tobacco house that had a mosquito incubator under it has been moved and the old pit filled up and this with the building of a lot at the barn makes things look more home like. Thanks to all the brethren that helped to get this done. When the next preacher comes he can go right on with his work and not have to stop and make outside improvements.

Brethren, I believe we could spend part of our tenth making some improvements around our parsonages that would be doing a good work in saving the time and patience of ourselves as well as our successors. So many of our parsonages are built more as make shifts than as homes and I am sure if more attention was paid to them in making them home like it would go a long ways toward causing our preachers to be better satisfied and that would make for better work away from the parsonage. I heard some time ago of a preacher being spoiled at a certain place because the people did so much for his comfort; but I am sure that the salt factories would have to go out of business if that was their dependence—salting down preachers who had been spoiled by having so many conveniences around the parsonage. I am glad that our people are beginning to awaken along this line in some places; may it soon be in all.

Brother Cecil's visit to this charge was quite an inspiration not only to the pastor, but the people as well. Already the fruits of it are being shown in a way that helps. Biggest crowd at Antioch and Union Chapel at the last appointments I have seen since coming here except on special occasions.

When a man does more than simply preach and collect his salary it makes the people think there is more in it than that; just as a pastor does more than simply fill his appointments and expect his salary. I am very sorry that the weather at part of the churches was such as to keep a number away.

Notwithstanding to the contrary some think it is not the thing to do to tell what people do for you extra I have about forty families on this charge reading the Herald and I think they are entitled to a little local news though it may not show good taste, sense or what ever you are pleased to call it the following have come to the relief of the preacher's pocket book recently and have given in a way that counts. Bros. L. R. Woodleif, J. W. Floyd, William Garrett, L. W. Huff, C. W. Grisson, E. T. Pall and Sister Sallie Fuller, C. W. Finch.

Our next quarterly meeting will be held at Antioch some time during the special meeting in July as we think this a good way to get the officers of the charge together during our revivals and that works well as we tried it last year at a different church. Helps to bring the churches of the charge closer together in their efforts to do good.

We are planning, hoping, and praying for good revivals on this charge this year. Brethren, pray for us.

Sincerely,

N. G. Bethea.

Monroe Circuit.

President's appointments:

Mount Moriah, May 13, 8 P. M

Rose Hill, May 14, 8 P. M.

New Hope, May 15, 8 P. M.

I will meet the president in Marshville the morning of May 13.

O. D. Stacy

Mecklenburg Circuit.

Dear Brother Cecil: Your appointments are:

Zoar, May 16th, 7:00 P. M.
Beulah, May 17th, 2 P. M., quarterly Conf.
Preaching 7:00 P. M.
Antioch, 18th, 11 A. M.
Stallings, 7:30, P. M.

W. P. Martin.

Stanly.

Our second quarterly conference will meet a Simpson's Grove on Saturday before the 3rd Sunday in May. We desire the presence of all official members.

President's appointments:

Albemarle, May 7, at 7:45 P. M.
Friendship, May 8, at 7:45 P. M.
Love's Grove, May 9, at 11 A. M.
Mill Grove, May 9 at 2.30 P. M.

Geo. L. Reynolds.

Albemarle, N. C., April 28, 1913.

Uwharrie Ct.

Dear Editor:

I am so thankful to be at home again that I feel I must write a few lines, as many of my friends would like to hear how I am getting along. I think I am getting on finely and trust that I may soon be stout. I want to thank those that wrote me such comforting letters from this circuit and also Dr. C. C. Hubbard who was so thoughtful of me in sending the Greensboro Daily and also the Herald. I want to thank Bro. Willis Ferree and Bro. Bobby Walker for remembering Mrs. Trogdon with two good loads of stove wood while I was gone. I thank those that came in and gave her a word of comfort, for her burden was perhaps harder to bear than mine. So few people think much about the fellow that is sinking as long as they are swimming nicely; but it doesn't matter how smoothly our little bark is gliding now, the storm of life will come and the dark night of death will soon overtake us all, but many people live as though there was no God, or no judgment to meet; not only those of the world but many of those in the church. That is the greatest drawback we have to the kingdom of Christ on earth. May God help us to lay aside all malice and envy and strife of every form and let us be bound together in love, and let us go forth in obedience and with simple faith as the children of Israel did when they marched around the walls of Jericho, and then the walls of sin would fall down around us and we would take our children and neighbors for Christ. But until we lay down many of our whims and notions and the sin that doth so easily beset us Satan will still have the victory over them, and at the Judgment bar their sins will be upon our garments. What will parents say in that day when they hear their children cry out in despair and say, father, mother, I never heard you pray, and many will say, Why pa, ma, you wouldn't even take our church paper; for many times when I ask my members to subscribe, they say, no, I have all the papers I can read, and sit and while their time away reading political papers and never see the Bible, and never stop to think that their children and neighbors are taking notice of their life and that their influence will live after they are dead and gone; but thank God for the faithful we have on this work and I feel that we have been gaining ground for the last two years, and the Lord help us that we may make the greatest gain this year in the history of this charge. Pray for a revival in the heart of every individual, I close with love to all.

Joel B. Trogdon.

April 24, 1913.

Reidsville Mission.

By some mistake my second quarterly report did not appear in our M. P. H. I wrote it, and I was sure I sent it in, but several of my letters went astray lately, both from me and to me. We had as spiritual quarterly conference as I ever attended; not many officials present. There was a good report everyway. We are the broken off end of Haw River Ct., but bid fair to be one of the appointments that will be sought in a few years. The mission is moving right on and we will dedicate the church in Reidsville the 1st Sunday in June. Rev. A. G. Dixon will preach the sermon. All are invited to come, and we hope many will come; we will not send any special invitations. Our special meeting will continue from the 1st Sunday. Rev. J. H. Moton will assist in the meeting. I am informed that Bro. A. G. Dixon can remain with us some time. Bros. John D. Barnes and C. D. Williams are the nominees for delegates to Annual Conf. I sent my quarterly report to Bro. Cecil. We are now finishing up our church and several things have have been added, and we have approached the people till I feel a hesitancy to say more, and yet we will have several dollars to raise yet.

I feel very keenly the loss of my mother and last Sunday evening while I was looking and thinking, and thought of the time I had given here the past 3½ years, and how I could have spent more of that time with her, if it had taken longer to finish it. I decided I would give my friends and hers, an opportunity to perpetuate her memory, by sending me ten cents each to get a discipline, a Bible, and a clock if I could get enough, and I would have the names typewritten and pasted on the last blank page of the Bible. A jeweler has given me ten cents, and says he will get me a clock at cost and give me the express. I have $1.20 and I have every name that has given me any amount on the church from the beginning, and will leave them here in the church. I have received as small amounts as 5 cts. from children. Our people and friends sent a beautiful wreath for her funeral. Bro. M. A. Jones and Sister Fleetwood McCollum and Mary Gunn were the active ones, and others helped them to carry out their plan. They never can know how we appreciate it and the motive that prompted them.

Fraternally,
C. E. Raper.

Yadkin College Ct.

We are kept in on account of sickness. My wife has been very sick of pneumonia. I missed my appointments last Sunday, also today. I regret so much not being able to meet with the good people of Yadkin College Ct. Whether I carry sunshine and Christ enough to help them or not. I am always, personally, helped by meeting with them. I serve a good people and a people that have shown so much kindness to me and mine in the midst of all our grief and troubles. It seems that here I must suffer the most greatly. It is, indeed, fortunate for me, but unfortunate for them, that the hardest griefs and troubles of life should befall me here. I think but few people anywhere can equal this people I am so poorly serving, in loving sympathy and thoughtfulness of their pastor. I cannot repay, God alone must do it. He is willing. This is eight days and nights I have been hard busy nursing. I have not had off shoes and clothing for sleep in this time. I have felt at times I could not do more. Some how God gave me extra strength and I have kept on doing. Now she is much better, though weak. Fever all gone, and I hope by another Sunday I can begin again my work for the Master.

Official members will please take notice. The second quarterly conference of Yadkin College Ct. will convene at Bethesda Saturday before second Sunday in May; preaching at 11 o'clock, dinner, quarterly conference. It is the earnest desire of the pastor that each church shall be represented by each official member on charge.

Important business, brethren:

Willie Connie Gibson, the infant son of Bro. and Sister Carl Gibson, born Oct. 18, 1911, died April 16, 1912. Little Willie was a bright, fine looking little fellow. Willie's mother died about two months ago. Soon after the death of his mother he took measles, followed by pneumonia, then tubercular trouble which made him a great sufferer till it seemed to please God to take him to his good home above. He is now free from suffering and is at home forever. The father is lonely and sad being bereft of mother and son in so short a time, but God knows best. Weep not, dear father, as those who have no hope. Another cherished treasure in heaven. "The air is full of farewells for the dying and mourning for the dead. The heart of Rachel, for her children crying, will not be comforted." But, dear father, be comforted, in these glorious thoughts. While we on earth are weeping, Heaven's smiles are behind the clouds, and loved ones wait to greet us. us. The Pastor, H. L. Powell.

Lillian Margie Leonard, the infant daughter and only child of Bro. and Sister Luther Leonard, was born June 10, 1911, departed this life April 18, 1913. Lilian was a sweet, attractive little girl, loved by all who knew her. She fell a victim to membranous croup on Thursday eve. late and died on Friday night. The skill of two physicians and all that loving hands could do failed. She did not suffer long but her suffering was intense. While the broken hearts of father and mother are bleeding, and, oh! how sad and lonely the home must be. How much nearer and dearer is heaven because of this dispensation of God's eternal love. We can not see or understand now but we shall know and understand when we shall see Him face to face. Look not upon the dark and misty side! The sad farewells of earth are but the reminders of a glorious meeting that awaits us.

Then on that glorious day, we shall see and know them there. Then we shall be joined to Jesus and them forever to reign, in that home of love. And be forever at rest in the land of the blessed. Where Jesus will wipe away our tears, when earth's aching sorrows, and keenest pains, will be felt and feared no more.

H. L. Powell.

Rev. J. H. Abernethy, of the N. C. Conference, Methodist Protestant church, and Miss Belle Starr, of Creswell, N. C., were married in the Methodist Protestant church, Creswell, N. C., on April 28 at 8:30 P. M. Rev W. E. Swain, D. D., officiating.

Charge to a Judge.

State of North Carolina, Washington ounty.

To the Rev. W. E. Swain, D. D., ecclesiastical Judge of the April Term of the Creswell Matrimonial Court. Your honor will be called upon to open this court in the Methodist Protestant church in Creswell, County and State above written at 8:30 P. M., Monday April 28, 1913.

I beg leave to plead guilty to a charge of matrimony prepared against me by the municipality of Creswell, the bill of indictment having been issued by F. R. Johnson, Register of Deeds of Washington County at Plymouth April 21, 1913.

The witnesses are Messrs. Alfred Alexander, William Wile and Walter Starr. The other defendant is Miss Belle Star, and we humbly submit our trial to your deepest and most careful consideration and trust that the sentence will be "I pronounce you husband and wife in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen." Signed this the 25th day of April 1913.

J. H. Abernethy.

Raper.

Mrs. S. E. Raper, wife of J. J. Raper and mother of Rev. C. E. M. Raper and Mrs. J. W. Osborne, fell on eternal sleep April 19th, 1913, at the home of Mr. W. J. Osborne with whom she had lived for about eighteen years. Her husband preceded her about 22 years ago. She had only two children. She had helped to raise Bessie Osborne and she was not only grandmother but mothe rto her. Her daughter had been at Morganton about nine years from the effects of typhoid fever. Mr. W. J. Osbone was almost like a son and he said to me this was like giving up his mother. Nearly every one calle dher grandmother. She was known and loved by a large circle of friends.

She got up last Friday morning, the 18th, and called Bessie, who helped her to the bed and she was gone at once, not even a struggle,—heart failure. She was reared in the M. E. church, and those who knew her best and intimately said a saint has gone to the spirit-land. She had been in feeble health for a year or more. She came to see us Easter, it was the effort of her life, she was so weak; but while we mourn we are assured she is at rest.

The funeral was held at the home at 11 A. M. by Rev. W. E. Abernethy, pastor of the Spring Garden church. He had called to see her several times, and it was Bessie's request that he should do it. She was buried at Sandy Ridge by the side of her husband. The burial service was at 3 P. M., I have sung "I've no mother now, I'm weeping," but I never really knew its meaning till now. When she was to see us she wanted us to sing "Tell mother I'll be there in answer to her prayer." We sung it for her. Little did we think one month ago that she would be there now. O, angels, tell mother I'll be there! Each day heaven seems nearer. The hope of the church as I see it is to get the world ready for our Lord's second coming. "Be ye therefore ready also: for the Son of man cometh at an hour when ye think not." At times don't you want to go?

Her Son.

RECEIVED ON BROTHERHOOD CALL NO. 15.

Dr. W. R. Goley one dollar.

—Mrs. A. L. Hunter, of Pinnacle, is visiting relatives in Greensboro this week.

—S. A. Hodgin, assistant postmaster here, lost his house by fire on Tuesday morning.

—Rev. J. F. Dosier has moved to Liberty, N. C.

—Bro. Crowson near Asheboro had the misfortune to lose his house by fire last week.

Bro. Shelton writes:

It was my pleasure to hear bro Ogburn preach at the last annual Conference and I like him fine. I was not saying anything about his preaching, or anything that would injure any one in the least.

—The revival meeting at the West Lexington Methodist Protestant church closed Wednesday night with undiminished interest. Rev. H. L. Powell and his workers had been at it for two and a half weeks steady and were worn out. The revival was one of the greatest ever held in Lexington, resulting in 193 professions of religion and up to date, there have been 34 additions to the church.—Dispatch.

For forty years Edwin Alexander Guy, of St. Louis, sought to prove to the world that the King James Version of the Bible was full of errors. He believed that the thousands of reprintings had resulted in numberless inaccuracies. But after searching for a lifetime, comparing it with the original manuscripts, he came to the conclusion that he had been mistaken, and that what mistakes there could be found by the most critical were but slight and of little significance. Mr. Guy's will provides that the results of his research shall be published.

ON THE TROLLEY CAR.

She was such a sweet-faced motherly looking, cheerful old lady, that more than one passenger looked at her with something like envy. There was a fresh color in her cheeks her white hair was tucked smoothly away under a black bonnet with purple flowers. By her side were an umbrella and a basket covered with a snowy cloth. The car going to the city was soon crowded and a tall boy in shabby clothes took the vacant seat beside her.

The little old lady looked at him. She noticed the sad, gloomy eyes and the somewhat reckless expression on the young face.

"Going to the city?" she asked in friendly fashion and with a smile.

The boy stared. His thoughts had been far away and not pleasant ones. "Yes," he answered somewhat gruffly, but she did not seem to notice it.

"So am I," she said. "There's a big Sunday school convention there today and Sarah Ann, she's the married daughter who lives with me, said: 'Now, ma, here's your chance. You can go to that convention just as well as not. You're always talking up Sunday schools. Now's your opportunity to get into a real live convention and see how other people do things.'"

The little old lady looked at the gloomy-faced lad again.

"I took it," she went on happily, "though it was a real busy time, and I had settin' hens to look after, and hens just off with little chickens. I calculated that they could stand it for one day. I thought to myself that I'd better take Sarah Ann's advice, bein' as this convention don't come but once a year, so I brought my lunch along and I'm going to put in a full day."

She lifted the snowy cloth that covered the basket.

"Have a sandwich and a doughnut?" she said hospitably. "Do now—I brought plenty along."

"Thank you." The gloomy-faced lad took them and put them in his pocket. He did not tell her that he had had no breakfast, and no supper the night before; that he was out of work and discouraged and unhappy; that he had no place to lay his head. He did not tell her that. Perhaps she guessed it. If she did, she made no sign.

The little old lady smiled at him with her motherly eyes.

"Do you go to Sunday school?" she asked. The boy looked at her.

"Not now—I used to—once, but I drifted away. Got it into my head that the teacher didn't care much, so I left."

"Some teachers don't take much interest," remarked the little old lady, reflectively, then she smiled.

"I've got a class of young men about your age," she added. "We have real good times, too. They tell me all their worries, and I try the best I can to help 'em. The Sunday school is about half a mile from our house, and we go as regular as the Sunday comes. It's the best day of all, Sunday is. Once in awhile I have 'em all come over, and I make 'em candy and the boys crack nuts and eat apples, and every summer I always have a strawberry feast. They look forward to that. But I'm getting old, and I won't want to fall into a rut. That's why I' going to this convention. If there are any better ways of doing things than the way I go about 'em, I want to know it. I don't want my boys to get away from me."

The boy looked at her and smiled. His first smile. For the world had looked dark to him this morning. No one had given him a kind word, no one seemed to care. What was the use of trying to be good? He would give it up. At least, that was what he had thought until he had seen the little old lady with the purple flowers nodding on her bonnet.

"I think your way of doing things must be first-rate," he said with a boyish smile (another one). "I haven't thought much of Sunday school or things like that these last two or three years," he added, "but you—you kind of make make me homesick for 'em. There was one song, I remember, we used to sing that I always liked. It was 'Onward, Christian Soldiers.'"

The little old lady saw the look in the brown eyes. She reached over and suddenly took his hand.

"You'd better come back," she said gently. "You won't find anything in all the world as satisfying as the religion of Jesus Christ. It's the thing to live by and die by too. I've tried to serve Him for over forty years and I ought to know."

There was a silence, then the little old lady said softly.

"Your mother—is she living?"

The boy shook his head. "No, she's dead—father, too, and I've made a mess of things. Gone from one thing to another until I haven't a cent."

The little old lady looked at him reflectively.

The boy faced her.

"You needn't be afraid. I haven't done anything wrong yet."

"Of course not," she answered heartily, 'and you're not goin' to either. You must think there's no place in the world for you. There is."

She looked at him again.

"How would you like to come out to my place and work for me?" she said. "We need some one right now. No, I'm not afraid. There's something about you I trust."

"Thank you," said the lad, still gruffly.

The car stopped.

"Well, here we are," said the little old lady, cheerfully. "The convention is out on Eleventh and Washington, but I'll be here at six o'clock to night. Will you meet me here?"

The brown eyes met the anxious one regarding him.

"Let me help you off the car," he said with a queer catch in his voice, and then he added gently, "Thank you, I'll be here."

He helped her board the car, then he turned back and walked back to the station.

"Wasn't she good and thoughtful and motherly?" whispered the boy. "She has faith in me. Why shouldn't I have a chance? Why shouldn't I make good? I've been discouraged and I've lost heart, but she's given it back. She didn't pass me by. She thought enough of me to give me a kind word. I believe in her kind of religion. If more Sunday school teachers were like her, there would be more boys reached and saved."

At six she came down to the station. He was standing there waiting. Was the convention good?" he asked.

"Good? It was great," she answered with the same cheerful voice. "And the singing, oh, it was something like to hear them sing." And then she smiled. "They sang your song, 'Onward Christian Soldiers.' I'm going back to do the best I can for our little country Sunday school," and she smiled again. "I've found out something. The city Sunday school aren't doing it all. We turn out more useful citizens, more men that do things, more noted people, than do the city schools. Yes sir, the little country Sunday school is doing a great work. I'm proud to be connected with one. You see, we haven't so much to take up our time as city people have. Our Sunday school comes first with us and of course we succeed. We're not all the time going to moving picture shows and theaters and dear knows what not. When our work is done, you'll find us studying our Bibles, and when you find folks studyin' their Bibles, something is going to happen."

"I believe you," said the boy, soberly, and then he added:

"Here comes your car.

He waited. "Would she ask him again? Perhaps she had changed her mind." But the little old lady looked at him with a keen glance.

"Going back with me, are you?" she asked, and then she added; "I meant what I said this morning."

The boy smiled, and in the glow of it how young he looked, how different, for the light of a new purpose shone in his eyes and radiated from his smile. Even the little old lady did not at that moment realize the great work she had done that day.

"Yes, he said, "I am."

He flushed a little.

"I'd like to belong to your Sunday school," he said humbly.—Christian Standard.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR BULLETIN

On hundred speakers, representing twenty-five denominatios in the United States, Canada, Australia, England, China, Japan, and India, with a large delegation of native Hawaiians, will furnish the programme for the Twenty-sixth International Christian Endeavor Convention, to meet in Los Angeles, Cal., July 9-14, 1913.

No hall in the city could accommodate the crowds that attend these Conventions, so the committee, with characteristic Western enterprise, leased Fiesta Park, a private park covering a city square, and will roof it over with a canvas covering, making two great auditoriums that will accommodate 20,000 people.

In addition, sectional and simultaneous meetings will be held in the Temple Auditorium and twenty churches.

Rev. Francis E. Clark, LL. D., president of the World's Christian Endeavor Union, will be there, fresh from his interesting seven months' campaign on the continent of Europe.

A most valuable feature of the Convention will be the series of conferences which will be conducted each forenoon from 9 to 11.

Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, D. D., will lead the pastors and church-workers in a discussion of the topic, "The Old Gospel at Work in a New World," and the problems growing out of it.

Rev. John Balcom, D. D., will conduct the conference on the topic, "Bible-Study for Personal Growth and Personal Work."

The conference on missions will be in charge of Rev. A. L. Philips, D. D., of Richmond, Va.

There will be twenty-six conferences in all, each under an expert leader.

Noon meetings to reach the business men of the city will be held in the Temple Auditorium, to consider such topics as "Christianity's Solution of Civic Conditions" and the problems of "Capital and Labor;" also the "Supreme Spiritual Message of Our Day."

It is expected, if official duties do not prevent, that one of the speakers will be Hon. William J. Bryan, Secretary of State.

President Henry Churchill King, of Oberlin College, will lead the sunrise Quiet-Hour session each morning.

Thursday afternoon the delegates will rally by denominations under the direction of their national leaders.

The railroads have granted the special low rates for the round trip, with optional return by different route, of $65 from Chicago, $98 from New York, $50 from Denver, and proportionate rates from other centers.

Interest in the 1915 Convention is intense, and there will be a strong competition for the honor of entertaining it between St. Louis, Washington, Toronto, Winnipeg, and other cities.

Following the Los Angeles Convention, the next great event will be the World's Christian Endeavor Convention in Sydney, Australia, March 9-19, 1914.

WHERE ARE THE REST?

About thirty per cent. of the Sunday schools ordering Easter Services have not reported their offering to the Treasurer of the Board of Home Missions. This may be exrlained in part by the fact that the Ohio, and the North Illinois Conferences report through the Conference Stewards, and the Treasurer does not always get the names of the schools in this report. But after making due allowances for those which have reported indirectly about twenty-five per cent. of the services have not been reported. These are coming in slowly, some being received each day, but the entire report should have been in hand by April 30, as the Easter Service of 1913 should be reported in the fiscal year ending April 30, 1913. Look the matter up, and send your report to the treasurer at once so that it may be reported to the Board at the Annual Meeting, as being received since the close of the fiscal year.

Pastor's and Church Treasurers

Can confer a favor upon the Board of Home Missions by sending in all sums in their hands for Home Missions at once. The close of the fiscal year makes an adjustment of the finances necessary in many lines, marking the close of the old year, and the beginning of the new. We have obligations maturing with the close of the year which must be met. Some appropriations ordered to be paid this year have not been met on account of a lack of funds, and must go on the calander for payment as early in the next year as possible. Salaries are maturing every month, and other expenses must be met. If you can forward your assessment soon, it will greatly assist us in carrying on this part of your work.

We are Glad to Report,

That many school have made handsome increase in the offering made on Easter Sunday over the one made in 1912. This is good, and will enable the Board to do more work for the church. We are sorry that some schools were prevented from holding the service by the storms which were so general in the northern states of the middle west. But these schools can have a Home Mission Rally at a later date. "Help save America!"

Faithfully yours,
Charles H. Beck, Treasurer.

HOW THEY EARNED IT.

Four young friends in Indiana showed their interest in foreign missions in the following ways. The Misses Lydia and Emma Williams raised chickens and ducks, and Claude and Clinton Williams were given a sick pig not expected to live but they cared for it, and their share was $7.20 which they gave to the cause. The four belong to the C. E. Society of Union Chapel, Cowan circuit, Indiana Conference. Another lad raised potatoes, another raised onions, a girl raised flowers, others ran errands and did odd jobs, and they gave the money for foreign missions. The children ought to be encouraged to earn something for the Children's Day service, or for the C. E. Missionary's support, or the general work.

I will gladly send acopy of the excellent missionary service of tableaux, etc. entitled 'A Vision' to any one. C. E. Societies, classes of large scholars, etc. could get it up, and increase the interest, and secure funds now so much needed.

Fred C. Klein, Cor Sec.-Treas
316 N. Charles Street, Baltimore, Md.

Get Ready.

For next Young People's convention, at Kansas City, June 5-8. President Johnson is preparing a great program. Local committees are interested and active. It will be a great meeting in one of our important centers as a denomination. Begin to save up your Kansas City fund now.

Greatly begin, tho' thou have time
But for a line be it sublime.
Not failure, but low aim is crime.

FROM LOCAL REPORTERS

Rose Hill, Monroe Ct.

Our quarterly conference met Saturday afternoon, but on account of the busy season there was not the number present that we wish could have been. Bro. William Marze and Bro. J. A. Turner were nominated delegates. We are proud to say that all the churches on the Monroe charge have Sunday school except one, and are in very good condition.

Our pastor, Bro. Stacy, filled his regular appointment at this church Sunday morning and preached to a very attentive congregation. Bro. Quick preached at night using for his text the 25th verse of 16 chapter of Luke which he used in a masterly manner. There was one conversion, one accession and three pentitents. May we pray that others will turn to God and live before it is too late.

Our Sunday school at this place is doing nicely, but we hope for a better enrollment as the spring swings into her climacteric state. Wishing the readers of the Herald success and that we may be able to hear continually from the different churches throughout the North Carolina conference, for through the golden pages of the Herald do we learn our co-workers and that we may be able to realize that others share in our great work.

Robert Turner.

April 21, 1913.

Bethany, Randleman Ct.

Our pastor, Bro. O'Briant, filled his regular appointment here yesterday. He is having much trouble with his eyes and cannot read much, but he doesn't fail to talk. He preached from the words Therefor with joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation. The audience seemed much impressed.

Our S. S. is moving on nicely although we have measles, some score of the small folks in the neighborhood. We had 110 present yesterday. One of our delegates to the State S. S. convention gave a good report.

Mrs. Sarah Fogleman Smith of Asheboro was buried here 16th, she formerly lived near New Salem. She leaves a husband and three small children.

There will be all-day service here and second Sunday in May, memorial and other speaking.

Bro. O'Briant and wife have gone in their new machine to Roanoke Rapids this week to visit some folk. Miss Florence Myrick accompanied them.

Yours in His Name,

Theodosia Routh.

Caroleen.

Our potracted meeting closed Sunday with the eleven o'clock service. Bro. Braswell left Sunday afternoon to begin his meeting at Shelby. He did some faithful work here. The meeting continued for nearly three weeks. Brother Braswell did all the preaching and a lot of visiting.

There were fifty-five conversions and twenty-six accessions to the church with some to go to other churches. The church was greatly revived. We had large congregations during the meeting.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely. There is a good work being done here through our Sunday school.

Bryte Bess, Reporter.

Flat Rock Letter.

Engrossed by the mental uplift of the illiterate lost world about us, harassed by business and the agonies and collapse of the seemingly dying, we stole into the sanctuary on yesterday. "That we might catch through mists diurnal glimpses of the light eternal."

Oh! the centripetal force of the church of God! The sermon on Jacob and Esau was rare. Rich in thought, varied in illustration and strong in application. The chief point made that when Jacob wrestling with the angel found the Christ, or conversion, Esau ceased to trouble him.

The third sermon we have heard on the subject since it was given in S. S. and by far surpassing the others.

The silence of this reporter is due to several causes, but chiefly to the silence of our ministry. Our ministers should writes of their work. It welds the churches together, keeps us in touch with all our ministers, fosters church pride in the young and loyalty in the mature.

If there is one thing of paramount interest in our church outside conversion and spirituality today, it is the silent voice of our ministry through the press.

May Omnipotence omnipotently awake our ministry.

Miss Flossie Robertson, one of our sweetest, best girls, is home from Guilford on account of temporary failure of eyes.

Mr. Evans Williams endeared himself to his schoolfellows and our townsmen by his magnaminity and spirit. May he cultivate with the intellect, the moral and spiritual, for this is all that's worth while.

Reporter.

Canaan, Uwharrie Ct.

Mr. Winborn Johnson died April 17, 1913, at the age of 75 years. He was a good and kind husband, a loving and gentle father, and a good neighbor. He leaves a wife and eleven children and many relatives and friends who will miss him very much. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. J. W. Hulin, of Denton, in the presence of a large congregation after which his body was laid to rest in Salem cemetery.

We are glad to know our pastor, Bro. Trogdon, has returned home, and is improving so rapidly. We pray that the Lord will soon restore him in good health again, so that he may be able to be out among us again soon. We are always glad to see and have Bro. Trogdon with us. We extend our deepest sympathy to him in his serious condition.

Pro. Harris Hill filled the appointment at Canaan last Sunday. Bro. Hill gave a splendid talk, and had good attendance.

The Sunday school has been on the dull order for the past month on account of measles, but is now improving fast. We hope that every one that possibly can will go out and take a part. Prayer meeting is still being held every first Sunday. We find it a great help to the Sunday school and church work. I close with best wishes to the Herald and its many readers.

Mrs. C. E. R., Reporter.

Harmony Grove, West Fosyth.

Pro. Austin filled his appointment here Sunday at 11 o'clock. There was a very good crowd out, but nothing like could be if the people would just wake up and take an interest in church work. The Sunday school is getting better. We hope it will keep on improving.

The township Sunday School convention will be held at this place the third Sunday in May; we hope all the schools will come and take part in the convention. Miss Bessie Warner and Mrs. Ora Holder were elected delegates to represent our Sunday school at the State convention at Greensboro; they went to Greensboro Tuesday evening, and stayed till Thursday evening, then came on to Guilford to visit Miss Warner's sister, Mrs. J. M. Brown; they returned home Sunday evening. Both reported splendid time.

The health in the community is very good at this writing.

Reporter.

Bethel, Alamance Ct.

Rev. W. M. Pike filled his regular appointment at Bethel last 3rd Sunday and preached an excellent sermon, which we hope will be an inspiration for good to usall.

The Woman's Missionary Society met at the home of Mr. Jos. Woody last Sunday at 3 o'clock P. M. An interesting program was rendered and we all enjoyed very much the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs.

Woody and daughter. Next meeting to be held at the home of Miss Jewel Stafford 4th Sunday in June at 2:30 o'clock P. M.

Thank-offering will be held at Bethel 3rd Sunday in May at 11 o'clock A. M.; dinner on the grounds and preaching by the pastor at 2 o'clock P. M. Every one invited. Be sure to come and bring others. A large crowd is desired.

Miss Jewel Stafford was sent as delegate by the W. F. M. S. to the Branch meeting held at Asheboro. She reports the meeting both interesting and instructive. We appreciate much a nice book, The New China— presented to our society by Dr. Harris Glascock.

Mr. J. D. Foust, who has been quite sick is able to be out again.

Little Miss Bonnie McPherson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claud McPherson, is very sick.

Miss Lizabel Foust is visiting in Greensboro.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam. McPherson and children visited Mr. A. L. Foust Sunday.

Mrs. J. M. Foust, Cor. Sec.

Obituary.

Mr. G. A. Lineback was born Sept. 22, 1843; departed this life Feb. 25, 1913. He was married to Miss Julia A. Hunter, who survives him, April 16, 1873. Bro. Lineback was a kind and affectionate husband and a good and obliging neighbor. He was also a patriotic citizen and a gentleman in the strictest sense of the word. This man, who has passed to his reward, was the very embodiment of truth and honesty. The writer of this sketch knew him for fourteen of fifteen years, prior to his passing from time to eternity, and is here giving what he believes to be the true character of the man. I feel sure that no one who knew him will contradict the above statements which are undoubtedly due to his memory. He was not a member of any church and yet I believe it is well with him. Why? For many years he was afflicted in such a way that he could not bear any excitement of any kind. Had it not been for the prudent and tender care of his devoted companion the probabilities are his days on earth would have been fewer by a number of years. I believe I am safe in saying that he wanted to join the church but the nature of his disease was such that, as he saw it, he dare not go through the formality, so I believe the Lord took the will for the deed. "Don't you believe a man can be saved without joining any church?" No. "Why?" If he hasn't religion enough to join a church he hasn't enough to save him. When he refuses to join the church he has already compromised with the devil.

W. C. Lassiter.

ENLARGEMENT LIST OF NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

55th, Rev. J. W. Hulin.
56th—58th, Rev. N. G. Bethea.
59th, Rev. W. M. Pike.
60th, Rev. T. A. Williams.
61st, 62nd, Rev. J. E. Pritchard.
63rd, 64th, Rev. C. J. Edwards.
65th, Rev. D. R. Williams.
66th, 67th, Rev. J. H. Bowman.
68th, 69th, Rev. A. D. Shelton.

PALESTINE BOOMING.

By S. A. Haboush.

The words "Back to Palestine" brings to our minds again the prophecy of the Old Testament. Whether that is the time for the fulfillment of this prophecy we will have to wait and see; but the outlook is certainly encouraging. Since 1908, when the Young Turks granted in the new constitution that every person had the right to practice his own religion, things have gone upward in Palestine. This constitution gave more liberty to the Jews in Palestine and they are taking advantage of it and are now buying land in Jerusalem and in the surrounding country. If you travel to Palestine now and go to Jaffa, you will find many Jews who have lived in that country previously and have gone back and have established themselves in business and bought land. You will find that the majority of them have settled in colonies along the road between Jaffa and Jerusalem. A tract of land two miles out of Jerusalem has been plotted in lots of 30x100 feet, which sell for $1,000 and up.

Five years ago there were 75,000 Jews in Palestine, nearly all of whom have been there all their lives; but now the census states that there are over 100,000, and others are going in rapidly from Russia, America and other countries.

Recently the Arabic Jews stated that the Jews are colonizing themselves in the northern part of Africa. This means that they wanted to be near their unforgotten country. A report has been received by Jewish Zionists in Chicago that American and Jewish financiers have entered into an agreement with Turkey to underwrite a loan of 500,000,000 francs for concessions of Palestine. It seems that Turkey's attempt to obtain the 500,000,000 francs loan, and its willingness to give valuable Palestine concessions in return, is looked upon by the Jews as the first real encouragement given to their countrymen in modern times, after hundreds of years of waiting. These facts make the hearts of the Jews look us with hope. —Baptist world.

THINGS TO QUIT.

Quit speaking harshly to your stock or other stock. They know more than you think they do.

Quit trusting memory to keep you in mind of important matters. Make a record of all such things.

Quit finding fault with others,

Quit thinking there is nothing more for you to learn about farming.

Quit talking about the hard times you are having. There is always some one who is worse off.

Quit taking patent medicines.

Quit thinking that tomorrow will be a better day than this.

Quit bragging yourself up at the expense of those about you.

Quit being a poor farmer. You can be better; set about it.

Quit running an account at the store. Pay as you go, or else don't go.

Quit running your farm down. Talk it up; and make it worthy to be talked up.

Quit doing important things without talking it over to your wife. She is a better consultor than any lawyer you know.

Quit every habit that weakens you,—body, soul or heart.—Farmer Vincent.

LIFE'S LESSON.

"I learn as the years roll onward
And I leave the past behind,
That much I had counted sorrow.
But proves that God is kind;
That many a flower that I longed for
Had hidden a thorn of pine,
And many a rugged by-path
Led to fields of ripened grain.
"That clouds but cover the sunshine,
They cannot banish the sun,
And the earth shines out the brighter
When the weary rain is done.
We must stand in the deepest shadow
To see the clearest light;
And often through wrong's own darkness
Comes the living strength of light."

Selected.

Illiteracy is particularly banished in Prussia. Out of 165,941 army recruits in 1911, all but 24 could read and write.

The government of Uruguay has engaged an agricultural expert from the United States to organize an agricultural school in the Republic.

Griggs—I saw the doctor's carriage at your door yesterday. Anything serious?

Briggs—I should say so! He wanted to collect his bill.—Boston Evening Transcript.

WILLIAM H. CARTER.

(Paper read at the Memorial service of the late William H. Carter in the Y. M. C. A., April 13, 1913, by J. S. Williams.)

"And, behold, there was a man in Jerusalem, whose name was Simeon; and the same man was just and devout, waiting for the consolation of Israel; and the Holy Ghost was upon him." Luke 2:25.

This bit of Simeon's biography expresses the truth about the life of the late William H. Carter.

"Just and Devout"—

William Carter was indeed a just man. He was industrious from early youth. By thrift and economy he provided liberally for the comfort of his household. His possessions were his own as a reward for toil, not by despoiling his fellowmen.

He was also a devout man. He worshiped in reverence in the sanctuary and in the home. He was an eager listener whenever the Bible was read. He enjoyed good singing. His countenance would beam with gladness under the influence of good music.

"Waiting for the Consolation of Israel"—

Simeon waited for the fullfillment of the promise that a Savior would come. William Carter had long ago received the Christ into his heart and dedicated his life unto Jesus, yet in his later years he longingly waited for the privilege of worshiping in a church in this city, erected and dedicated by his own denomination, he prayed for the building of a Methodist Protestant church in Asheville. He craved to live until the new church would be completed.

One of the severest trials he had to endure must have been his having to wait for the relization of his great desire for a church home. While his bodily strength was wanting, his faith and hope and desire increased the more with the passing years. How eagerly he would enquire of the outlook! How gladly he would grasp at the least promise of success! The constant deferring of hope must have caused exceeding discomfort to his expectant heart.

It was not simply denominational pride that made him wish for a church home. He rejoiced in every phase of good our church accomplished. He was glad for every conversion. He rejoiced in the growth of the Sunday school. He kept up with the increase in all departments. He welcomed the additions to the church register.

The supreme good for which William Carter waited was his translation. The last end of this righteous man was peace. There was not the slightest degree of bitterness. He revelled in tales of the long ago—his experiences of hardship and adventures, the development of the religious life of the community in which he grew up—yet he took equal, if not a keener, delight in the present. He read the daily papers and the church papers that he might know what was going on.

The sunset of his day was aglow with kindness and peace. He was kind in his judgments of men and thiugs. He was jovial and friendly with all. The music of his laughter will never be forgatten by those who were blessed with his friendship and with the privilege of his conversations.

One of the finest points of his kindliness was his refinement. He was a perfect gentleman, not by any slavish devotion to custom, but by innate affableness. He never entered into conversation uninvited. He never went beyond the comfort of his companion in conversation. He was indeed without offense.

He was not good at controversy. Yet he was immovable from his convictions. He enjoyed repartee, but not to the extent of pain to another.

Peace crowned him at the last. His last years were spent in the home of his children. His movements in and out among them were noiseless as the dawn. In his last illness those to whom he had given his life softened his pillow with their tenderness and soothed his pains with their kindness. His family circle gently lifted him from earth and, in the persons of translated loved ones received him home in our Father's house. "Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace according to thy word. For mine eyes have seen thy salvation."

William Carter saw the salvation of our Father. The Holy Ghost was upon him. The Comforter was with him in youth and manhood and was faithful to him in his old age and in the valley of the shadow of death and glorified his translation.

William Carter was like the patriarch of old. His influence was known in the gates. Like Abraham, he sought a city which had foundations, whose builder and maker is God. Like Isaac, he blessed his children concerning things to come. Like Moses, he was called to his heavenly home before entering the promised land of earth. Like Paul, he has received the crown of life.

On the day of his interment, the following memorial was read by his grandnephew, our brother J. E. Swain:

Exactly 87 years, 11 months and 10 days ago today William Henry Carter was born in the modest old fashioned farm house which stood only a few paces from this very spot. The sun in his rising above the peaks of the Black Mountain cast the shadow of this very hill over the humble home where the boy was born, and we bring him here today to place him in his last resting place under the same skies, surrounded by the same grand old mountain and among the same familiar scenes that first greeted his childish vision.

The father and mother of young William were Solomon and Alvira Carter, and came from that sturdy Scotch Irish stock, which have played so great a part in the development of this great country. Scarcely had the camp fire of the Indians been quenched when the sturdy pair penetrated the wilderness of this Western section and blazed the way for the supremacy of intelligence and industry over ignorance and savagery.

The educational advantages of William Carter were of the crudest and most primitive character. He probably received his first schooling at a little log school house about two miles from this spot at a place just above the present village of Barnardsville; but it is safe to say, that the larger part of his early training was obtained form his mother, who was a woman with a distinct taste and inclination for reading and mental development. She was a woman with insatiable thirst and desire for knowledge. She read a great deal both in her youth and in her age, but the book which was dearest to her and gave her most enjoyment was the dear old Bible.

The child grew and developed into young manhood, a clean, cheerful, carefree boy, just such a youth as would draw to him, as friends and companions, the best and cleanest young men of the community.

On January, 26th, 1849 he was married to Miss Martha Pickens of Reems Creek. This was the beginning of that happy union which lasted many years. In all the community no happier home could be found. The companion of the young man was an earnest Christian worker. The young man himself a clean, moral, industrious and religious citizen. This devoted pair led the fight in every moral and religious conflict which has waged throughout this country. They were always found standing together on the side of right. The stories of their great battles against vice for the welfare of their community will be handed down from father to son long after the marble which marks their resting place shall have crumbled to dust.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

Greensboro, N. C.

N. B.—Following schedule figures published only as information and are not guaranteed.

1.00 A. M.—No. 29 daily, Birmingham Special, through Pullman sleeping and observation cars New York to Birmingham and Richmond to Birmingham. Dining car service.

1.45 A. M.—No. 32 daily, Southern's Limited, Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville, Augusta and Atlanta to New York. Dining car service.

2.35 a. m.—No. 112 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh open at 9.15 p. m.

2.50 daily, Birmingham Special, Pullman sleeping and observation cars from Birmingham and Asheville to New York and Birmingham to Richmond. Dining car service.

2.20 a. m.—No. 51, the Southern's Southeastern Limited, Pullman sleeping cars from New York to Asheville. Day coaches. Dining car service.

3.45 a. m.—No. 45 daily local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7.10 a m.—No. 8, daily local for Richmond, connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7.20 a. m.—No. 37 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited Pullman drawing room, sleeping cars and club and observation cars New York to new Orleans. Pullman sleeping car New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman chair car Greensboro to Montgomery, solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7.30 a. m.—No. 105 daily local Greensboro to Goldsboro.

7.55 a. m.—No. 11, daily local through to Atlanta, sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m.—No. 134 daily except Sunday for Ramseur.

8.15 a. m.—No. 237 daily for Winston-Salem and North Wilkesboro. Pullman sleeping car Raleigh to Winston-Salem.

9.30 a. m.—No. 44 daily for Washington and points North.

9.40 a. m.—No. 134 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro; handles Atlanta Raleigh sleeping car.

12.30 p. m.—No. 21 daily for Asheville, Waynesville and local points; handles coaches and chair car through to Asheville and Waynesville.

12.50 p. m.—No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12.30 p. m.—No. 21 daily for Asheville.

12.55 p. m.—No. 7 daily for Charlotte and points South.

1.40 p. m.—No. 36 daily U. S. Fast Mail for Washington, New York and points North; handles Pullman sleeping cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman sleeping car Asheville to Richmond. Pullman chair car Greenville, S. C. to Washington. Day coaches. Mail car service.

2.20 p. m.—No. 207 daily for Winston-Salem.

2.30 daily except Sunday for North Wilkesboro.

2.50 p. m.—No. 151 daily except Sunday for

3.30 p. m.—No. 230 daily except Sunday for Madison.

Ramseur.

3.50 p. m.—No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4.20 p. m.—No. 22 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles chair car to Goldsboro.

4.55 p. m.—No. 131 daily for Mt. Airy.

6.10 p m.—No. 35 daily U. S. Fast Mail for Atlanta and points south Pullman sleeping cars New York to New Orleans and Birmingham and sleeping car Richmond to Asheville which car can be occupied until 7 a. m. Pullman chair car Washington to Greenville, S. C. Day coaches. Dining car service.

6.35 p. m.—No. 235 daily for Winston Salem.

7.30 p. m.—No. 43 daily for Atlanta Sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10.15 p. m.—No. 38 daily New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited Pullman sleeping cars New Orleans, Macon, Asheville and Charlotte to New York and Pullman chair car Montgomery to Greensboro. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

10.20 p. m.—No. 233 daily for Winston-Salem.

10.31 p. m.—No. 12 daily local for Richmond; handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman, Vice-President and General Manager, Washington, D. C.; S. H. Haruwick, P. T. M., Washington, D. C.; H. F. Cary, G. P. A., Washington, D. C.; R. H. DeButts, D. P. A., Charlotte, N. C.; O. F. York, P & A., Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Mosely, M. D

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF STOMACH AND INTESTINES.

121 South Elm St.,

Greensboro, N. C.

Hours, 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,

DENTIST.

Office in Benbow Arcade, S. Elm St.,
Rooms 348 and 350,
Greensboro, N. C.

Office phone 29, Residence phone 22.

Dr. C. N. Tanner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR, NOSE AND THROAT.

An account of the religious life of our friend and relative would be interesting and comforting indeed, but I leave to others more fitted, this task.

We return today with the boy of 87 years ago, although bent with years, he retained the spirit and heart of youth. The spirit has returned to God unscarred and unmarred by the sins of the flesh. He stood above suspicion of wrong. With one acclaim his neighbors, friends and acquaintances say "Uncle Billy never knowingly did any man wrong." He was always cheerful and bright, enjoying to its fullest extent a good, wholesome and clean joke, but shunning anything vulgar or unclean.

To you his relatives how sorely you will miss him when you gather in your family reunion. Let us place the chair, but let none presume to occupy it, for the very soul of our annual reunion has been taken away.

Let us lay him gently down in his last bed; let it be a resting place for the poor body; let his dust mingle with the dust of the dear friends and relatives who sleep by his side.

When the grim monster death approached to carry him away he was not afraid. He knew and recognized the foot fall and the rustle of the ebon wing. It was to him a familiar sound. He had seen his father and mother. He had seen twelve brothers and sisters. He had seen his own dear wife and daughter, son and in fact he had seen almost all the friends of his youth and young manhood borne away too by the grim messenger, and he recognized the call when it came for him.

But in his death let us not be sorrowful. Let us rather take courage and thank God for his mercy, knowing as we do, that while we linger and mourn his loss that his spirit is now holding sweet communion with the spirits of the friends and loved ones that have been so long awaiting him on the other side.

—The Appeal to Reason threatens to prosecute Don Laws for slander.

Hackett

Mrs. Nancy Rebecca Hackett, wife of Joel Hackett, went to her reward March 29, at the age of a little more than fifty-five years. She professed faith in Christ in early life, which faith she never denied, and joined the church at Tabernacle where she continued a faithful member to the end. However, for a number of years, ten or more, she was deprived of church privileges because of ill health. She was a patient sufferer. She was a kind neighbor, a loving wife, a devoted mother, a good woman. She was a woman of prayer and devotion, praying that others might be saved, especially those of her own who are not already saved.

She leaves a husband, two sons, one grand son, five sisters, two brothers, and literally a host of relatives and friends, who mourn their loss. To those I would say, she can't return to you, but you can go to her. Let her life be to you an inspiration to right living, and may your hope and comfort be in the resurrection and in the life beyond.

T. M. Johnson.

April 21, 1913.

Treas. Report Orphans' Home.

Center H. M. S. Alamance Ch.	$16.00
Tabernacle H. M. S.	5.15
Tabernacle S. S.	.98
Siler City H. M. S. Mrs. E. B. Siler	2.00
Thomasville church	8.00
Mrs. W. H. Finch, Kittrell, N. C.	5.00
Julian Ladies' Aid, ...	10.00
Henrerson H. M. S.	10.80
Friendship S. S. Stanley Ct.	1.41
Star S. S. Why not Ct.	1.63
Burlington S. S.	4.68
W. D. Burgess, High Point, N. C.	3.25
Graham S. S.	3.50
Concord S. S.	3.43
Rose Hill S. S. Monroe Ct.	1.35
Piney Grove S. S. Siler City ct. ..	2.00
Henderson S. S.	3.99
Lawnsdale church, Fallston Ct. ..	9.70
Rehobeth S. S. Granville Ct.	4.40
Welch Memorial S. S.	4.10
Whitaker S. S.	2.50
Total	$102.07

10 yards percale from, Mrs. George Graves, Bethel church, Mocksville Ct.

We are most grateful for the above donations. It is gratifying to know that our Home has so many friends and while we rejoice in this we also rejoice that by giving to us others have been benefited. In order that our friends may hear of an experience one Sunday school had we quote from a letter:

"It gives us great pleasure to send this, and we can say that since we

W. F. MEDEARIS L. L. PEEBLES W. L. PEEBLES

MEDEARIS-PEEBLES FURNITURE COMPANY.

Complete House Furnishers.

STOVES AND RANGES

Cash or Credit.

109 & 111 E. Market St.

Phone 823. Greensboro, N. C.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO

Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.

206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

OVER 65 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

This School is Supreme in Teaching Law by Mail

THE ORIGINAL SCHOOL

It established correspondence instruction 23 years ago. It was founded on sane methods, sound courses and authoritative teaching. It has never deviated therefrom. It has had phenomenal success and enjoys unlimited respect. Right now is best equipped—best qualified to teach you law—for legal practice or for business. The catalog explains each advantage in detail, lists the thousands of successful graduates, and gives the fair prices for College Law Course and Business Law Course.

The Sprague Correspondence School of Law

If you want the best—write now for this catalog.

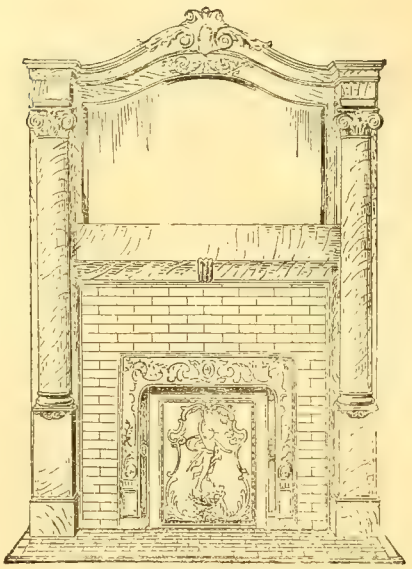
The Sprague Correspondence School of Law
400 American Building
Detroit, Mich.



Mantels, Grates, Tiles and Builders' Hardware.

If you intend to build a new house, or to improve an old one, don't fail to get our catalogue, showing the latest designs in mantels, grates, tiles and builder's hardware. We have designs to suit every style of architecture. It will pay you to write us.

ODELL MANTEL COMPANY,
(Odell Hardware Co., Owners.)
Greensboro, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.

This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W. M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE—CO-EDUCATIONAL AND NON-SECTARIAN.

Offers young men and young women in the Methodist Protestant Church exceptional advantages for higher college training. Courses offered leading to the degrees of A. B., Ph. B., L. I., Pe. B., and A. M. Certificate courses offered in Commerce, Music, and Art. Diploma also granted in Music and Art.

Elon College is situated in the hill country in the Piedmont section of North Carolina. No sickness, healthful climate, pure deep well water. All the buildings heated by steam and lighted by electricity and supplied with water. A large gymnasium for men in process of erection.

Terms are very reasonable. Cost of all expenses ranges from $137 to $187 a year.

The Young Ladies' Home provides for board at cost for young ladies who wish to cheapen their living. This home is under the management of the College and the best possible care is taken of the girls.

The Boys' Boarding Club offers young men an opportunity of living at actual cost. By these boarding arrangements the cost of board and room should be reduced to about half the cost in private homes.

Any person interested should write for Catalogue, Bulletins, and other information to

W. A. HARPER, LL. D., PRESIDENT,
Elon College, North Carolina.

started this plan our S. S. collections are better the whole month! After sending one collection, and paying for our literature each quarter our treasury is never empty."

Etta Auman, Treas.

—It was announced at New Haven last week that, in addition to his regular classroom instruction in constitutional law, Prof. William Howard Taft will deliver at Yale next fall a course of nine lectures on the general subject, "Questions of Modern Government."

—Mrs. Nicholson, of Mebane, goes to Reidsville this week to visit her parents and bring home her daughter, Elizabeth.

—Bro. Bethea is to help Bro. Lowdermilk in Kernersville, the meeting to begin the second Sunday in June.

—In the primary election on Monday, the present city commissioners all received majorities, though there was no lack of opposing candidates, some of whom received a ridiculously small number of votes. For municipal judge, Mr. Glenn Brown and Mr. C. A. Hines are the chosen candidates. Mr. Eure declined to run this time.

—Mrs. H. A. Garrett continues ill of rheumatism.

—The office of the News and Observer, Raleigh, was burned last week. The paper goes on, and is now suing the water company.

—The railroads and State's rate commission are having a stormy conference in Raleigh.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XIX. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, APRIL 24, 1913. NUMBER 22.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCULLOCH, Editor and Publisher.
PRICE.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
RULE IN DEALING WITH SUBSCRIBERS.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

THE OLD TIME RELIGION.

Abel must have had it. By faith Abel offered unto God a sacrifice by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts.

Enoch must have had it. For he pleased God so much that God took him to Heaven without permitting him to pass through death.

Noah must have had it. He was moved by God's warning to prepare an ark to the saving of his house and to become a preacher of righteousness to the men of his time. He thus became an heir of the righteousness which is by faiith.

Abraham must have had the old time religion. He went out in response to the call of God, not knowing whither God would lead him. He believed God, and it was accounted unto him for righteousness.

Moses must have had the old time religion. When he was come to years, he refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt.

Joshua must have had it. He said: choose ye this day whom ye will serve; but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord.

Daniel must have had the old time religion. He risked his life in the den of hungry lions rather than turn away from the living God to worship the idols of his time.

The apostles of Christ must have had it. They endured persecution and death rather than deny or cease to proclaim the name of Jesus Christ, whom they believed in as their savior and Lord.

The later Christian martyrs must have had it. Howelse could they have endured the flames that destroyed their lives?

The pioneers in the spread of the church must have had it. Otherwise, how are we to explain their self-sacrificing toils?

The old-time religion is the only religion worthy the name. When men accept any substitute for it, they are but deluding themselves, and are more foolish than the foolish ostrich that imagines himself safe because his eyes are covered.

But what is the old-time religion?

James gave a good description of it when he wrote:

"Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world."

Micah had a good conception of it when he wrote: "What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God."

John saw the secret and source of it when he wrote: "He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son hath not life."

Paul had his eyes on the essentials of salvation and the central theme of true religion when he penned the words:

"God forbid that I should glory save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me and I unto the world."

The old-time religion is the all-time religion. In all ages, it is the same thing. Amid all the changes of form and ceremony, where there is real religion, it is heart-felt devotion to God strong enough to overcome the allurements of the world.

May we all rise to the hight of such devotion!

—If Bro. Shelton should hear Bro. Ogburn preach a few times, he would have no fear that the "old-time religion" would suffer at his hands.

—Bro. E. G. Lowdermilk has mapped out an interesting program for his May meetings. The month will be full of work for him but it will no doubt tell for good. The all-day meetings should bring out a large number at each place.

—We have had two inquiries as to who Peter Slewfoot is. He is Reverend Peter Slewfoot, pastor of Steady Growth circuit. We hope to introduce him to the inquiring brethren at our next Conference in High Point.

—Our thanks to Bro. Gerringer and Ledford for invitation to the Commencement of Westminster Theological Seminary May 4-6. The subject of Bro. Gerringer's thesis is "The Necessity for a Co-operative Protestantism," while Bro. Ledford will advocate "Penal Reforms."

—Bro. Fogleman reports the death of Isaac Troxler, of Brown Summit. He was a man of years, one of the pillars of Fair Grove Church, and a genial, kind-hearted brother. It was our privilege to be in his home one time, and to meet him repeatedly in this office. He was a constant friend of the church paper. Such men are missed when they pass on. An obituary notice is promised by Bro. Fogleman.

—The Webb liquor bill is not regarded as a dead letter or toothless law by the express companies. In various parts of the country they are refusing to deliver liquors in prohibition territory.

—The legislature of Maine has removed from office a number of sheriffs for their failure to enforce the law prohibiting the sale of liquors. Doesn't prohibition prohibit?

—China's first parliament assembled at Peking, April 8 . The day was observed as a holiday throughout China. The proceedings were earnest and impressive, though brief. An address was issued to the world, declaring that the will of heaven is manifested through the will of the people, and that the representatives of the people are to voice the will of the people. The closing paragraphs are as follows:

"May ours be a just government! May our five races lay aside their prejudices! May rain and sunshine bring bounteous harvest and cause the husbandman to rejoice! May the scholar be happy in his home and the merchant conduct his trade in peace! May no duty of Government be unfulfilled and no hidden wound go unredressed!

"Thus may the glory be spread abroad and these words be echoed far and wide, that those in distant lands, who hear, may rejoice, our neighbors on every side give up praise, and may the new life of the old nation be lasting and unbending! Who of us can dare to be neglectful of his duties!"

UNITED MISSIONARY CAMPAIGN.

The following features of the campaign have been approved:

1. The campaign is in the interest of all the missionary work of the church and aims at the enlistment of the entire membership of the church.

2. A nation wide simultaneous canvass for home and foreign missions in March, 1914, on the part of as many churches and denominations as can be led to undertake it at that time.

3. To prepare the churches of the whole country for such a canvass, Missionary Conventions or Conference will be held throughout the United States, at as many as possible of the cities and towns of 5000 population or over. There are about 1250 such centers. As these Conventions and Conferences will need to be held between September 15 and February 15, it will require twenty or more teams of speakers, holding Conferences in as many cities or towns simultaneously, to cover the territory. At the request of the United Campaign Committee, the Laymen's Missionary Movement has consented to undertake the organization and general direction of these Conventions and Conferences. The leaders in the campaign will be divided into teams of four to six men each, each team cultivating a designated area. The Conventions and Conferences will begin with an evening session and continue through the following day.

4. Widespread deputation work by volunteers, with the aim of bringing the inspiration and message of this United Campaign to every community and every church.

5. The setting aside of the second Sunday of February as Missionary Day—for a nation-wide exchange of pulpits and for special missionary features in all departments of church life.

6. A special department of the campaign to be in behalf of the colored churches of America.

7. Special Conferences for Pastors, where they may study together the missionary operations of the whole church and the unique relation of the pastor to the world-wide extension of the Kingdom of Christ.

8. The widest possible use of carefully selected and specially prepared missionary literature.

9. A still larger and more general assistance of the press in securing religious and missionary news and in interpreting the spirit of Christianity as the spirit of individual and universal service and helpfulness.

10. This United Campaign is not for this year only, but is to be "a comprehensive and sustained effort, with such developments as may prove necessary, to lead the whole church out into the discharge of its total missionary duty, in this crisis hour of national and world history."

11. The campaign aims not only at securing larger missionary contributions, but at the development of the latent spiritual resources of the church. Prayer, personal Bible study, personal service and stewardship all be emphasized in their relation to Christian efficiency.

OUR OWN FOR OUR OWN.

The beautiful Children's Day service will be going to our schools when you read this. It is the only official Service for use by Methodist Protestant Sunday schools, original front cover, the inspiring music, the pictures and facts about our Japan work, the choice recitations, digalogue, etc. make it the most necessary and helpful service for our schools.

All the supplies will be sent free of cost, and every school ought to hold the service this year. If any other service is bought by any of our schools the offering will be reduced that much, and the scholars will be deprived of information which our service alone contains.

Our fiscal year ends April 30. About the 24th of this month the board's check will arrive from Japan which pays this month's expenses.

We need fifteen hundred dollars to meet it. Please send me your assessment for foreign missions at the earliest possible date to help out.

Fred C. Klein, Cor. Sec.

316 N. Charles Street, Baltimore, Md.

—Leon McCulloch in a recent number of the Scientific American had an article on "The Chemistry of a Soldering Solution."

THE TEACHER WHO PREPARES.

One worker well says:

Nothing worth while comes without hard work, least of all that supremely, worth-while matter, the teaching of Christianity. The sooner the Sunday school teacher understands that, from the very heart, the better his teaching.

The preparation for teaching one lesson should begin as soon as the preceding lesson is taught. A seven-day spring board will give you a fine leap into your task—a "spontaneous" leap.

The preparation must deal with method as well as matter, process as well as facts. It is not enough —to continue our metaphor—to store water in a reservoir; we must lay the pipes right up to where the children live.

Some little surprise in your way of teaching, something "different" in that recitation, will do more to give spontaneity and freshness to it than haphazard, unprepared teaching ever could.

One of the best ways to prepare is to have a good live Teacher Training Class. The time to start is now. Write to our Board for particulars and for the book Training the Teacher, paper 35cts. and cloth 50cts. Send all orders to C. H. Hubble, Adrian, Michigan.

WHAT A SUNDAY SCHOOL DOES.

A lady who occasionally used the elevator in a building devoted to business office noticed that the walls of the little compartment were decorated with pictures. One day, when she chanced to be the only passenger, she spoke of them to the elevator boy.

"You like pictures, don't you?"

"Yes. You see I have to stay here so much of the time that I like to have something to look at," he explained.

He was not complaining of his place —it was the best he could have for the time—he had simply sought a way to lessen its monotony and give himself something pleasant to look at and think about. His car must move up and down all day with only the outlook of dark spaces and bare walls, but there was no reason why his eyes should not rest upon pictured mountains and ships at sea, or beautiful views of forest and lake. There is no need for a soul to be shut in that wills to be free. Our place may seem to be a narrow place, our daily work monotonous, but it is always possible to hang a beautiful picture of imagination and memory, to have thoughts that open wide windows over the earth and toward the sky.

WHY ARE YOU AN ENDEAVORER?

Is it just because others are? You can never be a Christian by imitation.

Is it merely from a sense of duty? That is well; but keep on until it is also a sense of privilege and joy.

Is it because you are swept in by the enthusiasm of the society? That is well; but enthusiasm is a castle in the air. Now build a solid foundation under it!

Is it because you merely promised some friend to join? Be doubly careful, then, in all your acts as a member.

Unless the minister is a shepherd of souls, unless his fellow workers and his Sabbath school teachers are shepherds of souls, they must fail, and continue to fail, and deserve to fail.—British Weekly.

"WHO TELLS HIM?"

One of the mysteries which puzzle the unconverted is, "How does the minister know all about me?"

Said one man who hid behind a bed curtain in a private house, while hearing, for the first time, King S. Hastings preach, "He told me everything I had done, public or private, for the last three months."

Of course he was in a rage with the neighbors about telling on him; but the fact was the preacher never was there before, and came in late after meeting had commenced; nevertheless the hidden sinner was searched out, and never found peace till he had turned to God and confessed his sins and his wanderings.

A heathen woman once said to a Christian Indian, named Esther, "I often go to your meetings and always hear something. One Sunday lately the minister exactly described the state of my heart. Indeed, I fully thought he would soon say, 'There sits a woman who is just what I have said.' Do tell me how the minister knows, and who it is that tells him?"

"'Oh, yes,' said Esther, 'I will tell you. The minister preaches the pure word of God and that word speaks to our hearts. If we are willing to listen to it, God works in our hearts by his Spirit, and shows us that it is spoken to us. Then we see and hear what is our real state; and every one thinks, "That is spoken to me!"'"

The word of God is no dead book, it is living and powerful; and is the voice of the living spirit of God, which reads the hearts and the lives of all men.

Let us thank God for a message that searches hearts, and let us pray that ministers who know all about their hearers, may be greatly multiplied.—H. L. Hastings.

"OTHERS"

When General Booth, of the Salvation Army, desired to send a telegram or cablegram to all the Army posts in the world, he was confronted by the fact of the cost of such an undertaking. He boiled his message down to a single word, but he was great enough to choose the biggest word in the entire dictionary. He selected "others." That was the message, and all of it; but it was sufficient to inspire every post to nobler service and at the same time express the desire of the heart of this great and good man as touching his fellow mortals in the struggle of life.

If we do not live for "others," it is seriously doubtful if we can live for Christ or ourselves as we should. Jesus's thought was most about those for whom he came; and when we take from the Gospels what the Saviour taught about our duty to our fellow men, we have but little left. His was a life devoted to those who were in hard lines, and a more complete understanding of the correct philosophy of his mission in the world. He went about doing good. He spent no time high up in the steeple, but nearly all of the time was he down on the ground among the common people. And how naturally did he go about it all! Here he opened the eyes of one who was blind; there he comforted some sorrowing ones by raising a dead loved one; yonder he feeds the thousands of hungry people; to-morrow he weeps over Jerusalem; the next day he cures some one of a troublesome disease. Just as it came, just as it happened. How natural, how commonplace it all seemed! And what he taught and did he would have his people teach and do, only, perhaps, in a spiritual way. But be that as it may, let us not forget that there are "others."—Baltimore Methodist.

HOME SENTIMENT

A London paper offered a prize for the best definition of home. Here are some of the answers sent in:

The golden setting in which the brightest jewel is "mother."

The world of strife shut out; a world of love shut in.

An arbor which shades when the sunshine of prosperity becomes too dazzling; a harbor where the human bark finds shelter in the time of adversity.

Home is the blossom of which heaven is the fruit.

Home is the person's estate obtained without injustice, kept without disquietude; a place where time is spent without repentance, and which is ruled by justice, mercy and love.

A grand old mirror through which both sides of us are seen.

That source of comfort which youth does not fully appreciate, which the young men and maidens lovingly desire, which the middle-aged generally possess, which the old rightly value.

A hive in which, like the industrious bee, youth garners the sweets and memories of life for age to meditate and feed upon.

The best place for a married man after business hours.

Home is the coziest, kindliest, sweteest place in all the world, the scene of our purest earthly joys and deepest sorrows.

The only spot on earth where the faults and failings of fallen humanity are hidden under the mantle of charity.

The place where the great are sometimes small and the small are often great.

The father's kingdom, the children's paradise, the mother's world.

The jewel casket containing the most precious of all jewels—domestic happiness.

Where you are treated best and grumble most.

Home is the central telegraph office of human love, into which run innumerable wires of affection; many of which, though extending thousands of miles, are never disconnected from the one great terminus.

The center of our affections, around which our heart's best wishes twine.

A little hollow scooped out of the windy hill of the world, where we can be shielded from its care and annoyances.

A popular but paradoxical institution in which woman works in the absence of man and man rests in the presence of woman.

A working model of heaven, with real angels in the form of mothers and wives.

The place where all husbands should be at night.—Presbyterian Banner.

MR. BRYAN A BIBLE TEACHER

Whether the report that Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan is to take a Bible class in Washington be true or not, men from everywhere know that it will be in keeping with the Christian character and personal practice of our new cabinet premier to have him follow the illustrious example of a member of a preceding cabinet, the Honorable Elder John Wanamaker, who taught his great Bible class every Sunday during his administration of the affairs of the Post Office Department.

Mr. Bryan is an out-and-out Bible man. He reads it because he loves it and finds spiritual food in it. He writes of it because the has the missionary spirit and desires to give its message wide reach. He quotes it freely in public, and is so saturated with it that his vocabulary and syntax on the stump or rostrum are strikingly biblical in style.

The example of Mr. Bryan will be wholesome and inspiring. There are hundreds of busy Christian men with trained minds who should follow Mr. Bryan and teach the Bible to men of our Churches.—Men at Work.

THE SONG OF THE YEAR

The earth goes singing down the year,
And all the year sings back to her,
Strains such as music has by ear,
Or writ in song-bird character.
With many a windy chorister
Whose chant she cannot choose but hear,
The earth goes singing down the year,
And all the year sings back to her;
Then lest her music lack to best,
Winter writes in her musical full rest.

—Grace Ellery Channing.

A REPLY.

In last week's issue of the Herald I noticed an article headed, "Lower Criticism." They say the hit dog will always holler, so I am going to holler this time. I noticed in reading the piece that the Bro. was firing our uneducated preachers. Now I do not consider this as any encouragement to the class that hasn't had the advantage of an education. I believe the time will come when the old time religion will be rooted out of the church if possible, and another put in its place. I know of churches today that will not allow shouting in the church, and it is all because they are letting pride take the place of religion. Back in our fathers' young days people went to church to worship God, and to hear the Gospel of Jesus Christ, but from the way the Bro. talked he surely goes to church to criticise the preacher. We must always get what we go for, but God forbid that I should ever go to church for any such. My Bible tells me to preach the Gospel, but some think you must have your head full of theology and grammar and rhetoric and all of these things before he can preach, but that is not it every time. We need to be empty of self, and full of God, and then the results will come. Will God bless us for the flow of language we use? I say no. Now education is all right, but I am speaking of letting it have first and foremost place instead of the spirit of God. I have heard preachers preach and they would tell how much lumber a certain tree would make, and something about astronomy, and all these things. Now that is the kind that will ruin the church spirtually. I do not believe that God approves of so much pride in the church; so let us work at the spiritual side of life and not the outward show, and our church will move and sinners will be converted. The Bro. said that those that had no education may do good work for the Master. I say they not only may but are doing good work, and when they get to heaven their reward will be the same as the man's who went through three or four theological schools. Now this may sound plain, but the truth is the truth and will harm no one. Some one will say that we have greater advantages than our fathers' and that that we ought to be greater. I say we ought to improve educationally, but do not let education run the Old Time Religion out and take possession. We may advance along these lines, but there is only one religion. Now I am through, and what I have said, I have said, so let us hold before the people Christ and him crucified. Preach him up and theDevil down, and then men and women will cry out, "What must we do to be saved?" and then we will go in and possess the land that flows with milk and honey.

Fraternally,
A. D. Shelton.

OUR FOREIGN MISSIONARY WORK.

He Arrived Safely.

Rev. E. I. Obee and family reached Yokohama March 18th, 1913, to enter upon his second term of service. He is the denominational C. E. Union's Missionary, and every society should contribute to his support.

He went on the steamer with the Commission of the World's Sunday School Convention. Dr. C. E. Wilbur, editor of our Sunday school publications and publicity agent of the commission, Mr. H. J. Heinz and others made up the excellent company.

Rev. E. I. Obee reports all well, and that he found the Yokohama work in good condition under the capable managment of Rev. L. Layman and his good wife both of whom "have been working very hard during the past year. They deserve much credit." Extensive preparations were under way when he wrote, March 22nd, for special Easter servicees, as Dr. Wilbur was to address a union service of our three Yokohama churches. He also reported that the Sunday School Commission had been well received, and was making a fine impression.

They are Going Rapidly.

The Children's Day Services are winning high praise already for the beauty of the front cover, the fine, spirited music, have an edition of shaped notes this year —the striking pictures and informing facts of our work, the splendid recitations, etc.

Every school in the denomination ought to use this service, for no other can possibly take the place of our own in our schools, because our service alone deals with our foreign missionary enterprise.

A sample of the service, recitation sheet, order card and letters has been sent to every Sunday school superintendent whose name and address we have on file. If you did not get a sample, send me word.

Send me your order at once. All the supplies for your school will be sent free, and the offering is to be sent to our Board for its work in Japan.

Fred C. Klein, Cor. Sec.-Treas
316 N. Charles Street, Baltimore, Md.

—Mrs. Kate Kime has returned from Florida, much improved. She has bought a winter home in the suburms of Miami, and may be expected to be migratory.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

The floods which have swept over Ohio, have interfered somewhat with the work of the Treasurer of the Board of Home Missions. The town of West Lafayette was above the high water line, but all communication was cut off by the flood. We had no mail service at all for ten days, and even on this date, April 16, the service is very poor. A letter received yesterday bore the date of March 24th; one received this morning is dated March 25th. All remittances received have been acknowledged up to this date. Some letters containing money orders and checks have come with all the glue gone from the flaps and stamps off, and water soaked, but still legible. Some may not have reached me at all. If your receipt has not reached you, please write me at once. Your receipt may have miscarried, or your check may have been lost. We want to adjust these matters promptly and our ability to do so depends upon those who have sent remittances which have not been acknowledged from this office.

OUR THANKS

Are due to the many faithful pastors, superintendents, choristers and other Sunday school workers, who have helped us to make this Easter successful from the point of view of the Board of Home Missions. Many schools are reporting increased offerings for our work; more schools have held the service this year than for a number of years past, and we are expecting a larger total offering for our work.

THE MEDALS

The Gold Medal Contests will close May 1. No school can compete whose offering is not reported previous to that date. Medal No. 1 will be awarded to the school reporting the largest total offering; Medal No. 2, to the school reporting the largest offering per member present Easter Sunday.

WHAT NEXT?

The Assessment.—It will greatly facilitate the work of this Board if all the Assessments, and Easter Offerings are in the hands of the Treasurer by April 30. The fiscal year of the Board closes on that date, and the plans for next year's operation must conform to the funds in hand and in prospect. We have depended upon the prospects and have been disappointed in other years. Nothing gives the Board so much courage in planning for the new year as "Cash in Bank."

THE ANNUAL MEETING

Will be held soon after May 1st. All business to be considered by the Board at that meeting should be written, and forwarded to the Secretary at an early date.

FROM THE REPORT OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE MARYLAND CONFERENCE

The following extract from the report of Rev. John S. Bowers, D. D., President of the Maryland Conference, is worthy of wider reading than the official reports of the conference will give.

"The Board of Home Missions:

"My knowledge of the financial affairs of this Board has led me to see the great importance of careful management and a firm insistance upon the payment of the obligations due the Board. Such negotiable paper has been discounted at the banks in order that the work may go on. I therefore call upon the charges of this conference who are debtors to the Board to give strict business-like attention to maturing obligations. I sometimes feel that we mistake the real purpose of this Board. It was instituted to project our church beyond our present boundaries, to enter new localities, encourage the erection of churches, and to foster those founded to the point of self-support. I do not feel that this conference can make any complaint in reference to the distribution of the funds of the Board. We give, but we must not expect to get all back, else the extension of the church will stop. It will be well therefore for us to remember that this Board cannot meet every request, however urgent. I must respectfully insist that the full amount of the assessment be met by the charges of this conference."

DOES THIS SURPRISE YOU?

The strip of territory fifty miles wide from Boston to Washington, D. C., is said to be the most densely populated region of similar size in the world. No section in France or China equals it. It is only approached by the territory between Liverpool and London, whose extent however is not so great. The Atlantic Coast is rapidly becoming almost continuous city for about five hundred miles, as it is one succession of harbors inviting commerce.

OR THIS?

"Today two million and more people labor seven days in the week on work that could be regulated on a six day basis, and the average church makes no particular effort to stop it. 'A triumphant church with a desecrated Sabbath is impossible.'"

OR THIS?

"The Home Mission Field in the city of Chicago is larger, in point of numbers, than that of Arizona, Alaska, Idaho, Montana, New Mexico, Nebraska, Oregon, Utah and Wyoming, all combined. One denomination alone gives half a million a year to mission work in Chicago. Twenty-nine ministers and forty-four lay workers are busy at thirty-seven mission centers.

"The evil in our cities is constantly held up to view—but the church of Christ is working day and night in them too."

THE APPROPRIATIONS

In May of each year, the Board of Home Missions makes its appropriations for the year, and notifies the proper official of the amount assigned for the support of the workers and extension of work in his territory. Appropriations once made by the Board have all the value of promissory notes. The offerings for the year may be insufficient to pay them, but the Board must make good its promises.

The Assessment.

Does not represent all that the conference or church should do in order that the work should be properly supported. It is only the minimum amount—the least sum that should be given in order that the Board may pay appropriations and avoid debt. That assessment is not a tax, and should not be taken as a measure of the giving ability of any conference or congregation. It is simply an endeavor to divide fairly among the members of the church an expense which is common to all. Many of our churches are giving free-will offerings much greater than the assessment calls for.

"Money is not the thing ultimately, or even actually aimed at. Money is not what really counts though it must be counted. Money signifies, that is, it is a sign. It is not the thing signified. There is mystery in money, money is life, put up in paper, condensed in coin, available anywhere, for anything, at any time. Therein lies the secret of its mystery and mischief. That is why it is so mighty as a means and so miserable as an end. That is why it is one of the best servants and the very worst masters. Money is the nearest, freest, readiest medium through which the kingdom can be extended. But money cannot be more than the medium. It is only the sign, never the substance of the gift.

Birmingham.

I desire to call attention again to the great loss which our mission in Birmingham, Ala., sustained on the morning of March 21. The terrible wind storm which swept over that city completely wrecked their beautiful new brick veneer church, which was just ready for the roof. The actual money loss will be some where from $1,000 to $2,000—not a large sum to a large and wealthy congregation, but very large sum to the hundred people in moderate circumstances which compose this church. Make this your special for Home Missions this month—send your check to the Treasurer of the Board, who will see that all sums are promptly forwarded to the treasurer of the Building Committee.

Money for these institutions which are under the direction of the Woman's Board of Home Missions should be sent to the treasurer of the Woman's Board Mrs. Fred Neer, Manchester, Ohio.

Charles H. Beck, Secretary-Treasurer.

An Old Bible.

A Bible published in England in 1321 is in possession of W. H. Walker of Spencer. The book has been in the Walker family for nearly 600 years, and was brought to America more than 100 years ago by John Walker, grandfather of W. H. Walker. The book is well preserved, is clearly legible. It is prized very highly. So far as is known this is the oldest Bible in North Carolina.

—Sixty-four years as a Bible teacher is a most unusual and honorable record of service. It is held by Mrs. Caroline Gallup, of Victor, N. Y. When Mrs. Gallup, who is now 87, was 80 years old, her friends rallied together to do honor to their friend, and celebrated with her not only her birthday and the completion of sixty four years service as a teacher of the Presbyterian Sunday school, but also the thirtieth anniversary of the organization of the Woman's Missionary Society, of which she is a member. On this occasion Mrs. Gallup's friends presented her with a silver loving cup. The great love that all hold for her is seen in this tribute of one of her friends. She is now 87 years of age, but time has dealt most kindly with her, and a life spent in loving deeds of charity has left only the impoint of gracious soul within.—Zion's Herald.

—We noted the following Methodist Protestants in attendance at the Sunday school convention, and no doubt there were others besides our Greensboro people:

Revs. E. G. Lowdermilk, T. A. Williams, D. A. Highfill, J. W. Self, Robt. Troxler, A. O. Lindley, S. M. Needham, T. E. Davis, W. D. Reed; J. A. Thompson; Mrs. J. C. Beam and Miss Hull of Bess Chapel: Ferree Ross, and wife and Miss Essie Ross of Asheboro; J. C. Allred of Giles Chapel; M. F. Vuncanon of Star; Bros. Hines and Baity from near Winston; Bro. Connell of Thomasville.

—Bro. A. D. Shelton made his first call in our office yesterday. He also attended part of the S. S. Convention.

—Bro. Ashburn was called to Brown Summit to conduct the funeral of R. L. Chilcutt on Sunday. He stopped in Greensboro a day at the S. S. Convention on his way home. He is looking well.

—Mrs. Cecil remains at Hillsboro, to be with her brother, Mr. Will Davies, who is quite ill.

SIGNING A NOTE.

One noon while Jason Edwards was sitting on the porch of his prosperous farm home, resting before returning to the fields, a shining top buggy drawn by a longlegged bay drew into the side yard and a brisk young man descended. He presented the card of the National Silo Co., and solicited an order. Mr. Edwards needed a silo and signed an order for one, to be erected later. He read the order carefully and noted its contents. It certainly read as an order for a silo, for the erection of which, if completed within sixty days after date, he was to pay $100.00.

No silo appeared, nor could Mr. Edwards locate the company, but he saw nothing to worry about until, sixty days later, a near-by bank presented to him for payment a note for $100.00 in regular form and bearing his signature. He protested that he had signed no such note, yet acknowledged that it was his signature. Examination showed that it was one end of the silo order he had signed. It had been so worded and arranged that one end might be cut off leaving a promissory note in regular form. The bank insisted that it had paid full price for a regular note and as it was a "negotiable instrument" it was protected as a bona fide holder. Edwards sought advice and being told that he would have to pay the note did so.

Proper advice by a competent attorney would probably have saved Edwards $100 since few states will support such a note, signed under such circumstances. True, if one is induced to sign a negotiable promissory note through fraud and that note is sold in ordinary course to a bank or individual, the purchaser accepting it in perfect honesty and good faith, paying full value for an apparently regular instrument that is not yet due, the quality of negotiability is such that the purchaser will have better rights than the rogue who transferred it. Indeed, under such circumstances, the signer would have to pay the note. But rightly viewed, the case of Jason Edwards is not such a case. He was not induced by fraud to sign a note, because he did not sign a note. What he signed was an order. Having never signed a note but something entirely different which was changed into a note, he is no more liable than if his signature was forged to a regular note. Yet it is not strange that many laymen have confused this rule and suffered needlessly when some of our courts have made the mistake.

The other side of the picture is the fraud practiced on Allen McGoorty and his wife. Again a buggy come down the road, but it was driven wildly by an attractive young man, and to his arm clung a young woman. They paused at the hospitable-looking house for refuge and told of eloping from a cruel father. Now, all the world loves a lover, and the McGoortys were all assistance. Opportunely, quite by accident, of course, a clerical-looking gentleman appeared from the other direction. Yes, he would marry them, and did—at least, he went through a ceremony. Of course, the bride wept, so did Mrs. McGoorty, and Mr. McGoorty blew his nose and found his eyes a bit dim. In the confusion the "Reverend" remarked that the witnesses must sign the certificate and pushed a paper toward them which they readily signed.

Three months later a bank produced the "marriage certificate" for payment. It was a regularly drawn note for $500.00. McGoorty had to pay it, as he was legally liable. He had committed the fault of failing to read what he signed. In his case he actually signed a note. Of course, neither the "Reverend" nor his confederates could have collected from the McGoortys, but they had negotiated the note at the bank, which, having nothing to arouse its suspicions and knowing McGoorty's signature, purchased it for full value, whereupon the "Reverend" and his friends moved on to try their scheme in virgin soil, taking care to be well away when the note fell due. Where one of two innocent persons must suffer the law takes the view that the one who by his carelessness made the fraud possible must foot the bill.

A similar result followed in the case of Clarence Tucker, who purchased and accepted a barrel of medicated calf meal, giving his note for $10 therefor. The bottom two-thirds of the barrel proved filled with sawdust, but by that time the bank had purchased the note and the agent had vanished. Tucker was legally bound to pay the note. The vendor of the meal could not have recovered the sum, but again the quality of negotiability protected the innocent purchaser, and the man who signed the note had to pay it. He had signed a note, and it having come into the hands of an innocent third party in due course of business, his liability was settled.

So when you sign a prommissory note, drawn in the familiar form—sixty days after date, for value received, I promise to pay to the order of John Doe, the sum of One Hundred Dollars with interest at six per cent per annum—remember that it is negotiable and so is a great deal like money in that it may be freely passed from hand to hand by simple indorsement on the back, and the man who comes by it honestly has full rights against the person who signs it.

In order to possess this quality of negotiability—to be able to pass from one to an other by simple indorsement, giving to the person receiving it these superior rights—a note must conform to certain legal requirements. These are stated in the Negotiable Instruments Law, a uniform act which has been adopted in similar form by practically all of the states. In general the note must be in writing and signed by the maker. Writing in its legal sense includes printing, litographs, etc.; and the signature may be an abbreviation or a "mark." Further, to be negotiable it must contain an unconditional promise to pay a certain sum in money, There must be no "if" about the promise to pay. Also it must be to pay money and not potatoes or nails. If you are having the house shingled and want to prevent the negotiating of a note you may give so that no one may secure from it better rights than the carpenter to whom you give it, you may do so by stating in the note that you promise to pay upon condition that the barn is shingled in accordance with the agreement.

To be negotiable a note must be payable on demand, or at a fixed or determinable future time. Naming a future date for payment, of course, fixes the time. So, too, it is regarded as a fixed time if payment is to be made at the happening of an event that is certain to occur. Sixty days from date is a determinable future time. Further, it must be payable to order or to bearer, these words of negotiability being necessary that the instrument may possess that quality. So notes are written "pay to the order of John Smith" and not just "pay to John Smith."

A note lacking the above requirements of negotiability may still be a good contract enforceable between the original parties according to the terms. But if the note be not negotiable and the man who made it has been swindled, he may make this defense against the person to whom he gave it.

A person who intends to bind himself by the note signs simply his own name. But mistakes are made by agents who do not intend to bind themselves, personally, but only their principals. Do not sign "John Jones, Agent for Samuel Smith," for that will make John Jones personally liable; but sign "Samuel Smith, by John Jones, Agent." A somewhat different rule prevails in the case of public officers for one acting in a public capacity may sign his own name as officer and bind his principals and not himself.

The notes of corporations and partnerships are signed by an officer or agent of the corporation or member of the partnership in the name of the company. A representative or partner who is held out to the world as having authority to sign notes, may bind the company even though he may have exceeded his authority. So if you are a partner, be cautious of the public authority that is given, really or apparently, to a partner whom you do not trust absolutely.

(Copyright, 1913, by Walter K. Towers.)

THE ENDLESS CHAIN

The ship had just arrived from Glasgow, and a number of emigrants had come ashore to the arms of their waiting friends. One woman stood apart from the crowd; she carried a year-old child in her arms, and an eight-year-old boy held fast to her skirt. Apparently she, too, had expected some one, but no one had come to meet her. It was in the early days of America, and traveling was not the simple matter it is now. Leaving her baggage to be called for, the woman, still carrying the child, started to walk to the place, twenty miles inland, where she knew her husband had built a home for her.

Before long a stranger overtook her. He was going to the same place to which the woman was bound, and he pleasantly but firmly insisted on carrying the child, who was a heavy load for the young mother. All the twenty miles he carried the child. It was a great treat, he said, to have the little one in his arms. At the town they parted, never to meet on earth again.

In after life, the little eight-year-old boy who trudged along that day at his mother's side became a clergyman, known to thousands for his numberless good deeds. "Never," he once remarked, "have I seen a mother in distress that I have not felt myself in honor bound to help her, because of what that stranger did that day. That one act of his has been the direct cause of hundreds of helpful things that I have loved to do for other mothers."

So it is that kindness spreads and grows. That one act of friendliness has multiplied itself a hundredfold. It has increased as the snowballs that boys roll upon soft snow increase. Long after the stranger had forgotten his act, long after he had been laid away to rest, his deed lives and grows, and sweetens and blesses the lives of men. Only God knows how much it will count finally for good.—Youth's Companion.

Missionary Meeting in Asheboro.

The women in the Methodist Protestant church in North Carolina were well represented at the annual meeting of the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies in the State, last week in Asheboro from 8-11. There were about 30 delegates present representing the different churches and auxiliaries. A great deal of interest was manifested in the different phases of work which is being done throughout the State. In the Foreign work, reports were made that the different societies are studying missions more than ever, that they are using various plans outlined by the Society and that $1500 had been raised in the state as her part toward furthering the work in the foreign field. Much interest was shown in the mission both in China and Japan where the women of the church are working. Since the work began in Japan in 1879 great good has been accomplished. There are now six missionaries in Japan (two at home on furloughs), two families in Kalgan China, ten Bible women and ninety eight native teachers working under the auspices of the mission's Board of Foreign Missions. The following officers were elected for the North Carolina Branch W. F. M. S.:

Pres. Mrs. J. F. McCulloch, Greensboro; 1st V. Pres. Mrs. A. G. Dixon, High Point; 2nd V. Pres. Mrs. J. Norman Wills, Greensboro. Cor. Sec., Miss Harris Glascock, Greensboro; Rec. Sec., Miss Etta Auman, Denton; Treas., Miss Velna McCulloch, Greensboro; Auditor, Mrs. H. A. Garrett, Greensboro.

Following the meeting of the Foreign Missionary Society came the annual meeting of the Home Missionary Society. Several churches that had been doing active work for the Children's Home which was started under the auspices of this organization were present as well as representatives from the different Societies. Inasmuch as the Society in North Carolina has special work in the State there is a great deal of interest and enthusiasm in the work. Plans were made by the different committees to aid in caring for the work. Recommendations were made for the women to use their influence in having plans carried out that were adopted by the M. P. Conference, that societies or churches assume the support of a child which is sixty dollars, that articles appear from time to time in Herald that may be of interest concerning the Home and Home Mission problems generally. Great emphasis was laid on forming organizations throughout the state, particularly among children and young people. The work at Denton was reported by Miss Etta Auman, matron of the Home. There are only eight children at the Home now, the larger ones being away where they may have some work to do during the summer. The Annual Conference has stood by the work and gratitude was expressed for this. The people generally are interested in it and it promises to be successful. The new building at High Point will perhaps not be ready for occupancy before July 1st but it is a magnificent building, one upon which the entire church may look with pride.

The following officers were elected;

Pres. Mrs. Wm. C. Hammer, Asheboro; V. Pres. Mrs E. B. Siler, Siler City; Rec. Sec., Mrs. A. G. Dixon, High Point; Cor Sec., Miss Pearl McCulloch, Greensboro; Treasurer, Miss Etta Auman, Denton.

Lady managers:

Miss H. Frances Sutton, Greensboro, Miss Esther Ross, Asheboro, Miss Lucy Masten, Winston, Miss Ila Stafford, Burlington, Lucilla Hardin, Pleasant Garden, Mrs. R. W. Lindley, Snow Camp, Miss May Bain, Greensboro.

The newly elected officers and all of the workers urge that every Methodist Protestant co-operate in the work which they are endeavoring to do, realizing that a great responsibility is resting upon them.

Place of meeting next year was left in hands of Exec. Com., of each organization. The people of Asheboro felt honored at having these meetings and the various churches were represented by women who told of the work their respective churches were doing which proved most interesting and helpful.

Reporter.

In Case of Failure.

A commercial traveler at a railway station in one of our Southern towns included in his order for breakfast two boiled eggs. The old darkey who served him brought him three.

"Uncle," said the traveling man, "why in the world did you bring me three boiled eggs? I only ordered two."

"Yes, sir," said the old darkey, bowing and smiling, "I know you did order two, sir, but I brought three because I just naturally felt dat one of dem might fail you, sir."—Topeka Capital.

No Wonder

Nerve Specialist: "My dear sir, I can't understand your case at all. Here you were practically cured a few days ago, and now your nerves are in frightful shape again. Have you had a sudden shock of some kind?"

Patient: "I received your bill yesterday."

PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENTS.

Richland .....April 25 to 26
Why Not .....April 27 to 29
Flat Rock Ct. ..... May 3 to 4
Stanley Ct. ..... May 9 to 10
Rockingham. ..... May 11, 12.
Monroe Ct. ..... May 13 to 15
Mecklenburg Ct. ..... May 16 to 18
Charlotte. ..... May 19

Brethren, it only costs you one cent to publish my plan for your charge. Won't you please do so for my sake. C. A. C.

FROM OUR PASTORS

Buncombe Circuit

Our second quarterly meeting will convene at Mt. Valley on Saturday before the second Sunday in May. Preaching at 11 A. M., business session at 1:30 P. M. All invited, especially the official members.

Our special meeting will begin at Democrat second Sunday in May at 11 A. M., with Rev. W. A. Lamar as pulpit help.

April 15. L. H. H.

Randleman Ct.

Our second quarterly conference will met at Worthville on Saturday before the first Sunday in May, at 5 o'clock P. M.

J. B. O'Briant.

April 21, 1913.

Mt. Hermon Circuit.

Two services at each church during the month of May. Friendship first Sunday. Subject for morning service: The way we look at things. Subject for afternoon: Is it right to use tobacco? Cedar Cliff, 2nd Sunday. Subject for morning service.—Church Loyalty. Afternoon—Superstition. Mt. Hermon, 3rd Sunday. Morning subject—A talk to and about children, after which a Cradle Roll will be organized by Mrs. George L. Curry of Graham. Subject afternoon: Before and after the Fall. Bellmont, 4th Sunday. Morning, Subject: The General resurrection. Afternoon subject: Homemade Scripture.

Come, bring your dinners, your children, your neighbors, your friends, and let's have a good day.

E. G. Lowdermilk, Pastor.

THE POSTAL CARD.

W. F. Kennett, Editor.

Once More.

Once more we wish to call the attention of the churches of Flat Rock circuit to the appointments of president Cecil which are as follows: Bethel, Saturday May 3rd, 11 A. M., with quarterly conference to follow after dinner on the ground. Sunday, the 4th, 11 A. M. Flat Rock, 4 P. M. Palestine and 7:45 P. M. Gideon's Grove. Every official member should attend the quarterly conference.

A Funeral.

The funeral of Mrs. Daniel Carr Thomas was held in Goshen M. E. church at Stokesdale on April 14th in the presence of a large congregation and was conducted by the writer. Mrs. Thomas was the mother of Bro. Walter Thomas, one of our Flat Rock young men. The following statement was handed to me by him:

Mrs. Mary Ann Thomas was born Feb. 2nd, 1849. Died April 13, 1913. Age 64 years 2 months and 11 days.

She held her church membership at old Shoemaker's church near Gibsonville.

No one ever had a better mother or a more faithful wife.

She was not seen to display anger nor heard to utter wicked words.

She was the greatest of home lovers and spent nearly all of her time in her home.

Her motto. "Works and not words."

La Grange.

Dear Herald:

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Noah Creech of our town was made sad Saturday by the death of their little daughter Sarah. She was a beautiful and bright child and being the only girl in the home will be missed very much. The body was buried in Fairview cemetery Sunday afternoon. The writer conducted the burial service. A large number of relatives and friends attended the service at the grave and the resting place of the little girl was covered with very beautiful flowers. Mrs. Creech is a loyal member of our church in La Grange.

Our town was shocked some time ago when Mr. J. S. Wooten of our church here was undergoing a very serious attack of sickness. Very few thought he could recover, but we are all glad that he is improving.

Mrs Ada Wooten Carter of our church here has returned from a trip to Washington and New York. She reports a pleasant trip.

We had preaching yesterday morning and evening in our town. We are very much delighted that Dr. Swain is to make a trip through our section and will stop and preach for us in La Grange Tuesday night, the 29th, and at Hickory Grove Wednesday night following. He has relatives and many friends here, and we rejoice when we have the opportunity to hear him. J. H. Abernethy.

April 21, 1913.

Alamance Circuit.

The second quarterly conference will meet at Flint Ridge, on Sat. before the first Sunday in May. Official members are requested to be present.

W. M. Pike.

Haw River Circuit.

The second quarterly conference will be held at Midway on Saturday, April 26th. There will be preaching at 11 o'clock, dinner at the church. We want all the official members and as many others as can to be there. Matters of interest to all of the circuit will be before the conference. W. D. Fogleman.

Reidsville, N. C., April 22, 1913.

Haw River Circuit.

We are now comfortably homed in the parsonage at Reidsville, and have about gotten a hold on my work, and hope by the blessing of our Father to do some good before the year is out.

We have been received kindly by Haw River circuit, all we could ask for. While we have not received a pounding like we sometimes read about, yet we have been receiving donations of such things as are useful to the pastor and his family. We have been remembered by Mrs. Kernodle, Mrs. J. M. Jones, Mrs. J. T. Richardson, Mrs. A. L. Moore, Mrs. R. A. Hopkins, Mrs. Maxwell, Mrs. John Dixon, and Mr. L. W. Cobb. I also have to thank some one, unknown to me, for a load of wood. We appreciate these acts of kindness and pray God to make us helpful to these good people. We hope to write more about Haw River circuit later.

W. D. Fogleman.

—The State S. S. Convention opened on Tuesday night with a great meeting. The addresses that night were principally on the greatness and importance of the Sunday school work. All the political parties of our country—Democrat, Republican, Progressive, Socialist combined—would not equal the number of people engaged in Sunday school work. Seventeen thousand Sunday school conventions are held each year, an average of one for about every half hour. Mrs. Mary Foster Bryner, who writes helps for the primary teacher printed in the Sunday School Times, was one of the speakers, introduced by Mr. N. B. Broughton as "one of the greatest women in the world." Judge Pritchard presided. Pres. Harper of Elon College made announcements as chairman of executive committee. Mr. Tullar led a large choir. Mr. Meredith sang a solo. Dr. McElfresh is among the speakers for Wednesday.

FROM LOCAL REPORTERS

Hebron, Lincoln Ct.

Bro. Waldrop gave us a very interesting sermon first Sunday, also stirred the Sunday school up considera.ly. We organized with 28; collection $1.20. On last Sunday we had 35; contribution, 63cts. We elected officers as follows: D. F. Boyles, Supt.; R. L. Boyles, assistant; Philip Carpenter, Charley Houser, Miss Etta Willis, teachers. Lester Boyles, secretary, Walter Boyles organist. I feel very much encouraged. We had Bro. Monroe Williams and wife worship with us last Sunday. Mr. Williams has lately gone into the mercantile business near here. We were glad to have them. Pray that our Sunday school may do a great good, for there is much to do in the church and out if we get all done that needs be done.

Mrs. Lee Boyles, Reporter.

April 15, 1913.

Hebron, Mebane Circuit.

We reorganized S. S. the first Sunday in April; the following were elected as officers: L. H. McAdams, Supt.; J. B. F. Jobe, Asst. Supt.; A. K. McAdams, Sect.; J. G. Jobe, Asst. Sect.; Lelia McAdams, organist; Mrs. F. W. Nelson, Asst. Teachers: J. B. Jobe, J. F. McAdams, Mrs. J. A. Nicholson, Mrs, F. W. Nelson. There are about 60 on roll. We hope to have more as spring opens.

Yesterday at 11 o'clock Mr. Swain preached a very interesting and helpful sermon to a very large and attentive congregation. We were glad to have Mrs. Swain worship with us, also glad to have Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Nicholson and little daughter Edna from Mebane.

We are glad to note that the sick in our community are getting along nicely.

Miss Lula Sykes who has been teaching at Norlina is at home for the summer. We are glad to have her back in S. S.

Our next preaching day, which will be the first Sun. in May, the Lord's Supper will be administered. We hope to have a large congregation.

I close with best wishes to the Herald and its many readers.

L. M.

April 21, 1913.

Roee Hill, Monroe Ct.

Our pastor filled his regular appointment Sunday morning. The congregation was quite large owing to the circumstances, there being no service at other churches in town. He preached a very forceful sermon, taking his text from "The rich man and Lazarus." Sunday night Rev. J. W. Quick preached a very interesting sermon from the same text. We feel sure that both services did good as there was one conversion Sunday morning and one addition to the church Sunday night.

Our Sunday school continues to increase as the spring opens.

We have prayer meeting every Sunday morning when there is no preaching service.

Our president will be with us on the night of May the 14th.

Success to the Herald.

Ruth Chavis.

April 21, 1913.

Asheville.

The little colony of Methodist Protestant recuperators is composed of Brother R. H. Brooks and family of Greensboro Bro. J. W. Neville and Mrs. Arthur Hull of Halifax circuit, and Miss Katie Boblitt of Granville circuit.

Col. S. V. Pickens is about the jolliest man in the land. On Feb. 23 one year ago, he was taken quite ill. He delights his callers with his hearty laughs. He is keenly interested in all the events of the day and all the departments of the church. His wife has for years been, perhaps, the most active worker in the missionary and Ladies' Aid Societies of the M. E. church in Hendersonville, and she has been a good S. S. teacher. Yet she is still a member of our church in Jupiter. It is to be hoped that Col. Pickens will soon be entirely well again and that this hospitable pair may long be spared to the comfort of their friends.

Our pastor, Bro. Bates, has been indisposed for a week on account of an operation on his nose.

Friendship, Mt Hermon Ct.

Our Sunday school that has been comparatively dead all winter we hope will begin to take on new life as everything else seems to be doing now. Owing to the disadvantage our Sunday school has had for some time, it has done well to keep going at all, especially during the winter months. If it had not been for the persistent efforts of a few, it would have gone into winter quarters. The lack of progress in our S. S. is due to a great many things, but first among these is the need of a church. We have been without a church for over a year and from the progress of our new one it will be another year before we can have a place for our S. S. that will seem like home.

We were glad to have our president with us on the third of April, and very fortunate to have him at our first quarterly conference.

There will be two services at Friendship the first Sunday in May.

We are sorry that Mrs. Lowdermilk continues ill. Hope she will soon be able to be out again.

Reporter.

Concord.

Our S. S. is ding nicely; there were 139 present yesterday, tho' there is a great deal of measles. The measles has been raging in our community and that is keeping some of the children out of S. S.

We are sorry to say that Sister Vincie L. Lowder was taken sick last Wednesday eve with appendicitis and was taken to Charlotte for operation. Her three sons went with her, Masters Lineberry, Chester and Vander. We ask the good people to pray for this good woman that she may be spared to get back home to her children as she left a unmber of them at home and some of them sick.

Mr. Sam McCommons and Mr. Pearl Scarboro from Rutherford College are at home on summer vacation. We are glad to have these young men back with us.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson of Thomasville were the guests of Bro. and Sister Suits Saturday and Sunday. We were glad to have these good people worship with us.

Our revival meeting commenced yesterday with a real good congregation, both morning and night services. We are praying for a great revival and I feel that the Lord is going to answer our prayer. We know that if there is any thing in real good preaching, Bro. Suits surely will do his part. Pray for us, dear readers, that we may all do what the Lord would have us do. We know there are souls here to be saved and O may the Lord help them to see where they stand!

Lottie Brown, Reporter.

Shiloh, Yadkin College Ct.

Since my last report, our hearts have been saddened by the death of little Margie Lillian, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Luther Leonard. She was born June 10th, 1911, departed this life Apr. 18th, 1913. Little Lillian was the flower of the home, she only budded on earth to bloom in heaven. She will be greatly missed in the S. S. and by all who knew her, for she was loved by all.

It is hard to do without our children, and we cannot undertsand why God called her away. Earth is made sadder and heaven is made brighter by her departure. May the bereaved parents be strengthened and have a stronger determination to

Continued on page 12.

A WISE OLD GOOSE.

Mr. Jackson Wall of Fosyth County, has an old white goose that is 34 years old. He acts like he wants to feel at home as "one of the family" and is very singular about many things.

He seems to look up to Mr. Wall as being the ruler of the place, and he tries hard to please the "boss." He is so very eager to keep the company of Mr. Wall and follow him around, he is often hard to drive back when he tries to follow Mr. Wall to church, or some other trip. Several times when he persisted in following, and got a mile or so from home, by being hissed at and urged to go back, he took strange fright and flight, and several times got lost and had trouble about finding the way home.

He enjoys his home, but there has trouble come to him right often, even while feeling quite at home. He must "eat to live" and loves grass and "green truck," and in "grazing" around he has found the way to the bean patch, and then the trouble; because he would find a tender thing that he was exceedingly fond of, and he, "goose like," devoured the young beans, and caused trouble to the matron's side of the house.

Such causes brought on serious trouble, and then Mr. Goose had to go to jail. "Everybody has their weak points," (as we hear said,) and this jail trouble seemed to hit his weakest tender place, because he was always cowed when he had to go to jail, and so much so that he continued and continues cowed for several days, even after being set free. While confined he could, or would, not eat, or ate but little while up in "jail"' and even for quite a while after being released. He was, and is, glad for friends even amongst the neighbors. An aged prominent man who lives near, and being a very kind man, has many kind words for people and things. Soon this sagacious fowl took so kindly to the words and friendly acts of Mr. S. that he even, as it seemed, tried to become "gallant," and when Mr. S. would come over and speak to him he would bow and act kindly as if talking, and would put his sleak white head up against the face of the aged man, same as to say, "you are my friend; we are true and tried friends and near neighbors." However, there has been rather serious trouble for some of the little folks.

Perhaps Mr. Goose, after all the honors of "talking with men," knows that he is no taller than the little folks, and possibly he has a little cause for jealousy hid back in side of his breast, because he has numbers of times, "pinched" the little folks—same as to say, "I want the good things here at 'our house' and don't want to be cut out by any of you," and this he would snap and pinch. And Mr. Goose is an unusually sagacious fowl, and wants to take care of the "personal property." He loves to follow Mr. Wall all about at work, and is so interested in taking good care of "our things," (as he may think) that if Mr. Wall happens to leave his coat lying around out, the good attendant will gard the 'stuff'—and is good and 'trusty.' While he is out watching Mr. Wall work he wants things to go on well, and don't want any trouble to come in the way—don't want any thing to happen suspicious. When Mr. Wall happens to lie down in the shade, and close his eyes and get still his "attendant" will get seemingly very uneasy, and act as though he was afraid that Mr. Wall would not wake up—but had died. Mr. Goose has his place under the buggy shed for "lodging," and can't crow like the rooster, but at the early getting up time he goes to the house and is always ready to bid "good morning" to the man he "delights to honor," and then wants to stay around in the "company."

W. F. Grabbs.

SPRINGTIME CONSERVATISM

Be conservative about spring. Don't let the small boys and girls get too optimistic, either, about these warm days. Shoes and stockings will not hurt them for a few weeks longer. The ground has not gotten thoroughly warmed yet. There is still too good a chance to catch that last spring cold if we let all the fires go out, change from heavy to light under wear, lay off our vests, or cast aside the shoes and stockings all at once. Better do these things gradually, one at a time, instead of all at once the first warm day.

It is rather strange how otherise sensible men and women will go from a hot, dry-baked air indoors to the other extreme outdoors these days, and then refer to the resulting cold or pneumonia as a "mysterious dispensation of Providence." Their own conduct ordinarily is the only mysterious thing about it.

BUILDING BAD HABITS

What would you think of a ship-builder who put rotten timbers into the hull of his vessel, but excused himself by saying that later on, when the cabins were being built, he would use sound wood? Is it any more absurd, though, than for a boy or girl to build bad habits and evil thoughts into the early foundation years of their lives and expect to make it up by "being good when they grow up"?—Comrade.

BE A FRIEND TO MAN

Let me live in my house by the side of the road,
Where the race of men go by;
They are good, they are bad, they are weak, they are strong,
Wise, foolish—so am I.
Then why should I sit in the scorner's seat,
Or hurl the cynic's ban?
Let me live in my house by the side of the road,
And be a friend to man.

—Sam Walter Foss.

GOD'S GIFT OF REST

The wisest teachers have always known that rest is not achieved, but acepted. It is not to be purchased; it is a gift. The very stones by the roadside are waiting to teach us this, and all waters sing as they flow.

For the stones have come to rest because an ample and patient support secures for their mass a stable equilibrium; and the waters will know no rest till, spread upon the floor of the sea, they accept rest as a gift from its mystic depths. The physicist has his precise way of stating all this. He has much to tell about the center of gravity and the plane of support. But he is only saying, after all, that in the world of mass and force nothing rests until it surrenders itself to the strong, the patient and the ample; and all restless motion and trembling insecurity is simply the search for such support.

Life has no other law. The doctors tell us that for the bruised, the strained, the overwrought, healing begins with relaxation. They are working with a new sense of deep-based physical re-enforcement vital tides, sustaining forces, to which the weary and the wounded may trust themselves, kind and elemental powers which offer health and healing as a gift and ask only that we shall yield to their beneficence.

Prophets and poets carry all this to its clear, appointed ends, and religion lends to it all its power and interpretation in the realm of the spirit. "In returning and rest shall ye be saved," says Isaiah; and Dante answers him, "His will is our peace." "Underneath are the everlasting arms," says the Deuteronomist; and Augustine cries, "Thou hast made us for Thyself, and our hearts are restless till they rest in Thee." To this the experience of all the saints bears testimony. Until we have discovered the deep, underlying fact that God alone in the true peace and refreshment of His children's heart, we are doomed to an unsettling restlessness.

These things are all of a piece. For us who just now are eager about our vacations, who seek rest and pursue it, who come and go in our various degrees, near and far, they have a message we ought to heed. The secret of rest is in a healed spirit, and spiritual rest is rooted in trust and surrender. Real rest works from the inside out. If God does not find us we shall not find rest. The vacation which does not issue in deeper spiritual adjustments is no vacation at all.—Congregationalist.

In Loving Memory.

Mr. Henry Miller, an old and respected citizen who had reached the age of about eighty-four years, died at his home in Tabernacle Township, April 1st, 1913. Mr. Miller was sick about four weeks. He was a very strongly constituted man, but the grim reaper of death which spares none has taken him from among us. He called his family and neighbors around his bed and told them that he was just passing away into another world, and that it was a beautiful world. He said he wanted to make a special request that we are all serve the Lord and meet him in Heaven where we would all praise "God" together. Mr. Miller leaves a wife and eight living children, two having passed to the beyond before him. He said that he could not come back to them but they could come to him. Oh, is not that a most beautiful thought? His friends and neighbors feel deeply their loss, but expect to keep their promise and meet him in heaven. He was a most devoted husband and affectionate father, always kind and loving. By his friends and neighbors he was held in the highest estimation and retained their esteem until the day of his death, and may we all remember that he is now gone to join the church triumphant and now at the beautiful gate he is waiting with his loved ones gone before and watching for you and for me. His funeral services were conducted the following day by Rev. Mr. Bell in the presence of a large congregation, after which his remains were too laid to rest in the cemetery at Pierce's Chapel to await the resurrection morn. We extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved ones. May we all be faithful to God's word and be ready to meet him in the sweet by and by.

Dearest father, thou hast left us,
And our loss we deeply feel,
But 'tis God that hath bereft us;
He can all our sorrows heal.
Yet again we hope to meet thee,
When the day of life is fled
And in heaven with joy to greet thee,
Where no farewell tears are shed.

A Friend.

James Austin, infant son of Bro. and sister Garfield Beck, passed away March 29th after a few days' illness. All was done for it that skilled physicians and loving hands could do. But the Lord saw best to take it. May the Lord comfort the broken hearted father and mother in their sad and lonely hours.

Mrs. T. A. Williams.

Thomasville, N. C.

AN INCIDENT IN MY LIFE

One summer evening, more than ten years ago, at a protracted meeting at our church, I noticed in the congregation a sad-faced boy seemingly about seventeen years old. Conviction was visible in every line of his face, and deep down in my heart I felt an urgent call to go and speak to him about his soul. The call to me was so urgent that I felt that if I did not go I would lose the joy of my own salvation. I left my place in the choir, and at once went across the church to where he stood and asked him to come to the altar. He almost shuddered, but said: "Not tonight." I had delivered my message, and I went back to my place in the choir feeling the peace of God in my own heart, leaving results to God. The meeting closed and I saw no more of Henry (which was his name). Two years after this time we had a meeting again at our church, when he went to the altar and was soundly converted. He grasped my hand when the congregation had been dismissed and exclaimed: "God bless you, Sister Campbell! You remember two years ago when you came to me out there in the congregation? I would not go; but I went home and prayed that night, and I have been praying ever since."

Soon after the meeting closed he started out into the world to make his own living and found honorable employment in Nashville, Tenn. The next I heard of him he was away, in St. Louis, Mo., and I lost sight of him altogether. But one beautiful summer morning religious services were being held in a little schoolhouse several miles away from my home, and I attended. A genteelly dressed young man came into the building and took a seat directly in the rear of mine. At the close of the service there was a mutual, glad recognition. This stalwart man was the same Henry that I had admonished to be a Christian years ago. After greetings, the next thing I asked him was if he was still a Christian, and with a glad smile he answered in the affirmative. He went back to St. Louis soon after this (for he was only in Kentucky on a visit). The last I heard of him he had married and was a prosperous business man in St. Louis.—(Miss) Alice G. Campbell, R. F. D. No. 3, Adairville, Ky.

ENCOURAGEMENT ENOUGH

There are Christian people who become very easily discouraged. Their temperament is such that very small matters cause them to lose heart, and they at once fall down into the slough of despair. Such ones are all the while longing for encouraging words from others. But if one will reflect a moment and consider the fact that God has promised to be with those who abidingly trust in Him, they may see that there is enough encouragement in this one thing. All through Bible history God gave assurance to believing ones that He would surely be with them. This one pledge has in it an abundance of large meaning. What more could the saints of old ask than such a pledge and promise? The direct presence of the allwise and almighty God, giving ample support to the believers in all conditions and all circumstances, was encouragement enough. It is so now. Why should any Christian indulge in fears and undue anxieties? Why need one regard his good work as a failure, while God keeps close companionship with him, supplying him with necessary wisdom, and putting His own power at that one's disposal? Why should one bemoan the lack of human encouragement, when he has the greatest source of encouragement in the great God? What maters it if we do not see considerable results from our efforts to do good? It is an evil habit to be always looking for fruits of our labors, being discouraged if we do not see any, or encouraged if we do see plenty of them. We should stand on a much higher plane, and get all encouragement from the simple and great truth that God is with us, if we are truly His servants. He is with us as really when our work seems to us to be fruitless, as when it appears to be a large success.—C. H. Wetherbe.

"It isn't worth while to fret, dear,
To walk as behind a hearse.
No matter how vexing things may be,
They easily might be worse;
And the time you spend in complaining
And groaning about the load
Would better be given in going on,
And pressing along the road."

—Bro. R. C. Hunter who has been in Spray for a few years moves back to Kernersville.

Begun on page 9.

stand by the right and meet their dear little baby in heaven. While the home is so lonely and sad they have the deepest sympathy of a host of relatives and friends.

Rev. H. L. Powell could not fill his appointment yesterday on account of the illness of his wife. May she recover soon.

A beautiful home wedding was solemnized April 20th at the home of the bride's father Mr. Jesse Hill, when Miss Maie became the wife of Mr. Hilliard Michael. The ceremony was performed by Mr. D. C. Craven, after which they entered the dining room and a sumptuous dinner was served. The young couple are both of this community. They have the best wishes of a number of friends that their path may be bright and sunny through life.

April 21, 1913.

Reporter.

Caroleen.

We are glad to report that our Sunday school is moving along very nicely. The attendance yesterday was 184, and the offering amounted to $7.37. A year ago today our attendance was 94, and our offering amounted to $1.23. We believe the Lord is blessing us at this place. We are well pleased with our superintendent, Bro. Carron Atkins. We believe he is the proper man for the place, and we are very much pleased with our pastor. He has been faithfully preaching for us two weeks. The Lord is blessing abundantly; the meeting is doing a great work in homes as well as in the church. People are being saved in their homes. We believe we have one of the best preachers in the Conference.

Baraca Class.

Sunday, April 20, 1913, attendance 42; offering $5.83. Our Baraca Clas was organized August 18, 1912.. Subscriptions were taken in the Baraca Class for the new Sunday school rooms amounting to $15.00 last Sunday. Everybody pray for us that the good Lord will still bless us. Yours in Christ and for the Sunday school work.

J. T. Sisk, Reporter.

Burlington.

The Sunday school had an attendance of 225 Sunday, and the offering was $103.-64. The Baraca Class made a special offering and contributed $100.76 of the above amount. They believe in living up to their motto, not only from a financial standpoint, but also from a standpoint of their national platform. The Sunday school as a whole wish to thank them for the exercise they conducted Sunday morning. The speeches of Bros. Holt and Way, who attended the Baraca Philathea Conventioon in Charlotte were especially interesting.

T. P. D., Reporter.

April 21, 1913.

Mt. Carmel, Granville Ct.

Last Sunday school report as follows: total on roll, 75; total present, 60; total collection, 45 cts.; twenty-one new scholars. The officers and teachers are attending well which of course has much to do with the success of a Sunday school.

In my last report it was talked that the next quarterly conference of this charge would be some time possibly in June. It should have been some time in July. Don't know just whether the mistake was mine of the "other-fellow's."

W. Polk Garrett.

April 21, 1913.

Hawkin's Chapel, Littleton Ct.

There was a very good congregation out to hear our pastor last Sunday. We always get something out of the service that is helpful to us. Bro. Edwards announced the second Sunday in Mar. for a contribution to be taken second Sunday in Apr. for the Orphanage; collection about $5.00. Easter afternoon gave the children an Easter egg hunt which all enjoyed.

We are getting along in our S. S. very well; there are some that don't attend as they should. Would love to have them with us each Sabbath. We hope to have a better school this year. We hope prayer meeting will be held more regularly after a while. We are looking forward for our president to be with us Monday, April 21st. We hope to have a large congregation out to hear him. Since my last report three or four marriages have taken place: Mr. Philip Hawkins to Miss Vergie Morgan; Mr. Wilson Hawkins and Miss Mattie Crawley; Mr. John Faucett and Miss Sis Shaw. Wishing them a long, happy life together in this world and eternal life in the world to come.

Vaunah Shearin, Rep.

April 19, 1913.

A TRIP TO WHY NOT CIRCUIT

On Friday, April 11th, about 1 o'clock, I started for Love Joy to fill some appointments for Bro. Stowe. Spent the night with Bro. Russel Williams, a good home. Saturday morning I started again in the rain and mud; stopped about 1 o'clock at a Mrs. Moore's. Found Sister Moore very feeble, but a young daughter soon got me a good dinner, while a son fed the mule. Then drove on to Love Joy in good time for the 3 o'clock appointment. By this time it was looking so rainy we had no service. Went home with Bro. Warner. This was the old home of crippled Billy Hurley. Bro. W. C. Kennett will remember the place. When I found my father and W. C. Kennett had been there I began to feel at home. Sunday morning back to Love Joy; met a good congregation while I tried to preach. As the tears ran down the cheeks of the people, I felt it was having a good effect. Service over, I then went to Macedonia; met another good congregation that gave good attention to the word. I have been preaching about three years; never have had to reprove a congregation yet. Somehow, when I preach the people always give good attention. Spent Sunday night with Bro. Joel Cornelison, a good place to stay.

Monday about 4 P. M. found me back home, feeling I had done some good. Bro. Stowe has been among this people for a long time, but is very popular with them. Yet this work is too much for one man. I don't believe in putting two men's work on one man and so many idle. There ought to be something done, but I have no plan to offer. I will stop. Yours for Christ and the church,

April 10. G. A. Laughlin.

DIED.

Jenks.

Samantha Josephine Boyles Jenks was born March 6, 1884, and departed this life Dec. 14, 1912. She professed religion at 13 years of age and joined the M. P. church and lived a faithful worker till death came. She was a missionary collector from the time she was ten years old until the last year of her life. She loved her church and did all she could for the advancement of her Father's kingdom. The last money she spent was three dollars for the missionary cause while on her death bed. She was taken sick at Cherryville, N. C., and all that could be done for her was done by doctors and friends, but all failed to do any good. Then she was removed to the Shelby hospital and all that could be done there was done but to no avail. She must go, for the Father called and when that summons comes we all must obey.

Mrs. Jenk was married to J. P. Jenks in 1913. To them 3 children were born, one son and two daughters. She leaves a husband and these little ones besides father, mother, three sisters and two brothers, five step children, and a host of friends to mourn. Two sisters and one brother preceded her to the glory land. Her friends and loved ones do not grieve as those who have no hope, for she told her friends often that she did not fear death, and she was, ready if it was God's will for her to go and she bore her suffering with Christian faith. Though her path was not always strewn with roses, she kept close to the Saviour and He led her safe through to the end. Pray for the bereaved friends and her little ones that they may be brought up to love and fear the God of their mother.

A Friend.

The oldest citizen of Randleman and oldest member of Mt. Lebanon church has passed from labor to reward. E. S. Turner known better as "Uncle Scot" and "Grand Pap," died April 12th at the age of 92 years 6months and 16 days. Father Turner was a memorable character. He was indeed the Israel of Mt. Lebanon church. He had been blind for more than 40 years, and was always vatient and never complained of his affliction. He was always happy in the Lord. The writer visited him often and it was always an inspiration to talk with him. One thing that inspired us much was his love and high regard for every body. He had a blessing for every one. He always gave us a parting blessing; even when he could no longer speak above a whisper, he would still hold our hand and say, "God bless you!"

"Grand Pap" was held in high esteem by all who knew him. He was raised in Guilford County near Tabernacle, and we are told that he spent much time while young in the home of "Father McCulloch" (the Editor's father). He often talked of the good people of Tabernacle.

He was converted and joined the church at Tabernacle at 22 years of age. In 1845 Miss Edith Causey became his companion for life. God blessed their home with 5 children, and following those are 16 grand children, 21 great grand children, and 1 great-great-grand child.

Tired and weary of this life, he had no desire to live longer. He often said, "I am ready and waiting" to make his departure. His departure was a peaceful one. "Grand Pap," we will see you no more on earth, but we hope one day to see you again and to find that your once blind eyes are blind no more, but open, beholding all the beauties of the glory world. Father Kennett now becomes the oldest man in Randlemon and we will now love and honor him as our father in Israel.

J. B. O'Briant.

April 21, 1913.

THE DAYTON FLOOD.

The Dayton flood is beyond description. It is one of those very strange freaks which it does not seem possible at first thought, to understand. But on investigations we find the reason for it to be obvious.

The first thing that appeared to us in the flooded districts were wrecked houses, with fine furniture, covered with mud and slime. I can not see why it can be anything but a total loss. On our way to the business district we counted eight dead horses in one place. Three fine touring cars were piled in one heap; the finest automobiles that money could buy are now lying in the rubbish and debris of Dayton with wheels upturned. Street cars that were overtaken by the flood in the business districts, were covered with the waters and literally beaten to pieces by the currents. Hundreds of the finest pianos were washed out of the homes and stores, set afloat, covered with mud and slime, and now they lie on the streets, hang on the porch roofs of homes, and are beaten to pieces.

The entire business district was flooded. Everything on the first floor of every business house in this district was ruined,—covered with mud or washed away. Canned goods, groceries, meats, dry goods, office supplies, drugs, liquor, hats, suits, shoes, and many other things washed through the streets in one conglomerated mass. Horses swam between buildings in water ten or fourteen feet deep trying to climb the buildings and telephone poles, whinneying for help, to finally sink and drown. Two horses were on the fifth street bridge when it was swept away, frantic with grief they were running from one end to the other, after it had broken loose at either end, and went down with it. The water striking corner department stores, swept through these stores diagonally, breaking out the plate glass windows and covering the floor with from six to eight inches of mud and slime.

No person will ever know the extent of property loss, or the number of lives lost. These facts are kept as secret as possible for the sake of the city's future. All of our people there connected in any way with the denominational work, were saved, but most of them had experiences that were severe tests of their faith and nerves. I wish I had space here, and time, to relate some of the harrowing and gruesome experiences related to me. Think what it must be to be driven by a flood to the second story of your house, in black darkness with the water creeping up two feet per hour, with no sign of relenting, while you know that to try to escape from the house would be almost sudden death. But I must not try to describe these experiences, for no doubt the Dayton people will tell us about it.

As you sit at your comfortable fireside, or in the pleasant evening breeze, if you live in the South, when you read this I would like to have you remember that men and women in Dayton who are in good circumstances, who have bank accounts, and good homes, are standing out on the "bread-line" where trucks and wagons pass along, with a man standing in each one of them, to hand out sandwiches and coffee. What a helpless thing money is, sometimes!

What God intends to teach us by these lessons, we may not now understand, but surely one thing is, how useless it is for us to put our trust in things that floods beat upon and wash down. Many men in Dayton whose business was washed away, had been trusting too much in this business of making money. It seems that God needs to resort to very forceful methods sometimes before man will remember that He is able to restore again any thing that He has caused to be. The same power by which men build up these businesses, will help them to build again, and through it all teach them, if they will be taught, that He is author and giver. And then, too, what fine demonstration of the tie of sympathy in human hearts that binds our race together! Surely God made of one blood all nations to dwell on the face of the earth! And now we forget all except our desire to help all these people who are in need.—H. R. Clem in Christian Sun.

On Saturday morning April 19th there was a beautiful home wedding at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Kiger at Bethania, N. C., when their accomplished daughter, Miss Stella, became the bride of Mr. W. C. Wolff of Thurmond, N. C. Only a few relatives and friends of both bride and groom, were present. Miss Myrtle Kiger the bride's sister was maid of honor; and Mr. A. H. Wolff brother of the groom was best man. Mr. E. F. Kiger the bride's father gave her away; while Miss Pearl James played the wedding march. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. O. Lindley the bride's pastor. After which the bride and groom left for Thurmond, where they will make their home.

Miss Stella is one of our best young ladies, and has been teaching in the public schools for several years. She will be greatly missed. Mr. Wolff is one of Thurmond's best citizens. We bespeak for them a happy voyage down the stream of life.

WHEN THE HARDSHIP IS HEAVIEST

One who really trusts God rejoices most when he has to trust most. Knowing that God is absolutely dependable and that He will make all things work together for good to them that love Him, no hindering, baffling hardships can arouse anything in such a one's heart but unbounded joy. Not circumstance, but Christ is the determining factor in his joy. A man who had been inclined to think that his joy must depend somewhat upon the nature of his circumstances came later to see how independent of these, in Christ, he could be. Talking it over with a friend, he was asked whether he had now come to believe that joy was independent of circumstances. "No," he replied with a smile; "it increases with the increase of the hard things." That is the way Christ would have us to rejoice. For every time of peculiarly dark testing means that Christ now has an exceptional opportunity to show forth His love and His power. After Paul and Silas had been stripped and beaten, their feet made fast in the stocks, and the doors of the prison fast closed, their joy was such that they just had to sing! We are not to be limited to ordinary joy when we are in a prison of any kind; that is the time for the outpoured, singing sort.—S. S. Times.

A GENTLE CALL.

Sometimes the Christian life begins very simply, especially with the young. Among those who have been under good influences in the home, the church, the Sunday school, and have been living sweet and gentle lives, free from grosser forms of evil, it is unreasonable to expect any violent "experience" or marked change in the outward manner of living.

Failing to realize this fact, many parents continue to wrestle with the Lord in prayer for the conversion of their children long after the change has really taken place, while the children and young people themselves, on account of the same mistaken impression, continue long in strong efforts and deep, unsatisfied longings to become Christians after God has indeed accepted them, and they are actually living devotedly in his service.

It is well for us to recognize how simple and quietly the Christian life sometimes begins. A thoughtful girl of sixteen years, living in the country at a distance from the church, which made attendance irregular, read, on a Sunday, the memories of a Christian woman. On closing the volume she said to herself: "That was a beautiful life." And after a little thought, she added: "And I should like to live such a life." A few minutes later she knelt, and said: "Lord, I will try from this time." The decision was made. She went on steadily, and is still a useful and influential Christian woman, honored and beloved and widely known for her beautiful and devoted character.—G. B. F. Hallock, D. D.

PETTING A CAPTIVE LION.

Let me finally relate an experience I once had with a captive lion. I can scarcely tell why I have kept this for the last, except that it seems to some who have heard me tell these stories, the most surprising of all. For most of us have been taught to believe that a lion in captivity is a dangerous creature, and his very intelligence and kinship make him the most able to appreciate the difference between his freedom and his state of captivity and to resent most strongly the fact that he is deprived of his much-enjoyed libertiy.

A few years ago I was visiting my much-revered friend, Major J. W. Powell, the eminent scientist of Washington, D. C. He was the organizer and director of both the U. S. Geological Survey and the U. S. Bureau of American Ethnology, and we had foregathered many times in happy confab over the Grand Canyon of the Colorado River, the whole system of which we had explored in the years 1869-73, and also over the Indians of the Southwest with whom I had also spent much time. During their active field work in the wilds both geologists and ethnologists had been able to collect many interesting living animals, which, under Major Powell's direction they had forwarded to Zoological Park, located on the outskirts of the national capital.

Being thus interested in this park it was natural that one day he suggested that we go out and spend the day there looking at the various animals. Nothing could have pleased me more, especially as, going in his company, I was assured the superintendent would afford us opportunities for closer contact with many of the animals than would be safe to allow promiscuously to the every-day visitors. On telephoning out the major was assured of the superintendent's personal guidance, hence on our arrival, we were at once taken in hand by this obliging official whose knowledge of the animals in general, and of the particular history of each specimen, necessarily, was greater than that of any of his subordinates. Accordingly we enjoyed a freedom of observation—or, at least, I did—that was unusual and exceedingly gratifying. Many things entertained me during the day and I made a friendly acquaintance with many strange animals and birds.

In the afternoon we came to the row of cages devoted to the lons and while we were standing together at one end, listening to the superintendent's account of the capture and travels of the royal beast we were looking at, I suddenly heard from somewhere up the row a sound which I took to be the love-call of the lion. Immediately I did my best to respond, and as quickly came back the call again. Acting upon impulse—for I suppose had I stopped to think I should have deemed it an unwise and dangerous proceeding—I hastened to the cage of the animal giving the call. I found it at the further end, and the creature occupying it the largest lion I had ever seen in my life. He was purring and giving forth this call alternately, marching back and forth close to the bars, his whiskers touching them as he passed, his demeanor in every way signifying to me his desire to be petted and caressed. As instinctively as I respond to the offered hand of a friend I responded to his desire, his call, for affection, and thrusting both hands between the bars began at once to rub his mane, neck and head as if we were lifelong friends. Then, as he stood still in evident delight, pressing closer to me (on the other side of the bars, of course), I took his great muzzle in both hands and rubbed his jaws and mouth just as I have often done those of a pet dog.

While I was thus engaged, enjoying it quite as much and perhaps more than the lion, my ears were suddenly assailed by a human roar, "What in thunder do you mean by scaring me out of my wits by such foolery as that? Don't you know you're monkeying with a lion?" And in a moment I realized I was doing what my friend and the superintendent deemed a foolhardy thing. Reluctantly I withdrew, openly protesting, however, that I had been in no danger whatever until they had made me self-conscious, and that I did not thank them for so awakening me. I felt then, as I feel now, that the active exercise of my affection, and the spontaneous yielding to it had awakened a corresponding spontaneity of affection in the animal and that, therefore, both of us were happy in the exercise of our newfound kinship and glad to welcome each other as friends.

"Love never faileth."

"And now abideth faith, hope, love, these three, but the greatest of these is love."—G. W. James, in Our Dumb Animals.

—Rev. H. W. Braswell writes that he is in the midst of a great meeting at Caroleen. There were 177 present in the Sunday school there last Sunday.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

Greensboro, N. C.

N. B.—Following schedule figures published only as information and are not guaranteed.

1.00 A. M.—No. 29 daily, Birmingham Special, through Pullman sleeping and observation cars New York to Birmingham and Richmond to Birmingham. Luring car service.

12.48 A. M.—No. 32 daily, Southern's Limited, Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville, Augusta and Aikin to New York. Dining car service.

12.55 a. m.—No. 112 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh open at 9.15 p. m.

[illegible] m.—No. 30 daily, Birmingham special. Pullman sleeping and observation cars from Birmingham and Asheville to New York and Birmingham to Richmond. Dining car service.

2.25 a. m.—No. 31, the Southern's Southeastern Limited, Pullman sleeping cars from New York to Asheville. Day coaches. Dining car service.

3.45 a. m.—No. 45 daily local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7.10 a m.—No. 8, daily local for Richmond, connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7.20 a. m.—No. 37 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited Pullman drawing room, sleeping cars and club and observation cars New York to new Orleans. Pullman sleeping car New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon Pullman chair car Greensboro to Montgomery, solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m.—No. 108 daily local Greensboro to Goldsboro.

7.35 a. m.—No. 11, daily local through to Atlanta, sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m.—No. 154 daily except Sunday for Ramseur.

8.15 a. m.—No. 237 daily for Winston-Salem and North Wilkesboro. Pullman sleeping car Raleigh to Winston-Salem.

9.30 a. m.—No. 44 daily for Washington and points North.

9.40 a. m.—No. 144 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro; handles Atlanta Raleigh sleeping car.

12.30 p. m.—No. 21 daily for Asheville, Waynesville and local points; handles coaches and chair car through to Asheville and Waynesville.

12.50 p. m.—No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

[illegible] p. m.—No. 21 daily for Asheville,

[illegible] p. m.—No. 7 daily for Charlotte and points South.

1.40 p. m.—No. 36 daily U. S. Fast Mail for Washington, New York and points north; handles Pullman sleeping cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman sleeping car Asheville to Richmond Pullman chair car Greenville, S. C., to Washington. Day coaches. Dining car service.

2.20 p. m.—No. 207 daily for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday for North Wilkesboro.

2.50 p. m.—No. 151 daily except Sunday for [illegible] p. m.—No. 250 daily except Sunday for Madison.

Ramseur.

2.50 p. m.—No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4.20 p. m.—No. 22 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles chair car to Goldsboro.

4.55 p. m.—No. 151 daily for Mt. Airy.

6.10 p. m.—No. 35 daily U. S. Fast Mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars New York to New Orleans and Birmingham and sleeping car Richmond to Asheville which car can be occupied until 7 a. m. Pullman chair car Washington to Greenville, S. C. Day coaches. Dining car service.

6.55 p. m.—No. 235 daily for Winston-Salem.

7.00 p. m.—No. 43 daily for Atlanta Sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10.15 p. m.—No. 38 daily New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited Pullman sleeping cars New Orleans, Macon, Asheville and Charlotte to New York and Pullman chair car Montgomery to Greensboro. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

10.20 p. m.—No. 233 daily for Winston-Salem.

10.31 p. m.—No. 12 daily local for Richmond; handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman, Vice-President and General Manager, Washington, D. C.; S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M., Washington, D. C.; H. F. Cary, G. P. A., Washington, D. C.; R. H. DeButts, D. P. A., Charlotte, N. C.; O. F. York, P. & A., Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF STOMACH AND INTESTINES.

121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. J. E. Wyche.

DENTIST.

Office in Benbow Arcade, S. Elm St.,
Rooms 348 and 350,
Greensboro, N. C.
Office phone 29, Residence phone 22.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Washington, D. C., April 2.—Car and depot thieves will find their operations in the future more difficult than in the past and will have to face prosecution in the Federal Courts as well as before state tribunals as the result of the bill introduced by Representative C. C. Carlin, of Alexandria, Va., passed by both Houses of Congress, and approved by the President. This Act imposes a maximum fine of $5,000 or imprisonment for not more than ten years for any person convicted of unlawfully breaking into any railway car containing interstate or foreign shipments of freight or express, or of stealing or obtaining by fraud or deception from any car, depot, platform, vessel, or wharf, any freight, express or baggage which constitutes or is a part of any interstate or foreign shipment.

While the Carlin Act in no way infringes on the jurisdiction of the state courts, it puts the whole power of the Federal Department of Justice behind the detection and prosecution of persons guilty of stealing from cars or depots, since it will be practically impossible for thieves to distinguish between intrastate and interstate shipments. It is confidently expected that this law will have a powerful effect in breaking up thefts of this character which not only involve a serious loss to the railways and cause great inconvenience to shippers and travelers but are a constant menace to railway employees and the traveling public since it is notorious that car thieves do not hesitate to interfere with trains or resort to other expedients to serve their own purposes, regardless of the consequences.

Spencer, N. C., April 11,—To provide improved facilities for properly handling the growing movement of live stock to Eastern and Virginia markets from the Southeastern states, the Southern Railway is now completing a modern plant for resting and feeding stock on property adjoining the Spencer yards.

The plant consists of 33 pens, 20 of which are covered. All pens and alleys are paved with one foot of cinders and are located on a gentle slope, providing natural drainage. Each pen is provided with a water trough and feed rack, and the entire plant is electrically lighted. Nine pens are set apart for cattle from the quarantined area and are separated from the others by a solid board wall ten feet high. As all cattle are unloaded at Spencer for feed and rest, this convenient plant will prove an important facility for stock growers.

The construction of this plant is in line with the Southern Railway Company's policy of making every possible effort to aid the live stock industry in the territory along its lines, in accordance with which it has provided special train service for live stock from points where sufficient business is offered and through its Live Stock Department is endeavoring to interest farmers, to disseminate helpful information, and to contribute in every proper manner to the upbuilding of the industry.

Spring Hints.

Here are a few suggestions to aid the ambitious in the worthy project of getting through the spring alive:

Don't shift your underclothing prematurely. Better a little discomfort to the skin than a sore spot on the lungs.

Control your fireplaces and the furnace fire by the thermometer, not by the calendar.

Keep the air in your house moderately moist by means of pans of water placed under the radiator or near the registers.

Take a cold bath every morning; there is no better defense against taking cold.

Keep your distance from people who cough or snuffle; a cold is as contagious as smallpox.

Avoid dust.

Neatness and order are as contagious as diphtheria. Watch your neighbor follow your example when you clean the yard, plant flowers, and care for the lawn.

No individual and no health department alone can ever cope with the fly problem. But all of us, working together, can very effectively cope with it.

Cleanliness offers a solution for almost every sanitary problem; it will do more than anything else to solve the fly problem.

Little flies and little children can not dwell in the same habitation; if the first aren't killed, the second probably will be.

Got your screens up?

"Better late than never;" yes, but "better never late."

W. F. MEDEARIS J. F. PEEBLES W. L. PEEBLES
MEDEARIS-PEEBLES FURNITURE COMPANY.
Complete House Furnishers.
STOVES AND RANGES
Cash or Credit.
109 & 111 E. Market St.
Phone 823. Greensboro, N. C.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.
Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.
206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

OVER 65 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.
Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

This School is Supreme in Teaching Law by Mail
THE ORIGINAL SCHOOL
It established correspondence instruction 23 years ago. It was founded on sane methods, sound courses and authoritative teaching. It has never deviated therefrom. It has had phenomenal success and enjoys unlimited respect. Right now is best equipped—best qualified to teach you law—for legal practice or for business. The catalog explains each advantage in detail, lists the thousands of successful graduates, and gives the fair prices for College Law Course and Business Law Course. If you want the best—write now for this catalog.
The Sprague Correspondence School of Law
The Sprague Correspondence School of Law
400 American Building
Detroit, Mich.

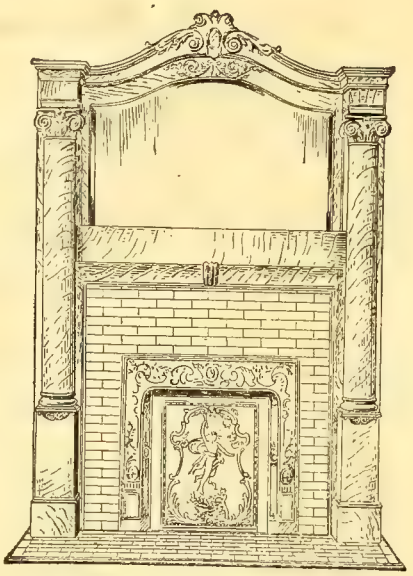
—E. C. Perkins, a Yale graduate and a man of wealth, will go to China as a medical missionary. He will build a hospital at Kukiang, and will serve without salary.

—Laboring men in Belgium are on a strike against the political system which gives more than one vote to property owners. About 60 per cent. of the voters have one vote, 25 per cent. two votes, and 15 per cent. three votes.

—Two hundred Montenegrins in face of death climbed up the Turkish forts at Scutaria, carrying bombs. Every man of them was killed, but they opened the way for the soldiers behind them and the hill was won. Their valor will probably inspire some poet to write in their honor.

—Mrs. Pankhurst, London suffragette imprisoned for inciting to destruction of property, has been released at the end of nine days to keep her from starving herself to death. If she does not refrain from misdemeanors, she may be arrested without a warrant, and must then serve out her term of three years—unless the authorities relent again.

—The weekly paper owned by the city of Los Angeles has been abandoned, after an existence of about eight months. It is said to have cost about $3,000 a month, and its revenues were practically nothing.



Mantels, Grates, Tiles and Builders' Hardware.

If you intend to build a new house, or to improve an old one, don't fail to get our catalogue, showing the latest designs in mantels, grates, tiles and builder's hardware. We have designs to suit every style of architecture. It will pay you to write us.

ODELL MANTEL COMPANY,
(Odell Hardware Co., Owners.)
Greensboro, N. C.

TEACHERS' NORMAL COURSE—ELON COLLEGE

All tuition free. Term opens April 8th and closes June 5th, 1913. A full two months' term for teachers.

Courses offered in all the branches taught in the elementary and secondary schools. Strong courses offered in Pedagogy, and the Theory and Practice of Teaching.

The course is planned for all teachers who wish to prepare themselves for better work and better service, for those who have the ambition to make better teachers than they have yet become, and for those who wish to prepare for better positions than they have yet been able to secure.

Expenses low as the lowest. A Bulletin containing information concerning courses, cost, work, etc., will be sent for the asking.

For full information write to
W. A. HARPER, President, or
THOMAS C. AMICK, Director,
Elon College, North Carolina

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT
Absolute Security for Your Savings
Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.
This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.
Greensboro Loan and Trust Company
J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W. M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

Cone Mills an Inspiration.

Dr. Rankin of the health board was in Greensboro yesterday conferring with Mr. Cone and his associates with regards to better health conditions around the cotton mills. Dr. Rankin went to Greensboro on invitation from these mill owners and we venture to say that he saw about the neatest, cleanest and most ideal locations in mill circles he ever found. It was our privilege recently to visit these mills and they are by far the most ideally and most perfectly arranged and kept we have ever seen. It would be an inspiration to others cotton manufacturers to visit the Cone mills and see how neat and clean and sanitary everything appears to be, and under what improved conditions the employes work.—Salisbury Post.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XIX. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, APRIL 17, 1913. NUMBER 21.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCULLOCH, Editor and Publisher.

PRICE.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.

RULE IN DEALING WITH SUBSCRIBERS.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.

Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.

In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

ENLARGEMENT LIST OF NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

Rev. C. H. Whitaker sends 35th.
Rev. J. H. Abernethy, 36th.
Rev. C. A. Cecil, 37th.
Miss Mary J. Leonard, 38th, 39th.
Rev. A. Nonimus, 40th—43d.
Rev. J. H. Stowe, 44th—46th.
Rev. H. L. Powell, 47th, 48th.
D. B. Johnson, 49th—52d.
Rev. T. F. McCulloch, 53d.
Rev. D. M. Loy, 54th.

—Bro Casto's report from Pensacola is brief but good.

—Dr. Joy Harris Glascock, the new corresponding secretary of the N. C. Branch of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, succeeding Mrs. W. C. Hammer, who declined re-election, will take enthusiastic interest in the work. We bespeak for her the co-operation of our ladies everywhere.

N. B. Broughton, of Raleigh

—And why not? The women engaged in supporting foreign missionary work find the occupation not only helpful to the missionaries in the foreign fields, but inspiring and ennobling to themselves. It brings to them a great new interest in living. They enjoy their monthly meetings, they enjoy telling of their labors and sacrifices. Why not all the ladies of the church enter into this good work enjoined by the Master on all His loving followers?

—California legislature seems about to pass a law excluding Japanese and other aliens from owning land in that State. The Japanese government is protesting against it through its representatives at Washington. The federal government seems to have no authority to prevent such legislation, and serious trouble may arise out of the situation, unless the Supreme Court intervenes and declares the California act out of harmony with the Constitution of the United States.

What He Lives For.

We heard of a man out West who is working hard to raise corn to feed more hogs to make more money to buy more land to raise more corn to feed more hogs to make more money to buy more land to raise more corn to feed more hogs to make more money to buy more land to raise more corn to feed more hogs.—A noble aim in life he has.

Wear Your Button.

A young man who wears a Bible Class Button in a large city gives this testimony: "I wear my button every day, and see a good many others worn. Very often men ask me what class I belong to, and tell me where they belong. I find it a good way to get acquainted sometimes. It is about the same as belonging to a fraternal order."

Mr. Tullar, of New York

STATE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The thirteenth annual State convention of the North Carolina Sunday School Association will convene in Greensboro, Tuesday night, April 22nd, and continue in session until and including Thursday evening.

The session will be held in a large new warehouse with ample provision for a large choir led by Messer. Tullar and Meredith of New York City.

Judge J. C. Pritchard of Asheville, president of the association, will preside over the sessions of the convention.

Already the names of many delegates who expect to attend have been sent to the association headquarters in Greensboro, and the local committees there are busy arranging every detail necessary to the success of the convention.

Free entertainment will be provided by the Greensboro people, and reduced railroad rates have been granted from all points in the State on the certificate plan.

The schools as well as the counties are sending delegates to this, the most representative Sunday school convention held in the State.

Mr. Meredith, of New York

THE LATEST NEWS OF MORMONISM.

What Mormonism is Doing—Time to Wake Up! !

Mormonism is neither dead nor asleep. Its interests, financial, political, social and religious, are too great to be allowed to suffer. If we consider ours even as great, we should be still more alert to protect them. Note some things which recent sources of information say that it is doing:

Moving Pictures to Help Spread Mormonism.

A few days ago it was announced in the Mormon organ that a moving picture firm was in Salt Lake preparing films, largely with actors in the original localities, which should represent the salient features of Mormon history and life; and that 107 sets would be prepared, one for each State and civilized land, to be ready in October. As this Annual is being prepared the paper brings report of an exhibition of the five films composing the show, "One Hundred Years of Mormonism," presumably the same. From the description these films were made for missionary purposes and are as shrewdly calculated to spread favorable impressions and suppress the true history and character of the system as perhaps it is possible to make them. What will not the evil do next, with its millions of annual income and thousands of servants at command?

Fa'se History in Schools.

The next thing planned is evidently to get falsely favorable histories of Mormonism into the public schools, as a missionary agent for Mormonism. A "Professor Young" of the University of Salt Lake (we presume a descendant of Brigham Young) is announced to have completed a small school history, "Chief Episodes of the History of Utah," of which the editor of the Mormon organ says: "The book is to be read by the children in Eastern as well as Western schools, and is to be followed by Mr. Young's more extensive work, which is also to be issued from the press of one of the foremost American publishing houses." This is somewhat veiled language; but the only evident reason for trying to get a Mormon history into the schools is to create impressions favorable to the system, and any one who knows Mormonism will know that it does not hesitate to sacrifice truth or anything else to accomplish its ends. It would be easy thus to write entertainingly on some features of Mormon history, filling our children's minds with favorable misrepresentations, if not actual untruths, and covering up the awful facts which must be gotten out of view if the system is to make its desired progress. Some "foremost publisher" can doubtless be found, for a consideration in Utah trade or otherwise, to issue and push the adoption of such a book; and the whole machinery may be in operation before any one knows much more about it. Teachers and Superintendents will do well to keep their eyes on this matter, and to publish and otherwise counteract any such efforts to make our schools an agency for the spread of Mormonism. We have crafty foes to contend with, and they are backed by plenty of money and any number of servants.

National Educational Association in Salt Lake: Warning.

Another link in the chain, and perhaps closely connected with the latter item, is that after some years of effort, the National Education Association meeting for this year has been secured for Salt Lake City, and is to meet in the Mormon buildings there, July 8-14. This organization is composed of teachers from all over the country; and the Mormon paper has been congratulating Utah on this result of their efforts, calling the meeting "the biggest plum yet"—evidently because of its opportunity for "allaying prejudice" as they often say in other cases—and helping their cause by making good impressions upon the visitors. One who has seen this done, as the writer has many times in the grounds, can understand it as no one else. Many facts in the doctrine, history, character and life of Mormonism are terrible, as any one knows who knows them. Polygamy is bad enough, but far from the worst. These must be covered up if their system is to prosper by getting new victims from outside; and a favorable impression on the teachers of the land would mean more than any other they could secure—to be passed on to scholars innumerable for years, as the story of the visit is told. And so the scores of affable and courteous, not to say unctuous, guides will get in their work of favorably impressing those who largely mould the ideas of the next generation, regarding the greatest religious fraud ever perpetrated; and the feeling of obligation for the free use of the immense Mormon buildings will add to the impression, with free concerts and Sunday services with the most deceptive speakers, to still further add to the result. Mormons are adepts at just such work, as the following incident which happened not many years ago will illustrate, among thousands:

A minister visited the temple grounds (where this meeting is to be held) to see what he could of Mormonism. A bright attractive young lady was waiting to talk to visitors, and finally took him—doubtless with others—to see the Tabernacle, etc. He finally asked about polygamy. "O, there is no polygamy now," she rapidly replied; "there used to be some, though not much, but it's done away now," or words to that effect. He departed with very favorable impressions of both this Mormon lady and her system; but was astonished when told by one who knew that this very young woman herself had recently become a plural "wife!" This incident was told the writer by a minister who knew the parties. It is given here because so typical of what may be expected by any one who subjects himself to the influences which are kept at work there, and for the operation of which such gatherings are sought, more than for any other purpose. No doubt some who tell such tales honestly believe them, but the effect is none the less evil and dangerous in proportion to the influence of the victim. Mormons say they usually deal with over 100,000 visitors a year in the temple grounds —one of two great proselyting agencies, with professionals always waiting to do the work. Every person who goes to Salt Lake region ought to go forewarned. Our leaflets on "True Mormon Doctrine," or "Why I could Never Become a Mormon" will give the facts; and there are plenty more. To see that our teacher friends have these would be a wise move, would it not? The brightest person can be deceived if he does not know the facts, as was the minister above and as thousands of others have been.

Mormon Morality.

An issue of the Mormon organ of somewhat over a year ago has recently come under notice, which states in a glaring frame on its first page that there are over three hundred vicious women in Salt Lake City. A paper which believes in the apotheosization of such vice in its "gods," and in legalizing it in polygamy on earth, ought to be good authority for such facts. What a situation for a place of perhaps 100,000 people! Of course the paper claims that the wicked Gentiles were to blame and that Mormonism utterly abhors such vice. Yet a few years ago the largest institution of vice of which the writer ever knew was there, run by a Mormon and owned by the "Brigham Young Trust Company," the name of which was on the building and the President of which was Geo. Q. Cannon, the controlling mind of Mormonism for many years! And a good woman who had given her life to the reclamation of such women and who knew them there as no other person did, told the ministers' meeting repeatedly that after careful investigation she found that eighty per cent were either Mormon or Mormon descent. A Cleveland lawyer of national reputation was not many years ago detained in Salt Lake City for two weeks. Toward the last a Mormon "elder" tried to convert him. He replied: "You needn't talk about your doctrines, I don't care about them. I've been here now two weeks, with nothing to do but study your city. Day and night I have done so. It is your city; you and your religion made it. I've seen other cities, and I want to tell you that I have never seen so wicked a city anywhere, and that's enough for me." The superficial visitor is shown a beautiful city, but he does not get under the surface of either city or system, as many of us who have lived there for years have been compelled to do. And Mormonism, whether intentionally or not, is the direct cause of much of the evil, through its gross materialistic, unscriptural, polytheistic and polygamous teachings and practice. There is no avoiding this conclusion by any one who knows the facts.

The Temple Secrets Out.

A year or so ago on outsider broke into the "sacred" precincts of the Mormon temple in Salt Lake and took some pictures, which he later offered to the authorities. They refused to buy, but "to save their face" announced that there was nothing secret about the temple, and that they would soon issue a book with good pictures illustrating the whole. We have the book, written by a former President of the University there, now an Apostle. We have also a statement of the secret ceremonies which are practiced in that very temple, and the oaths with death-penalties which are administered there, sworn to by three different ex-Mormons. To read this book, one would think that heaven itself were hardly more holy than the temple, and it is strongly affirmed that nothing whatever is done there which is not entirely holy. Reading the other, one face conditions extremely unholy and liable, to say the least, is not absolutely certain, to run into grossest wickedness such as has been affirmed as done there, by some who have been through the ceremonies. Both statements cannot be true. The book states that there are "covenants" and "obligations," and mentions some ceremonies—giving just enough to cover up the secret rites with seeming completeness of description without disclosing them, but in so doing it unwittingly fits right in with the other statement and confirms it. We are compelled to believe the essential correctness of the sworn statement all the more because of this book, which is only another sample of Mormon duplicity.

Smith Exposed Again.

An important event is the exposure in a fresh way of "Joseph Smith as a Translator," which is the title of a pamphlet by Bishop F. S. Spalding of the Episcopal diocese of Utah, recently issued. It shows by the testimony on nine expert Egyptologists, among whom are Professor Sayce and Breasted, that Smith's pretended translations of Egyptian hieroglyphics from mummy wrappings, given in his "Pearl of Great Price," are only guesses or less, and very different from the real meanings of the fac-similies given. His argument is that these "translations" being so shows Smith a fraud in other professed translation, as of the Book of Mormon. The Mormon paper has already given some seven pages to attempting replies by different persons; showing that the wound was a deep one. Mr. Spalding's position is the same as has always been held, as to the Egyptian, but he has presented it in far better form and with stronger witnesses, and has sent it to many prominent Mormons. Of course few if any such men will give up even if convinced. We think the hope is in the common people, who have no such blinding or determining reasons for adhering to the system as many of the higher men have, like the scribes and Pharisees of old. But this is an exceedingly good thing to have been done.

One Hundred Missionaries From One Town in Utah.

The following item from a Mormon paper of March last explains itself:

"One hundred missionaries have been called and have filled missions from the Wellsville ward since 1868, the year when the present records were begun. Elder James E. Darley is No. 100, and in his honor a ward reunion and celebration, in which a number of Logan people took part, was held March 20. A banquet was served and a program carried out appropriate to the occasion." The program included a dance, of course, as always.

When we remember that this town has even now only about 500 people, the record is the more striking. What Christian town can show an equal number of Christian workers? These are not Christian, nor are they usually willing to go; but the bulk of force is in the plan just the same, and we could equal it for Christ if we thought so. Every one of these went without salary, hunting his support from friends or paying it himself. Such is the system we have to meet.

A New Mormon Temple.

The plans have been published for a new Mormon temple—not a meeting house or tabernacle, but a genuine temple for secret rites and obligations such as are referred to in this Annual—in some place in Alberta, Canada. There are several thousand Mormons in that colony, and it is evidently too far to go to Salt Lake for their ceremonies, which can be performed nowhere else, but in such a temple. And there is plenty of money. But what was it that Christ said about henceforth not having to go to a temple to worship? But as this is for the worship of a "flesh-and-bones" "god," of course what he said does not apply! Paganism always did require temples; Christianity never.

SEEING RESULTS.

Old Deacon Brown's zeal for the cause of foreign missions was so wellknown in Boxboro that it was often mentioned with a smile. However, the smile was always affectionate and sympathetic, for every one in town loved the good old man and respected his pious enthusiasms.

Once, indeed, when he was asking for money to help a struggling church far away in Sweden, Mrs. Foster, who was one of his staunchest friends, said to him:

"Do you really think it is wise to scatter our means quite so far abroad? Wouldn't it be more judicious to use this money at home, where we can ourselves judge of the need and see the results of our sacrifice?"

"You can see the result in your own heart," returned the man, "in peace and joy that work for the good cause will give you. There are results in the mission field, too, but the Lord will look out for them. When I think of the self-denying Christian work this pastor, Max Sheppert, is doing in that distant corner of Sweden, it warms my heart to know that I can be of a little help to so good a man."

"Well, here is a dollar," said Mrs. Foster. "Mind I do not give it grudgingly, but it is satisfying to see for yourself the results of your giving."

A year or two later Mr. and Mrs. Foster moved West, and settled in a little frontier village that was without any church or Sunday school. One of their neighbors told them, however, of a little Swedish church four miles up the creek, and promised to show them the way thither. So the next Sunday morning the two mothers and their children followed the trail through the buffalo-grass to the little Swedish settlement.

They were made very welcome. "You were right to come," said one of the women, in her broken English. "In Sweden our beginnings were small, but help came from far-away America and now here you come, with your singing voice and your good works. 'Gospel seed once started always grows.' That was what our dear pastor, Max Sheppert, often told us in Sweden, and he bade us to start right when we found a home over here."

"Max Sheppert!" cried Mrs. Foster remembering that that was the name of the Swedish minister old Deacon Brown had told her of. "And I asked to see results!"

The results were greater than she could have asked for. All through the long, hard winter in sickness and privation these kind, faithful Swedes stood generously by the Foster family, as they felt personally responsible for their welfare. Surely those who give for the Lord's work in a spirit of love know not where or how they shall reap the fruits of their giving.—The Youth's Companion.

THE THINGS THAT TROUBLE THE PREACHER.

By Rev. C. W. Stephenson.

Things that trouble the preacher? Does he have troubles? Does he not sail a quiet and stormless sea? Does he not live in the sunshine all the time? Does he not wear purple and fine linen and fare sumptuously every day? Surely the tempests never strike him! Surely the clouds never come in blackness over him! Surely the lightnings never play fiercely about him! He has so little to worry him, or drive him, or force him to the limit of strength or nerve tension. Just to prepare and preach two sermons a week. The very delight of it, in the study and the quiet undisturbed meditation! The rapture of delivery, while the multitudes hang spellbound upon the eloquent discourse, and the warm congratulations that follow! What freedom from the common cares of life! What pleasure in the very aloofness from the fret and foam of business! What opportunities for study and mental development! How warm the welcome for him everywhere and by everybody. The farmers have chicken for him every day, and the city folks treat him to their best. No wonder he is so often spoiled, the petted and pampered man of ideals, so far removed from the practical things of life as other people meet them.

Of course it is admitted that he does have some other little things to do beside the Sunday services and the mid-week prayer meeting. He does have to visit and comfort the sick; he does have to carry sunshine to the hospitals; he does have to respond to the sorrowing, and help lay the dear dead from sight; he does have to speak for this society or that one as called upon. Now it is an address upon art, now on politics, now on eugenics, now on genetics, now on agriculture, now on temperance, now on finance, now on education or prison reform, now on biography, now on science. He is a mighty poor preacher who is not able at five minutes' notice to get up and make a speech one hour long upon any subject under the sun, and make a good speech too, an accurate speech and a helpful speech—quite above criticism, and far from dullness. He must be bright and original, and it is so easy. If you do not believe it, just ask some one that has never tried it! If the preacher really does these things, and he certainly does, we almost imagine he must find time when other folks are in bed, to make some preparation or he must be preparing all the time.

Now it is not these things that trouble the preacher. Almost any ordinary preacher is always primed for these things. "O," you say, "it is the financial problem that troubles the preacher most!" No, not by any means. The preachers are munificently paid. Their salaries are astonishingly large. They receive on the average about eight hundred dollars a year, and they live, and live well. They are the most famous financiers in the world. "J. D." and "J. P." and "Andy C." are nowhere to be compared with them. Which one of the before-mentioned men could rear a family, buy a library worth two thousand dollars, send half a dozen young people through college, help support all benevolences at the rate of ten per cent of the eight hundred dollars, and then lay by a few hundred dollars for a rainy day? Yet the preachers are doing it, hundreds of them, and they get a lot of fun out of it too. They have learned what many have not, how to make one dollar do the work of three. This, with the help of the wisest and best and truest wives in the world!

Is he troubled because it is his work to visit the hospitals and carry the sunshine there? or visit the sick and dying and carry the sunshine there? or visit the poor and suffering and carry cheer there, or visit the wealthy and carry the sunshine to them? Then it is troublesome to scatter flowers for the children, to sing for the aged, or help the blind across the crowded street. Is he troubled because he must so often break his heart with the heartbroken? He is glad to help carry the burden of a sorrowburdened world. It is not the late hours nor the pressure of work nor the constant nervous strain that troubles him. The greatest source of his trouble lies in the ever-present consciousness that he can not do all he would like to do in giving his life for others. He does not see results, as he would like to see them. Sometimes his best efforts seem to fall flat, and his best laid plans fail. Sometimes he feels the chill of indifference cold as the north winds in December. The members of the churches are so willing to drift with the tide. They are so little concerned about the kingdom. They are not ardently enthusiastic. They are satisfied to let others carry the burden. Here is a case in point: A large church, several hundred on the church roll. After carefully investigation it was found that just two hundred and forty of the enrolled members were utterly dead timber. Not one of them contributed a penny for the local or general interests of the church. They felt no sense of responssibility. They carried no part of the burden. Still they wanted to be recognized as members in good standing. They would have felt disgraced had their names been dropped from the church register. They felt no compunctions of conscience for not doing a thing for the church and all it represents. They are like a small-souled man I knew, worth many, many thousands, and when asked to contribute four dollars a year for the advancement of the kingdom, whined and shed tears, and said, "Brother, before I could do that, I would have to leave the church."

Then the preacher is tried by the sensitive ones—sensitive in the wrong direction. Sensitive if not noticed, sensitive if not put forward, sensitive if asked to do some splendid work, sensitive if asked to contribute, sensitive if sin is rebuked and sensitive if not petted; but not very sensitive, with regard to meeting obligations, or with regard to the rights of others. These people are in all churches and every pastor has to deal with them cautiously or there will be something to pay! In almost every church there is the self-appointed boss, the bell sheep whose business it is to ring the bell for others to follow and do as he says. If he wants anything it must be done—but not by him. If he does not want anything he will oppose it in every way, unless opposition costs him something, and then he will back out of the way. The boss is like the one "Dan Matthews" met in his church, and who drove Dan from the work to which God had called him. Poor Dan, he made a woeful mistake. He could not stand it. Had Dan possessed some of the spirit of Paul, the boss would have had to vacate.

Then there are the gossipers! How busy they are! How solicitous they are for the welfare of the church! How eager to tell the truth about every one in the congregation! How shocked and humiliated they are that certain things should ever have been said or done! How insistent they are in being perfectly frank! How they do struggle to keep the church from taint and "tainters!" How they keep the kettle boiling! How careful they are to show their friendliness to every new member, and how helpful they are in time of need that they may ingratiate themselves into the good graces of the innocent and credulous! Who will tell us how to manage this dangerous and pernicious class? Back of it all, we may find some unholy spark of jealousy, that will not die; it burns and burns.

"O jealousy, thou art nursed in hell,
Depart from hence—and therein dwell!"

The preacher never reaches his ideal, and this is as it should be, for he has room to expand and grow. He always sees wrongs that need righting, evils that need fighting; the weak that need help; the timid that need encouragement. He has visions of larger possibilities, and wishes to make his visions clear to others. He sees, alas, sometimes those of his own sacred calling swayed by worldly motives or cringing before those upon whom they depend for support or prestige. He sees those who watch with green eyees his every advance, his every success. Does he dare tell the truth and stand by the right? He will be misunderstood and bitterly opposed by small men. He must see the political methods in vogue at conventions and conferences and assemblies until his heart will ache. The real man will not yield to these methods nor will he tolerate them, though he may lose prestige, power and place. Nay, verily he will not "Crook the knee, that thrift may follow fawning."

There are myriads of mysteries surrounding us; questions we can never answer, demands we can never meet; much we can never learn; problems we can never solve. We can never rest satisfied with the "assured results of higher criticism," for they are never perfectly reassuring! We see through a glass darkly, and will to the end. But the joy, the satisfaction and the rest in the consciousness that we have been true to self, to truth and to God. It is something to think one has tried to let in the light, tried to set a worthy example, tried to practice what he has preached, tried to inspire and live the life of an unselfish devotion to higher things! It is worth something to be able to say with Paul: "Our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory!"

While the preacher's work is the most strenuous, and demands the highest and most varied qualifications; while often it is unappreciated and underestimated, after all, it is the profession which calls for the highest of which we are capable, and if carried forward in the spirit of the Master brings the most perfect satisfaction and the most real compensation. It means the best health for body and mind, and, too, the largest and most glorious hope.—Methodist Recorder.

THE INASMUCH MISSION.

Four men who had long been social outcasts, founded two years ago in Philadelphia the Inasmuch Mission. One of them had never known any other world than that of the slums; the others were men who came from respectable families and who had been well educated; drink had pulled them from a high level to the lowest. They were unkempt, besotted "hoboes." They met by chance in a Philadelphia mission, and something—conversion, or salvation, or redemption—lighting within them the old fires of self-respect and hope, led them to vow that they would be men again, and that they would work together to give material and spiritual help to the fallen of the city.

They have kept the vow, and from the start their work has been successful. Although their combined capital was only twenty-seven cents, the mission they established fed and sheltered within a year twelve thousand homeless people and found employment for twelve hundred men. The founders opened the mission in a main street, from which the owner of the building had driven the criminal and vicious tenants. Decent people would not live there. The owner gave the mission the free use of the property, and when it was seen that the four men were in earnest in their determination to succeed, financial aid followed. They now occupy several houses, and also have a large tent where in the first year twenty-eight thousand people attended religious and social meetings. Some wealthy persons in Philadelphia have agreed to build for the use of the mission a hotel with eight hundred rooms. It is to be on the plan of the Mills hotel in New York.

Much of the wonderful success of these men is doubtless due to their intimate knowledge of the class they are trying to help. They know from experience every scheme and subterfuge of the impostors; they know equally well when a man sincerely wishes to make a fresh start, and they know how to help him do it. Two years ago these men were human derelicts. In view of what they have done, who shall say that any man is too far down to be reached and brought back to a useful and upright life? Their work gives a new beauty to the motto of their mission:

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."—Youth's Companion.

POPULAR TALKS ON LAW.

Wills: Breakable and Unbreakable.

By Walter K. Towers, A. B., of the Michigan Bar.

Samuel Hendrix had a son—a fact he almost regretted, for he seemed thoroughly bad and the father had expended much of his property in keeping the boy out of jail. Naturally enough, Samuel desired that on his death his wife and daughter should receive all the remaining property and the son none. So he wrote the following:

"When I die it is my will that all my property be equally divided between my wife, Esther, and my daughter, Sarah.

"(Signed) Samuel Hendrix."

Samuel had heard that witnesses are necessary to a will, and so he called in his wife, Esther, and daughter, Sarah, and had them watch him while he wrote his signature and then sign their names below his. The result was that neither the wife nor the daughter could take any property under the will, for it is a general rule of law that no one who witnesses a will may take any benefit or receive anything from that will. Had Samuel Hendrix possessed a bit moer information of the law he would have called others as witnesses and his wishes could have been enforced.

This illustrates but one of the many pitfalls into which one may fall in the very important task of drafting his will. The preparation of a will is usually a task for an attorney, and a good one, but there are cases of emergencies when a lawyer's services are not readily obtainable. If the estate is small and not scattered, and the disposition that is to be made of it is simple, direct and clearly understood it requires no great knowledge to draft an effective will. In any event some information of the laws governing the disposition of property on death is interesting, as well as decidedly useful.

A will is ever a fascinating instrument. The preparation of it is a serious matter and into it the maker puts his deliberate and well-considered thought.

Thus it goes far toward revealing the real spirit of the maker. The words of the will are the words a man desires to leave when he has passed beyond; they display his true attitude toward friends and relatives.

Death is the great inevitable. Tax dodgers are famous, but death dodgers have thus far achieved no notoriety. The will is made in appreciation of the inevitable end and takes effect upon decease. It is thus that one may be assured that his wishes in regard to the disposition of his property will be regarded after death. The power to make a will has not always been recognized my law. The will is stated to be of Roman origin, but, be that as it may, the power to will is now firmly established and recognized by law.

To make a will requires mental capacity. We often hear of instruments drawn as wills which are set aside by the courts because the maker was lacking in intellect. The mental capacity that is required to make a will may be enumerated as follows: 1. Ability to understand the nature of a will and that the maker is engaged in making his will. 2. Ability to know and keep in mind the various items of his property. 3. Ability to know and to keep in mind the members of the family and others entitled to the maker's bounty. In general, any person of full age possessing the mental capacity described above, and not subject to some special legal disability, may make a valid and binding will. In the majority of the states the full age of twenty-one years is required of both sexes before the power to make a will is granted.

Married women were formerly denied the right to will their property, but modern statutes quite generally give them that privilege. Of course, an insane person, lacking the required mental qualifications, cannot make a will, nor can infants under age, in most states.

The first great requisite of a will is that it shall be in writing. This does not mean that it need be written in longhand, though that is the most desirable of all ways when the maker is preparing his own will. Typewritten wills and printed wills, with the blanks filled in, are common, and wills have been held valid when prepared in many unusual ways on strange substitutes for paper or parchment. The prudent attorney, in preparing a will, always sees to it that the entire instrument is fastened together. Thus if the will consists of several typewritten or printed sheets, the last of which alone is signed, another typewritten page might be submitted for an unsigned one and the whole character of the instrument altered. So, if the entire will cannot be written on a single sheet of paper, the various pages should be so attached that they cannot be separated without detection. The pages are usually stapled or pasted together at the top and a chord is run through them, tied and sealed. It is wise for the maker of the will, the testator as he is called, to initial each page in such cases.

Further, the will must be signed by the maker and witnessed in the manner required by the statutes of the state in which it is made. Nevada is the only state which requires a seal. The usual and proper method of signing is for the maker to write his name in full at the bottom of the will. Where the maker cannot write, his "mark" is sufficient. Wills have been held valid when signed with initials, or parts of the name, or by, a stamp, but such methods are dangerous. If a person is for any reason incapable of writing he may authorize another to sign his name for him.

Not only must a will be signed, but it must also be witnessed, and that in the strictest form. Some states require but two witnesses; others three, but it is always best to have three witnesses. As was pointed out in the case of Samuel Hendrix, the witnesses must be persons who have no interest in the will, and it must be seen to that neither they nor their near relatives are to receive anything under the will.

The manner in which a careful attorney completes the necessary formalities, having written the will itself and secured the witnesses is somewhat as follows: All the persons—maker and witnesses—must be in the same room and all in sight of each other. The maker declares the will to be his and writes his signature, with all the witnesses watching him. Then each of the witnesses in turn signs his name, the entire party still remaining together. While a will is usually dated, this is not necessary. No registration is required. The original will is filed in a safe place, usually by the maker among his papers, and a copy put in another place. The copy is not a will, but is useful in proving the contents of the will if the instrument should be destroyed or altered.

Having made a will and wishing to change it, the maker has two general courses open. He may write another will, in which he expressly revokes the earlier one, or pen a revocation, either of which instruments must be signed and witnessed as a will. Or he may take the will and by tearing it up, burning it, or drawing lines through it, with the intention of revoking it, cause it to lose all effect as a will. In Iowa this act must be done in the presence of witnesses and in all cases it is best to do so.

On the death of the maker, those interested in the will usually secure the services of an attorney in having it probated and the estate administered. Of course, the person named in the will as executor may himself place it before the probate, or similar court, but he usually finds it simpler to have a lawyer arrange matters. If no executor has been named by the maker in his will, an administrator is appointed by the court. It is the duty of executor or administrator to care for the deceased's property and see that it is distributed according to the terms of the will under the direction of the court. Of course, the will and proof of the maker's death must first be placed before the courts and the validity of the will established.

In determining the meaning of a will, the court is always guided by the cardinal principle that the intention of the maker of the will is to be determined as accurately as possible from the instrument and effect given thereto.

The task of the person making a will is to realize the importance, weigh all the possibilities carefully and state them clearly. The task of the lawyer is to warn the maker of the various contingencies that may arise in the maker's peculiar circumstances to affect the disposition of his property and to see that all of the necessary formalities have been complied with. A will is not a thing to be made hastily, or without information. Consider thoroughly and then act carefully.

(Copyright, 1913, by W. K. Towers.)

WHAT THE REVIVAL DID

"The change wrought in the village is simply marvelous. Drunkenness and brawling and swearing have almost entirely disappeared. In the place of lewd songs, hymns are now heard. Not only the young girls and women at their work, but even the young men have learned to take in their pockets a hymn book and a New Testament as their constant companions. A party of men who are employed on the railway some distance from the village hold a song service regularly morning and night on the train."

We may build more splendid habitations,
Fill our rooms with paintings and with sculptures,
But we cannot
Buy with gold the old associations!

—Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENTS.

Granville .....April 15 to 16
Halifax .....April 17 to 18
Littleton .....April 19 to 21
Richland .....April 25 to 26
Why Not .....April 27 to 29
Flat Rock Ct. ..... May 3 to 4
Stanley Ct. ..... May 9 to 10
Rockingham, ... May 11, 12.
Monroe Ct. ..... May 13 to 15
Mecklenburg Ct. ..... May 16 to 18
Charlotte, ... May 19

Brethren, it only costs you one cent to publish my plan for your charge. Won't you please do so for my sake. C. A. C.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

I omitted to say in my report from Alamance and Saxapahaw Cts. a few things that I desire to mention now.

The Alamance charge has been served by pastors in years back who farmed and carried on their home affairs to what seems to me the neglect of the work, to the extent of but little pastoral work on the charge.

For instance, the pastor go to his appointment from home on Sunday A. M. and back home Sunday eve. This is unfair to the membership of the church and its not showing good faith to the authority that places a pastor on such a good field for development. Under ordinary circumstances a pastor ought to visit all of his members at least once a year when they live in the bounds of the circuit. It pays to do it, the church attendance will be better, and more of the finances will be raised, and the membership will be better and more people will be converted and join our church. The present pastor is doing more pastoral work than some of his predecessors and as he improves in health he will do more, and the work I trust will prosper more rapidly. Let the Advisory Committee advise with the pastors on this line of work and make them more efficient on all lines of work.

On the Saxapahaw charge, Bro. Holmes and his people have adopted the individual assessment plan for both pastor's salary and general interests, and the stewards and others are going to try to pay pastor's salary at least quarterly. This sentiment is growing in the District, and I trust all the pastors will assist in getting our members to see the importance of having some plan and system by which to do things in the church as well as in other departments of life. Our people are subscribing for the M. P. Herald some, but not like they should. Our members need to have more M. P. literature coming into their homes. The Meth. Prot. our general church organ, published in Baltimore by Dr. Tagg ought to be coming to many of our people in North Carolina.

On April the 2nd Bro. Holmes kindly conveyed me from his field to the first appointment on Bro. Lowdermilk's work, Mt. Hermon.

We reached Cedar Cliff in due time, and found just a few people had gathered for service at 11 A. M., by 11:15 we had a splendid attendance for so small a membership. The pastor was there on time, Bro. H. S. B. Thompson and family were present. I was glad to see them.

If the members of our churches of the two other fields who live in this immediate section see it to their advantage to move their membership to Cedar Cliff we could have a splendid interest at this point, and not do any violence to our other fields or churches: this only suggestive.

Our service was helpful, and Bro. L. and I soon left on our way to the evening appointment at Mt. Hermon church. On our way we took dinner with Mrs. Levi Sharp. We reached the church on time and found a splendid attendance for a busy day as farmers have at this time of the year. The pastor was agreeably surprised as to the attendance. I saw no one asleep and all appeared to be interested in the service, and some were kind and nice enough to say even to me they enjoyed the service. Mt. Hermon is a historic church as many know and is nice but could be improved, and I learned through some of the members the improvements referred to were under contemplation and some money was in hand to do the work. So may it be the pleasure of the members to make the improvements at the earliest possible moment. I spent the night with Bro. W. A. J. Isley very pleasantly indeed.

On the third of April Bro. Lowdermilk took me to Friendship where I preached in the school building to a splendid audience. Even the smallest school children were perfectly still and gave marked attention to the message. The new church is not completed; when it is it will be real nice, and some one said they thought it would be complete in time for the special meeting. We took dinner with Bro. G. M. Isley and his little daughter subscribed for the Herald.

We drove to the parsonage where I met Mrs. Lowdermilk and enjoyed a few pleasant words with her. Soon Dr. Pickett drove up from Burlington with a batch of mail for me, and that meant read and answer. Took supper at the parsonage.

We went to the church at Belmont, my last appointment on this Ct.; found a good attendance, and they have good attention to the word.

This is a splendid church house and would be nicer if it was painted, and completed; a hint to the wise is sufficient. Spent the night with Bro. Jas. Sharp. Took dinner with the pastor and wife. At 1:30 P. M. we met in Belmont church to hold the 2nd quarterly conference. Not a full attendance of the officials, but the business was transacted in harmony. Some progressive steps were taken and I hope they will be carried out and even beyond what was anticipated by the membership. This is a strong field numerically and financially, and our people are coming to see in some places that they must do better as to nicer church buildings and the support of the church generally. Bro. Lowdermilk is doing the best he can under the circumstances and he is looking beyond to the time when he can do more pastoral work, and this is badly needed and Bro. L. and his wife would do it if her health would admit of it, and I do hope and pray that Mrs. L., health will soon be restored, so she can enter into the church work as she used to do. My claim paid.

Bro Lowdermilk kindly conveyed me to Bro. L. W. Holt's where I took supper with him and his kind family.

On the night of the 24th I preached to a fairly good congregation in Burlington. I spent the night with Bro. Davis very pleasantly, and I am always pleased to visit the Burlington church, and it is a great field for usefulness for the pastor and our people, and may this be the best year in the history of the church.

On Saturday, the 4th of April, I took the car for Graham, and soon found the pastor at home, preparing for his quarterly conference which was to meet in the M. P. church at Graham at 2 o'clock, Bro. Curry and I took dinner with the young Bro. Holt and at the appointed time we were at the church ready for the business. While we had an interesting conference it would have been more so if the entire official membership had been present; but in proportion to the number of the officials on the charge there were as many as usually attend..

The conference was harmonious and all the reports were good except the Class leader's report, and they do not have any on the Ct. and did not agree to have any. This is the second quarterly conference I have held in the District that has refused to hold Class Meetings, and in my judgment they have refused to hold, so far as the spiritual development is concerned, the most helpful service the church can hold. This my opinion only.

On Saturday night preached at Haw River. I spent Saturday night with Dr. Goley . At 11 A. M. Sunday I preached to a splendid congregation in Graham. Some one said I preached fifty minutes, just a little bit too long for some, I think. Bro. Curry and I took dinner with the Dr. and we soon were making our way to Glen River where we found Bro. Hornaday conducting his Sunday school. I presented the word to a very nice and attentive people. In my opinion if this church was located properly we could soon have a good membership. Bro. Curry is doing a good work; he has raised more of his general interests and made more visits on his field than any I have visited thus far. Claim paid.

Through the kindness of Bro. W. J. Jennings I was driven to his home in Gibsonville. I took supper and spent the night with him.

Gibsonville.

Here I met the pastor, Rev. J. R. Hutton; at 7:30 Sunday night I preached and the people heard the discourse with interest, and I trust will result in good to all. Monday A. M. Hutton and I walked over a part of the town, and then went to the home of Uncle Berry Davidson for dinner, and we found him on the feeble list; but enjoyed our visit. The intention is to remodel and improve the Gibsonville church this year, and it needs to be done, and the pastor and some of the members and some that are not members are behind the movement and I believe they will make it go. Bro. Hutton secured a conveyance from Bro. Oaks and drove to Bro. H. R. Ireland's and took supper.

We drove to the Ossipee church and found a small congregation of young people and I preached to them on the subject of "Business" and the youngsters seemed to enjoy it. On account of the absence of the Sect. and Treas. of the board of stewards by claim was not met at this church; but was at Gibsonville.

I was sorry to find Mrs. Pike and Mrs. Lowdermilk and also to hear of Mrs. G. W. Holmes' sickness. Hope they will soon be better. Best wishes to all the brethren. C. A. Cecil.

High Point, N. C., April 9, 1913.

Richland Circuit.

President's appointments:
Charlotte, April 24, at night.
New Union, April 25, 11 A. M.
Flag Springs, April 25, at night.
New Zion, April 26, 11 A. M. Quarterly conference, 1:30 P. M. C. H. Whiatker.

FROM OUR PASTORS

Halifax Ct.

Yesterday, second Sunday, was one of the best days for us in a long time. Our all day S. S. Rally came off according to previous announcements and was a success from beginning to end. The weather was somewhat threatening early in the day but later the clouds cleared away and a house full of people from all parts of the circuit assembled to hear the discussions. Mr. S. R. Harris of Henderson was present with all of his characteristic wit and enthusiasm and he just literally took the house by storm. His address in the forenoon on the Possibilities of the S. S. for the development of Character—not churches as the Herald made us say sometime ago—was a gem and is worthy of a wider circulation. Then Mr. E. A. Carter of the Littleton circuit was present and read an excellent paper on "The S. S. a recruiting agency for the church membership." This paper was so excellent that Bro. Carter was requested to send it to the Herald for publication. In the afternoon we had excellent addresses by Mr. W. B. Daniel of Henderson, Bro. Eli Bellamy of Eden church, Bro. George Bennett of the Baptist church, then several short addresses by Bro. S. R. Harris who just swept everything before him.

Bro. Frank Whitaker of Enfield was present with his violin and he and our organist, Miss Nora Vinson, rendered some some beautiful music. Bro. Harris said he rejoiced in the fact that we had taken the "Fiddle" away from the devil and had given it to the Lord.

The entire exercise was so helpful that we decided to organize a circuit S. S. Union. Bro. Eli Bellamy was elected chairman and Bro. Lonnie Williams secretary. This union will meet every time there is a fifth Sunday in the month.

The second quarterly conference convened at Berhesda last Friday. Financial condition of the charge fairly good. Nominees for delegates to Annual Conference are, Bros. N. M. Harrison and J. W. Hardee.

J. E. Pritchard.

Thomasville.

Our quarterly meeting was held Wednesday night, April 9th, 1913.. Very good attendance considering the rain and mud. These people do not stop for a little rain, but are about their Father's business. The usual business was transacted in the spirit of love. Nominees for Annual Conference were Bros. J. W. Boyles, and J. T. Dickens.

We received Bro. W. P. Carmichael into our church from M. E. church Feb. 16th. Bro. Carmichael is a good and faithful man. I feel that he will be of great help to us.

Our special meeting will begin here the first Sunday in May. Rev. J. D. Williams, of Henderson, is my expected pulpit help. Pray for our success in winning souls. T. A. Williams.

Gaston Ct.

All the official members are duly notified that the second quarterly conference has been changed from Friday before the second Sunday in this month to Saturday night before the third Sunday, 19th of April. Each Steward is especially urged to come prepared to make a report of what he has done. The ruling is that each Steward make a separate and individual report of the work to the quarterly conference. You will also have in mind, that at the second quarterly conference you nominate a delegate for the Anuual Conference, therefore, I earnestly request that each church be largely represented at that time, and especially are the officials of the Society at Cornelius requested to be present at this meeting as there will be some important business to attend to in regard to that work. And now, brethren, as you know we have had a society there since the 26th of March, 1912, and it seems to me that there should have been a greater development there, and I am sure if the building committee had done their duty we could have had the church building going up by this time.

Brethren, I would suggest that the building committee go ahead with the work; that is, order the cement, and have the blocks made right away; and if you get short of money let me know at once and I will come over there and collect any time you need me. Brother H. O. Proctor, of Fairfield church, and his sons say they will see the church is built, if the blocks are made, so you see we have done all that we could do to help you, and now if you don't try to help yourselves, we are at a loss to know what to do for you. The officials at Cornelius are as follows: trustees, C. A. Howard, C. S. Proctor, F. Lee Howard, C. A. Howard, chairman of the board of Trustees; C. S. Proctor, Sec. and Treas. of Trustees; R. G. Proctor, class leader; C. A. Howard, Sunday school Supt.; F. Lee Howard, A. A. Hager, F. C. Howard, stewards; Building com., C. A. Howard,

C. S. Proctor, F. Lee Howard, A. A. Hager, and J. B. Riddling. May the blessings of almighty God rest upon you all, with best wishes to all the churches, and the Editor, I am Fraternally,

D. M. Loy.

April 14, 1913.

West Lexington.

The great revival at W. Lexington closed on last Wednesdy night with the most spiritual service of the entire meeting. It seemed a great pity to close but the weather was so bad and I was almost in bed. Many of the choir and workers had just worked themselves down. My people have to work in mill from 6 to 6 o'clock and this compels them to rise early, and late hours at night simply put some of them in bed. There were 193 conversions and reclamations, and the church has taken on new life. We feel so grateful to our heavenly Father for so abundantly blessing this people. It was indeed the greatest meeting I ever witnessed. 34 have joined the church. Men and women shouted and praised God in the old time way. To Him be all the glory.

H. L. Powell.

Graham and Haw River Tidings.

The first Sunday in March yas the time appointed for Rev. H. S. B. Thompson to be on this work to represent the interest of the Methodist Protestant Herald. The day was so rainy he did not get to Haw River for the morning service and and at night there were but few of Graham congregation present. It is to be regretted that because of the bad weather this work was so very much hindered, but the efforts of Bro. Thompson are appreciated and our heart-felt thanks are extended to him. It certainly is to be hoped that when Bro. Thompson presents this most worthy cause he will meet with success. Brethren, call upon him.

On Sat., April 5th, our second quarterly conference convened in the Graham church. President Cecil was with us and preached. Every church was represented, but it is to be regretted that only nine of the twenty members were present. Just think, not quite half of those who have been selected to do the responsible work of church officials and who have accepted the same, were enough interested to spend a little time to go to quarterly conference. Not only was the conference unfortunate in that they were not there to give their part, but they were perhaps the greater losers in that they were not there to get their part. The conference was good. Bro. Cecil brought some ideas that we should have been thinking about and practicing long ago. To such a great extent we have lost and are still losing because we do not know and practice the principles of our church. We have the principles but I sometimes wonder where our methods come in. A rising vote of thanks was extended to Bro. Cecil for the splendid manner in which he conducted the conference and I am sure it was a vote that came from the hearts of every one present. All business of the conference was transacted in harmony. Bro. Spencer Holt and Herbert Cates were nominated candidates for delegates to Annual Conference. Bro. Cecil preached at all three of the churches and his sermons and advice were very much enjoyed, and appreciated.

Miss Fannie Ray who has been kept in for a long while because of scarlet fever is again back at her place as teacher and organist. Miss Fannie is one of Graham's most faithful.

Bro. Clide Holt, delegate from our Graham Baraca class, reports a good and profitable time at the Charlotte Baraca convention.

Geo. L. Curry.

Graham, N. C., April 15, 1913.

Pensacola.

We had a good Easter service. The children were well trained, and the choir did its part well. Our offering was more than was paid on all the general interests last year. We hope to repair the church this summer, and expect to have a good revival and ingathering.

H. C.

Fallston Circuit.

The second quarterly conference was held at Lawndale, Saturday, the 12th. Both churches were very well represented and the business of the quarterly meeting was attended to in harmony. The pastor reported having filled all the appointments since he arrived on the work, had made 65 pastoral visits and received on salary $73.35; has collected and forwarded to Miss Etta Auman for the orphans $10.62, $3.00 of this amount collected since quarterly meeting. Bro. T. B. Richard of Lawndale and Bro. R. A. Lackey of Fallston were nominated for delegate to next Annual Conference. Either one, I think, would make a splendid delegate. The quarterly meeting decided on the following plan for special meetings: Fallston the 4th Sunday in July and at Lawndale the 1st Sunday in August, with Rev. J. H. Moton as pulpit help, if he can be secured.

D. A. Highfill, Pastor.

Fallston, N. C., April 15, 1913.

FROM LOCAL REPORTERS

Burlington.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely. The attendance last Sunday was 204, and the offering amounted to $4.92, which is given to the orphans at Denton.

President Cecil was with us on last Friday night at 8 o'clock, and delivered a splendid sermon, his theme being "Character Building." After the sermon was over, he made several good suggestions along all lines of the church work, which, if put into practice, would mean much for our church both spiritually and materially. For unknown reasons, the attendance on this occasion was not as good as was expected; however, those who did attend have no regrets for having gone, as the sermon was indeed a blessing.

At the morning service Sunday, three members were received into the church by certificate. They are: Bro. and sister A. L. Ingle, who came from the M. E. church, and Dr. W. A. Hornaday, from the Alamance circuit.

Miss Martha Baldwin, a member of our church, and a good woman, died Friday, March 28th, at her home in this city. Rev. T. E. Davis, our pastor, assisted by Rev. J. D. Andrew, of the Reformed church, conducted the funeral services Sunday afternoon following her death. In this death the church has lost one of its faithful and devoted members. We who survive should be ever mindful of the fact that life is uncertain and death is sure, and be prepared for the call when it comes.

The Ladies' Aid Society met with Mrs. H. C. Foster last Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock. We have not learned what they did, but suppose they planned some specific work for the improvement of the church or parsonage, for they are not only a society in name, but in deed as well.

The regular monthly business meeting of the church was held Monday night. The business affairs of the church were attended to. These meetings prove to be very satisfactory, but the attendance is not one-third as good as it should be. Bro. J. G. Rogers is chairman of the meetings and under his leadership and direction the matters that are presented are disposed of in a very quiet and business-like manner.

T. P. D., Reporter.

April 9, 1913.

Burlington Baraca Class.

Sunday, April 6th: attendance, 40; offering, $2.25.

The class held its regular monthly busi-

Continued on page 12.

WHAT NEXT IN THE UNION MOVEMENT.

By Lyman Edwin Davis, D. D.
President of the General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church.

On March 19, at the Great Southern Hotel in Columbus, Ohio, there is to be another meeting of the Joint Commission representing the Methodist Pdotestant Church and the Church of the United Brethren in Christ. The sub-committees appointed to consider and suggest how the various interests and institutions of the two denominations may be adjusted to the proposed union, will hold earlier meetings, and will of course report their recommendations to the Joint Commission.

Let the call for this adjourned meeting of the commissions be also a call to prayer, and let all pastors and congregations invoke the guidance of the Holy Spirit in these important deliberations. The evolution of events will doubtless answer all questions arising from these negotiations, and I am inclined to let developments speak for themselves. But a few inquiries have come to me which probably find echo in the general thought of the church, and to these I will undertake a brief reply.

1. What will be the general effect of union upon the local churches of the two denominations?

In the stronger concerns of the two denominations there will be no appreciable change, and no detraction from the individuality of the local churches. In such a territory as Eastern Pennsylvania, for instance, the United Brethren churches would be practically unaffected, because they occupy that field almost exclusively. In Maryland, on the other hand, as in certain other localities, the situation is exactly revised, the Methodist Protestants having almost entire possession, and being therefore locally unaffected by the union. This geographical complement between the two churches extends outward to whole cities and states, and locally to country villages and neighborhoods; so that the individuality of the local church, cherished alike by Methodist Protestants and United Brethren, will be uniformly preserved. But in certain neighborhoods or cities two local churches should wish to unite in the one larger individuality, that would certainly be for the glory of God and the upbuilding of the kingdom. But these great centers of influence in the two denominations, while not affected in their local work of organization, should nevertheless feel the deepest interest in the movement, because they will reap and enjoy the local influence of the universal result of such a movement, the happiest element of which is the consciousness of a grgater aggregate of influence for the good, with the spiritual momentum which an act of union will in itself produce, when inspired by the unifying grace of God.

2. Why was the usual order of procedure reversed at Columbus, and the name considered first of all?

Perhaps the commissioners, as a whole, were somewhat influenced by the fact that the usual order of procedure, that of postponing the consideration of a name almost indefinitely, has not hitherto succeeded very well. In any event, there was no controversy on the subject, and it was decided almost as quickly as if by common consent. The motion to take up the name first of all was made, I believe, by Rev. Dr. F. E. Brooke, of the United Brethren commission, and was seconded by Rev. T. H. Lewis, of our own commission, and was passed unanimously.

3. What seems to be the responsive sentiment of the denomination to this proposed union?

The denomination must speak for itself on this subject: and through the General Conference and the annual conferences, supported by the people in their congregational assemblies, the word of final decision and authority must be spoken. The work of the commissioners is simply representative, and they are acting under the authority and direction of the last General Conference, which, by a unanimous vote, declared their belief "that a union of the Methodist Protestant Church and the Church of the United Brethren in Christ is both possible and practicable."

On this subject, as on all others, I seek earnestly to know the composite mind and judgment of the Methodist Protestant Church: and answering from this attitude, I must say that all indications point to a rapidly-growing sentiment favorable to this union, in both these denominations: a sentiment which is grounded in reason and duty, after a comparative study of the policy and doctrine of these kindred tribes of the family of God. This promising toward union has its springs also in a great new passion of the Lord's people for unity of effort in the work of the kingdom; a tidal wave of feeling which is impatient of artificial separations; a great humanitarian throb in the breasts of every Christian, which leaps all man-made barriers, and finds the answering of faith and love in the heart of every fellow-believer on the earth!

The spirit of Christian fairness and mutuality shown by the joint commissioners at Columbus will, of course, add very materially to this growing sentiment. And we must all rejoice at this happy situation, which was expressed in the following terse and felicitous way by one of our own lay commissioners: "Both commissions showed a brotherly spirit. The Lord opened the door, and we entered!" Another of our commissioners puts it in this enthusiastic fashion: "I am greatly pleased with the result of our meeting at Columbus. It is the beginning of better things, not only for the two churches represented, but for the universal church. The spirit of the United Brethren commissioners impressed me most favorably. They were perfectly fair and unselfish in all our deliberations." Still another of our commissioners exclaimed: "No one who was present could doubt the spirit of fairness manifested by the United Brethren commissioners." Two others of our men expressed the same sentiment in almost identical phrase; the one saying: "The spirit of mutual concession, and a prayerful desire to reach the fairest possible basis of union, certainly dominated every meeting at Columbus;" the other saying: "The spirit of mutual concession, and a prayerful wish to unite on a fair and equal basis of union, was certainly manifested by the United Brethren commissioners; and I hope we all did our best to reciprocate this spirit, on behalf of the Methodist Protestants." The United Brethren commissioners are also happy in the remembrance of this prevailing spirit of mutuality; and a number of them have written to me of "the delightful fraternal feeling which prevailed during the entire session."

4. Would it be possible for a small minority, by retaining the name of either of the constituent bodies, to dispossess the new organization of the property formerly belonging to the separate denomination?

The recent union of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church with the Presbyterian Church of the United States of America, has furnished a case which answers that question in the negative; and no further anxiety should be felt by any one on that subject. As a result of this union, property rights were contested in nine states, and in seven out of the nine the decision was entirely favorable to the union, and carried all vested rights into the new organization. The adverse decision in Tennessee has been appealed to the Supreme Court; but the several decisions favorable to the union, covering the territory of our own greatest financial interests, are accepted as final, and will doubtless form the basis of future decisions. In America, where the courts seek in all religious controversies to discover and enforce the spirit of the law, and the will of the majority, the trend of legislation and of jurisprudence is more and more favorable to church union, with every passing year. The courts are properly responsive to the spirit of the times, and uniformly follow whatever enactment is recorded by the highest tribunal of the church. Even in England, the laws are beginning to reflect the ecclesiastical movement of the age. When the United Presbyterian Church, of Scotland, formed a union with the Free Church, a minority known as the "Wee Frees" won their contests for the property of the old denomination; but that decision in itself awakened the whole British empire to the injustice and the absurdity of such a verdict; and an act of Parliament was invoked, and a special commission was appointed by the king to correct the manifest unfairness of the decision.

5. Would it be presumptuous to call ourselves "The United Protestant Church?"

If the name "United Protestant" is presumptuous because it seems to imply the organic union of all Protestant churches, then what of the more comprehensive name unanimously agreed upon by the commissioners of the Congregational churches, the United Brethren Church and the Methodist Protestant Church, a few years ago, at Chicago? It was decided to call us "The United Churches;" and that name seems to imply the union of all Christian bodies, whether Protestant, Greek or Roman Catholic; and would also seem to include Jews and Mohammedans, and even the Mormons—for all these have their churches! In neither of these two proposed names, however, is there the slightest presumption, because the great day has dawned when the name of a church may fitly express the spiritual ideals and aspirations of a people, rather than their historic conflicts; the hope and visions that look toward the future, rather than the passionate recollections which are forever embalming the past.

6. Are there any differences between these two denominations which can possibly justify their continued separation?

They are almost identical, both in polity and in doctrine; and our failure to unite these kindred groups of the family of God would be a painful disappointment to the Christianity of the age, and a sore grief to the yearning heart of the heavenly Father. In his address, a few short years ago, to the General Conference of the United Brethren Church, the Rev. Dr. Thomas Hamilton Lewis expressed the mutual obligation of these two denominations with his usual eloquence, and eloquence which never fails to reveal the kindled offerings of a brilliant mind on the altars of a glowing heart.

"When I see two bodies of Christians holding the same faith, practicing the same methods, organized on substantially the same polity, and working sometimes in the same community, with a wasteful and irritating competition, I ask: 'Who is keeping these people apart?' And the man who is responsible in any way for keeping them apart must tell this age, and must be prepared to tell Almighty God, why he keeps them apart."

And in closing this splendid address, Dr. Lewis exclaimed: "May the Holy Spirit awaken us to see that this union question is not a question of name and genealogies; not a matter of sentiment, but the most practical, the most momentous and the most solemn question that confronts the church."

That deliverance expresses the ideals of the age; and it protrays also the mutual promptings toward union on the part of these two kindred denominations. Here are these two peoples approaching nearer to each other every day; so very much like that God has inspired them with a mutual recognition of their mutual destiny. If left absolutely to themselves they will come together by an interflow as natural as meeting streams. The duty of the hour is therefore simply one of opening the gates and removing the barriers, that the people of God may be permitted to do their own will, and the will of the heavenly Father.

At the time of the French Revolution one of the captains of the passing hour was in a committee room, discussing the public welfare with passionate fervor. Suddenly there was a great commotion in the street, as the multitude went surging by. And the captain exclaimed: "There go the people; I must follow them, for I am their leader!"

Something of irony in that expression as we hear it across the generations from the lips of that revolutionary leader of a day. But it is a serious truth in the Methodist Protestant Church that all leaders must be followers; that every question must go up in final appeal to the tribunal of the people; and that therefore if the Methodist Protestant Church is really prompted to form an organic union, through mutual concession, with any other Christian denomination whatsoever, then every leader, whether layman or minister, must clear the way for the people's will; and must firmly resolve that no man's vote, and no man's blunder, and no counter-movement, and no man's alternative ideal, however lofty or noble in itself, shall be permitted to keep asunder those whom God would join together.—The Methodist Recorder.

LENTON HIGH SCHOOL.

The trustees met in High Point April 8 in the most interesting and harmonious session held since the organization of the Institution. Among the important items of business was the election of a Board of Trustees to succeed the old Board. The following now constitute the Board viz.:

W. P. Pickett, J. J. Welch, and Dr. J. R. Reitzel, of High Point; R. H. Brooks, J. Norman Wills, J. M. Millikan, and Rev. T. M. Johnson, of Greensboro; Dr. F. R. Harris, Hon. R. S. McCain, and [illegible] R. Harris, of Henderson; J. M. Daniel, C. H. Surratt, A. A. Hill, W. F. Wall, Norman Johnson, and M. K. Surratt, of Denton; J. W. Boyles, of Thomasville; J. H. Southerly, of Albemarle; Rev. D. A. Braswell, of Concord; L. F. Ross, of Asheboro; Rev. C. A. Cecil, president of the Conference, Ex officio member.

An Executive Board was elected as follows, viz.: A. A. Hill, W. P. Pickett, C. H. Surratt, W. F. Wall, J. M. Daniel, M. K. Surratt, and Norman Johnson.

W. P. Pickett, of High Point, was elected chairman of Board of Trustees, and A. A. Hill of Denton, vice chairman; R. A. Brooks, of Greensboro was elected treasurer to succeed himself; Rev. G. L. Reynolds was elected principal of school.

The Board then voted to raise $500 to finish paying the small indebtedness on the school building; the balance which will be about $300 to be spent in buying an adjacent lot and in beautifying the buildings and grounds. Rev. D. A. Braswell was ordered by the Board to collect the above amount. It is hoped that the people will respond liberally to his call so that we may have school property that will satisfy the aesthetic faculties of the most refined.

All together now, and we will have one of the best schools in the state and one that will be of untold value to the Methodist Protestant church in North Carolina.

G. L. Reynolds, Sec. Bd.

—Bro. Logan Trogdon, of Tabernacle, attended the County Sunday School Convention in High Point, and reports favorably

Begun on page 9.

ness meeting last Sunday afternoon and transacted the business matters pertaining to the class. Bro. L. W. Holt, the teacher, will represent the class at the third Annual Convention of the Baracas and Philatheas of North Carolina, which will convene at Charlotte next Saturday, April 12th. Three other members have expressed their intention to attend also. The class was delighted to have its president, Dr. Hornaday, present and preside over the meeting after having been absent the two previous meetings.

C. B. Way, Press Reporter.

Piney Grove, Siler City Ct.

Our beloved pastor, Bro. Bowman, was with us last Sunday and gave us a most inspiring sermon on friendship, using for his text the latter part of the 24th verse of the 18 chapter of the Proverbs, "and there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother." I am sure that every one that was attentive went away feeling well repaid for having come. The congregation was good considering the epidemic of measles in the neighborhood. The rainy weather and measles have to some extent retarded our work here. Yet considering circumstances the work is moving on very well. Communion service was held last Sunday. We were indeed glad to see quite a number partake of it, as we think every Christian should in honor of our Saviour who died to redeem a world from sin.

Many thanks are due Miss Fleta Smith of Siler City for playing the organ for us. We were glad to have her worship with us: come again.

Eight of our bright little boys and girls won prizes for attending Sabbath school every Sunday. The prizes were beautiful little Testaments.

On Saturday morning, March 15th, the spirit of Mr. James Thompson went back to God who gave it. He has been in very feeble health for about a year with that dreadful disease tuberculosis. He leaves to mourn their loss two little orphan girls, a father, one brother and three sisters, his wife having preceded him to the glory world about eighteen months. He often said before he died that he did not fear death but so hated to leave his two little girls without either father or mother. He body was carried to Greensboro Monday and laid beside his wife. May the bereaved ones find comfort in God. The deceased was about 35 years old.

We have had no prayer meeting this year so far. We would be glad if our good people would wake up to the fact that we ought to have prayer meeting. Will close asking the prayers and co-operation of all those interested in our church and its work.

Fleta Kivett, Reporter.

April 7, 1913.

Mt. Carmel, Granville Ct.

Sunday school at this place going again. Began Sunday last with forty-four on roll. The classes seem very well arranged and there is great interest being shown. The writer attended quarterly conference at Rehobeth church, this charge, Saturday last, which is certainly a great place to be at and great people to be with. This, being the 2nd quarterly conference for this year, was pleasantly carried on; the next to be at Antioch church, possibly in June.

W. Polk Garrett.

April 8, 1913.

Corinth, Littleton Ct.

Our Sunday school had an Easter egg and rabbit hunt, Monday following Easter Sunday, children enjoyed it thoroughly. Held our Easter service yesterday so Bro. Edwards could be with us. It was pronounced a success, but possibly it would have been better had there not been much sickness in the beginning of our getting the program out. Collection something over $10.00.

Pres. Cecil will preach here Monday after 3rd Sunday of this month at eleven o'clock.

Mrs. Hayes of Newport News is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Glasgow, of Littleton.

Mrs. Glasgow had a telegram last week, calling her to her mother's bedside, Mrs. Robt. Brewer, of Roanoke, Va.

Mrs. Allen Pittman is visiting her parents, Mrs. A. E. Carter.

G. S. Barnes, of Newport News, was out a few days ago to see his mother Mrs. G. L. Barnes.

Mr. Van Carter, accompanied by Mr. Creakmore of Rocky Mount, visited his parents, Mrs. and Jessie Carter, last Sat., Sunday and Monday. Mr. Creekmore had a "reason" for going.

Fannie Barnes.

April 7, 1913.

Eden, Hlifax Circuit.

As Sunday was our regular preaching Sunday, our pastor, Rev. J. E. Pritchard, preached a helpful sermon to a large congregation. We were very glad to see so many people out, as it shows so much interest in the church and its work.

Our president, C. A. Cecil, will preach at this church April 18 at 11 o'clock in the morning; hope a large number will be out to hear him.

The third quarterly conference will convene at Bethesda church Friday, April 11, for the purpose of electing delegates to the Annual Conference; hope all the churches will be represented.

Misses Mamie White and Irene Hawkins gave a "Box Party" at the McDaniel school house March 9th, the amount raised being $36. $23 will go for foreign missions and the balance for repairing the church.

There has been much sickness in this community. Mrs. H. B. Neville has been sick, but is much better now.

Miss Jewel Ethridge of Whitaker is visiting Miss Sallie May Neville this week.

To our great surprise Sunday after service Mr. Joseph Ray of Rocky Mount and Miss Minnie Hunter of Whitaker were united in holy wedlock. We wish for the young couple much pleasure as they sail through the sea of life.

Hope all the readers spent a happy Easter.

Much love for the Herald and its readers.

Irene Hawkins.

Uwharrie.

As many of Mr. Trogdon's friends have written to me and seem to be very anxious to know how he is getting along, I will answer their letters through the Herald.

I received a leter from Mr. Trogdon the 5th stating that he thought he would be able to leave by the second Sunday, but another one came Monday and said that the stitches were taken out the 5th and his side was not in such a good condition and that he would not be able to leave under 18 or 21 days. We certainly thank the people for their kindness, and their many prayers that we feel are offered up for us all. We also thank the people of the Ct. for remembering the pastor's family in a financial way; may thanks to them and altho' we may never repay them we can only pray God's blessing upon them who can pay them a hundred fold. We ask them to still continue their prayers for us and Mr. T. that he may be restored to health and return to us again.

Mrs. J. B. T.

Thomasville.

As we have not given a report for sometime, I deem it a duty to write a few lines to the Herald so that others may keep in touch with us, in regard to our good work at this place.

Our church is prospering under its new pastor, congregations good and the attendance comparatively regular. Bro.

Williams gives us some good sound doctrine and is entirely gospel when in pulpit and in everyday life.

We have prayermeeting each Wednesday night, and the interest seems to be increasing in that work.

Sunday school is moving finely (under the present system, the Cross and Crown.) Attendance hasn't been as good as it might have been on account of the contagious diseases that prevail in our community, attendance last Sunday, 139 against 78 a year ago. Our teachere are loyal and are striving to make the Sunday school accomplish more this year than ever before.

We are sorry to note the death of the little infant of Mr. and Mrs. Garfield Beck. Our heartfelt sympathy goes out to the bereaved family.

Collection for Denton Orphanage for this quarter was $8.35. We didn't begin until March and might have done better, had we started earlier.

I don't know of anything that appeals to the writer any closer than Orphanage work. Being situated near an orphanage (the Baptist) and seeing the training that the children get, and seeing them daily march along through town being chaperoned by some one at all times, it makes one feel more closely attached to such work than a person that doesn't see it at all. We (the Methodist Protestants) are just from the cradle and can, by proper managment, make our orphanage in a short period accomplish as great things as the Institution spoken of above.

Our location is beautiful and its elevation makes it as healthy a place as North Carolina affords. Let's get our shoulders to the wheel and make the Methodist Protestant orphanage at High Point surpass any institution of its kind in this grand old state.

Our 2nd quarterly conference meets at the church Thursday night, the 10th.

Reporter.

Byerly Chapel, Mocksville Ct.

Our pastor, Bro. Self, filled his regular appointment here the fourth Sunday in March; had good attendance. The congregation grows larger every time Bro. Self preaches for us. He preaches excellent sermons. We feel proud to have Bro. Self for our pastor.

We organized Sunday school April 6th, had good attendance . Officers and teachers are as follows: Supt., J. W. Byerly; assistant, D. M. Cartner; Sec. and Treas., Miss T. K. Byerly. Teachers: W. L. Harper, Wm. A. Byerly, Mrs. Mammie Harper, Mrs. P. E. Byerly, Mrs. Mag Cartner, Miss Bessie Byerly. Pray for our school.

Troy Byerly, Rep.

Piney Grove, Ciler City Ct.

Our Sunday school is growing better since spring opened up. There were 41 present last Sunday despite the mud. We are glad to see more interest taken in our S. S. We extend to each one a hearty welcome.

Last Sunday we took up a collection for the orphanage at Denton. A song, "Two little orphans," was most sweetly rendered by two children, Charm and Lola McMaster's. The collection was then taken up which amounted to $2.00. Will close with best wishes to the Herand its many readers.

Fleta Kivett, Reporter.

April 14th, 1913.

Welch Memorial.

Our pastor, Bro. D. R. Williams, preached twice for us last Sunday as good sermons as we ever heard, telling us things we need to hear and put to practice more than we all do.

The people all like Bro. William's family and think he is just the man we need. We earnestly pray that this may be the most prosperous year at old Welch Memorial.

Our Sunday school is still growing some and most especially the Baraca class. 32 regular scholars and five visitors last Sunday. Bro. Seagroves is a good teacher and they all seem to like him finely. We hope to see the school as a whole grow much more, for there are several boys and girls, yes, and older ones too, in easy reach of the church that do not attend any other S. S. whose presence would be encouraging to us.

Glad to see Sister Hiatt at preaching Sunday night; hope she may continue to improve and soon be well again. With love to the Herald and its many readers.

Reporter.

Monroe.

The Rev. O. D. Stacey preached at New Hope church 1st Sunday in April, using as text John 5:28-29, Marvel not at this for the hour is coming in which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice and shall come forth. They that have done good unto the resurrection of life and they that have done evil unto resurrection of damnation. The congregation was large and attentive. We had preaching Sunday night also. We all like our preacher very much. Sabbath school will begin next Sunday.

A Friend.

Cid News.

The death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Cody on last Wednesday morning and took away his son Jesse. He was about 16 years old and just entering into manhood. He was an industrious good boy and will be greatly missed by relatives and friends. Measles was the cause of his death. Much sympathy to the heartbroken family. He was buried at Jerusalem on Thursday. Mr. A. L. Beck conducted the burial service.

We are glad to learn that Miss Crissie Tysinger who is at the hospital at High Point is convalescing.

Bro. Trogdon expects to return home this week from Richmond, Va.

Bro. Moses Morgan and Mr. Ermin Trogdon filled the appointment at Cid Sunday.

Bro. Morgan gave us a splendid talk. We were pleased to have them with us.

Mrs. A. J. Gillingham was the happy recipient of a call from the newly married Mr. and Mrs. Bumpus Surratt of Jackson's Hill. Mrs. Surratt is a charming young lady, the daughter of Mr. John Spencer of Randolph and her mother was the sister of highly esteemed citizen Mr. H. M. Skeen. Mr. Surratt is an excellent and popular young man, the son of Esq. H. M. C. Surratt of Jackson Hill. The happy couple are going to Nebraska to live and they trly have congratulation and best wishes of a host of friends.

Mr. D. E. Hepler and children accompanied by his mother left this morning for Greensboro. Mrs. N. W. Lanier.

Zion, Siler City Ct.

Our pastor, Rev. J. H. Bowman, filled his appointment at Zion, Sunday, April 6th. He preached a splendid and very appropriate sermon to an attentive audience.

On account of bad weather, our Township Sunday School Convention was not held at Moon's Chapel the 5th Sunday in March.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely. We hope to have a better attendance since spring has opened up.

We are very sorry to learn that Miss Mozelle York is sick with measles. We hope that she will soon recover and be with us again.

Misses Flora York and Bessie Siler are delegates to the State Sunday School Convention at Greensboro.

—Miss Byerly, teacher in the Asheboro Graded school, was in Greensboro last Sunday and at Grace Church.

"What Must I Say?"

At this place we have just been made the recipients of a goodly pounding, but I am at the loss to know what to say about such things as this (and others) since "Peter Slewfoot" has opened fire on us about the matter. Some people like to be thanked through the paper and have their names printed in same for such deeds as this and some do not. Most do.

I leave the names and the articles out, but it was a good time all right, and the people are to be complimented for it.

Fraternally,
S. M. Needham.

Obituary.

Rev. P. D. Moore was born in Rutherfordton County May 13th, 1827, departed this life Feb. 16th, 1913, aged 85 years 9 months and 3 days. He professed religion when in his 18th year and joined the M. E. Church South; was licensed to preach in said church when he was 24 years old, and traveled in the M. E. Church as pastor for a number of years.

Bro. Moore was united in marriage to Miss Phoebe Grigg March 21st, 1849. To this union were born five children, two now living and three dead. The eldest son is preaching in Fla. and the other is a farmer. This union was broke by death Aug. 22nd, 1867. After a process of time he was again married to Miss Pamelia B. Waters, to this union were born four children, one now dead and three living. One son is an engineer in Kansas, another is in business in Glenfield, West Va., and the other is a telegraph operator at White Sulphur Springs, Va.

Bro. Moore joined the M. P. Church and was received as a minister at the 4th quarterly conference of Cleveland Ct. in 1887, during the pastorate of Rev. J. E. Hartsell, who preceded him but a short while to the spirit land, and traveled with Bro. Hartsell as an associate pastor in 1888. He joined the North Carolina Annual Conference in the fall of 1888 and served the following charges: Catawba Ct., 1889-1890; Caldwell Ct., 1891-1894. We have no record of 1895, perhaps he lived on at Rutherford College. In the hands of the Pres., 1896; Ivy Ct., 1897-1899; was superannuated 1900, again served Gastonia Ct. 1902; was superannuated on Caldwell Ct., 1903-1904.

Bro. Moore was a man loved by all who knew him because of his piety and patience; truly he bore hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ. As a minister he was faithful, and was a good preacher of the old time Methodist type. He always preached the gospel in its purity and simplicity and received but little for his labor, and yet never complained. In the loss of Bro. Moore the Conf. and church has lost a good man, and the children a faithful father; but our loss is his eternal gain. Just a few weeks before his death the Dr. told him that he was liable to drop dead at any moment, and he looked at him without any anxiety and said, "You cannot scare me, I'm ready." We would here extend our heartfelt sympathy to the relatives and children; especially to the adopted daughter who remained with him until the last and did all in her power to comfort him as he went down the western slope to the crossing. So as we go one by one doubtless Bro. Moore will be among the first to greet us.

"Jesus, while our hearts are bleeding,
O'er the spoils that death hath won,
We would at this solemn meeting,
Calmly say, "Thy will be done."
By thy hands the boon was given,
Thou hast taken but thine own:
Lord of earth, and God of Heaven,
Evermore, "Thy will be done."

J. H. Moton,
D. A. Highfill,
H. D. Garmon,
N. J. Wright,
E. M. Ivester,
Committee.

THE CHOCOLATE BUSH.

Anna B. Bryant.

"Chocolates don't grow on every bush!" teased father, slipping out of four pairs of hands that clung like burrs to his coat and his collar and his furry fingers. The children always pounced on him for a kiss when they saw him go whisking out of the door and trying to catch the car for the "office."

"Wouldn't it be fun if they did!" giggled Marion, curling up in a corner of the sofa when he had got away from them. "I like huckleberry bushes, you know! My! wouldn't I like to go berrying!"

"Wish't I could!" said Connie. "We could make believe a tree if we wanted to—an April Fool tree. Let's do it tonight—to father!"

Every year when April Fool's day came around they always had some funny joke "on" father. Sometimes the joke was the other way, for mother helped them, and mother was the best fun in the world to help you think up little jokes that couldn't hurt anybody. One year it was stuffed eggs in all the lunch boxes—oh, if you could only have seen the rice and oatmeal "stuffing" that flew all over the office when father opened his! It made the children giggle again to remember what he had said about it at supper-time.

"Mother would help us —let's ask her!" cried the children. "We could get a bush and fix up with paper chocolates the way we had the paper oranges, you know, and tied them on. Mother can show us."

"I think it would be great fun," said mother. "You two boys go and find your bush—a good scraggly one, with lots of sharp twigs and thorny tips all over it. I'll show you when you bring it."

"And what can we do, mother?"

"Why, up in the garret, Connie, is a great heap of brown tissue paper, in behind the big trunk where the boxes are. You can get some of that and take it down into the kitchen, and get Myra to let you smoothe it out with a warm flat-iron. On a shelf in my closet, Marion, you will find some bits of Jeweler's cotton, all colors. Here is some paste, (or a drop of mucilage is just as good) to finish the chocolates with, and when you come back I'll help you make a fine supper table ornament."

"Don't they look just e-zactly like the candy ones!" admired Connie, as the soft brown balls grew wunder their fingers. Each one was stuffed tightly with cotton till the thin brown outside was plump and smooth and looked good enough to eat. A drop of paste on the under side made it nice and firm, with no edges showing. On some of them mother stuck a little snip of red paper to look like a bit of candied cherry. Others were topped with a piece of broken walnut.

It did not take long to make them, and then there was the fun of sticking them on the tree. First mother made a place in the middle of the table for the big green jardiniere, and filled it with nice white sand and stuck the bush in it. Next, they carefully pushed a paper "chocolate" on to every sharp little twig and thorn, till the scraggly thing looked as if it had blossomed out with brown berries. It was a beautiful bush and almost made the children's mouths water.

"If it was only a really-and-truly!" sighed Connie.

"Then there wouldn't be any April Fool to it!" returned Marion. "And it's April-Fool day, and somebody always has to be."

It must have been overhearing this that made mother think of turning the joke on them. A few minutes after, when they were busy over a game, she went to the telephone. All I can give you is what she

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE

Greensboro, N. C.

N. B.—Following schedule figures published only as information and are not guaranteed.

1.00 A. M.—No. 29 daily, Birmingham Special, through Pullman sleeping and observation cars New York to Birmingham and Richmond to Birmingham. Dining car service.

12.48 A. M.—No. 32 daily, Southern's Limited, Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville, Augusta and Aiken to New York. Dining car service.

12.55 a. m.—No. 112 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh open at 9.15 p. m.

[illegible]. 30 daily, Birmingham sp[illegible]. Pullman sleeping and observation cars from Birmingham and Asheville to New York and Birmingham to Richmond. Dining car service.

2.25 a. m.—No. 31, the Southern's Southeastern Limited, Pullman sleeping cars from New York to Asheville. Day coaches. Dining car service.

3.45 a. m.—No. 45 daily local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7.10 a. m.—No. 8, daily local for Richmond, connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7.20 a. m.—No. 37 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited Pullman drawing room, sleeping cars and club and observation cars New York to new Orleans. Pullman sleeping car New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman chair car Greensboro to Montgomery, solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7.20 a. m. No. 108 daily local Greensboro to Goldsboro.

7.35 a. m.—No. 11, daily local through to Atlanta, sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7.45 a. m. No. 154 daily except Sunday for Ramseur.

8.15 a. m.—No. 237 daily for Winston-Salem and North Wilkesboro. Pullman sleeping car Raleigh to Winston-Salem.

9.30 a. m.—No. 44 daily for Washington and points North.

9.40 a. m.—No. 144 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro; handles Atlanta Raleigh sleeping car.

12.30 p. m.—No. 21 daily for Asheville, Waynesville and local points; handles coaches and chair car through to Asheville and Waynesville.

12.50 p. m.—No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12.30 p. m. No. 21 daily for Asheville.

12.55 p. m.—No. 7 daily for Charlotte and points south.

1.40 p. m.—No. 36 daily U. S. Fast Mail for Washington, New York and points north; handles Pullman sleeping cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman sleeping car Asheville to Richmond Pullman chair car Greenville, S. C., to Washington. Day coaches. Dining car service.

2.20 p. m. No. 207 daily for Winston-Salem, and daily execept Sunday for North Wilkesboro.

2.30 p. m.—No. 151 daily except Sunday for

3.30 p. m.—No. 230 daily except Sunday for Madison.

Ramseur.

2.30 p. m.—No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4.20 p. m.—No. 22 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles chair car to Goldsboro.

4.55 p. m.—No. 131 daily for Mt. Airy.

6.10 p. m. No. 35 daily U. S. Fast Mail for Atlanta and points south Pullman sleeping cars New York to New Orleans and Birmingham and sleeping car Richmond to Asheville which car can be occupied until 7 a. m. Pullman chair car Washington to Greenville, S. C. Day coaches. Dining car service.

6.55 p. m. No. 235 daily for Winston-Salem.

7.30 p. m.—No. 43 daily for Atlanta Sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10.13 p. m.—No. 38 daily New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited Pullman sleeping cars New Orleans, Macon, Asheville and Charlotte to New York and Pullman chair car Montgomery to Greensboro. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

10.20 p. m.—No. 233 daily for Winston-Salem.

10.31 p. m.—No. 12 daily local for Richmond; handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman, Vice-President and General Manager, Washington, D. C.; S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M., Washington, D. C.; H. F. Cary, G. P. A., Washington, D. C.; R. H. DeButts, D. P. A., Charlotte, N. C.; O. F. York, P & A., Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF STOMACH AND INTESTINES.

121 South Elm St.

Greensboro, N. C.

Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,

DENTIST.

Office in Benbow Arcade, S. Elm St.,
Rooms 348 and 350,
Greensboro, N. C.
Office phone 29, Residence phone 22.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House.
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR, NOSE AND THROAT.

said at her end of the line, but perhaps you can guess what the other person said, or part of it.

"You—papa?"

"You're going to be dreadfully April-fooled tonight!"

"You know what you said when you went away—about chocolates growing on bushes?"

"Well, they'll make a bush! Paper chocolates—stuffed with cotton. Understand?"

"Um huh! That would be fine. A pound would do nicely. Could you take off the papers ones and change them for real ones in ten or fifteen minutes? All right, I'll get them singing round the piano or something. Come home early."

Now you can guess, can't you? That was just what happened. When they were called out to supper, the candles were lighted and the children all stood with shining eyes to see how father would look when he saw the Chocolate Bush, and especially how he would look when he tasted one of the chocolates.

"You see they do grow on some bushes!" teased Marion.

"I see!" said father. "First time I ever saw such a bush in my life! Are they good to eat?"

"Just try one!" screamed the children.

"Fine!" said father, trying one obediently. "Have one yourself," he urged politely, reaching to Marion. "No?" as she drew back. "Why, they aren't all for me, are they? This is delicious!"

The children began to look doubtful. He didn't seem to mind the cotton a bit, but kept on tasting. Mother looked on with twinkling eyes, but said nothing. Suddenly, the boys slyly reached out a hand and helped themselves to one apiece.

"They're real! They're real!" they cried out both together. "It's father fooling us! He's changed the paper chocolates for real ones!"—Zion's Herald.

What God may hereafter require of you, you must not give yourself the least trouble about. Everything he gives you to do you must do as well as ever you can, and that is the best possible preparation for what he may want you to do next. If people would but do what they have to do, they would always find themselves ready for what comes next.—George Macdonald.

A CALL FROM A MONKEY

One cold, bleak day in the fall Tot was having a tea party in honor of her new doll, Annie, when she heard music and ran to the window to see where it came from. As soon as she looked out, she began to clap her hands and scream with delight. "O, O, O!" she said. "There's a monkey here."

Sure enough, there was a man with a hand organ and a real monkey. Tot wanted to give him some money, so her aunt gave her a few cents, which she threw out. The monkey picked them up, took them to his master, and then came and sat on the piazza just in front of the window. He wore a red coat trimmed with rows of white buttons and a cap with a feather on it. The coat had a pocket, and Mr Monkey took out a nut and tried to crack it. "He is hungry. He must have something to eat," said Tot.

So auntie got a doughnut for him. He made a bow and held up the doughnut as if he had never seen such a thing before; but after eying it all over, he put a piece into his mouth and shook his head as if to say: "Well, it's pretty good, after all."

It was very funny to see him eat it; for he bit off all the outside and threw it away, just as if he were eating an apple. Tot will not soon forget her call from the monkey.—The Nursery.

SHE REMEMBERED HER MANNERS

Susan had been to her first party, and was eagerly telling her mother what a happy time she had had.

"Susan," said her mother, "I hope you remembered to tell the hostess that you had a pleasant time at the party?"

"O, yes, mother," answered little Susan; "I told her as soon as I got there, so I wouldn't forget it."

A favorite motto with graduating classes used to read: "To be rather than to seem." Reputation is what people think you are and character is what you are. A Chicago paper offered this definition: "Character is what you are when nobody's looking at you."

—Raymond McCulloch has returned home from Florida and expects to remain at home for the summer.

—Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk was in our city last Friday. He went to the hospital to see Mrs. Amick who is still confined there, though improving.

W. F. MEDEARIS I. F. PEEBLES W. L. PEEBLES
MEDEARIS-PEEBLES FURNITURE COMPANY.
Complete House Furnishers.
STOVES AND RANGES
Cash or Credit.
109 & 111 E. Market St.
Phone 823. Greensboro, N. C.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.
Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.
206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

OVER 65 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.
Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

This School is Supreme in Teaching Law by Mail
THE ORIGINAL SCHOOL
It established correspondence instruction 23 years ago. It was founded on sane methods, sound courses and authoritative teaching. It has never deviated therefrom. It has had phenomenal success and enjoys unlimited respect. Right now is best equipped—best qualified to teach you law—for legal practice or for business. The catalog explains each advantage in detail, lists the thousands of successful graduates, and gives the fair prices for College Law Course and Business Law Course.
The Sprague Correspondence School of Law
If you want the best—write now for this catalog.
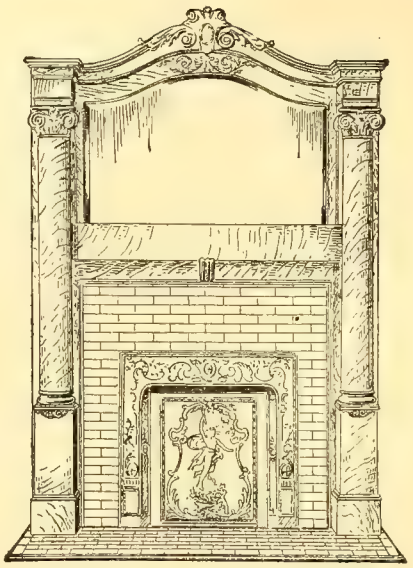
The Sprague Correspondence School of Law
400 American Building
Detroit, Mich.

Davidson Ct.

Our second quarterly conference will be held on Saturday 26th, before the 4th Sunday in April. Let all the members be present. There will be some things that are very important. Preaching at 11, dinner on the grounds, quarterly meeting in the afternoon.

Yours, fraternally,
J. W. Hulin, Pastor.

April 26, 1913.



Mantels, Grates, Tiles and Builders' Hardware.

If you intend to build a new house, or to improve an old one, don't fail to get our catalogue, showing the latest designs in mantels, grates, tiles and builder's hardware. We have designs to suit every style of architecture. It will pay you to write us.

ODELL MANTEL COMPANY,
(Odell Hardware Co., Owners.)
Greensboro, N. C.

TEACHERS' NORMAL COURSE—ELON COLLEGE

All tuition free. Term opens April 8th and closes June 5th, 1913. A full two months' term for teachers.

Courses offered in all the branches taught in the elementary and secondary schools. Strong courses offered in Pedagogy, and the Theory and Practice of Teaching.

The course is planned for all teachers who wish to prepare themselves for better work and better service, for those who have the ambition to make better teachers than they have yet become, and for those who wish to prepare for better positions than they have yet been able to secure.

Expenses low as the lowest. A Bulletin containing information concerning courses, cost, work, etc., will be sent for the asking.

For full information write to
W. A. Harper, President, or
Thomas C. Amick, Director,
Elon College, North Carolina

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.
Absolute Security for Your Savings
Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.
This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.
Greensboro Loan and Trust Company
J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

Moriah, Tabernacle Ct.

Bro. Johnson preached a good and practical sermon this afternoon. We hope every one present, who had not made their decision for Christ will surrender their lives to him before it is too late. We love Bro. Johnson and he speaks so tenderly and lovingly to us. A large congregation was present.

Four certificates were granted today, Mr. and Mrs. Will Ingold and son, and Terry Sharpe. Although we hate to give them up our best wishes go with them.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely We have good attendance. Several attended the County Sunday School Convention which was held in High Point last Thursday. Misses Mamie Plunkett and Clara Jobe and Mr. Henry Sharpe are attending the Baraca and Philathea Convention which is going on at Charlotte.

The second quarterly conference will meet Sat. before 2nd Sunday of May at Shady Grove. Preaching at eleven o'clock.

Reporter.

April 13, 1913.

Good News from Danville.—In the fullest election ever held, Danville, Va., went for prohibition by a majority of 68. This is a victory over a most persistent liquor element.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XIX. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, MARCH 27, 1913. NUMBER 18.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCULLOCH, Editor and Publisher.
PRICE.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
RULE IN DEALING WITH SUBSCRIBERS.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

INFINITE SUPERIORITY OF THE CHRISTIAN'S CHRIST.

Christ is not the same to all men. We who have been taught to revere the holy name of Christ from childhood can hardly appreciate the view of those who have no such respect for Him. It may do us good sometimes to be shocked by an expression of unbelief, if it cause us to reconsider the value of our precious faith.

Only yesterday we overheard a conversation between a Jew and two men who are at least nominally Christians. They were speaking in a somewhat argumentative way, not wholly serious, of the difference between their faiths. One of the Christians referred to the death of Christ. The Jew replied:

"He died because they crucified him."

The remark was shocking to us in what it implied, but it revealed to me something of the profound difference between the Christian's view of Christ and the view of others. To the Christian, Christ is the Son of God, the perfect man, the world's crucified redeemer, the risen Lord, interceding at the right hand of God for those He died to redeem, with such an abiding love for men that He perpetually watches over them, seeking to lead them from sin to salvation, and who will eventually receive unto Himself in glory all who will come unto Him in faith.

But what is Christ to this Jew and others? Simply an imposter or a deluded enthusiast, a man who died because he could not help himself, whose body was stolen from the tomb by his disciples, thus giving a semblance of truth to his prediction that he would rise from the dead.

If the Christian's faith were but a delusion, it is so transcendantly joyous and wholesome and refining and uplifting, that it would be the height of wisdom to accept it, if one only could. What is human life without the Christian's view and the Christian's experience? Not much nobler than that of the brute that lives today and perishes tomorrow. But with the dawning of Christ upon us, our souls awake to a new and blessed existence. We become partakers of a heavenly life and enjoy a heavenly hope. To our individual joy is added the communion of saints, and we join with our fellows in songs of praise impossible to the unbeliever.

Then what inspiration to action there is in the Christian's faith. Does the unbelieving Jew find so much comfort and joy in his lack of faith that he wishes to propagate his unbelief? Not at all. But the true Christian wishes others to share with him the blessedness of his faith, and he becomes a propagandist. He wishes to send the gospel to the ends of the earth that all men may have the privilege of entering into its glorious hope.

But our Christ is not only the more attractive and the more powerful, but He is the real Christ. The evidences bring Him to us. We can not honestly believe in the Jew's conception of Christ. It is the product of dishonest malice. It is the offspring of hatred. It is the poor effort of wilful unbelievers to justify themselves in their unbelief. It is the blindness of souls walking in darkness. It is an awful delusion, and pitiable are they who are held by it.

Let no man take from us our Christ, the Christ of God. He is our riches. He is our honor. He is our hope. He is our inspiration. He is our everlasting joy.

—We would call attention to the appeal of Bro. Champion for our Birmingham Church. Our people there have made a heroic struggle and are going to win out, we believe, but the reverse that has come in the destruciton of the half-done building they were erecting as a house of worship puts them back. Will not some of our readers respond to the appeal?

—We thank Bro. D. B. Johnson, of Lincolnton, for soliciting subscription to the Herald and sending four new names. The Lincolnton church is a live one, and the Herald is glad to enter some more of the homes of its members.

—Rev. D. A. Braswell is conducting a meeting in Charlotte this week, with good interest.

—Rev. G. F. Millaway returned to Burlington Monday to assist further in the series of meetings in the M. P. church.

—Rev. George L. Curry and family have gone to Why Not to assist in the celebration of the birthday of Mrs. J. H. Stowe (Mrs. Curry's mother) which occurred yesterday.

—Grace church people enjoyed special Easter music last Sunday. The choir never fails to have something attractive to lovers of good music.

—Our jocular reference to the illegible handwriting of Bro. Pritchard last week, it now occurs to us, might be taken too seriously by some, and be misinterpreted to his damage. He does other things so well and is so earnest and diligent, that it did not occur to us to imagine that some might think from what he said that he is careless in the matter of handwriting, which is quite contrary to the fact. He writes a fine, fluid hand which is commonly readable enough, but now and then lapses into indistinctness that amounts to illegibility, if the reader is not a good one. We had no thought of censuring him for our failure to read correctly his communication. It is so common a thing to refer to lawyers and other professional men, even great editors like Horace Greely, as writing unreadable hands, that we fell into the stream almost unconsciously. We beg Bro. Pritchard's pardon for our thoughtlessness. It is a pleasure to receive his communications so well written in every way (except the few points of indistinctness), and we hope that we will not blunder so badly that our mistake cannot be corrected in a later issue.

BROTHERHOOD CALL NO. 16.

Notice is hereby given of the death of Rev. J. W. Heath. Bro. Heath was a member of the Brotherhood in full standing. Members are due three dollars each inside of sixty days from date of this notice.

J. A. Burgess, Sec.-Treas.

April 3, 1913.

THE NEGLECT OF FOREIGN MISSIONS BY THE UNITARIANS.

By Rembert G. Smith, D. D.

Dr. Charles W. Eliot, the distinguished emeritus president of Harvard University, has recently returned from, a tour of the whole world in which he utilized well his remarkable powers of observation and generalization. Recently he made an address before an organization of the Unitarian Church, of which he is a member, in which he called attention to the comparative insignificance of the foreign missionary activities of his denomination and expressed his personal wonderment that the evangelical Churches so decidedly inferior as to doctrines should so far outstrip the Unitarian Church in carrying the gospel to the heathen. He strongly intimated that these things ought not so to be, and came as near as Unitarian self-restraint and complacency would allow to a fervent exhortation for a forward missionary movement.

He declared that his wonder at the aggressive missionary activities of the orthodox Churches was increased when he reflected upon the heavy burden of impossible dogmas which they have to bear. His general idea seems to be that the Unitarian doctrines were alone worth dissemination, and yet, strange to say, men and money by which they might be spread are strangely lacking. His reflections might no doubt have profitably extended to the problems of the stationary condition of his Church in this country. The "Statesman's Yearbook" declares that the 70,000 members which the Unitarian Church in the United States had in 1906 had not been increased at all in 1910.

The orthodox Churches will regard this exhortation of Dr. Eliot to his brethren not only with interest but with sympathy, and will hope that it will result in an increase in the missionary work of American Unitarianism. Pagan religions may be considered by Unitarians as about as good as orthodox Christianity, but the representative conviction among the orthodox Christians of the United States is that even the Unitarian interpretation is far better than the heathen systems.

It were profitable also perhaps to seek out the causes of the lack of missionary zeal among the Unitarians. Why do they not carry the gospel to the uttermost ends of the earth as they should? Why are they not shoulder to shoulder with their Christain brethren in the Orient and in the islands of the sea? The answer to these questions will be profitable not only to the Unitarians, but to the Presbyterians and the Baptists and the Methodists.

No correct answer to these questions is possible which is given regardless of attention to the peculiar doctrines of Unitarians on one hand and of the orthodox Churches on the other. The great fudamental features of the orthodox doctrine of the person of Christ must be held by the Church before it will become aggressively and heroically missionary. His absolute authority, which is his as very God and not his as consummate man, must be recognizrd before the missionary command will be heeded. Paul, the prototype and perpetual pattern of the Christian missionary, was not thrilled by the humanity but awed by the deity of Jesus Christ when he asked: "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" If Christ be merely your elder brother, we will consult and advise with him as to what we shall do; but if he be the Lord of glory into whose hands has been committed all power, we will hasten to obey him, both because of the fear of his frown and the favor of his smile.

And what shall be said concerning the Holy Ghost, about whom, not as was the case with some early Christians our Unitarian brethren have heard, but in whom they have steadfastly refused to believe? How can a Church not only without a Pentecost but without the possibility of a Pentecost have a Petrine message of power for men of every nation under the sun? That Church which will not recognize the insufficiency of exaggerated intellectualism and wait in humility and prayer for the uncarnal and irresistible weapons of the upper chamber will be woefully insufficient for these things. Only those Churches whose faith enables them to perpetuate Pentecost can have either the apostolic ideal of the world for Christ or the apostolic power by which Christ can be carried to the world.

From considerations like these there should come also warning to some of the counselors within the ranks of the evangelical Churches who vainly imagine that the task of Christianizing the world can be made easier by amending and making easier of acceptance. as they suppose, the Christian creed. The Christian missionary does not go to China or Japan merely to indorse the little truth which these people have been taught in their great religions; rather does he go to them with the revolutionary gospel of Christ, who spake as never man spoke because with the authority of the Son of God. Before the august advance of his truth the hordes of hoary and horrible errors and superstitions which have so long debased and terrified men are destined to flee in the utmost confusion and in ultimate defeat. The truly missionary Church is true to the Lord by being true to the Lord's truth. There is no other loyalty to him than this.—Christian Advocate.

REVIVALS AND THEIR BASAL PRINCIPLES.

By Rev. J. M. Hawley.

Few subjects are of deeper interest to the thoughtful Christian, whether preacher, or layman, than that indicated above. A true revival is recognized as an imperative need and an unspeakable blessing to the Church; hence the interest in this subject is rooted in the religious life of every true disciple of Christ.

Just to the extent that the need of a revival is felt, the Church will plan and pray and work for the result. It is universally recognized as the flower and fruit of intelligent effort. A revival never comes by accident. Spasmodic and half-hearted work can never secure it. Mere planting, where there is no earnest and persistent cultivation, never yields the desired fruit.

The laws governing the spiritual activities and achievements of the Church demand candid and prayerful attention. The more fully these laws are studied and understood, the greater will be its success and growth. All work to be fruitful must be in harmony with law, just as surely as that all growth is conditioned upon the fulfillment of necessary conditions. No sphere, either in natural or the spiritual world, is free from the dominion of law.

A revival is the end, the supreme object, which every Church should hold steadily in view. We do not overstep the limits of truth when we hold that its very life is bound up with the success or failure of its revival efforts. An orthodox creed, elaborate forms, and impressive ceremonies will not support and nourish its spiritual life. The vital principle dees not come from anythnig artistic or external. Dr. Abel Stevens emphasized a great truth in regard to our own denomination: "Methodism reversed the usual policy of religious sects, which seek to sustain their spiritual life by their orthodoxy. It sustained its orthodoxy by devoting its chief care to its spiritual life."

If this is the true policy of the Church, it must be pursued with intelligence and vigor. No end or object can be attained if the necessary means are ignored. All plans, enterprises, and work in the Church must be considered as means to an end. They aim at results above and beyond themselves. Viewed in any other light, they are meaningless. They derive, indeed, all their significance and value from the fact that they are intended to produce effects in the inner lives and character of men.

What is a revival? We answer in few words: A mighty stirring and quickening of the spiritual life and energy of the Church. It is restoration of the Church to a normal state of health and vigor. It is a new infusion of vitality and strength into the Church to raise it to the divine standard of piety and usefulness. Whatever the lapse and failures of the Church, a revival is the method by which its backslidings are healed and the membership brought back to a normal state of religious experience.

Here we come to deal with the vital facts, the essential conditions of Church life. The question is one of religious development or of religious decay. Needless to say that the forces by which it is renewed, quickened, and vitalized lie wholly in the spiritual realm. They are supernatural (above natural) in origin and manifestation, and yet there are human agencies by which these forces are made available for the benefit of the Church. Until man does his part, puts himself in the right attitude before God and in the right relation to God, the Church will remain in a feeble and backslidden condition.

We cannot emphasize too strongly the great truth that a revival is essentially and directly a work of the Holy Spirit in the minds and consciences of men. It is a sovereign work; it is God's prerogative to give or withhold. No revival is real and spiritual that does not produce the fruits of vital piety. It must have the divne stamp upon it. The Holy Spirit is the chief factor, the necessary agent, in its production. How he impresses the mind, awakens the conscience, and quickens the soul, it is not man's province to know or to explain. A deep mystery always surrounds a revival. Examine it, analyze it, explain it as we may, the mystery remains and defies every effort to conceal or dispel it. All efforts to explain it upon natural principles , the laws of association or of mental action and reaction, are utterly vain.

To secure a revival at any particular time or place far exceeds the power of man The laws which govern spiritual manifestations are not fixed and uniform, as those who rule in the world around us. In nature certain results follow certain laws without regard to time and place. Water heated to a high degree is certain to boil; reduced to an extremely low temperature, is certain to freeze. A material body projected into the air is invariably drawn towards the center of the earth by its attractive powers. But spiritual results are not controlled by uniform or unchangeable laws. No man can foretell the time and place where a revival fire will begin to burn. No Church can hold special services with the certainty that a revival, as generally understood, will follow. The Holy Spirit like the wind that "bloweth where it listeth," works without regard to man's almanac or chosen locality.

Another principle of vital importance is that the Holy Spirit usually, not invariably, works through man as an efficient instrumentality. Man, according to the New Testament, is a laborer with God and for God. For this holy relation he is called and strengthened and endowed. His spiritual life, greatly quickened, issues in spiritual power. He works in immediate cooperation with the unseen Agent in convincing ad saving men. He is enabled to concentrate all his mental and spiritual energies in persuading and assisting men to comply with the terms of salvation. Spiritual influences are thus brought to bear directly upon the unsaved, and men are converted to God. This is the sign of a revival, the credentials of a living and growing Church. Without these credentials it cannot verify its claim as an institution of God. The author of "Ecce Homo" aptly says: "When the power of reclaiming the lost dies out of the Church, it ceases to be the Church. But where this power remains, whatever else is wanting, it may still be said that the tabernacle of God is with men."

The reverent and prayerful study of these principles cannot but result in a more intelligent understanding of the conditions and responsibilities of Christian life. If God calls us to membership in his Church, he calls us to the highest grade of membership of which we are capable. The philosophy of revivals on the divine side is, indeed, deep, mysterious, awe-inspiring; but it is sufficiently known to arouse our latent energies and inspire us with confidence that we shall not labor in vain. It produces in us a fixed and earnest purpose to do our best as the chosen agents of God. It greatly helps us to bring ourselves into harmony with God's plans and purposes and thus avoid the risk of wasting our energies in vague and haphazard methods of work. It secures effiiency, and nothing is more absolutely essential to the success and growth of the Church than efficient work and administration.

We need strongly and steadily to magnify the agency of the Holy Spirit in the conviction and conversion of men. It is God's work, and it is marvelous in our sight. Every other force or agency, instrumentality is subordinate to this. Men may be interested, enlightened, and greatly stirred by human argument and appeal, but there is a point in every conversion where human agency ends and the divine agency begins. We are not expected to enter into the secrets of the Almighty and make known the profound mysteries of his relation s and dealings with men. We cannot by searchings and investigations discover the hidden processes by which the soul is stamped anew wth the likeness of God. Mathematics and metaphysics entirely fail us when we come to investigate great spiritual phenomena. But the Holy Spirit does not make our efficency in his service contingent upon our comprehension of his methods in working the good pleasure of his own will. We may do our full part to revive the Church without waiting for a profounder knowledge or a conscious endowment. With remarkable aptitude it has been said: "Fitness for work comes in working, not in waiting for some antecedent miraculous preparation. Power from on high is revealed in those who work, not in those who wait while duty calls." The earnest, active worker receives in largest measure the promised gift. Thus the divine and human agencies are brought into direct and immediate cooperation. Each supplements and aids the other. Both flow together through the same channel of spiritual activity. Minds are convinced, souls are regenerated, the Church is revived, the kingdom of heaven is realized under all the forms of temporal things. "Science has no ladder to scale these heights, philosophy no plummet to sound these depths."—Christian Advocate.

THE FOUR PLANTS.

An old teacher was once taking a walk through a forest with a scholar by his side. The old man suddenly stopped and pointed to four plants close at hand. The first was just beginning to peep above the ground, the second had rooted itself pretty well into the earth, the third was a full-sized tree. The tutor said to his young companion:

"Pull up the first."

The boy easily pulled it up with his fingers.

"Now pull up the second."

The youth obeyed, but not so easily.

"And now the third."

The boy had to put forth all his strength and use both arms before he succeeded in uprooting it.

"And now," soid the master, "try your hand upon the fourth."

But lo! the trunk of the tall tree, grasped in the arms of the youth, hardly shook its leaves.

"This, my son, is just what happens with our bad habits. When they are young we can cast them out readily, but only divine power can uproot them when they are old."—Selected.

PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENTS.

Randolph Ct .....March 22 to 23.
Julian on the night of .....March 23.
Mount Pleasant .....March 24
Liberty and Liberty G. .....March 25.
Siler City Ct. .....March 26 to 28.
Alamance Ct .....March 29 to 30
Saxapahaw Ct .....March 31, April 1.
Mt. Hermon .....April 2, and 3.
Burlington Sta. .....April 4.
Graham and Haw River ..April 5 and 6.
Fairview and Gibsonville.. April 6 and 7.
Vance Ct .....April 11 to 13
Gillburg ... ...April 13 at 3 P. M.
Henderson ..... April 13 at night.
Granville .....April 15 to 16
Halifax .....April 17 to 18
Littleton .....April 19 to 21
Richland .....April 25 to 26
Why Not .....April 27 to 29
Flat Rock Ct. ..... May 3 to 4
Stanley Ct. ..... May 9 to 10
Monroe Ct. ..... May 13 to 15
Mecklenburg Ct. ..... May 16 to 18
Charlotte, ... May 19

Brethren, it only costs you one cent to publish my plan for your charge. Won't you please do so for my sake. C. A. C.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

Randolph Circuit.

On Friday, the 21st, I left High Point for Shiloh, where the second quarterly conference was to meet on Saturday, the 22nd. I spent Friday night with Bro. H. Whiteley and reached Shiloh in time to preach at 11 A. M. A very good congregation. After service came the dinner.

At 2 o'clock we met for conference. Not a large attendance of the officials present. Those present transacted the business. The reports were fairly good except the financial report, and that was made by the pastor, which I consider a mistake. Each steward ought to make his own report, and knowing they are expected to do so, they will more than likely have more to report. The pastor served notice that the stewards would be expected from now on to make their own report. We had a very helpful and interesting conference.

My appointment was at Gray's Chapel on Sunday at 11 A. M., where I met a good congregation who heard the message with interest. Bro. L. and I took dinner with Mr. Dougan Brower, and spent only a few pleasant moments in their nice home. We soon reached Bethel, where I preached to a neat, nice and intelligent looking congregation, and they appeared to be interested in the word preached.

I failed to go to Level Cross, and the pastor can explain the reason why.

This is a compact charge and has a membership of over five hundred, with only four appointments, and the three churches are good buildings, and ought to be one of the best fields of labor, and if the membership would take the interest they should in the work, especially as to the business and the finance, they would be surprised at their growth and development. I found at one of the churches that the people would be glad to have the pastor to visit in their section more. I am sure the pastor will have a better chance, as his school has recently closed, and he is anxious to do a good year's work. Thanks to Bro. and Sister Lassiter for their kindness. The three churches visited paid claim.

Mt. Pleasant Circuit

On Monday at 11 A. M. I filled my appointment at Mt. Pleasant, preached to a splendid audience for Monday, and several said they enjoyed the service. The singing was good, and I am sure good will be accomplished by the service. Took dinner with the pastor and wife.

At 3 o'clock we were at Pleasant Union, where we found a small but appreciative audience. These are a splendid people and it is a pleasure to preach to them. The singing was also good here. Bro. Troxler is a singer himself. This charge is composed of only two appointments. Mt. Pleasant is a strong church financially, and could support a pastor nicely if they just knew it. They have a nice church house to worship in. It was nice and clean, and it was a pleasure to preach to them.

The pleasant Union people have a new church complete outside and in, well supplied with new, comfortable seats, and all paid for. This is one of the most compact and best fields I have visited, and Bro. T. or any other pastor can congratulate himself on being assigned to the Mt. Pleasant charge. Some more pastoral work would be advantageous on this field. Claims paid.

Bros. Lassiter and Troxler are popular, and are anxious to do a good year's work. I bespeak for them co-operation.

C. A. Cecil.

March 25.

Union Grove, Orange Circuit.

The death angel has again entered our ranks and claimed one of our members. March 11, at the home of his father-in-law, Mr. Albert Lloyd, the spirit of James L. Neville was called from time into eternity. Mr. Neville gave his heart to God in early boyhood and united with Cedar Grove M. E. Church, where he remained until, three years ago, he moved into our community and brought his letter and united with Union Grove. He was a school teacher until his health failed with that fatal disease, consumption.

He was jovial, congenial, and fitted to be and would have been so useful in the church. He spoke often before he passed away of his hope beyond, and gave instruction to loved ones. How beautiful the death of a Christian! How true the lines: "How blest the righteous when he dies, When sinks a weary soul to rest"!

The burial services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. R. C. Stubbins, assisted by Rev. Thomas Strowd, of the Christian church, and his body was left to rest in Bethel cemetery. He leaves a wife and two bright little boys, a father and several brothers and sisters to mourn his loss.

May we all live so that when we are called we will be prepared to meet God. It is more serious to live than to die. If we live as God wants us to while in this world, we have no fear of death or the judgment. May God so help us all to live, and keep the widow and fatherless in the hollow of His hand. A Friend.

Winston.

Bro. and Sister W. R. Shover united with us Sunday by letter from the A. R. P. Church. Glad to get them—splendid young people. Came here from Charlotte.

Will begin remodeling of church soon.

March 25. S. W. Taylor.

Monroe Circuit.

We live in Pageland, S. C., and this is a city that cannot be hid because we have a splendid school, four churches, twenty stores, bank, etc. Pageland is situated on C & L R. R., and although she is only six years old, is the largest town between Chesterfield and Crowburg, with about 1000 inhabitants. Her daughters are as beautiful as Tirzah and as wise as serpents, because many of them have never married. Her merchants are wise, for they are seeking that they may find, but they are not like the goats that appeared from Gilead (although some of them wear long beards) for they have been farmers for the most part and know how to work, sympathize and love.

Our church, Rose Hill, is like an electric car, with polite conductors and reliable motormen, and the passengers do not forget to pay their fare. The power is from an unseen source (the great Power House above). Bro. J. A. Turner is superintendent of the Sabbath school and he is efficient in the discharge of duty.

Mt. Moriah is shaking herself like a giant in a valley of dry bones. She is to have a new roof, recess pulpit and belfry in the near future, paying her fare also. Paid on pastor's salary March 9, $9.30. Some one has said the Mt. Moriah people were very peculiar. We say yes, and zealous of good works, too, with proper treatment. Bro. Jerome is S. S. superintendent, and a good one too. Bro. J. F. Little and Bro. Lonnie Braswell stewards, so that passengers will have to pay their fare or get into another car sure.

Bethesda has a fine Sabbath school, Bro. W. W. Cully superintendent.

Our second quarterly conference will convene at Rose Hill April 11 at 3 o'clock.

O. D. Stacy.

UWHARRIE CIRCUIT.

Dear Bro. McCulloch:

I want to say a few things through the Herald, although I am in very poor condition tonight to write, as I have been sick all day and missed my appointment, and I always feel hurt if I miss one; but sometimes it can't be helped. The will of the Lord be done, not mine. Dear people, I have served you he best I could, though very poorly, but I have learned to love you, and it will ever afford me much pleasure to think of you, and I feel as Bro. Suits said to me, that some of the cream of the earth is on this circuit, and it seems to me that this people ought to come to the front.

We were so glad to have Bro. C. A. Cecil on this work. I feel that his visit has already been a great help to me; for I enjoyed so much his splendid sermons, and I feel his visit helped us in making some plans as to our finances; that is one great trouble: we want the Lord's business to run itself, for we feel like it takes us all the time to look after our own business. I trust we may become more concerned about the Lord's business and then he will bless that we call our own.

As I shall start to Richmond, Va., on the 25th, I want to say that I can never forget the many kindnesses you dear people have shown me since I have been in your midst. I will say, May Heaven's richest blessings attend your voyage in life, and if I never get back to serve you on earth I shall look for many of you to come to that home beyond the skies. I ask an interest in the prayers of those who read this, that the Lord's will may be done, and that the Lord may take care of my dear wife and children while on earth, and finally bring us all to Himself in Glory. Praying God's blessing upon all,

Your brother in Christ,

J. B. Trogdon.

CONCORD

Pastor Suits preached an excellent sermon on the resurrection of Christ last Sunday. We were glad to see our S. S. larger yesterday than it has been for some time. The children who are members of the Busy Bees occupied the preaching hour last night with Easter songs and recitations; they deserve much credit for their singing and reciting. They surely did well for the practice they had.

We were very much delighted to have Miss Grace Harris and Mr. Stuart Westmoreland of Thomasville to worship with us yesterday; they were guests of our pastor and wife. We hope to have them with us again. We are glad to report that Miss Lettie Little has returned from the hospital and is improving very rapidly. We have missed her so much in church work.

Reporter.

March 24.

CHESTNUT RIDGE, ORANGE CT.

Sunday, March 9, we organized a Ladies' Aid Society with nine members. The officers are: Mrs. R. C. Stubbins, Pres.; Mrs. C. H. Jones, Vice Pres.; Mrs. Mary Hobbs, Treas.; Miss Fannie Thompson, Sec. We held our first meeting Thursday afternoon at the parsonage. After the meeting Mrs. Stubbins served coffee and cake, which were enjoyed very much.

Yesterday at 10 A. M. we organized Sunday school with the following officers: Messrs. G. F. Crutchfield, Supt.; S. N. Hayes, Asst. Supt.; C. H. Jones, Sec. and Treas.; Ivey Crutchfield, Asst. Sec. and Treas.; Organists, Miss Sophina Brown and Miss Wellie Stroud.

Teachers: Mr. D. M. Pender, Mrs. T. P. Cheek, Mr. G. F. Crutchfield, Mr. S. N. Hayes, Miss Sophina Brown, Miss Fannie Thompson.

We are expecting good work in the S. S. this year. At 11 o'clock Bro. Stubbins preached an excellent and helpful sermon from the words, "If a man die shall he live again?"

We were glad to have Mr. and Mrs. John Nicholson of Mebane worship with us yesterday. We were sorry to learn that Mrs. Mary Hobbs is quite sick. We hope for her a speedy recovery.

F. T., Reporter.

March 24.

PROGRAM OF SUNDAY SCHOOL RALLY

To be Held at Bethesda Church, Halifax Circuit, April 13, 1913.

FORENOON, 11:00 O'CLOCK

Song Service.

Prayer.

Introductory remarks by pastor.

"Possibilities of the S. S. for Developing Churches," Mr. S. R. Harris.

Music.

"The S. S. a Recruiting Agency for Church Members," Mr. E. A. Carter.

"The Duty of Parents to the S. S." Rev. J. E. Pritchard.

AFTERNOON, 2:00 O'CLOCK

Song.

"How Can We Interest More People in the S. S.?" Mr. R. A. Hardy; followed by open parliament.

Song.

"What Constitutes a Good S. S. Superintendent," Mr. E. L. Lee; followed by open parliament.

Song.

"What Constitutes a Good S. S. Teacher," Mr. Eli Bellamy; followed by open parliament.

"What Constitutes a Good S. S." Dr. J. H. Harrison.

Song.

"How Can We Remove the Difficulties to a Good Sunday School?" Mr. S. R. Harris.

Benediction.

HARMONY GROVE.

Bro. Austin was with us Sunday and preached a good sermon. We have had Sunday school all winter, but on account of the measles the attendance was small some Sundays. But the people have about gotten over them now, and we hope to have a better school. We want to raise money this summer to get a bell for the church.

Bro. James Jarvis has been very sick. His son William returned home yesterday evening from California, having received a telegram that his father was ill. We were glad he found his father better. We hope to see Bro. Jarvis out again in a short time.

Reporter.

March 25.

GRANVILLE

President's Appointments

Rehobeth, Monday, April 14, 2:30 P.M.

Mt. Carmel, Monday, April 14, 8:00 P.M.

Antioch, Tuesday, April 15, 3:00 P.M.

Union Chapel, Wednesday, 3:00 P.M.

These appointments were made for some of the churches without seeing but a few of the brethren. Afternoon meetings have been announced in most cases so that if it is a season for field work you will only lose part of the day. Let every member be present that possibly can and invite your friends to come with you, for I am sure you will be well repaid for coming out.

N. G. Bethea.

RECEIVED ON BROTHERHOOD CALL NO. 15.

N. G. Bethea, T. A. Plyler, G. F. Millaway and G. W. Holmes three dollars each. Total to date $78.

J. A. Burgess, Sec. Treas.

WORLD'S SUNDAY SCHOOL CMMISSION TO THE ORIENT.—I.

By. C. E. Willbur.

The religious and secular press have given full notice of the going out of this commission in the interest of Sunday schools and missions; but this is the first communication giving a full account of its plans and methods of operation, together with its first activities, on the Pacific Coast, incidental to its departure from San Francisco. Other letters will follow giving a description of the personnel of the commission, and its work in the foreign fields.

Its Genesis.

Few great world movements or inventions flash upon the age like a meteor into a midnight sky, without premonition; they come as the sun into the morning heavens, preceded by a long and brilliant dawn. So true is this that is is noted in the realm of pure science that the method of fluxions, in the differential calculus, was demonstrated by Newton, in England, and by Leibnitz, in Germany, at approximately the same time. So true is this in applied science, that Gutenburg and Coster, one in Germany and the other in Holland, made the discovery of the art of printing from movable type independently at the same time. And, in later times, the courts have had to be called in to determine who had the prior right to the emoluments coming from the invention of the telephone. The point reached by progress in these directions was such that, before the next step could be taken, these things must be seen. They were in the air and it only required a sharp sense to discern them. Two independent observers saw them at the same time.

The World's Sunday School Commission was not a movement without a preparation. Individuals had before gone to the Far East in the interests of the Sunday school and missions, and groups of Sunday school people and business men had before touched the missions and mission Sunday school of the Near East, notably the two ships that went to the Fifth World's Sunday School Commission at Rome, in 1907, touching at the Azores, Madeira, Gibraltar and Algiers. These had prepared the way for the larger movement. The necessity for it and the practicability of it were in the very air; and when it was proposed at Rome, it was at once heartily approved and authorized, others, also, plainly seeing its desirability.

Under the authority of the World's Sunday School Association six commissions were appointed, namely, "To Continental Europe," "To South Africa," "To India and Malaysia," "To the Orient," "To Latin America," "To Mohammedan Lands." These commissions are to study the conditions, extent, needs, and opportunties of Sunday school work throughout the world. Elaborate questionaries have been prepared and sent out to missionaries and others in all these fields. The answer to these will be collected and an exhaustive report will be made by each commission to the World's Sunday School Convention that meets at Zurich, Switzerland, July 8 to 15. It is expected that much useful data will be collected that will be of great use to denominational mission boards in planning a strong forward movement along the line of the most advanced methods in Sunday school work.

But in addition to the above, in connection with the commission to the Orient, covering Japan, Korea, China, the Philippines and Hawaii, it was determined to send out a body of men to represent the commission, and come into actual, personal contact with the people it seeks to know and help. The chairman of this general commission to the Orient is Mr. H. J. Heinz, of Pittsburgh, and the secretary is Mr. Frank L. Brown, of Brooklyn. It was quite appropriate that these gentlemen should also hear the personal commission, as Mr. Heinz was the first to suggest such an apostolic expedition, and Mr. Brown has twice been through the Orient in the interest of the modern Sunday school movement.

Ite Aim.

The smaller "commission," as we shall continue to call it, is made up of two distinct groups of people—distinct in their form of service, yet having a common aim. The first group is Sunday school specialists, covering all parts of the modern Sunday school movement. The prominence given to education in mission fields has produced a large number of native Christian workers who are fully able to conduct Sunday schools in the mission stations and native churches by the most approved methods, but they are not fully trained in these methods. This group of the commission has arranged to hold conventions and institutes in all the leading cities, in order to bring the very latest proved and approved things to their hands. A convention will be held in Honolulu, and in Japan, Korea, and China, the fuller program of conventions and institutes will be carried out. Five weeks will be given to Japan, four to China, and two to Korea. A similar work is now being done in the Phillippines, Hong Kong and Canton by a smaller number of workers. These went earlier because of the weather conditions that will prevail in these localities at the time of the visit of the larger body. They will join the general body in Japan, and assist in its work.

The second group of the commission is made up of business and professional men of wealth and standing in their circles. While their aim is the same as that of the other group, they go about reaching it in a different way. There exists to some extent in the Orient the idea that the Sunday school is a work for children by women, and that there is no place in it for strong men. By a sort of object lesson this group hopes to teach, in a most impressive way, that the Sunday school opens a field for service for the best and strongest. This group goes out with strong letters of commendation and introduction to the chambers of commerce and boards of trade in the various cities they will visit. These letters are written by such men as President Wilson, ex-President Taft, former secretary of state, P. C. Knox, Hon. Chas. W. Fairbanks, Hon. John Wanamaker, and others. In this way they hope to meet business men in those countries who occupy relatively the same position that they themselves do at home. This association they will turn to the interest of the Sunday school. This method constitutes an entirely different method of approach to the Sunday school missionary problem, and it is hoped that it will go far toward its solution. Business and commercial relations are now so thoroughly established between these countries and our own that it is thought they may constitute a new and powerful point of contact between the civilization of the East and West.

This commission will also do the work assigned to the general commission on the Orient. It will combine the results of its questionaries with its personal observations, and make a general report to the convention at Zurich.

At the Golden Gate.

The twin, and in some sense, rival cities of the "Golden Gate," entertained the commission graciously and royally. The Oakland Chamber of Commerce gave a luncheon at the magnificent Oakland Hotel to the men of the party, of which three hundred partook. Mr. W. T. Gibson, chairman of the chamber, presided, and addresses were made representing both the commission and the chamber of commerce. The ladies of the party were entertained by the Oakland Primary Garden Union, at the "Capwell." More than sixty sat down to richly loaded and beautifully decorated table. At the conclusion of the luncheons, the entire party was taken on an auto ride through Oakland and suburbs. In the evening a reception was tendered the commissioners by the Alameda County Sunday School Association, in the First Congregational church, at which a large number greeted the party and wished them "Godspeed."

The courtesy of San Francisco was first shown to the commission by conducting it through Chinatown, not through the slums, as many are led, but to a demonstration of the power of the gospel as exhibited in representatives of all the mission schools carried on among Orientals Japanese, Chinese, Koreans, Hindoos, Filipinos—all were seen. They assembled in the large audience room of the Presbyterian mission, and from the said (Chinese Presbyterian elders, who saw that every one had a seat, to the little tot of four summers, who recited directly, and without a break, the books of the Bible, it was a particular exhibition of what Christianity can do for the old and the young, even of the Orientals. In the evening a reception was tendered to the commission by the California State Association, the County Union, and the First Congregational church. The members of the commission spoke, music was rendered and refreshments were served.

The Paific Coast Problem.

As discerned by the commission, it can be stated in a few words. But four and a half per cent of the people in this great city are in the Protestant churches; the remainder are Catholics, Jews, Orientals and Europeans. The Christians here are fighting the battle of the whole country, and, as doing such, they ought to have the sympathy prayer, financial help of the whole country, especially in the Sunday school work. Twelve counties of the state have no county organization, and in one large county there is not a single school or church. Small sums in the hands of the two state associations would ensure schools and churches. Only three and one-half per cent of the people, as a whole, are in Sunday schools.

Some think a losing battle is being fought here, when the small percentage above is considered; but there is hope in this, the type of Christian life is more intense here, because it is not fashionable to go to church, and those who go do so beause they love to go, and go for real service. Hence a less number count for more than a large number of nominal Christians.

THE CALL.
By Victor P. Hammer.

Hear ye! Hear ye! The sowing time is here.
The fertile fields are large; the day is near
When, man to man, strength to strength, each one must Exale the powers of his dominion from the dust,
Out of which substance springs the potencies
To be controlled by human agencies.

If manhood stops short, or lingers, in light;
Or strolls, in idleness; or gropes, in night;
The leepless dreams of its appointed hope
Mut ever strive outide the greater scope
Of larger lives—the realm where men grow great
By act and deed; not by decree of fate.

To him whose outward counsels are at rest,
But richest veins of wisdom in his breast,—
That man can no attainments reach, unless
He mines the inner man for wealth to bless
Mankind; and thus become an honored name
By worthy means and ends that lead to fame.

Yet he who has such riches in his soul,
And bears them ever onward to the goal,
Imparting wisdom, giving wealth, will touch
The key of usefulness in life; and much
Increase will be the yield, for service done,
With payment in full when his journey's run.

Step forth, as pilgrims bold on foreign shores,
(The pilgrimage starts at your neghbors' doors),
And watch, like sentinels at night, and go
Tthe rounds and guard the camps against the foe.
Allow no margin on what is not right,
For he who advances wrong will lose the fight.

You fight for glory, in that which is done,
And strive for honor, for it must be won;
You hunt for treasures, but find few at most,
And seek for knowledge, of which people boast;—
Compared, the task is nothing to the test:
To win, the runner must provide the best.

Those holden memories we cherish yet,
Will pass away, like a sun that has set;
But study the greatness the world has had—
The transient and lasting, the good, the bad;
And, out of these gleanings, nothing that's known
Has yet been blessed without giving its own.

Though life is so brief, and fading away;
To some it's dawn; some noon; some, ending day;
Yet it's never too late for missions of good,
So try what you may, or do what you would,
The trip on life's journey, with a soon start,
Is far more certain than late to depart.

—The following from The Burlington News March 12 wll be familiar to Sun readers who know much of the history of "The White Pilgrim."

The death of Mrs. Will Boone a few weeks ago recalled to the mind of older people of this country a well known character in his day, Rev. Joseph Thomas, "The White Pilgrim."

Rev. Thomas was born in this county, (then Orange) near Hawfields, in 1791 and died in 1835. He was Christian minister who was what might be termed a traveling evangelist. He belonged to the old school of ministers and went all over county preaching day and night wherever he could get a crowd together. It is said that he was a strong preacher and always had a house full. He felt called upon to put off the regular clothes worn by others and wore white clothes, hence his name, "The White Pilgrim."

He went from this county to Virginia and afterwards went further north, and while doing his work as a preacher was taken with smallpox and died in New Jersey.

—We beg the pardon of Peter Slewfoot and other readers for failing to publish Bro. Bethea's "big fish" story last week. It was an oversight. It is given this week on page 11.

VANCE CIRCUIT

President's Appointments

April 11 at New Hope, 11 o'clock.

April 11 at Flat Rock, 2:30 o'clock.

April 12 at Dabney, 1 o'clock.

April 13 at Dabney in the morning at 11 o'clock, and at Gillburg in the evening at 3 o'clock. J. A. Burgess, Pas.

LINCOLNTON.

Sunday school 112, collection $2.57. Our Easter service was a success from start to finish. The congregation was estimated at five to six hundred -the largest gathering we have ever had at our new church here. The collection was not as good as we wished for. It was $5.00. Rev. H. E. Waldrop made the address on the Resurrection and Home Mission work which was splendid. We are glad to have Bro. Waldrop with us. D. B. J.

UNION CHAPEL, GRANVILLE CT.

Second Sunday P. M. of this month our pastor, Rev. N. G. Bethea, preached for us, the first time since he returned home from Florida. We were all glad to have him and his family with us again.

Yesterday he was with us again and gave us a very fine sermon on "Godly Conversation." It was a sermon that appealed to all. We were glad to have Miss Gertrude Rogers, of Lillington, to worship with us.

Reporter.

SPRING CHURCH.

We are doing everything possible for the upbuilding of our church and Sunday school. The school is progressing, but there are several people in the community who do not attend any Sunday school, and these should be reached.

Our pastor, Bro. Ledbetter, gave us one of his refreshing, helpful and delightful sermons last Sunday morning. He read for the lesson a part of the sixteenth chapter of St. Mark, out of which he took his text. After the sermon, he and Miss Mabel Stuart sang a duet, "Lord, Make Me Wise," which was very enjoyable.

Bro. Ledbetter will preach here again next Sunday at 11 o'clock, but will not fill his appointment here next second Sunday afternoon, as he will be at one of his churches at an Easter service.

We held our Easter service here Sunday afternoon. The children rendered their pieces fairly well. Much credit is due Mesdames H. E. Vassar and C. E. Dimick for the training. Owing to sickness in the community the congregation was rather small. A collection was taken for home missions which amounted to $4.31.

The second quarterly conference will be held here Saturday before the second Sunday in April at 11 o'clock. All official members are requested to be present, and as many others as will.

Nannie Massey.

March 25.

FRIENDSHIP, FALLSTON CIRCUIT.

Since our first quarterly conference, Rev. D. A. Highfill has come to our relief. He has filled all his appointments. Preaches first and second Sundays at Lawndale; third and fourth Sundays at Friendship. Bro. Highfill gave us a most excellent sermon last Sunday emphasizing the importance and necessity of a healthy religion that we may be able to endure sound doctrine; also plainly set forth the elements that compose a healthy religion. His sermons are timely, practical, spiritual and to the point. It is said that some things grow better by age, and we are sure Bro. Highfill is one of those things. We wish his family much comfort and pleasure in his absence, for we are sure his presence with them affords them more than this.

Our second quarterly conference will be at Lawndale at two o'clock on Saturday before the second Sunday in April.

Long live the Herald.

Fallston, N. C. J. D. Morris.

Ringwood, Halifax Ct.

Our pastor, Rev. J. E. Pritchard, filled his regular appointment here Sunday. This being Easter he gave us an Easter sermon, choosing for his text; But thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. It is needless to say to those who have heard him that he preached a good sermon. We feel fortunate in having Bro. Pritchard for our pastor this year. The congregations are not as large as they should be. I can't understand why people, and especially, church members, will not attend church.

We missed Mr. J. W. Neville, one of our members, at church Sunday. He has gone to Asheville in quest of health. Hope he may soon return and be in our midst again.

We are looking forward to the coming of our president ,and hope we'll have a large congregation out to hear him. Much success to the Herald and its readers.

J. E. Whitehurst.

Lincoln Circuit.

We are getting along all right on the Lincoln circuit. Every church on the work organized Sunday school on Sunday, March 23rd. Hope to see the people all turn out. I feel sure that many are sorry that they stopped the Sunday school last fall. Hope the time will come when the rural districts will have enthusiasm enough to run the S. S. all winter. They don't fail in running the public school, and I am glad they don't. But why not run the S. S. and teach them the way of eternal life as well as book knowledge?

Hope our S. S. will get a start this summer that will help them to push through the mud next winter. And it won't take an over flush of religion to run S. S. all the year round.

There will be class meeting once a month at all our churches beginning in April. Think this will help the communities as well as the Sunday school.

We were glad to have Rev. R. G. Short with us and to preach to us at Bess Chapel on Sunday morning, and after preaching he gave us an inspiring Sunday school talk.

We have had good attendance at all our appointments this month.

Bro. Frank Leonheardt who has been very sick is better.

We were glad to be in our new church at Lincolnton on the glad Easter day, and see the well rendered Easter service. I was glad to meet the good people of that church again; there must have been five hundred people there. Not near all of them could be seated in the church. Our church there is still moving forward.

H. E. Waldrop.

Asheville.

Just a few items from the "Land of the Sky". The Ladies' Aid held an Easter Sale in the window of one of the grocery stores on the Square the day before Easter, and cleared twenty dollars. The Sunday school held its annual Easter entertainment on Sunday night. Had a splendid congregation. The offering amounted to fourteen dollars. Sixteen new scholars have come into the Sunday school so far this month. We are expecting several more in the next couple of weeks. The first Sunday in April is assessment Sunday with us. We expect to raise all the Conference claims on that day. More than half the amount needed has been pledged, so we do not anticipate any trouble raising the balance by or on that day. Mrs. Straton, a former teacher in the Sunday school, who is living in Florida, is spending a few days in Asheville. Her former schools are to give her a reception one night this week. After an epidemic of divers diseases that attacked the old as well as the young, our sick folks are about all well.

C. W. B.

Burlington.

The annual Easter exercise was held on Sunday night, and was enjoyed by a large congregation who declared unanimously that it was the most interesting program they had ever seen in our town. The offering is to be forwarded to the Board of Home Missions and is surely not a due recompense for the elaborate occasion.

Rev. G. F. Millaway has been preaching some of his fine sermons for the past week, but the church does not seem to be in the spirit of a revival as yet, nevertheless it is hoped that the continued service this week will be most fruitful.

Mr. G. L. Amick has been very anxious the past week on account of the serious illness of his son Aubrey. We are glad to note that his condition now is much improved.

Our Sunday school is still growing higher, the attendance Sunday was 224 and the collection $59.17. We call this quite a showing from the standpoint of finances, with a good attendance also.

Dr. Hornaday has returned from the hospital since our last report and he looks as well as could be expected after such a serious illness. The Baracas are glad to welcome him back to the chair. He is now spending some few days at his country home in hopes of a thorough recovery.

T. P. D.

Baraca Class.

Sunday March 23, attendance 40, offering $2.04. The Baracas of the city had the pleasure of listening to Mr. J. D. Berry on Sunday evening at the Baptist church. It will be remembered that Mr. Berry is the president of the Baraca work in the State.

C. B. W.

Tabernacle.

Moriah and Tabernacle Sunday schools each held Easter services. Good attendance, good exercise, good collection. Tabernacle, Julian, and Moriah will each pay Home Mission claim in full at this time. I think Shady Grove will also.

Shady Grove, Moriah, and Julian each made a contribution to the W. F. M. S. Thank offering fund.

Tabernacle and Moriah are planning to send representatives to the Asheboro meeting April 8-11.

The David Livingstone celebration has been observed in a rather meager way at some of my churches and will be in a more elaborate way at the others.

T. M. Johnson.

March 26, 1913.

—Among the visitors at Grace church last Sunday were the parents of Mrs. Dr. Johnson, who live in Virginia.

WHY NOT DO IT?

The Annual Conference has ordered the collection for Church Extension taken during the month of March. A number of pastors of mission fields are dependent upon the Church Extension fund for a part of their salaries; some of them for a large part. They are frequently inconvenienced if the Treasurer cannot pay them until the end of the year. Every pastor knows how this is.

Why Not do it Right?

If the Conference has ordered the collection taken during March; if the money is needed to afford our mission pastors a living; if the right way to get it is according to Conference instructions, why not do it right?

Why not do it right now?

J. Norman Wills, Treas.

OF SUPREME IMPORTANCE

Our missionaries, with an insistence born of overwhelming conviction that our Nagoya College's maintenance, irrespective of considerations of growth, is being seriously imperiled by delay in purchasing the piece of land adjoining our property, have implored us in the most pressing manner for permission to buy the land, and mortgage it for a balance payable in three annual payments.

Our Board is restricted by the debt clause in the Discipline, and yet so convinced is every member that the land is an absolute necessity, and ought to be bought immediately, that two members agreed to give fifty dollars each annually for three years, and all the members were to seek to obtain other contributors in order to ascertain the possible response of the church to this appeal with the hope that we may secure enough pledges to immediately close the deal.

I most earnestly appeal to our supporters to come to the relief of our Board by sending me their pledge for fifty dollars annually for three years. Sixty persons thus contributing will provide the amount.

Nothing so urgent, so vital to our Japan work has ever come to us. Immediate action is demanded. To lose this opportunity will seriously cripple that growing institution which now has 397 young men enrolled, for more land must be secured to sustain the present work by government requirement. Help, HELP, HELP NOW!

Fred C. Klein, Cor. Sec.-Treas.
316 N. Charles St., Baltimore, Md.

BRANCH MEETING OF WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY IN ASHEBORO, APRIL 10-11.

The Branch Meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Society will be held in Asheboro, April 10 and 11. This immediately follows the Foreign Branch Meeting, which will be the 8th and 9th.

I hope that we may have a good attendance, for this meeting will mean much to the future of the Woman's Home Missionary Society in North Carolina.

Pearl McCulloch,
Cor. Sec. W. H. M. S.

FROM BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

Dear Brother McCulloch:

Birmingham is a great city with about 170,000 people. Many are from North Carolina, many from all other parts of the world. Many who come here are born, bred and indoctrinated in the Methodist Protestant church. When they come here they want a church home. Up to two years ago they had none. The want is now being supplied. The Conference began work here two years ago and placed in the field one of the most active, growing young ministers we have, Rev. T. C. Casaday. He has a good organization of consecrated, enthusiastic members who are going ahead with erecting a church home while the congregation worships in a small brick store. Though cramped and pressed for room, the work has grown in wondrous proportions. The pure, unadulterated Word is invariably preached, and that never returns void, says the Bible. The building was just ready to have the roof put on, when this morning at 3 o'clock a cyclone struck that part of the city and blew down the entire building. They have already set to work to rebuild. We want to ask the readers of your paper to all send a contribution for the repair of what is to be done over and to help finish the church. All contributions will be appreciated. It is the hope to finish and pay for this church by conference. We need some other churches here to take care of our own people and gather in those who love the Methodist Protestant polity and doctrine. Send check to Rev. T. C. Casaday, 1738 Cleveland Avenue, West End, Birmingham, Ala.

Fraternally,
Ira Champion,
Pres. Board Church Extension.

—Bro. Trogdon has the sympathy and prayers of many friends in his stay at the hospital in Richmond. May he find complete relief and ultimate recovery of health.

—The commissions on church union met last week, heard reports of sub-committees, and adjourned to meet again at the call of the chairmen.

—Bro. W. L. Spoon passed through today from his home in Alamance County to Winston, where he has engagement as highway engineer.

SALT-RISING BREAD.

Raising Dough With Newly Discovered Bacteria.

By H. A. Kohman, Senior Fellow of Bread Research, University of Pittsburgh.

[The author holds a fellowship granted by the National Association of Master Bakers for Research on the Chemistry of Bread, under the direction of Prof. Robert Kennedy Duncan.—Editor Scientific American.]

The history of bread extends over incalculable time, and its origin is quite obscured in the mists of antiquity. The words "bread" and "leaven" receive mention in Genesis and Exodus and other books of the Old Testament, indicating that baking as an art was practiced in remote ages. The early discovery of the leaven process was, without a doubt, purely accidental and may be traced to the fact that in eastern countries a mixture of meal and water, if forgotten for a day, will ferment. This simple way of inciting fermentation, together with the advantages of light bread, soon led to the adoption of the leaven process.

Although leaven was used even in ancient times, bread-making methods remained crude and uncertain, and the nature of fermentation was not understood until recent years. It was the classic work of Pasteur in 1857 that proved, beyond any reasonable doubt, that alcoholic fermentation, such as occurs in ordinary bread, owes its origin to one-celled, microscopic plants (yeasts). As the result of this research and others, the manufacture of yeast has become a science, and the old-time leaven has been replaced by the almost perfect product now available. Naturally, the progress in yeast making was followed by revolutions in baking. Yeast has proved to be literally the life of the baking business, and has made it one of the world's great industries.

While the method of preparing bread with yeast has been extensively investigated, and the function of this micro-organism in bread is thoroughly understood, salt-rising bread has been peculiarly neglected. If we search the literature upon bread, we shall find volumes upon its preparation by means of yeast—and a mere smattering upon salt-rising methods. Yeast bread is made upon scientific principles, but the methods for the salt-rising type are as crude and uncertain as they were centuries ago! The housewife and the baker still rely upon the old-fashioned "emptins," and to them it is a matter of speculation why these so often fail to "riz." Yet with many people salt-rising bread is the favorite bread. Ex-Governor Stubbs of Kansas is intensely fond of it, and praises its strength-giving powers. He is so fond of this bread that he induced his daughter to learn to make it by promising her a valuable prize should success crown her efforts. At first she met with frequent failures, and at times was counseled to throw a batch out to the chickens.

There is no consensus of opinion in the literature upon salt-rising bread. Most of the writers maintain that the gas formation which aerates this bread owes its origin to "wild" yeasts that accidentally get into the batch from the air or ingredients used. Necessarily, then, it is a matter of chance as to whether the bread will or will not rise, and, indeed, failures are not uncommon. Some writers speak of a spontaneous fermentation and ferments, but do not specify what the germs are.

With the view of putting the preparation of salt-rising bread upon a scientific basis, a thorough investigation was undertaken in the Department of Industrial Research in the University of Kansas, and completed in a similar department in the University of Pittsburgh. In this investigation surprisingly interesting results were obtained. A microscopic study of the "emptins" revealed the fact that it is not yeast at all, as has been maintained, but certain bacteria that raise this bread. From the teeming flora of bacteria that occur in salt-rising dough, it was possible, with extreme difficulty and after many failures, to isolate a bacillus, which by itself can be used in making salt-rising bread. Not only was this bacillus tried in the laboratory, but in the home and bakers as well. A number of housewives used it with continued success, and in a modern, up-to-date bakery, where failures had been frequent, a month's trial gave perfect uniformity of bread from day to day. As the discovery of yeast by Pasteur led to revolutions in the manufacture of yeast and bread making, it does not seem unlikely that the discovery of this bacillus, which is an exact paralalel, will revolutionize the manufacture of salt-rising bread.

The idea of making bread with bacteria need seem neither dangerous nor distasteful. A bacillus may be more "dangerous than a bullet," but not necessarily so. There are good ones and bad ones. Each species is specific in its action. They cause our most dreaded diseases, it is true, but they also make our vinegar, ripen our cheese, flavor our butter and tobacco; and hence no objection can be made to their raising our bread. How does this bacillus differ from yeast? Each consists of small, microscopic cells that must be magnified many times to be visible. Yeast cells are oval-shaped bodies, while the salt-rising bacillus is rod-shaped. The cells of either are independent plants capable of life and reproduction. Yeast multiplies by a process of budding, while the bacilli reproduce by a division of cells known as "fission;" hence the many fission fungi. Reproduction proceeds with surprising rapidity, a cell dividing about every eighteen minutes. From this geometric ratio it has been carefully calculated that if there were sufficient culture media, and growth were not curtailed by prohibitive by-products, the progeny of a single cell would, within a week, literally fill the oceans.

Chemically, this bacillus is easily distinguished from yeast. Yeast, as every one knows, decomposes sugar into carbon dioxide and alcohol, the former of which, owing to its gaseous nature, aerates the bread. Curiously enough, the same chemical changes that aerate bread take place in the production of all alcoholic liquors. The salt-rising bacillus produces no alcohol, and the gas, instead of consisting totally of carbon dioxide, is two-thirds hydrogen and one-third carbon dioxide. Hydrogen is a very light, combustible gas, and in equal quantities will aerate twenty-two times as much bread as carbon dioxide. Owing to its rarity, hydrogen possesses great buoyancy, in consequence of which it is used in filling balloons and dirigibles. It must not be inferred, however, that the lightness of the gas makes proportionally lighter bread. As a matter of fact, salt-rising bread is distinctly solid and coarse grained, resembling more nearly home-made bread than bakers' bread.

The low density of the gases produced by the salt-rising bacillus, coupled with the fact that no alcohol is produced, has an interesting, economic significance. Scientific research has demonstrated beyond doubt that during the normal fermentation and baking of bread, appreciable losses occur. These losses, which have been estimated to approximate four or five per cent of the total nutrient value of the bread, owe their origin largely to the production of alcohol and carbon dioxide, both of which, on account of their volatility, are lost. In salt-rising bread, these losses are less than one per cent. In consequence of this difference, salt-rising bread is richer and sweeter than yeast bread, for the formation of alcohol and carbon dioxide signify consumption of sugar. This difference of three or four per cent in the bread-yield seems a trifling matter when calculated on a bag of flour, but in the aggregate it sums up to a surprising aggregate. Calculated on the Kansas wheat crop, for example, the possible saving is sufficient to cover the maintenance of both the university and the agricultural college.

The microbic flora in salt-rising bread may vary greatly. Frequently Bacillus coli communis occurs in great numbers in the mass of fermenting dough. This organism, as you know, because of its association with typhoid and other disease germs, renders water unfit for use. Yet the occurrence of this bacillus in bread is no cause for alarm, for it perishes in the oven. Furthermore, there is a sure way to prevent its ever occurring. Whenever the liquid used in setting the "emptins" is brought to a boil, Bacillus coli communis will never appear, for it does not form spores and hence perishes in boiling water. The salt-rising bacillus discovered through these experiments, on the other hand, because of its sporulation, withstands this treatment. In the bread, however, even this bacillus, being in the sensitive vegetative state, always perishes in the oven. Hence, salt-rising bread is as sterile as bread made with yeast.

Why eat salt-rising bread? This is a perfectly natural question. Without a doubt, it is largely a matter of taste. The bread is different. With the first bite, one will notice its distinctive odor and flavor, which to many people is decidedly agreeable. Its relative digestibility and wholesomeness remains undetermined. It may be truly said, however, that it is eaten by many with perfect safety, while yeast bread causes indigestion.

This research promises to prove of practical value. Plans are already made by which a leaven, containing the newly-discovered bacillus, will be put upon the market for home and bakery use. The introduction of this product should eliminate failure and improve the quality of salt-rising bread generally.

In the meantime, if any of my readers desire to make salt-rising bread, they will find the following tried recipe a good one:

RECIPE FOR SALT-RISING BREAD.

Yeast.—Take one cupful of sweet milk in a quart cup. Place cup upon stove until milk boils well. Stir into the boiling hot milk five or six teaspoonfuls of white corn-meal to which a pinch of soda has been added. Wrap up well, and set in a warm place overnight, or until it is light.

Sponge.—Pour one and one-fourth cupfuls of water, as hot as the hand can bear, in a bowl, and add about two cupfuls of flour. Then add the yeast from the quart cup, and stir with a spoon until mixed. Place the bowl in a warm place until the sponge rises well, about one to one and one-half hours. A good way to keep the sponge warm is to place the bowl in warm water. The water should be at body temperature or warmer.

Dough.—Take one and one-fourth cupfuls of hot water (almost boiling) and dissolve in it four teaspoonfuls of sugar, one teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of lard, and add six or seven cupfuls of flour. Then add the sponge and mix well. Add more flour if necessary to make a rather soft dough. Mold the bread into loaves at once. Put in a warm place to rise one to one and one-half hours and bake in the usual way.

Salt-rising bread is close grained, and it should not be made as light as other bread.

Some readers may be curious to know why this bread is called "salt-rising" bread. Of course, salt has no leavening power. There is no light on this question in literature. The name was probably chosen because the leavening power was not understood, and it was thought that salt in some myserious way caused the rising.

THE SUFFRAGE LADIES.

Not only Washington, but the whole country has been discussing the woman suffrage parade which took place on the day before President Wilson's inauguration. It was a wonderful demonstration, despite some disorder by rowdies along the line of march. For the lack of order the local police are blamed, and Congress is making an investigation. Before another inauguration it is possible that there will be women in Congress. In California women are taking a very active part in politics and they intend to show at the San Diego Panama Exposition how the cause has been progressing and what good has been accomplished through it. There are two sides to suffrage, as the men are beginning to realize. While the hosts of women were marching along Pennsylvania Avenue on March 3rd, many a man proudly said to his neighbor: "We ought to show the people over in England how things are done here."

Washington, D. C., February 28th,—To aid in the work for attracting desirable settlers to the territory served by the Southern Railway, the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, and affiliated lines, and for locating industries in this territory, an agency of the Land and Industrial Department has been established at Harrisburg, Pa., and W. E. Price, traveling immigration agent connected with the Western Agency in St. Louis, has been promoted and will have charge of the Harrisburg agency, effective March 1st, according to announcement made today by M. V. Richards, Land and Industrial Agent.

(Bro. Bethea sends the following.)

A FEW FACTS CONCERNING Capt. Chas. H. Thompson's Monster of the Deep.

THE ONLY ONE IN THE WORLD.

This creature is not classified in Natural History, but is proclaimed by scientists in natural history to be the most remarkable specimen ever captured. The genus or species is unknown.

The Monster was captured June 1st, 1912, in the vicinity of Knight Key, Fla., after a fight of 39 hours.

Five harpoons and 161 bullets were required to subdue the Monster and it took five days to finally kill it.

It smashed a boat into thousands of pieces; knocked the rudder and propeller off a 31-ton yacht.

Had to be towed 110 miles by a tug.

Length, 45 feet.

Weight, 30,000 pounds.

Circumference, 23 feet 9 inches.

Diameter, 8 feet 3 inches.

Mouth (open) 31 inches.

Mouth 38 inches wide.

Mouth 43 inches deep.

Tongue 40 inches long.

Several thousand teeth.

Had swallowed an animal weighing 1,500 pounds.

The liver weighed 1,700 pounds.

Characteristics of fish and animal—contrary to all laws of natural history.

Tail measured 10 feet from tip to tip.

Pectoral fin 5 feet long, 3 feet wide.

Dorsal fin 3 feet long, 3 feet 9 inches wide.

Gills four feet long.

Hide 3 inches thick, no scales.

Specimen mounted by J. S. Warmbeth, sent to Miami by Smithsonian institute.

While sin takes from a man his healthy taste for what is good and his power to loathe evil, it deludes him with the fancy that he still enjoys them. Temptation, when we yield, is succeeded by self-delusion.—George Adam Smith.

"It is in loving, not in being loved,
The heart is blessed:
It is giving, not in seeking gifts.
We find our quest.
Whatever be thy longing or thy need,
That do thou give.
So shalt thy soul be fed, and thou, indeed,
Shalt truly live."

"Was Methuselah drowned by the flood?"

No; he died seven days before the flood came. "So says the Rabbi Solomon, and the Pirke of Rabbi Eliezer and the Jalkut confirm this opinion."—Wilbur. Chronology of the Bible, p. 44, section 16.—D. B. Turney in Methodist Recorder.

THAT "REMINDER."

In the Herald of Feb. 27th the Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee calls attention to a condition that should not exist. Before going further I wish frankly to confess that I do not know whether I would be a successful pastor as to church finances or not (never having served a field where there was really anything for the pastor to do toward raising claims for General interests). I have sometimes feared that I would not be a success on the harder fields. But one thing I know it would be my privilege, were I on such a field, to try, really try. Another thing I know, when I had tried I would not shrink from making a synoptica report to the Annual Conference of my record and of my effort. Really if I had failed to get the full amount, having tried, I would be glad of an opportunity to make such a report and explain how I had tried and why I had failed.

A third thing I know, if my work were with some business concern and I failed to bring results, I would lose my job, no matter whether my failure was because I had not tried or whether it was because I could not and showed no promise of learning. In the pastorate is the only place I know where one can fail to do what he is assigned to do and hold his job. This is not intended to be offensive and I think is not to the man who tries

T. M. Johnson.

March 25, 1913.

PROGRAM OF NORTH CAROLINA BRANCH W. H. M. S. OF THE METH. PROT. CHURCH

Asheboro, N. C., April 10-11

THURSDAY, 10 A. M.

Praise Service, Mrs. E. B. Siler, Siler City, N. C.
Roll Call.
Greetings—Miss Lela Hayworth, President Asheboro Aux. Y. P. H. M. S.; Miss Ruth Cox, Pres. Mission Band.
Response—Miss May Bain.
Report of Standing Committees.
Report of Corresponding Secretary.
Report of Treasurer.
Appointment of Committees.
Adjournment.

THURSDAY, 2 P. M.

Devotional—Mrs. J. C. Welch.
Roll Call.
Minutes.
Review of Year's Work by the President.
Address: What the Women of the Methodist Episcopal Church Are Doing for Missions—Mrs. W. A. Underwood, Asheboro, N. C.
Address: What the Christian Church is Doing for Missions—Mrs. Jno. T. Moffitt, Asheboro, N. C.
Reports of Auxiliaries.
Unfinished Business.

THURSDAY, 8 P. M.

Devotional—Rev. T. M. Johnson.
Song, by the members of the Asheboro Missionary Societies.
Address: The Orphan's Home at Denton—Miss Etta Auman, Matron of Orphans' Home.
The Children's Home at High Point—Mr. J. M. Millikan, Dr. J. R. Reitzel.
The Kentucky Mountain School—Mrs. A. G. Dixon.

FRIDAY, 10 A. M.

Devotional—Mrs. T. M. Johnson.
Roll Call.
Minutes.
Paper: The Need of Home Missions—Mrs. H. A. Garrett.
Question Box—Miss Lucilla Hardin.
Unfinished Business.

FRIDAY, 2 P. M.

Devotional—Mrs. J. R. Reitzel.
Roll Call.
Minutes.
Reports of Committees.
Election of officers.
Election of delegates to Board Meeting.
Adjournment.

PROGRAM OF MEETING OF NORTH CAROLINA BRANCH W. F. M. S. OF THE M. P. CHURCH

Ashehboro, N. C., April 8-9

TUESDAY, 10:30 A. M.

Consecration Service—Mrs. A. G. Dixon, High Point, Pres. W. F. M. S. of N. C.
Roll Call.
Address of Welcome—Mrs. J. S. Lewis, Pres. Asheboro Auxiliary.
Response—
Address of President.
Appointment of Committees.

AFTERNOON SESSION, 2 O'CLOCK

Devotional Service—Mrs. R. W. Lindley.
Roll Call.
Minutes.
Report of Corresponding Secretary.
Report of Treasurer.
Report of Missionary Record Agent.
Address: What the Presbyterian Church is Doing for Missions—Mrs. A. C. McAlister, Asheboro, N. C.
Address: Missions in the Baptist Church—Mrs. J. C. McMillan, Asheboro, N. C.
Unfinished Business.
Adjournment.

TUESDAY, 8 P. M.

Devotional—Rev. T. J. Ogburn.
Missionary Address—Rev. S. W. Taylor, Winston, N. C.

WEDNESDAY, 10 A. M.

Prayer and Praise Service—Mrs. L. R. Gooch.
Roll Call—Minutes.
Reports from Auxiliaries.
Round Table—Mrs. F. R. Harris, Henderson, N. C.
Glimpses of our Missionaries—Mrs. Harris Glasscock.
Unfinished Business.

WEDNESDAY, 2 P. M.

Praise Service—Mrs. J. F. McCulloch.
Roll Call—Minutes.
Reports of Committees.
Election of Officers.
Miscellaneous Business.
Adjournment.

WEDNESDAY, 8 P. M.

Devotional—Rev. C. H. Whitaker.
Solo—Mrs. T. M. Johnson.
Work of the Women of the Foreign Missionary Society of the M. P. Church—Mrs. J. F. McCulloch, Editor of Missionary Record.
The Board of Foreign Missions—Rev. T. J. Ogburn.

A meeting of the North Carolina Club of Westminster Theological Seminary and Western Maryland College was held in the Seminary Library on Wednesday afternoon, March 12, 1913. The following program was given:

1. Remarks by the President.
2. Oration, Fred Surratt.
3. Reading, Pearl Fishel.
4. "Brer Rabbit" Story, Dr. Forelines.
5. Discussion of the Inauguration, Nat Harrison.
6. Vocal duet, Swaringen and Heitz.
7. Some of My Love Experiences, E. O. Pritchett.

After the program refreshments were served and of course were enjoyed by all. Three new members were elected to membership in the Club: Ruth Carson, Milton Norman and Charles Forlines.

I am sure it will be of interest to all North Carolinians who are interested in Western Maryland to know that Mr. Ernest Nickey has been selected as one of the representatives of Webster Literary Society in the annual contest in June. He has our best wishes for a victory.

Dr. and Mrs. Forlines gave the Club a very cordial invitation to hold the next meeting in their home. This invitation was readily accepted.

Pearl W. Fishel,
Secretary.

Western Maryland College, Westminster,

—A Turkish army of 15,000 men surrendered to the Servians on Monday.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Within the past weeks storms have swept over different parts of the country, causing much loss of life and property. Omaha, Nebraska, is one of the worst sufferers, losing over two hundred lives and many buildings.

—It seems hard for President Wilson to find the right man for ambassador to England. Olney declined and Eliot declines.

—Reidsville has a dark tragedy. Walter Shelton shot and killed his wife. There had been trouble, as they had been separated for some months.

—The much-talked-of type-setting machine invented by Rev. Baylus Cade, a North Carolina Baptist preacher, is said to be completed at last. Mr. Cade has gone to Philadelphia to exhibit it.

—More than 1600 North Carolina boys have enrolled for the Corn Contest this year.

—Baptists are moving for the erection of a forty-thousand dollar church at Wake Forest, the seat of their college.

—C. C. Garrett, ofRaleigh, recently visited his parents near Julian, Bro. George Garrett and wife.

—Mrs. Oscar Teague, of Tampa, Fla., is visiting relatives here.

—First Presbyterian Church of this city contributed $1,831.43 for foreign missions the past week.

—We were pleased to have a call from Bro. Curry, of Graham, on Monday. He was on his way to Seagrove for a rest and visit to his wife's parents.

—President Wilson telegraphed to the mayor of Omaha asking whether help were needed after the destructive storm of Monday. The answer was that local help seemed to be sufficient.

—Persistent effort was made by his attorneys to save Claude Swanson Allen from the death penalty, they even going to Washington to lay the matter before Justices of the Supreme Court. No promises could be gotten.

—The following is an item in the report of the Omaha disaster of Monday: "Cliff Daniels, his wife and their two children, met death together. When soldiers, digging about the ruins of their home, found the four bodies, the two little girls were clasped in the arms of their mother, while the body of the father was over them, as if he had tried to shield them with his own body."

—Bro. Woodford, publishing agent at Baltimore, resigns to enter the ministry. He has succeeded, and gives good reasons for his resignation. Mr. Charles Reiner has been chosen to serve in the place vacated by Bro. Woodford.

—Chief among the flood sufferers of this week is the city of Dayton, Ohio. The water rose 30 feet in the streets, sweeping away houses and drowning men, women, and children by the hundreds. Mr. Patterson, president of the Cash Regisaer Co. recently convicted of violation of the Sherman law, led in the work of relief.

—Mrs. Prof. T. C. Amick underwent a most serious surgical operation in St. Leo Hospital yesterday, but stood it well, and this morning her condition is very hopeful. Her first-born son died at birth and is to be buried to-day.

—Experiments during the past year on battleship "North Carolina" have convinced our naval authorities that compressed air may be used to protect battleships, and the plan is to be used on equipping our mightiest ships. The air drives out the inrushing water when the outer wall has been broken through.

—A writer in the Scientific American says that the greater destroyer of roads is not the automobile, but the common narrow-tire buggy.

—The great mathematician and astronomer La Place advanced the hypothesis that worlds are formed from nebulae or stardust, and that the process of world-making may be going on now, as the heavens show nebular masses of matter in different directions, especially in the Milky Way. By force of gravity, particles of floating matter are drawn together, and thus large bodies, ultimately worlds, are formed. Recent discoveries have been made which tend to confirm this hypothesis, which is by no means universally accepted.

HER HUNDREDTH BIRTHDAY

I have just got back home from my mother's birthday dinner. Fanny Morrison lives in Burk county, Silver Creek township, twelve miles west of Morganton, N. C. She was one hundred years old the 15th day of March. There was a large crowd present. The table was arranged in the yard, well loaded, and Mrs. Morrison walked out and took her seat at the table and ate a hearty dinner and enjoyed herself finely. Mrs. Morrison is the mother of nine children; one died in infancy, one got killed in the late war, seven living, five boys and two girls: Thomas, W. H. and N. J. and Sarah Seales, of Brindletown; J. T. of Morganton, W. J. Morrison of Holly Bush, Cleveland county, and Lettie Culbrethson of Asheville. Mrs. Morrison is well, hearty and jolly, and bids fair to live to several more birthday dinners. She is full blooded Pennsylvania Dutch. Her father came from Pennsylvania and married Susy Thrumee of Lincoln county and lived to the age of 98 years. She has 73 grand children, 63 great grand children, and ten great great grand children, and never uses spectacles but very little and can now see to thread a common needle and can set the table and wash the dishes, and has a set of plates her mother used.

She is a member of the M. P. church, joined in her young days at Three Springs camp ground in Cleveland county, and loves to talk about her old preachers, James Deans, Ned Elliott, Carhone Roach, Lineberry and Dick Michaux and others. It does any one good to hear her talk Dutch and tell how she started to keep house. She married John Morrison, whose grand father came across the ocean. Mrs. Morrison was a Epply, daughter of Peter Epply, who was in the Mexican war. Mrs. Morrison is living with her youngest son, N. J. Morrison, at the same old place where she first settled in Brindletown. Mrs. Morrison looks to be about 75 or 80 years old, and has good recollection of things in her day, but the last fifteen or twenty years she seems not to know much about.

W. J. Morrison.

John found the farm too slow for him and he went to the city where he got a job as sort of a hostler in an automobile agency. In the late fall there wasn't much doing and John was laid off. He was unable to find another job, and as he had lived up to his wages there was nothing for him to do but go back to the farm, which in the meantime his steady-going brother Dick had leased, and John thus became a free boarder at his brother's table. The farm is a prety secure refuge, after all.—Farm Journal.

Away Off.—Says the Atchison Globe: "A baby is about the only new thing a man can get in his house that will not make the rest of the furniture look shabby." It is very clear that the man who wrote this never had a good, healthy baby in his house.—Boston Transcript.

An Idea Here, Men.—"Does your wife want the vote?"

"No. She wants a large town house, a villa on the seacoast, and a new limousine car every six months. I'd be pleased most to death if she could fix her attention on a small matter like the vote."—Washington Star.

Unwelcome Caller.—"Opportunity really knocks at many a door."

"Then why don't more of us succeed better?"

"The trouble is that Opportunity wants us to go to work.——Louisville Courier. Journal.

THE WORLD'S MOST WONDERFUL GIRL.

Dressed in a becoming evening gown of pink and pink satin slippers, with her dark hair arranged in waves down either side of her face and tied low on the back of her neck, with a large bow of black ribbon, Miss Helen Keller, the young woman who, though blind and deaf and dumb, has acquired the power of speech, talked with reporters at the Hotel Astor.

Miss Keller likes to talk and she sent back gay, crisp answers to the questions, which were repeated to her by Mrs. Macy, better known as Miss Annie M. Sullivan, who for years was Miss Keller's devoted teacher.

"There are so many fallacies about the blind," Miss Keller said at the outset of the interview. "They say we can tell colors by the sense of touch, but we can't. I like to imagine colors and talk about them, but my idea of color is difficult to define. It might not mean much to you, but it means a great deal to me. Red is my favorite color, because it means health and strength and warmth. Roses all have the same general perfume, and yet there are shades of difference, so that I realize different roses may have different colors.

"And the blind, because they have lost some of their faculties, are not compensated by higher development of other faculties, as many persons suppose. The thing that helps them to overcome the loss of sight is the habit of patience. By practice and training we overcome very great obstacles."

Some one asked Miss Keller which she would rather have if she was forced to make a choice, her hearing or her sight.

"The sense of heaing is the most important of the senses," she said. "I have found the greatest difficulty in trying to cultivate my voice. I repeat the same sound over a hudred times and I am never sure I am right until someone tells me. I am like the Irishman, I feel that I never open my mouth without putting my foot in it."

The conversation was carried on in short questions and answers. Miss Keller sitting very erect and accompanying her words with gestures of her hands and her whole body. Occasionally she allowed her fingers to stray to Mrs. Macy's lips to learn what was going on. Miss Keller is a socialist, and when she was asked if her views were obtained from Mrs. Macy, Miss Keller's teacher laughed.

"No, indeed," she replied. "I am not a socialist."

"Yes," said Miss Keller, when she was told of the question. "They think because I am a socialist that I am a Christian Scientist and a vegetarian.

"I say no indeed I am not, for I eat meat and I am not a teetotalist, either for I drink beer." When the laugh which the thought of the little woman in pink drinking beer had aroused subsided, Mrs. Macy said slyly, talking aloud and with fingers in Miss Keller's hand:

"Of course you do; beer and socialism go togetner."

Some one asked if Miss Keller would rather be blind and deaf with the great reputation which she has acquired or an unknown person with those senses unimpaired. She responded instantly:

"Of course I would rather have my sight and hearing, because it would greatly increase my powers for service."

"The world is full of persons who can see and hear," said Mrs. Macy, talking with her fingers in the blind girl s palm, "but who do not see and hear and understand as much as you do with no eyes and ears. Would you rather be one of those?"

"Never," came the reply instantly. "I would rather be blind. One does not like to give up one s identity," she continued after a second s thought. "The will to do and the power to think is the life of your life."

There was silence for a moment and Miss Keller continued:

"That was a very intelligent question. It made me sit up and think."

Miss Keller forms her first impression of persons by the way they shake hands, but she said that as with persons who can see, she sometimes had to change her opinion. Persons she first disliked, she grew to like and vice versa. To show her power of recognition through her fingers Mrs. Macy told how Miss Keller had recognized a bust of Phillips Brooks, whom she had known as a child. Feeling the bust long after his death, Miss Keller exclaimed: "This is like my friend, Bishop Brooks.'

Miss Keller picks out her own clothes and has decided opinions upon matters of dress.

"Clothes?" she said, in answer to a question. "Of course, I like them. I'm a girl. Did you ever see one who didn't like clothes?"

Miss Keller will speak at Montclair, N. J., under the auspices of one local branch of the socialist party there. Many New York artists and writers who live there will be in the audience. She will speak upon "The Heart and the Hand, Or, the Right Use of the Senses." This will be the first of the series of public addresses which Miss Keller will deliver.—New York Times.

THE EXCUSE.

"If the air were only softer,"
Said the Bird.
"If the air were only softer,
I could fly with grace and ease,
I could fly above the trees,
If the air were only softer."
"If the earth were anly harder,"

Said the Ox.
"If the earth were only harder,
I could walk without a slip,
I could pull without a whip,
If the earth were only harder."
"If the sea were only deeper,"

Said the Fish.
"If the sea were only deeper,
I could swim without a care,
I could dive beneath the air,
If the sea were only deeper."
"If the world were only wiser,"

Said the Man.
"If the world were only wiser,
I could win and dare and do,
I could make my dreams come true,
If the world were only wiser."
—Herbert N. Casson, in The Outlook.

SWEET HOPE.

By Louise Lincoln.

"Hope is the perennial flower of earth." It matters not how much that flower may be bruised and crushed there is about it a fragrance, which, like the thistle down, rises higher and higher, and floats above and beyond this little sphere we call our world, until lost in the broad expanse of heaven.

Life's clouds may hover thickly about us, and its storms may sweep over us, as the tempest over the briny deep, but even as tears of despondency trickle down our cheeks Hope, like an angel of mercy, whispers soft words of encouragment, and bids us "Never despair." Hope lends color to the darkest hours of life, and sheds a halo of light and beauty around our pathway that nothing else can give.

When the crew who steered the Mayflower over the waste of waters grew faint at heart, their gallant commander bade them hope, and cheered them on from day to day,until at length the tell-tale fragments on the bosom of the deep gave promise of a hope fulfilled.

Hope led the Isrealites of old in their long journey through the wilderness; and Hope was the bright and shining star that led the Wise Men of the East to the birth place of their Saviour.

Hope animates the soldier in the midst of battle, and puts a sweet song in the mouth of the sailor as his ship rides over the ocean.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

Greensboro, N. C.

N. B.—Following schedule figures published only as information and are not guaranteed.

1.00 A. M.—No. 29 daily, Birmingham Special, through Pullman sleeping and observation cars New York to Birmingham and Richmond to Birmingham. Luring car service.

12.48 A. M.—No. 32 daily, Southern's Limited, Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville, Augusta and Aiken to New York. Dining car service.

12.55 a. m.—No. 112 daily for Raleigh and Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh open at 9.15 p. m.

2.10 a. m.—No. 30 daily, Birmingham special. Pullman sleeping and observation cars from Birmingham and Asheville to New York and Birmingham to Richmond. Dining car service.

2.25 a. m.—No. 31, the Southern's Southeastern Limited, Pullman sleeping cars from New York to Asheville. Day coaches. Dining car service.

3.45 a. m.—No. 45 daily local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7.10 a m.—No. 8, daily local for Richmond, connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7.20 a. m.—No. 37 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited Pullman drawing room, sleeping cars and club and observation cars New York to new Orleans. Pullman sleeping car New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon Pullman chair car Greensboro to Montgomery, solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

[illegible] a. m.—No. 108 daily local Greensboro to Goldsboro.

7.35 a. m.—No. 11, daily local through to Atlanta, sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

[illegible] daily except Sunday for Ramseur.

8.15 a. m.—No. 237 daily for Winston-Salem and North Wilkesboro. Pullman sleeping car Raleigh to Winston-Salem.

9.30 a. m.—No. 44 daily for Washington and points North.

9.40 a. m.—No. 144 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro; handles Atlanta Raleigh sleeping car.

12.30 p. m.—No. 21 daily for Asheville, Waynesville and local points; handles coaches and chair car through to Asheville and Waynesville.

12.50 p. m.—No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12 30 p. m.—No 21 daily for Asheville.

12.55 p. m.—No. 7 daily for Charlotte and points south.

1.40 p. m.—No. 36 daily U. S. Fast Mail for Washington, New York and points north; handles Pullman sleeping cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman sleeping car Asheville to Richmond Pullman chair car Greenville, S. C., to Washington. Day coaches. Dining car service.

2.20 p. m.—No. 207 daily for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday for North Wilkesboro.

2.30 p. m.—No. 151 daily except Sunday for [illegible]. No. 230 daily except Sunday for Madison.
Ramseur.

2.30 p. m.—No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4.20 p. m.—No. 22 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles chair car to Goldsboro.

4.55 p. m.—No. 131 daily for Mt. Airy.

6.10 p m.—No. 35 daily U. S. Fast Mail for Atlanta and points south Pullman sleeping cars New York to New Orleans and Birmingham and sleeping car Richmond to Asheville which car can be occupied until 7 a. m. Pullman chair car Washington to Greenville, S. C. Day coaches. Dining car service.

6.35 p. m.—No. 235 daily for Winston-salem.

7.30 p. m.—No. 43 daily for Atlanta Sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10.13 p. m.—No. 38 daily New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited Pullman sleeping cars New Orleans, Macon, Asheville and Charlotte to New York and Pullman chair car Montgomery to Greensboro. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

10.20 p. m.—No. 233 daily for Winston-Salem.

10.31 p. m.—No. 12 daily local for Richmond Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

J. M. Coapman, Vice-President and General Manager, Washington, D. C.; S. H. Hardwick, P T. M., Washington, D. C.; H. F. Cary, G. P. A., Washington, D. C.; R. H. DeButts, D. P. A., Charlotte, N. C.; O. F. York, P. & A, Greensboro, N C.

Dr. J. E. Wyche.

DENTIST.

Office in Benbow Arcade, S. Elm St.,
Rooms 348 and 350,
Greensboro, N. C.
Office phone 29, Residence phone 22.

A few decades ago, when railway traffic was a thing unknown, many of our fathers and grandfathers left their comfortable homes in the East and started on a perilous journey to the golden sands of California. In those days a man's life was constantly in jeopardy. The redmen of the West showed no mercy to the "pale face" who dared to intrude upon the famous hunting grounds. The country swarmed with wild beasts and birds of prey; and in addition to these, there was the constant danger of starvation. And yet, among all these dangers, they pressed to the land of the setting sun, hoping to find there, treasures of gold and silver, and thus secure the fortunes which awaited the faithful pioneers. They had no other guide than the sweet Angel of Hope, who sat with them around their camp fires at night, and led them over the mountains and across the deserts in their long marches by day. Hope was their guide and fortune their reward.

When the civil war was making our rivers red with human blood, Hope led a handful of Southern men to shoulder their rusty muskets and march forth to battle with their fellow countrymen. Brother stood armed against brother, and father and son fought to the death of each other, while the cries of the widow and orphan rent the air "From Hampshire's hills to Georgia's plains." In victory or defeat Hope led them on, until at last, when all was lost, she spread her wings for flight, and the war ended.

Hope lends wings to the dull, monotonous hours of life, and brightens the pathway of many weary pilgrims. Hope is the anchor we cast in the ocean of Life, and it is the presence of Hope that gives new zeal and courage to earth's inhabitants, and bids them continue to struggle. Reprinted from the Carolinian, Wilmington, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley. M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF STOMACH AND INTESTINES.

121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.

Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

THE CRIMINAL MATCH.

The Insurance Companies in the West are gathering statistics on fires caused by matches. Only about two thirds of the companies are reporting, so we have only a faint idea of the enormous fire waste for which matches are responsible.

In September, 1911, the reports show 523 fires due to the careless use of matches, a property loss of $154,403 and an increase loss of $148,640. During October the property loss was $152,397 and the insurance loss $143,379.

During the period between April 1 and November 1, 1911 the total property loss reported was $1,200,742, with an insurance loss of $1,084,216.

The "strike anywhere" match should go. It has no legitimate place in the home. If you love your family exclude it from your home. Its convenience does not justify its use.

Insurance Department, Raleigh, N. C.

TWENTIETH CENTURY BEATITUDES.

Blessed are those who, rising early Sunday morning, can get to Sunday school and church on time.

Blessed are those who get to school on time, for they are likely to arrive in the spirit of worship.

Blessed are those who are never late, for they cause the minister and ushers and choir to love them.

Blessed are those who must be late, but do not enter their pews during the Scripture lesson, or prayer, or anthem.

Blessed is the man whose calender contains prayer meeting night.

Blessed is the man whose watch keeps church time as well as business time, and who remembers the hour of service.

Blessed is the man who can endure an hour and a quarter in a place of religious worship, as well as two hours and a half in a place of amusement.

Blessed are all those who come even at the eleventh hour, but service begins at 10:45.—Religious Herald.

—The wireless station on Anastasia Island, near Jacksonville, Florida, has been in communication with Eiffel Tower in Paris, and Honolulu last week. Long distance tests of the apparatus were going on for ten days with the greatest success. The operator has copied messages from Honolulu, 4,800 miles; Clifden Island, 5,100 miles; Eiffel Tower, Paris, 5,400 miles, as well as Colon and stations in the West Indes. The time signals from Eiffel Tower each day at 6 o'clock, being midnight at Paris, are recorded. These are sent from Paris automatically by an ingenious switching arrangements from the master clock under the Paris tower. Bailey Arlington station at Washington also is heard sending time for the benefit of ships at sea. The work of the station is considered marvelous owing to the light power used as compared with other stations.

W. F. MEDEARIS I. F. PEEBLES W. L. PEEBLES
MEDEARIS-PEEBLES FURNITURE COMPANY.
Complete House Furnishers.
STOVES AND RANGES
Cash or Credit.
109 & 111 E. Market St.
Phone 823. Greensboro, N. C.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.
Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.
206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

OVER 65 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.
Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

THE LADIES' MEETING IN ASHEBORO.

The Asheboro auxiliary is anxious for a large attendance at the Branch meeting April 7th and 8th.

Whether you have an auxiliary or not, if you are interested make the sacrifice of a little time and attend this meeting. The Asheboro people are noted for hospitality. So we are expecting a pleasant and profitable meeting. May we not give two days in a year to plan for sending the light to the women of heathen countries? Let every woman in the Methodist Protestant church pray earnestly that this may be the best meeting of the North Carolina Branch.

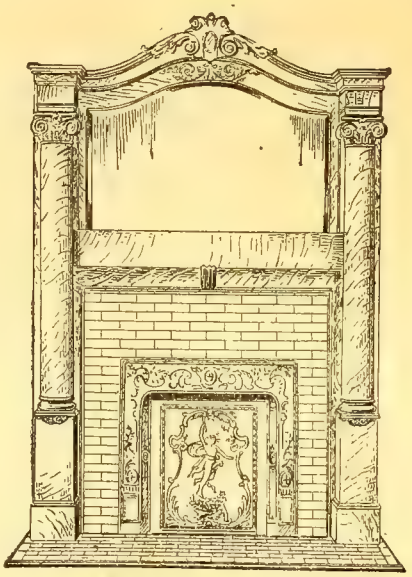
Harris Glascock, M. D.

THOSE CONVENTIONS.

Yes, of course attend them—the W. F. M. S. and the W. H. M. S. convention in Asheboro, April 8-11. If no church elects you, pick up and go any way. Every woman ought to go to Asheboro sometime, now will be a good time. Those noble women will give you a warm welcome. They are planning a program that will interest you. The woman's works needs women, join in and help them; you will be in good company engaged in a great work. The only point in which the convention might fail is the failure of the women of our church to attend. Don't let it be so. Let all the local organizations see to it that they are represented.

T. M. Johnson.

March 25, 1913.



Mantels, Grates, Tiles and Builders' Hardware.

If you intend to build a new house, or to improve an old one, don't fail to get our catalogue, showing the latest designs in mantels, grates, tiles and builder's hardware. We have designs to suit every style of architecture. It will pay you to write us.

ODELL MANTEL COMPANY,
(Odell Hardware Co., Owners.)
Greensboro, N. C.

TEACHERS' NORMAL COURSE—ELON COLLEGE

All tuition free. Term opens April 8th and closes June 5th, 1913. A full two months' term for teachers.

Courses offered in all the branches taught in the elementary and secondary schools. Strong courses offered in Pedagogy, and the Theory and Practice of Teaching.

The course is planned for all teachers who wish to prepare themselves for better work and better service, for those who have the ambition to make better teachers than they have yet become, and for those who wish to prepare for better positions than they have yet been able to secure.

Expenses low as the lowest. A Bulletin containing information concerning courses, cost, work, etc., will be sent for the asking.

For full information write to

W. A. Harper, President, or
Thomas C. Amick, Director,
Elon College, North Carolina

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.
This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

—The Christian Publishing House at Elon College is now ready to begin printing the Christian Sun, which has for several years been printed in the office of the M. P. Herald. We shall miss the weekly visits of the Sun's genial editor, Rev. J. O. Atkinson. We shall also miss the Sun itself, both in what it required of us and what it brought to us. We appreciate the privilege of printing the organ of our sister denomination for so long a period, and wish the paper continued and increased prosperity in its splendid new home at Elon. The paper is to be enlarged at once into four column size.

—Gasoline sells for 40 cents a gallon in Germany. In this country the price is almost twice what it was a year ago. The increased demand for it has pushed the price up. Great prizes are offered for the discovery of a satisfactory substitute for gasoline.

WHEN IGNORANCE WILL TAKE A BACK SEAT.

May God hasten the day when all church members study the Bible and take their church paper. Ignorance will have to take a back seat, and not till then will it do it.

Subscriber.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XIX. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, MARCH 13, 1913. NUMBER 16.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCULLOH, Editor and Publisher.
PRICE.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
RULE IN DEALING WITH SUBSCRIBERS.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

—Rev. H. S. B. Thompson's post-office is Graham, N. C., R. F. D. No. 1.

—We beg Brother Cecil's pardon for a ridiculous error we got off on him last week. And one of his appointments was wrong. It is correct now. See the revised list.

—We were glad to see Rev. W. D. Fogleman sufficiently recovered to be returning to his field last Saturday. He is still suffering, but the doctor tells him that the diabetes has been overcome, and that his present backache is due to rheumatism. He will have to be cautious for awhile, till he regains his full strength.

—The supreme court has upheld the Illinois law imposing a tax on all grain coming into the state. Of course grain that is simply passing through is in interstate commerce and no state can tax it or touch it, but it was decided that where grain "comes to rest" in an elevator or the like, it loses federal protection and becomes subject to the state laws. This principle may be applied to liquor as well as grain.

—Evangelist Biederwolf has been engaged by the ministers' association of Greensboro to hold a series of meetings in our city.

—President Cecil will preach in Grace Church in the morning and at St. Paul at 7:30 P. M. of the 16th instant.

—A brother says he thinks we have decided wisely in deciding not to enlarge the paper. What we decided was, not to raise the price. We mean to enlarge the paper as soon and as much as means will permit.

—A pastor—not Peter Slewfoot—writes that he would like to have our pastors write more for the Herald. He writes frequently himself, and Peter writes oftener than one might suppose from his communication of last week.

A CIPHER IN THE CHURCH.

A Cipher is a symbol signifying the absence of quantity. It occupies as much space as the figure 9, but its only office is to declare, "There is nothing here." When added in a column, it does not increase the sum. When multiplied by any number, no matter how large, the product is only nothing.

There are ciphers in the political world—men who never vote, never express a political opinion, never think on questions of government. They are quasi-citizens of the state. They have all the privileges of citizens, but meet none of the demands of citizenship. They are political ciphers. It is painful to see them.

But the most disappointing of all ciphers is the cipher in the church. Here we have a right to expect men to reveal their greatest worth; and when a man shows himself to be worth simply nothing at all, it is difficult not to be offended. But who has not seen some of these church ciphers—men or women who contribute nothing in any way to further the work of the church. They pay nothing; they say nothing; they do nothing. One wonders what is going on inside of them. They walk about, they move their eyes, as real men and women, but when the test comes, they are but ciphers.

I think your decision in regard to enlarging the Herald a wise one, and I will see what I can do towards raising that thousand new subscribers.

J. H. Stowe

ENLARGEMENT LIST OF NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

Rev. Homer Casto sends the first.
Rev. G. F. Millaway the second.

RECEIVED ON BROTHERHOOD CALL NO. 15.

Rev. W. C. Kennett, W T. Totten, J. F. Dosier, three dollars each. Total to date, $54.00. If you have not yet sent in your dues, will you not do so at once?

J. A. Burgess, Sec.-Treas.

"THE CONSTRUCTIVE QUARTERLY." This is the name of a new "journal of the faith, work and thought of Christendom." It is published by the George H. Doran Company, New York and London. The editor is Silas McBee. The Editorial Board includes about forty men of different countries and denominations. The first number (March, 1913) has an introduction by the Editor and thirteen articles by as many writers. W. P. DuBose writes of "A Constructive Treatment of Christianity." Wilfred Ward treats of "Union Among Christians." Archbishop Platon has "A Message from the Russian Church," Friedrich Loofs gives "A German View of the Sola Fide" (that we are justified by faith alone). George Goyan describes "The Church of France To-day." John J. Wynne writes of the "Reforms of Pius X," W. P. Paterson of "Presbyterian Reunion in Scotland," Shailer Matthews of "The Awakening of American Protestantism," Bishop F. J. McConnell of "The Significance of Conversion in the Thinking of To-day," William Sanday of "The Pacific and the Warlike Ideals," B. W. Bacon on "St. Paul's Message to Religion," Arthur Henderson of "Religion and Labour," Robert E. Speer of "An American Saint" (by which he means the late H. Clay Trumbull).

Few magazines present such an array of scholarship and no other has just the aim of this one—to bring about a better understanding of the various denominations of Christendom with a view to greater effectiveness. The editor says: "When once the Christian Churches mean to understand and devote their life to understanding, one another in Christ and His [illegible] together with [illegible] military symbol ever express." (He has just quoted Von Moltke's motto, "March apart, strike together.") The editor declares that the Quarterly has no scheme for propagating a system for the unity of Christian Churches. "It offers itself rather as a Forum where the isolated Churches of Christendom may reintroduce themselves to one another through the things that they themselves positively hold to be vital to Christianity."

Price, $2.50 a year, 75 cents the copy.

CHRISTIANITY AND PEACE.

The eagle eye of the prophet long years before the event itself saw the peaceful reign he would usher in and thus spoke of the founder of Christianity: "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace."

This self-same Prince of Peace himself, while in the flesh, declared that "nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom," and foretold "wars and rumors of wars," yet He himself remained the Prince of Peace and followed peace with all men. A seeming exception to this is the incident of the eve of his betrayal and crucifixion related in Luke 22:36-38, wherein the Master says, "he that hath no sword, let him sell his garment, and buy one," while his disciples responded, "Lord, behold, here are two swords," to which he replied, "It is enough." But if we read Matt. 26:52 we find that this is not an exception to the rule of his life to live peaceably with all men, even with those that persecuted and despitefully used him. Far from being an exception, we find that the Master had in mind by this command to teach his disciples a great object lesson, for when Peter with one of the two swords had, in a frantic effort to defend his Master from assault, cut off the ear of the High Priest's servant, Jesus said to him. "Put up again thy sword into his place: for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword." It was to teach this great truth by a personal illustration and not to protect himself, then, that the Master had on this memorable night commanded his disciples to sell their coats and buy swords.

And this object lesson was not in vain with his disciples. They themselves suffered martyrdom without recourse to the sword and the early Christians endured pesecutions, tortures, martyrdoms gladly, hilariously, without resorting to force for protection. And all through the ages, even into our present day, for which witness the Boxers Rebellion with its heroic martyrdoms, there have been great-souled individuals who have yielded up their lives willingly for His cause.

Have the martyrdoms of the ages meant to teach an attitude of non-resistance to evil and evil men? Did Christ mean to teach that by his sermon on the Mount, his self-example, and the object-lesson on the night of his betrayal? I think not. Did he not drive the money-changers from the temple? But by word the Master unequivocally speaks on this very point: Matt. 10:34. "Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword." Seemingly inconsistent with this avowed statement of the Master is the song of the angels on the night of the Nativity, who sang: Luke 2-14, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good-will to men." But the correct reading of the oldest, best manuscripts here gives the following rendering for this passage: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace among men of good-will," for the original Greek is epi ges eirenon en anthropois eusokias.

And it cannot be otherwise with our Christianity and it be a militant religion. The enemies of our faith charge that it offers nothing for this life except possible martyrdom, forbids aggressive measures for the right, and confines its benefits to another world. This also is untrue. Christianity does promise its believers great things for the life to come, but it promises great things also for this life. It gives "peace that passeth all understanding," but yet how joyous this peae is in the realization! It has enabled the most excruciating torture to be borne without flinching, and we may have thi s peace in health, in sickness, in shipwreck, in imminent danger of death by violence amid the battle's roar, and it has countless times so been had. You cannot explain it: I cannot, but we can all of us know it by blessed experience.

The seer who foretold the Master's birth and prophetically styled him the Prince of Peace, also declared that "the wolf shall lie down with the lamb," and he did not mean that the lamb should be inside the wolf either. I believe this shall come to pass, and I believe also that peace shall reign permanently on the earth through the influence of the Prince of Peace. I also believe that we are advancing rapidly in that direction, despite not only the rumors of wars brewing all over the world, but also despite the actual existence of wars in many quarters, tho' we are not there yet. When the whole world has become the kingdom of our Lord, then will the World Peace Movement, which began in organic form in in New York City in August, 1815, be fully realized, but not till then. Just so long as there are religions opposing the Christian religion, which teach war as a religious duty, we shall have wars and rumors of wars, and just so long after these opposing religions shall have succumbed to the true religion as we have individual rulers and sovereign bodies which do not practice the teachings of our faith in their diplomatic and governmental relationships we shall have wars and rumors of wars.

But this does not mean that Christianity teaches war or approves of it. We as Christians are engaged in a warfare, but it is warfare of love, not benevolent assimilation by shot and shell. We are to win the world for Christ, but we are not to employ such modern means as Mauser rifles and Gatling guns to compel men into this kingdom: yet the cause of truth must not suffer, and we may be forced to do for a great cause defensively, because of evil-minded persons or nations who know not or respect not the love and peace of the followers of Christ, what we would not aggressively do for ourselves and what we could not be justified in doing, if done aggressively. I do not believe that aggressive warfare, even for a great cause, can be justified by the Christian religion. But this same religion enjoins it upon us valiantly and heroically to resist evil and when this evil, without provocation on our part and with every effort consistent with righteousness and truth having been tried by us to bring about peaceful adjustment of the matter, takes the form of armed forces, as it frequently does and will, for us to stand like dumb-driven cattle awaiting our turn to die at the point of the sword or the mouth of the cannon would be poorly, cowardly to defend the faith that is in us. Sorry Christians indeed would we be to suffer the overthrowing of our cause in such perilous fashion, and the sooner the world should be rid of us, the better it would be for the spread of our faith and the triumph of right.

What I am trying to say is this: That an offensive war cannot be defended by the principles of the Christian faith, while a defensive war may be forced on a Christian nation by an unchristian one. The possibility of the latter in this enlightened day it exceedingly small, infinitesimal in fact, and will not occur once in a thousand years if every means possible consistent with righteousness and truth is employed to avert the war, or, in other words, if Christian nations would practice the golden rule in their relations with other nations. But nations like the individuals composing them sometimes lose their temper and rush into war heedlessly and heedlessly. Calmness and arbitration will, on the other hand, almost universally bring about a peaceful adjudication of all points of difference, and certainly the ultimatum should never be said nor the first blow struck by a Christian nation. Nations like individuals should give up their clokes as well as their coats and go two miles when only one is demanded by the adversary in order to preserve amity and peace. In this day no Christian nation will be properly engaged in war of conquest nor have that said of it which the historian Tacitus bitterly declared of Rome; "ubi solitudinem faciunt, pacem appellant," "when they have produced a desert, they call it peace." That was the pagan, heathen idea of peace, but it is not the Christian idea, which aims to preserve the weaker people and do them good. Nor will any Christian nation in this day be justified by the Christian religion in engaging in any sort of war until the Hague Tribunal has given its verdict against the opposing nation and that nation, rejecting the decision of that body, has voluntarily and aggressively brought on war, striking the first blow. If this policy were strictly adhered to, war would practically vanish into rumors of war, and the rumors even would die out eventually. If such a policy as this were strictly adhered to by Christian nations, the following quotation from the Japan Advertiser of Tokio would need serious revision or rather expurgation: "It is well also that missionaries and supporters of Christian missions to the 'heathen' should know that the Oriental mind now defines Christianity as battleships, cannons, and rifles devised and constructed for the plunder of the earth, and that the bleeding figure on the cross which missionaries hold up to the view of non-Christian peoples gets blurred out of their sight, for on their horizon looms largely the figures of the armed robber with cannon and riffles leveled, threatening 'your country or your life.'"

It is true that the New Testament nowhere explicitly forbids war and that the Old Testament authorizes it, but the New Testament forbids it in spirit, just as it forbids slavery in spirit, tho' countenancing it in the letter. And just as the spirit of Christianity has made slavery impossible in Christian lands, just so will it make war impossible among Christian nations. And the day is not far distant when the question involving the personal honor of sovereign powers will be submitted to arbitration before an impartial and competent tribunal. We need an International Court of Arbitration with powers parallel to those of our own venerable Federal Supreme Court, a Supreme Court of the Nations let us call it, and the spirit of the Prince of Peace is working mightily toward that end. It is conceivable, of course, that unchristian nations or even Christian nations in an unchristian spirit might refuse to abide the decision of such a Court and aggressively wage war against a Christian nation readily acquiescing in the Court's decision, but even that could not possibly happen were all nations Christian to the extent that they wouldd act according to the spirit of the Founder of the Christian faith.

In conclusion, it may not be uninteresting to quote at large the syllabus of the arguments advanced against war by the president of the first Peace Society in organic form of the world, Mr. David Low Dodge, of New York City, in his book, War Inconsistent With The Religion of Jesus Christ, published in 1812, to this effect.

"War is inhuman:

I. Because it hardens the heart and blunts the tender feeling of mankind.

II. War is inhuman, as in its nature and tendency it abuses God's animal creation.

III. War is inhuman, as it oppresses the poor.

IV. War is inhuman, as it spreads terror and distress among mankind.

V. War is inhuman, as it involves men in fatigue, famine, and all the pains of mutilated bodies.

VI. War is inhuman, as it destroys the youth and cuts off the hope of gray hairs.

VII. War is inhuman, as it multiplies widows and clothes the land in mourning.

'War is unwise:

I. Because, instead of preventing, it provokes insults and mischief.

II. War is unwise, for instead of diminishing, it increases difficulties.

III. War is unwise, because it destroys property.

IV. War is unwise, as it diminishes the happiness of mankind.

V. War is unwise, as it is dangerous to the liberties of men.

VI. War is unwise, as it does not mend, but injures the morals of society.

VII. War is unwise, as it is hazarding eternal things for only the chance of temporal things.

VIII. War is unwise, as it does not answer the professed end for which it is intended.

"War is criminal:

I. Goingto war is not keeping from the appearance of evil, but running into temptation.

II. War is criminal, as it naturally influences the pride of man.

III. War necessarily infringes on the consciences of men, and therefore is criminal.

IV. War is criminal, as it is opposed to patient suffering under unjust and cruel treatment.

V. War is criminal, as it is not doing to others as we should have them do to us.

VI. War is inconsistent with mercy, and is therefore criminal.

VII. War is criminal, as the practice of it is inconsistent with forgiving trespasses as we wish to be forgiven by the final Judge.

VIII. Engaging in war is not manifesting love to enemies or returning good for evil.

IX. War is criminal, because it is actually rendering evil for evil.

X. War is criminal, and it is actually doing evil that good may come: and that is the best apology that can be made for it.

XI. War is opposed to the example of the Son of God and is therefore criminal."

If w agree with this devout Christian that war is inhuman, unwise, and criminal, we shall readly conclude that it is unchristian, even tho' we should not agree with him that a defensive war is not permissible under any circumstances. And when the men and the nations of the world shall become as thoroughly imbued with the spirit of the Prince of Peace as Mr. Dodge was, disarmament will be feasible and the old prophet's prediction come true: "And they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

W. A. Harper.

NORFOLK LETTER.

"Where's Teddy?" some one is said to have asked the other day during the Wilson inauguration ceremonies. Whereat, the retiring president, near-known as "Billy" is also said to have "smole a smile" of the usual Taftian productions as one who could echo, "And where, indeed is he?"

Before long, as things go in this mundane sphere, the query, "wehere's Teddy?" voiced by some prankish wag in Washington, whose already hilarious spirits had been additionally aerated by the spectacular events of March, Fourth, may possibly become as common as that other query, "Has anybody seen Kelly?"

Can it be possible? Is it true that the lapse of less than five brief, fleeting years has withered with the blight of forgetfulness, and already dimmed with partial obscurity the once marvellous and prodigious personal popularity of the Strenuous One? It would seem to be even so.

The gradual passing from view of those who have held the high places of earth and been much in the public eye is a sad but significant reminder of the transient and ephemeral nature of all things human and man-made.

Suppose you try to recall the names of men prominently before the nation not later than ten or fifteen years ago; men of tremendous power and influence in all ranks and walks of life, feared, envied and truckled to by their fellows, and then observe how infrequently their names are mentioned today. It will be a splendid object-lesson in the fleeting nature of Fame, for which so many poor, deluded ones sell themselves, both soul and body.

For instance, who knows what has become of Chauncey Depew? Is he dead or alive? How long since anyone has heard of his making one of those witty after-dinner speeches for which he was famous the land over?

Personally, I haven't heard anything from the former great chieftan of Tammony Hall, Richard Croker, for a long time. He, together with "Boss" Tweed, once had more than his share of space in the great dailies of the nation, but, in the inexorable iconoclasm of Time they have "dropped out" of the game. Pardon me, it may be owing to my own stupidity but whether these two precious politicians of "ye olden days" have crossed over the Styx and are making artful efforts to bribe Judge Osiris, or are still roaming "hither and yon" over the earth, reflecting bitterly upon the devious and uncertain days of life I cannot tell.

If the fame of "Uncle Joe" Cannon does not outlive that of his illustrious predecessor as Speakor of the House, "Tom" Reed, then the lean, lank, farmer-looking old gentleman will soon pass into limbo of obscurity.

You may need to be reminded already that Jay Gould was the name of one who was reckoned, once upon a time, as being one of Wall Street's greatest financiers. You have possibly, even now, forgotten that H. H. Rogers built the Virginian railroad. The name of E. H. Harriman is still familiar, but that of Stuyessant Fish is fading rapidly. Many people do not know whether John L. Sullian was a pork-packer, a great singer, a noted evangelist or a prize fighter. Such is human glory and renown.

Yes, Teddy will pass with the rest of us, far less celebrated than he. Not that he was not, is not a great, good and useful citizen, but Time, the mighty Leveller will lightly toss over his deeds and achievements the mantle of obscurity and he will be forgotten. The only hope for any of us that when this earthly tabernacle is dissolved, we may all have a house not built with hands, "eternal and in Heaven." So may it be.

Henry Spencer Booth.

FROM PRESIDENT WILSON'S INAUGURAL ADDRESS.

We have itemized with some degree of particularity the things that ought to be altered, and here are some of the chief items: A tariff which cuts us off from our proper part in the commerce of the world, violates the just principles of taxation, and makes the Government a facile instrument in the hands of private interests; a banking and currency system based upon the necessity of the Government to sell its bonds fifty years ago, and perfectly adapted to concentrating cash and restricting credits; an industrial system which, take it on all its sides, financial as well as administrative, holds capital in leading strings, restricts the liberties and limits the oportunities of labor, and exploits without renewing or conserving the natural resources of the country; a body of agricultural activities never yet given the efficiency of great business undertakings or served as it should be through the instrumentality of science taken directly to the farm, or afforded the facilities of credit best suited to its practical needs; water-courses undeveloped, waste places unreclaimed, forests untended, fast disappearing without plan or prospect of renewal, unregarded waste heaps at every mine. We have studied, as perhaps no other nation has, the most effective means ofproduction, but we have not studied cost or economy as we should, either as organizers of industry, as statesmen, or as individuals.

Nor have we studied and perfected the means by which government may be put at the service of humanity, in safeguarding the health of the nation, the health of its men and women and its children, as well as their rights in the struggle for existence. This is no sentimental duty. The first basis of government is justice, not pity. These are matters of justice. There can be no equality of opportunity, the first essential of justice in the body politic, if men and women be not shielded in their lives, their very vitality, from the consequences of great industrial and social processes which they cannot alter, control, or singly cope with. Society must see to it that it does not itself crush or weaken or damage its own constituent parts. The first duty of law is to keep sound the society it serves. Sanitary laws, pure food laws, and laws determining conditions of labor which individuals are powerless to determine for themselves, are intimate parts of the very business of justice and legal efficiency.

These are some of the things we ought to do, and not leave the others undone, the old-fashioned, never-to-be-neglected, fundamental safeguarding of property and of individual right. This is the high enterprise of the new day, to lift everything that concerns our life as a nation to the light that shines from the hearth-fire of every man's conscience and vision of the right. It is inconceivable that we should do this as partisans; it is inconceivable we should do it in ignorance of the facts as they are, or in blind haste. We shall restore, not destroy. We shall deal with our economic system as it is and as it may be modified, not as it might be if we had a clean sheet of paper to write upon; and step by step we shall make it what it should be, in the spirit of those who question their own wisdom and seek counsel and knowledge, not shallow self-satisfaction or the excitement of excursions whither they cannot tell. Justice, and only justice, shall be our motto.

And yet it will be no cool process of mere science. The nation has been deeply stirred, stirred by a solemn passion, stirred by the knowledge of wrong, of ideas lost, of government too often debauched and made an instrument of evil. The feelings with which we face this new age of right and opportunity sweep across our heart-strings like some air out of God's own presence where justice and mercy are reconciled and the judge and brother are one. We know our task to be no mere task of politics but a task which shall search us through and through whether we be able to understand our time and the need of our people, whether we be indeed their spokesmen and interpreters, whether we have the pure heart to comprehend and the rectified will to choose our high course of action.

This is not a day of triumph: it is a day of dedication. Here muster not the forces of party, but the forces of humanity. Men's hearts wait upon us; men's lives hang in the balance; men's hopes call upon us to say what we will do. Who shall live up to the great trust? Who dares fail to try? I summon all honest men, all patriotic, all forward-looking men to my side. God helping me, I will not fail them, if they will but counsel and sustain me!

—Miss Jessie Wilson, daughter of the president-elect, made an address at Wilmington, Del., in support of the passage of a bill now pending limiting a workday for women to 10 hours. She pointed out the fact that New Jersey has an eight-hour law for workers, and that 30 states have adopted a 10-hour law. She asked, in view of the efficiency shown by the workers under these laws, why Deleware should not enact the law in question. —Pathfinder.

PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENTS.

Greensboro and St. Paul ..March 15 to 16.
Randolph Ct .....arch 22 to 23.
Julian on the night of .....March 23.
Mount Pleasant .....March 24
Liberty and Liberty G. .....March 25.
Siler City Ct. .....March 26 to 28.
Alamance Ct .....March 29 to 30.
Saxapahaw Ct .....March 31, April 1.
Mt. Hermon .....April 2, and 3.
Burlington Sta. .....April 4.
Graham and Haw River ..April 5 and 6.
Fairview and Gibsonville.. April 6 and 7.
Vance Ct .....April 11 to 13
Gillburg ... ...April 13 at 3 P. M.
Henderson ..... April 13 at night.
Granville .....April 15 to 16
Halifax .....April 17 to 18
Littleton .....April 19 to 21
Richland .....April 25 to 26
Why Not .....April 27 to 29

Brethren, it only costs you one cent to publish my plan for your charge. Won't you please do so for my sake. C. A. C.

A WORD OF APPRECIATION.

I would like to say just a few words about our work in Asheville, N. C. Being in the city on the fourth Sunday in February I went with pastor Bates to the Sunday school and found a very live Sunday school indeed. The attendance was not large, but showed signs of life. The writer spoke a few words to the school, then listened to his class mate in college and seminary preach. In the evening service the writer preached to a very attentive congregation. Bro. Bates seems to have a firm hold upon the people and is determined to do things. We seldom ever find more optimistic people than the ones there. Having heard a great deal about the work the writer was anxious to go and see the people. With no intention of flattering he can say that he was agreeably surprised. Let us give the Asheville work our hearty co-operation.

J. E. Pritchard.

March 3, 1913.

HALIFAX CIRCUIT.

The second Sunday in last month was a good day for us at Bethesda. Quite a goodly number were at the communion service. Then we received into the church Mr. and Mrs. William Hall by letter from the M. E. Church South, and our little friend Maxine Taylor.

On the second Sunday in April we expect to have an all-day Sunday School Rally at Bethesda. We expect to have one or two speakers from a distance, then use local talent. We are hoping it will be a great thing for the Sunday schools of Halifax and adjoining circuits. We hereby extend an invitation to all Sunday school workers of nearby circuits to be present. Program will be published later.

Poundings have not ceased yet. On last Friday while we were at dinner the son of Bro. W. F. White of Eden church drove into the parsonage yard. The pastor went out and saw other buggies and carriages and a wagon coming. We soon recognized them as Bro. J. W. Hardee and daughters, Misses Blanche and Lossie, Bro. Henry Neal, Mrs. Pattie Parks and daughter, Miss Lessie, and Bro. Roy Neville. They demanded an immediate surrender. We obeyed. After unloading the good things which they brought we all went in the house and spent the afternoon very pleasantly until about four o'clock. We prayed for divine blessings upon them and they went to their homes leaving the pastor and his wife happier. I cannot give the names of all who remembered us, but that our friends may have an idea of the enormity of the pounding will say they brought two sacks of flour, five large hams, 11½ gallons canned fruit, five bushels potatoes, five bushels corn, 45 pounds sugar, eight fine chickens and just barrels of other good things, besides $7.00 in cash. May the Lord bless all these dear people.

Yesterday (first Sunday) we had a house full of people at Eden. Quite a number communed.

We are very sorry indeed to report the illness of Bro. J. M. Neville of Ringwood. The writer accompanied him to the Wingate Sanitarium at Asheville last week. We are praying for his recovery.

On the third Sunday in February the writer conducted the burial service of Mrs. Sarah A. Matthews. Mrs. Matthews was a member at Bethesda, but was buried at Ringwood. She was said to be a good woman, though the writer did not have the pleasure of knowing her as she had been living in Nash Co. for some time.

J. E. Pritchard.

HEBRON, LINCOLN CIRCUIT.

Bro. Waldrop was with us yesterday and preached a fine sermon to a large and attentive congregation. I think Bro. Waldrop is doing finely to be so young in the work. We elected a Sunday school superintendent and assistant, also made arrangements for ordering literature for next quarter. As spring opens up we hope our Sunday school will take on new life.

Mr. Dock Saine has returned from the Shelby Hospital where he was operated on. Pray for him, also for our young preacher, that he may be a great success in the work. May Lincoln Circuit be built up and made strong in the faith.

Mrs. Lee Boyles, Reporter.

March 4, 1913.

CONCORD.

Since our last report we have received many tokens of kindness and words of encouragement. On last Wednesday night several of the good people of Concord church came to see us bringing with them many things needed in the home. We found we had a supply sufficient for many days, of sugar, soffee, flour, canned goods, and many other things too tedious to mention. We greatly appreciate this kindness and these people. May the Lord bless them. We are sorry to note that several of our people have sickness in their homes. Miss Lettie Little was taken to Charlotte to the hospial for an operation last week. We are informed that she is doing very well at this writing. We hope that all the sick ones will soon be well and with us again in our services.

Edw. Suits.

Honor to whom honor is due. There was a deficit of $45.00 on pastor's salary at Thomasville for the year 1912. I have received since Conference $36.65 of that amount. The parties named below made this possible and deserve special mention: Bros. J. R. Dickens, H. J. Harris, S. R. Westmoreland, Luther Jarrett, Arthur Tysinger, A. O. Royals, G. H. White, Roy Catlett, I. F. Johnson, William Byerly, Manual Ward, Mrs. U. C. Wood. These people have our thanks. May the Lord bless them abundantly.

Edw. Suits.

WELCH MEMORIAL CHURCH.

Bro. Williams preached for us last Sunday at eleven o'clock: a good sermon, such as Bro. Williams always gives us. Only those who have had the privilege of listening to Bro. Williams know what a treat it is to hear him.

At 2:30 Bro. Jester met his singing class at the church to sing awhile, after which Bro. Williams talked to us about 30 minutes; all was enjoyed very much. Bro. Jester is a good singing teacher and has been teaching for us some time two nights in the week when the weather is favorable, which is appreciated.

At 7:30 Bro. Parker preached a good sermon. Good attendance at all the services.

On Sunday, March 2nd, Bro. Easter gave us two good interesting sermons in the absence of our pastor, who was called away the day before to the bedside of his sister, Mrs. O. G. Crawford, who was seriously ill, and died the following Monday. Bro. Williams has our sympathy, and we pray that God's richest blessings may rest upon him and his family in this sad hour.

Glad Bro. Baine was able to be out at preaching Sunday morning. Hope he will continue to improve.

Sorry Sister Hiatt continues right sick. We trust she will soon be out as she is missed so much. She is teacher of our Philathea Class.

Our Sunday school is growing, but not as much as we would like. As spring opens up we hope to see it grow much faster. Reporter.

Pee Dee Church, Rockingham Ct.

Since my last report Bro. T. A. Plyler has moved. The rent was too much in town and it was a very muddy, bad way for him to get to the church. But that was the best we could do at that time; so a few days ago we got him a house nearer the church and with a better way of getting to the church. Bro. Plyler seems to like his new home O. K.

I have heard Bro. Plyler preach three times since my last report; two of these sermons were good, but on March 2 he preached one of the best sermons that I ever heard.

On March 8th at 7:30 o'clock, our first quarterly conference was held at Pee Dee church. It was a good one and was gone through with in love. Now the only thing that is bothering us is the debt on St. John's church. All poor people and no chance to raise it here that I see. May the Lord open the hearts of some friends to us that we may raise that debt this year.

W. T. Collins, Reporer.

Beulah, Mecklenburg Ct.

Our pastor, Rev. W. P. Martin, filled his appointment with us last evening, and preached a most instructive sermon, "as usual," toa very large and attentive gathering of people. Bro. Martin and family are apreciated very much by their people. All are hoping for a good year's work, and we are glad to hear that our president is to visit this work this year, as our last president did not visit us very often, I know it will be a great encouragement.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely under the efficient leadership of Mr. Ed Smith, our superintendent.

We are glad some of our members who have been away have moved back to their home church and taken interest in the Sunday school work, and we of the school have resolved to try to get all interested in this work. Bessie M., Rep.

Spring Hill, Piedmont Circuit.

Our pastor, Bro. Shelton, preached another one of his excellent sermons last Sunday. We certainly are well pleased with our pastor, and we think that all that do not belong to our church that come to preaching at our place of worship, are pleased with the way he preaches, by the way they come out. We do not think that we could have been sent a man that would have been loved better.

We have had no Sabbath school or class meeting at our church in quite a while, we are sorry to note. We hope to open Sabbath school soon.

We now have preaching twice a month instead of once. So come, fellow members, and let's get to work and do something worth while this year. Pray for us that this may be a year of usefulness in the carse of Christ.

D. T. Hilton, Rep.

High Point, N. C., March 11, 1913.

Hope, Siler City Circuit.

On last Sunday at 11 o'clock our pastor, Rev. J. H. Bowman, filled his regular appointment at this place and preached an excellent sermon. The day was beautiful, but the congregation was not as large as usual on account of measles being so prevalent in the community. We were glad to have Misses Lula and Livie West, of Ramseur, with us. They were visiting their uncle, Bro. B. H. Waddell. We were also glad to have Mrs. Mills of Greensboro who is visiting her daughter, Mrs. J. U. Tally. We are so glad to know that Sister Emeline Jones, one of our oldest members, who had the misfortune about three months ago to fall into the fire and get burned very badly, is able to be up again. We hope she may soon entirely recover and be with us at church again.

Sunday afternoon at 3:30 P. M. we met for Sunday school with a good attendance. School was opened by Supt. Underwood, and after the study of the lesson we were favored with an interesting talk on the lesson by Bro. C. E. Kinnaman.

Kara Andrew, Reporter.

Flat Rock.

Our pastor being indisposed, a good congregation heard with rapt attention Rev. John Dwiggins from God's words addressed to Adam, Adam, where art thou? applying it thus: God has put this question through the ages to millions of men, referring to their spiritual temperature. A personal question, and we add perhaps, a personal appeal; bringing up an entirely new line of thought to us from the theme. The sermon was deeply spiritual, the personality of the speaker, his mellow voice and intense earnestness appealing to all. The mature worshiper and gay lass were touched by its pathos. We are glad he has taken up this work.

Newel Dwight Hillis says, "There is no force for good like personal force."

As Bryant, writing on faith:

"He who from zone to zone
Guides through the boundless sky the sea gull's flight,
In the long way that he must tread alone
Will guide his steps aright,
Till he shall have reached the statelier Eden."

The epidemic of measles passed with the winter's pall, and spring opening so auspiciously, we believe there yet awaits this old historic church the remaining year of usefulness.

We wish to note this occurrence. In the early new year Miss Lanie Parrish, eldest daughter of Mr. Sidney Parrish, was married to a Mr. Adkins, moving to Lexington, N. C. She was a sweet, gentle girl, her tread among us as soft and unobtrusive as the bird's soft flight.

We regret the illness of our pastor, and with sadness note the extreme illness of others and the protracted sickness of Mr. and Mrs. Crawford. Reporter.

Liberty.

You have been quite a while hearing from me, but I hope to be more prompt in the future.

Our pastor, Mr. Millaway, was with us last Sunday and gave us an earnest and helpful sermon. His subject was The Faithful Man. He spoke of how much more our lives would be worth to us and others and what a reformation of good we would cause by our influence, if we were only faithful according to the principles of the Bible.

We, like so many other places, are having measles and whooping cough. This, of course, lessens our Sunday school attendance. We hope soon to all be well once more and to be able to go forward in our work this spring with renewed courage. Reporter.

Liberty, N. C., March 11.

Mt. Pleasant, Uwharrie Circuit.

We were glad to have Bro. Cecil with us last Saturday; he delivered a helpful sermon to a small but attentive congregation. We extend to him a hearty welcome to come again. There were 48 at our Sunday school yesterday. We have teachers from the M. E. for the little children, Mrs. Mamie and Nanne Welborn. They have missed but few Sundays for four years. I hope the Lord will reward them for their faithfulness.

It makes our hearts sad when we look on Bro. Trogdon's pale face and think of the suffering he has to endure from the operation he had last year. Brother Trogdon is a model Christian man. Brethren, we should help bear his burdens. He has a large family to support. We can help him by paying monthly. We find in 1 John 3:17, But whoso hath this world's good and seeth his brother have need and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him? Let us love in deed as well as in word. I believe we Mt. Pleasant people are about as poor as any of you. We gave Bro. Trogdon a right nice pounding. Why cannot the other churches do likewise? Our opportunity to do for our pastor may not last long.

G. F. Cashatt.

UNION CHAPEL, MOCKSVILLE CT.

Our pastor, Bro. Self, filled his appointment last Sabath and preached an interesting sermon which I think will do the church much good, if every one will practice it. His plans for collecting the assessments of the church are fine and I think are meeting the approval of the people. I hope that our church will be able to meet every claim this year. I think our conference did a good thing when it decided that the pastor's salary was to be paid quarterly. Our president, Bro. Cecil, was with us on the second Sabbath in February and gave us a most excellent sermon, and I think it revived the interest of all that heard him.

So far this year we have had no prayer meetings. Our class leader, Bro. T. H. Boger, has been sick for some time; he has been in a critical condition, but at present is somewhat improved. We are hoping to have him with us again. He is one of our best religious men and a good class leader. Yes, we are missing him.

Our Sabbath school has improved but very little. There is so much indifference. Wake up, Christian friends, and shake off the lethargy and get to work.

We are going to have a little Easter service. We have given out the recitations and songs and are practicing the children right along. Success is the child of confidence and perseverance. Success is our aim. We are more than sorry that we can't have our pastor with us on that day. One of our lady members is right sick, Mrs. B. F. Holton. She has been in Long's Sanitarium at Statesville until a few days ago. We are hoping for her a speedy recovery. She is a good Christian wife and mother. We ask the prayers and co-operation of all who feel interested in our church and its work.

Mrs. J. B. Robertson, Reporter.

CID, UWHARRIE CIRCUIT.

We were very much pleased to have our president with us Sunday at 3 P. M., accompanied by our pastor, Rev. J. B. Trogdon. He delivered a most excellent sermon telling us how to improve our talent that God has given to us, and that the people were letting these golden opportunities pass by. We trust that every one that heard Bro. Cecil will resolve to do more for the spiritual cause. Our congregation was not as large as usual, but it was due to the prevalence of measles in this community.

Our hearts were made sad when our pastor told us he expected he would have to go to the hospital soon. But let every Christian pray for him that the Lord will spare his life to return to us again and to his dear family. May the Lord sustain him in this trying hour.

Mr. James Tysinger, one of our faithful members at Jerusalem, passed away on the 27th. He professed faith in Christ about two years ago, and he always had testified that he was living the best that he knew how. He leaves a wife and eleven children. He was 47 years old. Pneumonia was the cause of his death. He was a school mate of the writer and I hope to meet him above where there will be no more parting.

Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Crutchfield, who have been visiting in the country for the benefit of Mr. Crutchfield's health, expect to return to their home in Greensboro this week, right much improved.

Mr. Joshua Morgan and little son, of Jackson's Creek, were pleasant visitors at our home last week.

We hope to start up our Sunday school soon. (Mrs) N. W. Lanier.

MT. ZION, UWHARRIE CIRCUIT.

Our pastor, Rev. J. B. Trogdon, filled his regular apointment the first Sunday in this month. I am sorry to say that he was not able to be there, but God being his helper he was there, and as usual preached one of his most helpful and instructive sermons to a good congregation. We were glad to have Mr. Trogdon and little J. B. with us too. We are always glad to see Mrs. Trogdon. She always comes with a smile on her face and a kind word for every one.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely under the leadership of Mr. L. E. Hoover, but we ask your prayers for it.

Our president, Rev. C. A. Cecil, preached for us Saturday afternoon, March 8th. We were glad to have Bro. Cecil with us. He did some good preaching, besides the information he gave us on how to do and how to treat our pastor.

I heard several say that they would not have missed hearing Bro. Cecil for anything. We wish he could come oftener. May God's blessings go with him wherever he goes.

I ask the Christian people to pray for Bro. Trogdon that he may soon be restored to health. We were glad he was able to be with the president.

At the close of the president's sermon we held communion service.

Ethel Gaddis.

BURLINGTON M. P. BARACA CLASS.

Sunday, March 9, 1913, attendance 43, offering $2.10.

It is good news to the class to learn that its president, Dr. Hornaday, who has been in the hospital for some time, is expected to return this week.

C. B. Way, Press Reporter.

BURLINGTON.

We all enjoyed exceedingly the program rendered Sunday night by the ladies of the Foreign Missionary Society of our church. The house was well filled, and it looked very encouraging to see the ladies take an active part along this line.

The attendance of the Sunady school last Sunday was 216 and the collection $4.91. This is a goodly number for the weather has been rather chilly lately. Our school has been doing splendid work all during the new year, our aim is high and at the present time is not missing the mark very far.

A series of meetings will start in our church next Sunday night, with the aid of Rev. G. F. Millaway of Greensboro. We hope all our friends will pray that this meeting will be the means of reaping a large harvest for the Master.

The Junior Philathea Class have arranged to give a Waffle Supper in the old grotto building next Saturday night. This is one of the best working classes in the school and we are sure they will make a success of this. T. P. D.

LINCOLNTON.

Our average attendance in Sunday school for the winter months has been about 90. Our collection has been from $2.50 to $3.50. For the last few Sundays we have had an increase in our attendance which went to 108. We have a fine Sunday school, with faithful teachers and officers. Miss Lucy Gales is teacher of the Adult Bible Class, which reaches about 55 in number. Mrs. Maggie Hoke teaches an Intermediate class of girls and boys, from fifteen to twenty years in age. Miss Mattie Wright teaches of class of Junior boys and girls. Miss Lovella Ramsey teaches a little crowd of boys and girls, about 25 in all. Mrs. D. B. Johnson teaches a Junior class of boys and girls. Miss Lillie Buff teaches a class of Junior girls. The teacher are always present and on time. Our officers are also splendid workers and faithful to all their duties.

We are working hard on our Easter service, and hope to make a good impression on the Children's minds.

We have organized a Junior C. E. Society with about 23 members, which meets on Sunday afternoons at 4 o'clock. Our Senior Society has grown until it numbers about 25 members.

But with all this successful church work we have our sorrows and sadness. Tuesday, March 4th, one of our members, Mrs. Francis Wright, dropped dead in the yard. She was taken to Friendship cemetery Wednesday for burial. The pastor of Friendship conducted the funeral service, our pastor being absent, attending the inauguration at Washington. Sister Wright was a good woman, a devoted mother and a faithful wife. She leaves a husband, Bro. Frank Wright, ten children and a host of friends to mourn her loss, but our loss is her eternal gain. Oh, may we all so live as to be ready when God calls us, that we can meet Sister Wright in the land beyond the blue. About the saddest part of the death of Sister Wright was that she left a sweet little girl baby ten months old. It looks so sweet, yet it has no mother.

D. B. Johnson.

MECKLENBURG CT.

Yesterday was a good day. We held two good services and a prayer meeting at night. Paid on pastor's salary $9.50. Our monthly payment plan is going to work well. This circuit has been waiting until the close of the year and then failing to pay up, and when the salary is not paid when the year closes some churches consider it settled, which is not true in any other business. May everybody pray for us on this work that we may awake to a sense of duty and privilege.

W. P. Martin.

Granville Medley.

We are now settled down to work again and are enjoying it too. Our vacation was fine but there is nothing that interests a smart man (?) like work and there is plenty of that here to do.

Perhaps Bro. Peter Slewfoot may not be interested in all that I may write and I shall not blame him if he is not, but to those who are interested there are some points of interest to report, though it may take a smart man to see the points or to find them rather. I am not finding fault with what Peter said for he made some good points or hard hitters one or the other, I hardly know which to call them. But really I believe the majority of our church people like to read the local happenings of the different churches; especially if they happen to know the pastor. We would be surprised if we knew how many of our former parishioners read about our work and are interested in what we are doing. So many I have heard say that letters from former pastors were like letters from home. If one is doing anything the people that know him are glad to know it and look out for these things.

I really wish some one would stir up something out of the usual order. That is why I am tackling Bro. Slewfoot; for he is getting after us in good style and to be sure we will be reporting more or rather will try to have more of the real article to report. I want to say to Peter that it would not do to say it any other way than the way to which he referred the old stereotyped way; or some of the good honest fellows will accuse you of self or something of that kind. Why a way back in the years gone by two pastors happened to get a bigger pounding than another brother and they were so jubilant over it that it called forth the strains of the Spring poet to tell about it; whereupon some of those that stay in sackcloth and ashes, I suppose praying for a pounding got so bold as to accuse as big a man as one of the biggest in mind, body and soul as we have, and also one as small in all three of these as the other was big; yes, got big enough and little enough to accuse them of being interested in the sordid things of this earth more than in the good things of the kingdom.

From that day till this these brethren have surrendered their poetical talent to the honest man that did not want things done out of order and have simply said: "Soda, salt and pepper and other things too numerous to mention."

That Fish Story.

Bro. Editor, I am enclosing you a description of a great fish that was in Miami and if you believe it enough to give it in your paper perhaps it would be interesting to some of our readers to read a full account of it. I thought at one time that the news of more importance crowded my letter from the South; but since every body from the President down to my neighbor over here on another circuit has taken up the matter, I am beginning to think that he thought he would better cut me out before I would get in "a worse one."

A great many people said they enjoyed my letters but that was a great big fish story. As much as to say you ought to have left that out.

But I started out to tell you that we raised an old debt at Mt. Carmel Sunday that had been standing ever since before I came to this charge.

Union Chapel and Rehobeth have put a nice fence around the parsonage which improves the appearance a great deal and gives us protection too.

Our outlook is hopeful and we are planning and praying for a good year. We thank Bros. L. W. Huff and H. A. Finch for the active part they took in the improvements that have been made at the parsonage.

Glad that our children have recovered from their sickness and are in school again. We thank our heavenly Father for his goodness in permitting us to come back safe and sound and for the privilege of entering again into his vineyard to work.

N. G. Bethea.

Henderson, March 10.

(We thank Bro. Bethea for more about the "Fish." We expect to print that next week.—Editor.)

Randolph Circuit.

President Cecil's appointments:

March 22, Shiloh, at 11 A. M. Quarterly conference in the evening.

Gray's Chapel, Sun. 23rd, at 11 A. M. At Bethel, 3 P. M.

Julian, on Tabernacle Ct., at night.

The presence of every official member on Randolph Ct. is especially desired at the quarterly conference.

W. C. Lassiter.

Bro. Martin preached for us the second Sunday at 11 o'clock. I think Bro. Martin is one of the best we have ever had at this place. He preaches God's word; hit or miss, he lets it come.

J. M. Phifer, Rep.

[Our brother fails to give the name of his church.—Editor.]

—Rev. T. M. Johnson has bought a new Ford automobile. The next thing you may hear of him is that he has been up before Judge Eure or some other justice for over-speeding. We are warning him in time, and he cannot blame us for the consequences.

—Bro. E. M. Holt writes his views on question of enlargement. He thinks the price should remain the same and that there should be greater activity in the effort to extend the circulaion. We thank him.

—Bro. Abernethy has been down on Albemarle again on a preaching tour. Our people there want him to come again and help hold the fort till Bro. Gerringer gets through school.

ANOTHER APPEAL TO THE PULPIT.

In order to be a popular leader, a man must personify the master thought and passion of the people, which is usually wrong. Step high enough not to stumble at a straw, and have momentum enough not to be veered about by every idle breath of criticism. An idle, lazy dog wants to be noticed and petted, but a dog that is after a fox cares nothing about it. Saints shine brightest in the midst of trials. Keep out of the pink miasma of sloth and stagnation, and be a preacher militant. Opprobrious modern epithets, like fault-finder, old fogy, pessimist, long faced religion, or relic left over, are eternal mildness beside those hurled at John the Baptist, Paul and Christ. An unconverted person, with his religious fustian, may be the most acceptable and successful now in some churches. Deluded ecclesiastics may make a devil a Christian and a Christian a devil. They said that Paul was mad and that Christ had a devil. They called the Blue Beard, Henry the Eighth, a saint, and John Wesley in his Holy Club a heavenly minded little devil. If, like some of the old prophets, you receive a solemn burden from God to find fault and denounce as well as renounce, you must have their invincible courage; utter self-sacrifice and mountain strength. Any coward can admire and praise Jesus Christ, but it takes a loyal hero to follow him. Do not look around to catch the smiles, or shun the frowns, of the world. If you stand between the devil and the deep sea, your way out is perpendicular. If the world is against you you must be against the world, and if no friendly faces shine upon you, look heavenward and forward. It is not necessary for a Christian to defend his reputation, or keep his head on his shoulders. Paul lost his head, but God will ere long give it back to him with a crown on it. A setting star may rise again, but a falling star, never. Already has this Gospel Age continued longer than any preceding age. Keep a sacred bridal heart and spotless robes through this little while. We need not shout, wear plumes or flaunt banners yet, but it is supreme honor to live and be faithful amid these closing scenes. War makes heroes, and the combat deepens. Crowns are won in battle, and the last great battle is on. It is better now to be a faithful son of God than to be the son of a hundred kings. Point every eye to that great impending event on which the age hinges, and which dazzles contemplation. Heaven will not hold back our glorious Redeemer much longer. Put on a shining morning face and keep on the watch, as men of the girdle, the staff and the lamp, fired with the sacred passion of the second life and the age to come.—E. P. Marvin in the Dispensational Sketch of Redemption.

NARRATIVE OF A FOUR-HUNDRED-DOLLAR PREACHER.

By "Itinerant."

When Jo Smizer joined the Conference nearly sixty years ago, his preparation for the work before him and his equipment were about the average for the young preacher of that day. That is to say, he had a fair smattering of an English education, but knew but little of divinity. He had a good horse and a large pair of saddlebags in which he carried his clothes and books and some other things of necessity. He was from a back country district where he had been reared with none of the advantages, so common to young men of today. Of his early ministry there is little to say, as it was about like that of other young preachers. There was nothing conspicuous in what he did or of what he experienced. We begin the narrative of his life and experience at the time of mature manhood. He had just been transferred to the Conference where we find him at the time indicated. The Conference had appointed him to a two-point pastorate charge, whih his elder had told him would pay one thousand dollars, but which, in fact, promised only about half that amount. Out of this he was expected to pay house rent and support a family of six, for at that time he had four small children. The following spring his health began to fail, and for a year or more he continued to decline. He was reappointed to the same work for the nert year, but his health had so far failed by the middle of the year as to compel him to give up one of his appointments, the stronger one. This left him dependent on one weak society and his own resources for support. His strength during the year was so far reduced that he was barely able to walk about his premises, and he could only stand long enough to deliver a sermon by resting on the pulpit and by the use of a cane. His condition greatly distressed him. How he was to provide the absolute necessities of his family was a question that would not down. In some way he had been able up to this time to supplement his quarterage receipts so as to meet his wants, but how to meet the demands of his family when in such feeble health, he could not imagine. Often and often did he take his case to his God; but the burden grew no lighter, and when it is known that he was suffering from nervous prostration, his mental condition, or, properly, mental agony, can be the better understood. It was at this time the crisis came.

We shall let Bro. Smizer tell the story in his own way: "One day I was walking up and down the porch praying and thinking and in great distress of mind and soul for my loved ones, as I could see no way to care for them longer. That I was soon to be taken from them seemed almost certain, and what could I do? Nothing. Finally, this thought came into mind: God who made the universe can surely care for his children. But will he? I felt so unworthy that I feared to trust him, but I finally reached the point where I could say from my heart: 'I have food and raiment for today and will trust him for the morrow.' Instantly light came and I rejoiced, for at last I was at peace."

Brother Smizer has never doubted for a moment God's presence at that time, not only because of his soul experience, but because of his experience through all the years which have followed. Though his little charge paid him less than four hundred dollars, somehow the family did not want. His next appointment, though containing many really wealthy members, paid little more than his last one. One year it did not pay over four hundred dollars, yet our brother was cheeful and uncomplaining. What was lacking in quarterage, and that was not a little, he in some way managed to supply, as he believed, through the providence of his Heavenly Father. When he reached his next appointment, his faith was to be tested again. His reception was as cold as a blast from the north pole. At the close of the first Sunday's service not a person spoke to him, but simply turned their backs on him and marched out. On Monday night following he met the stewards. Their spokesman announced that they would not be able to pay over four hundred and fifty dollars, and that if he did not wish to remain and serve them for that amount he could leave. He replied that he could not live on that amount, and that, as the Conference had sent him there, he could not leave and, God helping him, he would not. They then fixed his salary at five hundred and fifty dollars, but failed to pay all of that. Here he was, his children requiring more each year and needing schooling, and every department of the Church in a discouraging condition, and church and parsonage in a dilapidated state. But with that promise received on the old porch of his hired house, he took up his work, God, as he still believes, supplying his wants and raising up friends and blessing his labors.

But his trials were not yet over. His last appointment came with a terrible shock, a shock from which he rallied with great difficulty. He had expected to return to his former charge, and had no hint that there would be a change till the appointments were read out. The appointment he receved this year was a weak mission in an important town of considerable size. Our church was a small frame in an out-of-the-way place, and it was agreed that our future depended on the building of a new house in an eligible locality, but the leading members said this could not be done. There was no parsonage. The mission was able to pay about four hundred dollars. To this was added not a very large appropriation for the first year, and even this was reduced in subsequent years. The members were distressed lest their preacher and family should suffer. Brother Smizer, learning this, said to them: "Lose no sleep on my account. Pay what you can and do not worry. If my Father has a work for me to do here, he will take care of me." Still the outlook was a dark one. Could he build? Did God need him? These to our brother were live questions. He went to God in prayer as he had seldom done, and again obtained the victory and came from the place of prayer with the assurance that his family should not want and that the house of God should be built and these things came to pass.

In this, the most difficult work to which he had ever been assigned, Brother Smizer met with wonderful success. The outside work which he had to do to meet the wants of his growing family was very heavy and finally proved to be more than his frail body could endure. He was at last forced to ask for a place among the worn-out men. Could he have had a short rest occasionally, there is no reason to suppose that he could not have served the Church for many years more. Notwithstanding his uniformly poor appointments, he never complained nor asked for better work. His family was a great help to him. His wife was an earnest Christian, and his children came into the Church early in life and took up the work of the Church as opportunity offered.

Brother Smizer is getting to be an old man now, and has not been able for years to contribute much to his own support, but he lives in a comfortable home and is not in want. Sometimes, when the clouds are dark and billows roar, he has to go back to his victory on the old porch.—Christian Advocate.

—President C. A. Cecil will preach at the morning hour for service at Grace church, Greensboro, next Sunday.

A MOVEMENT FOR THE COUNTRY CHURCH.

Possibly never before in the history of this country has there been such a series of meetings as will be held in Richmond, Va., April 16-18, 1913.

Thoughtful men everywhere are awakening to the urgency of developing a country life that will be satisfying as well as wholesome. Intent upon this the farmers of the South are coming together to work out marketing plans, aiming to provide an ample economic basis. Business men, realizing that the best asset of the usual town is the country around it, will meet at the same time in Richmond to take steps for aiding in this farm life development.

With increased income will come comforts for farm households; but country life must have deeper satisfactions. In undertaking to increase the productive power of the farm, both school and church can aid effectively. However, their special opportunity lies in creating social conditions that will make the country a delightful and satisfying place in which to live.

The school workers have their part well planned and under way. Therefore there has arisen a spontaneous call for a Conference of Country Preachers dealing with the problems of the country church. The following programs have resulted. An earnest invitation is extended to all interested to come to Richmond and to take part in these and in other meetings. The plan is to have real conferences. The leaders are to take out a few minutes in putting facts and propositions before the different bodies, giving abundant time for everybody to take part. The purpose is to work out definite plans and get the means of carrying these out.

CONFERENCE OF VIRGINIA PREACHERS RICHMOND, VA., APRIL 16, 1913.

Dr. D. C. Lilly, President of Richmond Ministerial Union Chairman.

I. The Social Service Ideal for the Country Church in Virginia,—Dr. Robert Frazer, Lahore, Va.

II. Co-operation Among Country Churches in Social service,—Rev. B. M. Beckham, Danville, Va.

III. The Country Church and the Country School,—Mr. T. S. Settle, Richmond, Va.

IV. The Country Church and Health,—Dr. Ennion Williams, State Health Commissioner, Richmond, Va.

V. The Country Church and Recreation,—Rev. J. J. Gravatt, Rapidan, Va.

VI. The Country Church and Community Morals,—Rev. W. S. Noye, Louisa, Va.

CONFERENCE ON THE COUNTRY CHURCH.

April 17-18, 2:30 P. M.

E. C. Branson, Professor of Rural Economics, State Normal College, Athens, Ga., Chairman.

I. How can the country church aid in developing a stable and productive farm-life? Three minute answers led by S. C. Mitchell, President of the University of South Carolina, Columbia.

II. What part has the Church in Movements for the Betterment of Community Conditions? Rev. George P. Mayo, Founder and Superintendent of the Blue Ridge Industrial School for Mountain Boys and Girls, Dyke, Green Co., Va.

III. Is it possible for the country church to promote home and neighborhood industries? D. H. Hill, President, A. & M. College, Raleigh, N. C.

IV. How can the country church promote cooperative enterprises among farmers and what will the social and ethical results be? E. M. Tousley, of the Right-Relationship League, Minneapolis, Minn.; the Apostle of Cooperation "The Story of Clark's Grove," T. L. Haecker, Head of the Dairy School, College of Agriculture, Minn.

V. What can the country church do to promote the intellectual and social life of the community?

1. What can it do to stimulate reading and the intellectual life in general? Dr. R. H. Pitt, Editor of the Religious Herald, Richmond, Va.

2. What can it do to develop an interesting and elevating social life? Rev. J. J. Gravatt, Rapidan, Va.

VI. The Relation of the Village Church to the Open Country, Miss Anna B. Taft, Assistant Superintendent, Department of Church and Country Life, Board of Home Missions, Presbyterian Church, New York.

VII. Is it possible for the country church to work for more wholesome and attractive homes?

1. What can it do for sanitation? J. A. Ferrell, Assistant Secretary, State Board of Health, Raleigh, N. C.

2. How may it make the homes more artistic and attractive? Everybody.

"Little drops of water,
Little strokes of hoe,
Make the cane-stalks fatten
And the coupons grow."

—Kohata Midget.

—Wilson prehaps does not expect to be President again, but he expects to be President this time.

REMEMBER IT IS MARCH 16TH, 1913.

The celebration of the hundredth anniversary of the birth of David Livingstone, the great missionary to Africa, is now engaging the thought of Protestants of all denominations on both sides of the Atlantic.

It is unifying them in a service in which will be presented his splendid character, his masterful faith, his indominatable energy, his quenchless devotion, his persistent labors, his phenomenal achievements, and also his hardships, dangers, sufferings and death by his couch in the straw hut in the African wilds.

We do well to honor the memory of that great man, missionary to the heathen, benefactor of a continent; and to hold him up as an example to the young today that poor parentage is no bar to highest development, to noblest life, to world-influencing service.

From his life, labors, successes as a "Missionary, Traveler and Philanthropist" to the general theme of the church's world-wide mission, and to our own denomination's foreign missionary enterprises are easy and natural steps in a discourse.

Pastors are asked to preach a foreign missionary sermon on Sunday, March 16th, and include references to our own work in Japan where we now have a Mission Conference of 32 workers, fifty churches and missions, for the blind, and other features of work.

To maintain and develop that constantly growing work requires an increase in our Board's receipts, but the church is not responding quickly enough nor adequately.

Pastors are earnestly urged to raise the assessment for foreign missions on that day, and the C. E. Societies are urged to make their offering for the support of their missionary, Rev. E. I. Obee, in Maryland Conference, Rev. L. Layman.

Rev. E. I. Obee and family are on the Pacific bound for Japan for another term of service at Nagoya. The Societies are requested to offer prayer in their behalf.

The Sunday schools are not asked to have a service, nor to make an offering, as the Board of Home Missions has the right of way with its Easter service and offering from the schools.

What About That Epuipment.

The church ought to provide for the greatest possible extension of its work, and to have it done in the best way to secure the largest results.

The last General Conference created this Board and elected its corresponding secretary-treasurer, but also took action which curtailed its operations, restricted it to unbusiness like methods, and made impossible what the church has a right to expect by requiring the corresponding secretary-treasurer to do everything in and out of the office without any assistant whatever which is the only case among forty Boards in America.

That receipts may be applied to the work, I have appealed to our friends to give to the Board a typewriter, addressograph, etc., but have had no response.

If through the present short-sighted policy the church is not more largely enlisted in the enterprise, to use Dr. Tagg's words, "If you force the secretary to fail, then in the name of justice and religion, do not charge him with the falure."

Fred C. Klein, Cor. sec.-Treas.
316 N. Charles Street, Baltimore, Md.

Westminster Seminary Notes.

A number of the students attended the suffrage parade in Washington March 3, as well as the inauguration of President Wilson the day following. All report a delightful time.

The new officers of Stockton Literary Society of the last term are as follows: Pres., F. W. Stephenson; Vice-Pres., C. C. Day; Sec., G. C. Foltz; Treas., R. A. Swaringen, Chaplain, A. Parsells; Marshal, G. Enfield.

The usual winter course of lectures has been pursued without a break and has included such able and representative men as Dr. T. H. Lewis, Dr. Frank Foster, of Pittsburgh, Pres. Holt of W. Va., Dr. C. H. Hubbel, Rev. E. T. Reed, and Rev. E. D. Stone of Washington.

The senior class has been pursuing a course in the practical department relating Sunday school work that has proved very interesting and helpful.

A READER WRITES.

Dear Editor: I have just received our paper. After reading your piece I was sorry we did not send in our request, as we forgot all about it; but I am sure we would not have kicked on anything you would have decided on, as we have always taken it ever since it has been published, and of course we want it still if we have to stop some of our other papers. I think all Christians ought to take this good paper. I am always glad when the new paper it comes; it passes off many lonely hours. After reading the "Broken Clouds" it brought many thoughts to my mind. I think of the clouds of discouragement. Then my mind ran back to a real storm once. I was all alone (5 years ago this June). Such a hail came, beat out nearly all the wheat in the fields. The hail began as large as birds' eggs; in a short while it was as large as hen eggs. The strong oaks had their tops almost touching the ground. I never saw such a time. It was so dark the chickens went to roost. I did not think I would be left. I had only one little girl. I took her in my arms and walked the floor and sang, Jesus Lover of My Soul. I thought of the time when Wesley wrote that song, while sheltered in an old spring house from a storm. That song has always been sweet to me. My little girl often speaks of that time.

One other thought: I began to save all my Sunday eggs to give to the Lord this year. I thought I would be glad if all others would do so if they can. I think we will be surprised at the end of the year at what we have given so easily.

With love and best wishes to Editor and all readers, Mrs. J. B. T.

—The Michigan house voted to resubmit to the popular vote the women suffrage amendment defeated last fall and the Iowa house voted to submit a similar amendment. The Minnesota senate killed the suffrage bill passed by the house.

—Matrimony is not for those over a century old. Happiness and excitement killed Marcellina Leon, said to be 105 years old, after she had shown stamina sufficient to win her way and obtain the consent of the courts to marry the man who for 50 years had been her sweetheart. She is dead after being a bride but five days. Relatives opposed her marriage to Pleasantino Leor, 82 years old. She fought them in the courts, obtained the dismissal of her niece as guardian and established her competency to do as she chose, but shortly after her marriage she collapsed.—Pathfinder.

—A fellow senator once asked Daniel Webster why he went to church twice on Sunday in the country and not twice in Washington. He replied: "In Washington they preach to Daniel Webster, the statesman, but this man has been telling Daniel Webster, the sinner, of Jesus of Nazareth, and it has been helping him. When a man preaches to me I want him to make it a personal matter, a personal matter."

—The Stewart brothers, of Los Angeles, who are the "Two Christian Laymen" who published the widely distributed series of pamphlets entitled "The Fundamentals," have put more than $125,000 into the work and circulated well over 10,000,000 copies of the nine volumes in the series which have thus far appeared.

CHANGING WHITE HOUSE TENANTS.

W. H. Taft, who has been occupying the White House for the last four years, moved out March 4. Our effable fellow-townsman, we understand, has accepted a lucrative position as a lecturer at Yale university. His many friends wish him success in his new field.

The new tenant is a man named Woodrow Wilson. He comes from New Jersey and brings with him flattering testimonials, having served there in the capacity of governor. His advancement to the post of pilot of the ship of state is a promotion which he received in competition with a number of other candidates, all very good men, it is said. He says that he expects to go slow for a while as he is green at this job but that after he gets the hang of the thing he expects to try for some new records.

Our reporter happened to call at the White House just as the old tenant was preparing to leave and the new one was coming in and the reporter was asked to join in an inspection of the premises, which have been repaired, treated to a nice coat of paint and papered throughout, and which now look as slick as a new dollar.

"Is the furnace in good shape?" asked Mr. Wilson.

"First class," responded Mr. Taft. "I put in a new grate only last week and I have left enough coal and kindling in the cellar to get you started. The ax is a little dull but I just paid 25 cents to get the buck-saw sharpened and you will find that all right."

"Are you troubled with mice or rats?"

"No; they did knock over several glasses of jelly last fall, and eat it, but we got a new cat and she has kept them down ever since. We will leave her here, but please be kind to her as we consider her almost as a member of the family."

"How about the refrigerator and lawn mower; are they in good condition?"

"Yes. The refrigerator cost me $5.95 only last summer and is good as new. The lawn-mower is all right except it slips a cog now and then and you have to poke it with a wire or something. The lawn here is pretty big, you see, but by putting in an hour or so before breakfast on it you can keep the grass down. It is very good exercise. Speaking of exercise, do you play golf?"

"Those who have seen me say not. The bicycle is my favorite diversion. I expect to take a ride every day the weather is good. I notice your streets in Washington are all paved with asphalt, and I'm dying to try my wheel on them."

"You'll find a good place to keep it under the back stairs."

"Oh, my wife would not allow me to keep my wheel in the house. She is expecting to have a good deal of company and people would be always falling over it, and anyway she says a bicycle is as much out of place in the house as a horse or automobile would be. I notice a number of the chairs seem to be more or less rickety, while others have been broken and mended."

"Yes, I am a little hard on chairs and I have been kept busy gluing and nailing them up. I would advise you to get a few more at the next bargain sale."

"The cow, does she milk easy?"

"You mean 'Pauline'? I gave her back to Senator Stephenson of Wisconsin. She would kick the milk over about every third day and I thought she would only make you trouble. I don't know as it pays to keep a cow anyway, as she is always getting into the garden or running away and it is embarrassing in the middle of a state dinner or diplomatic reception to have someone coming running in to tell you that 'the cow's got out again.' Pauline ate up my best summer suit while it was hanging on the line, and I have never forgiven her."

"I don't see but what everything is in pretty good shape. Have you any further suggestions to make about the place, or is there anything that needs tending to?"

"Well, I would recommend you to spade up the garden and spray the fruit-trees as soon as you can get around to it. I might warn you about some of the callers you will have. People seem to think they have a right to come in here whenever they like and stay as long as they like, and sometimes you have to be pretty sharp with them. I notice you have announced that you expect to have the door always open, and I'm afraid this will make trouble for you."

"Oh, if I leave the door open, that will make it all the easier to fire undesirable visitors out; don't you see?"

"Ha! ha! I see your point. Well, good-by, Mr. Wilson. I hope you will like your new job. The work isn't exactly a snap, but the pay is pretty good."

"Good-by, Mr. Taft. Drop in when you're down this way. Good-by!"—The Pathfinder.

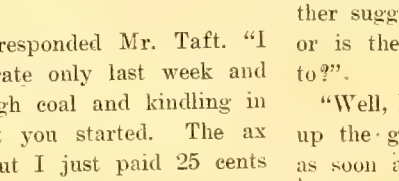
THOSE TERRIBLE GERMAN WORDS.

We have some pretty hard words in English, but they are only A. B. C.'s to some of the words that are frequently found in German technical papers and text-books. For example how do you like this: "Ziegelstrangpressenstahlabschneidenrathbefestigungswickelstuckeinsatz"; or this: "Kohlenstaubselbstentzuendungstemperaturherabminderungsmoeglichkeit"?

These words seem ridiculous, but as a matter of fact they are logically formed and there is not a superfluous letter in them. The German language is far superior to English in this respect, for it allows an unlimited stringing-together of root words to express any desired idea. In English we can only reach the same end by means of the separate words and by using a large number of other words to connect them into sentences. The German words are what Lewis Carroll calls "portmanteau" words on account of the large amount of meaning that can be packed in them.—The Pathfinder.

ANOTHER PROBLEM

Two factories are 5 miles apart. One is 3 miles from a straight railroad and the other is 6 miles from the same railroad and on the same side of it. Call the factories A and B, and let C and D be the nearest points of the railroad to A and B respectively. It is desired to locate a depot between C and D at the point F so that the sum of the distances AF and BF will be the smallest possible. Find the position of F.



NOT A RECEPTIVE WIDOW.

"De Widdah Smoot am awful rich, ain't she sah?"

"Yas, sah! Her husban' left her 'most two hundred dollahs. Think ob dat, sah!"

"Do she want to marry ag'in?"

"Uh-well, no, sah; muh 'pinion, she don't, presizely. She's got a couple o' big-moufed, surgical-lookin' bulldogs runnin' loose in de yard, a club behind de do', a basket o' rocks in de middle o' de flo', and a wash-b'iler o' scalding water on de stove dat she sw'ars she's gwine to fling all over de next nigger dat comes irritatin' 'round, 'scussin' 'bout how much cheaper two kin live dan one. No, sah, muh 'cision am dat de lady ain't noways inquisitive 'bout marryn' ag'in."—Woman's Home Companion.

"Statesmen all agree that the tariff could be revised to advantage."

"Yes," replied Senator Sorgham; "but the question is whose advantage?"—Washington Star.

AY, THERE'S THE RUB.

Senator Olive James of Kentucky is bald.

"Does being bald bother you much?" a candid friend asked him once.

"Yes, a little," answered the truthful James.

"I suppose you feel the cold severely in winter," went on the friend.

"No; it's not that so much," said the senator. "The main bother is when I'm washing myself—unless I keep my hat on I don't know where my face stops."—Montgomery Journal.

Mrs. Beck—What party does your husband belong to?

Mrs. Peck—I'm the party.—Boston Transcript.

"And so you are married?"

"I told you I was going to be."

"But I thought it was a joke."

"It isn't."—Houston Post.

"He's a deep thinker."

"I guess so. None of his ideas ever get to the surface."—Detroit Free Press.

Crawford—I hear he was operated on. What did he have?

Crabshaw—Money.

Patient—But, doctor, you are not askink $5 for merely taking a cinder out of my eye?

Specialist—Er-no. My charge is for removing a foreign substance from the superfices of the cornea.

OUR WORK.

An angel passed over the earth one morning and met a little child in a sunny field. "Little one," said he, "do you love the Master?"

The child looked up with bright eyes, and said: "Yes, I am one of his little lambs."

"Then," said the angel, "there is work for you to do. Go do it."

"Yes; I will do it after a while," said the child. "It's only morning now; the day will be long, and I do love to play."

And the child ran away after the butterflies and flowers. The angel, on his way, murmured: "The day will end, the night comes, and it will be too late."

In a few years the child had grown into a schoolboy. The angel visited the earth again one morning, and passed near the school, found the boy locked out, too late for school.

"My boy," said he, "the day is passing, night will come, and your work is not yet begun."

"O," laughed the boy, "there is plenty of time. The sun was shining so brightly that I could not stay shut up in the schoolroom."

In a few more years the angel visited the earth for the last time. He was passing down a hill one evening, when he overtook an old man leaning on his staff. Slowly he plodded down the hill toward an open grave.

"My friend," said the angel, "have you completed the life work which was yours to do?"

"The night is come," said the old man, "and my work is not yet begun. The day seemed so long, but now it is too late."—Selected.

"THE LORD IS MY SHEPHERD, I SHALL NOT WANT."

This working analysis of the twenty-third psalm was sent in by Mrs. S. E. Collier, Braceville, Ohio, who based it upon something which she heard at a devotional service.

I shall not want rest. "He maketh me to lie down in green pastures."

I shall not want drink. "He leadeth me beside the still waters."

I shall not want pardon. "He restoreth my soul."

I shall not want guidance. "He leadeth me in the path of righteousness."

I shall not want companionship. "Thou art with me."

I shall not want comfort. "Thy rod and thy staff, they comfort me."

I shall not want food. "Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies."

I shall not want joy. "Thou anointest my head with oil."

I shall not want satisfaction. "My cup runneth over."

I shall not want anything in this life. "Goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life."

I shall not want anything in eternity. "And I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever."

Jesus says concerning all of these things:

Rest. "Come unto me, all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Drink. "If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink."

Pardon. "The Son of Man hath power on earth to forgive sins."

Guidance. "I am the way, the truth and the life."

Companionship. "Lo, I am with you always."

Comfort. "I will not leave you comfortless; I will come to you."

Food. "I am the bread of life."

Joy. "That my joy might remain in you."

Satisfaction. "That your joy might be full."

Anything in this life. "Seek we first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."

Anything in eternity. "In my Father's house are many mansions. I go to prepare a place for you."—New York Christian Advocate.

THERE ARE SOME LOST METHODISTS.

A New York daily, under the headline, "Lost! Twenty-five Thousand Presbyterians," tells of a movement to find that many members of the Presbyterian Church in the city of New York not identified with any of the churches of that city. We wonder how many thousands of lost Methodists there are in this good State of Georgia—that is, Methodists who have moved away from the Church where they have held their membership into other communities, and have not yet identified themselves with the local Church neaerst them. A considerable number of these lost Methodists have their "letters" in their trunks. Some of them claim membership back where they came from, but never go to the public worship there. A search for "lost" Methodists in our cities would be worth while for our pastors and laymen. To find them would be a blessing to the "lost" ones.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

OUR COUNTRY'S DEBT TO CHRIST.

Everything of permanent value in our national life has upon it the mark of the Lord Jesus. Our debt to the Son of God is beyond the range of human calculation. Consider certain outstanding facts which are manifest even to those who claim not the gift of philosophic observation.

Christianity has profoundly influenced the economics of the nation. Indeed, wherever the religion of Jesus has become a strong, controlling motive in the hearts of a considerable proportion of the citizens of a country, the economic conditions have undergone healthful change and development. Men become better farmers, mechanics, merchants, and manufacturers when they become Christians. To be sure, our economic life is capable of vast improvement. But let us not forget that its best elements are Christian, and that its possibility of future development along artistic lines is dependent upon the acceptance and practice of Christian principles by our citizens.—United Presbyterian.

At best life is not a play spell or a song; it must have its episodes of sorrow. At worst it may be borne by the brave and steadfast, in the hope of brightness further on.—Margaret E. Sangster.

DIED.

Wright.

Mary F. Hoyle was born Sept. 3, 1872, and died March 4, 1913, aged 40 years, six months and one day. About 20 years ago she married Frank Wright, son of George Wright, of Fallston, N. C. She leaves a husband and ten children to mourn their loss. In early life she joined the Methodist Protestant church at Laurel Hill and was a faithful member there until she moved to Lincolnton, to which place she moved her membership, and remained in our church there till yesterday morning when she suddenly departed for her heavenly home. Funeral services held today in our church at Fallston, N. C., by the writer, assisted by Bro. Reid, pastor of Cleveland circuit. Another Methodist Protestant has gone to join the ranks of the redeemed in glory.

D. A. Highfill.

March 5, 1913.

Dixon.

Cleveland Hendrix Dixon was born Nov. 15, 1884, and died March 2, 1913. He was the youngest son of Brother J. F. Dixon of Reidsville, his mother having preceded him to the glory world by several years. The brothers are: J. M. Dixon, now of Atlanta, Ga., Rev. A. G. Dixon, pastor of Main St. M. P. Church, High Point; J. W. Dixon, Summerfield; J. A. Dixon, Reidsville; T. Dixon, Winston-Salem, and Robert Dixon, near Greensboro. He had but one sister, Mrs. A. O. McCollom of Reidsville. Cleveland was converted at Fair Grove M. P. Church in August, 1894, and joined Midway Church before he was quite eleven years of age. He was of a most kind and companionable disposition, which made him generally well liked by those who knew him, and as he easily made acquaintances he had a large number of friends.

Several years ago he accepted a position with Henderson Loan and Real Estate Company, which position he held with increasing credit to himself until he was offered a position with the Southern Life and Trust Co. of Greensboro something like three years ago. And so well did he succeed with them that he was promoted the first of this year to the head of the Fire Insurance Deparment of this Company for Greensboro and vicinity, which position he was holding at the time of his death.

His death was quite a shock to all his friends, for but few of them knew of his sickness; even they were hopeful of recovery until a few hours before the end came. Although the end came suddenly, he knew of the approach of death and expresed his readiness to go. His brother, Rev. A. G. Dixon, was with him during hs most serious sickness until the end came, as was Sister Dixon, and to them he gave assurance of his readiness.

Cleveland was a member of Grace church, Greensboro, bringing his letter from Henderson. He was a member of the Board of Stewards of Grace and was held in high esteem by a large circle of friends here. He was buried in the church burying ground at Midway church in Rockingham, beside his mother. It was there resting beneath boquets and wreaths of the most beautiful and fragrant flowers we left him to await the resurrection morn. We pray that the God of all grace may bless and keep and finally bring to Himself the bereaved loved ones. Funeral services were conducted in the church by the writer assisted by Rev. C. E. M. Raper.

R. M. Andrews.

Wright.

In loving memory of Mary Francis Wright, who departed this life March 4, 1913, but to take up a life of peace and happiness with God. She has gone to reap what she has sown.

She has endeavored to live a Christian life for 30 years and we know that a sweeter home than ours in heaven is now her own.

Oh, mother, thy sweet presence is gone,
A voice we love is still,
A place made vacant in our home
Which can never more be filled.

We miss our darling mother, but God in his great love saw fit to take her from us and I hope to meet her some day. So let us so live that we can meet her.

We took her to Friendship Wednesday and laid her to rest near where she has two little lambs. Then bidding good bye to the spot where our loved ones are at rest we left them to sleep, for we know this side of heaven we will never see them more.

Martha Francis Wright,
Monroe Cornelius Wright.

Prov. 31:28—"Her children rise up, and call her blessed." On Thursday, March the 4th, I was called to Pinnacle to preach the funeral of Mrs. Martha J. Crouse. The services were held in the M. P. church in the presence of a large congregation. Rev. A. L. Hunter assisted in the service. Since my return I have been requested to write an obituary of Mrs Crouse. The following tribute was prepared by her son and was endorsed by all the children as an estimate of the character and worth of their mother. The tribute was read at the funeral and I was so impressed with its beauty and fitness that I submit it for publication in lieu of an obituary.

W. F. Kennett.

Mrs. Marth J. Crouse (nee Scott) died March 1st, 1913 aged 57 years, 3 days.

She was united in marriage to Isaac Wesley Crouse Dec. 24th, 1874. Their union was blessed with 11 children, 6 boys and 5 girls. Her husband and 4 children preceded her to the great beyond.

She professed faith in Christ at the age of 12 years and was united with the Methodist Protestant church at Mt. Zion. Her remaining years were spent in living an upright and consistent Christian life.

About 16 years ago her husband and companion was called from this life, and she was left with an aged mother and several small children to care for and support. Instead of becoming discouraged, she seemed to be perfectly content and resigned to the will of God, and never once seemed to tire in her efforts to provide for her children and aged mother. Not only did she provide for the temporal needs of her children but more especially did she try at all times and under all conditions to provide for their spiritual wants. The Bibles, worn by daily and constant usage, will ever serve as a reminder to her hildren of the loving, trusting and constant faith she had in God and his word. Many times we remember when others were sad and discouraged, almost ready to give up the battle for God and the right, she would be shouting praises to the Lord and thanking Him for His goodness. These hours of thanksgiving and praise to God will never be forgotten by her children; but prompted by a great, divine and lasting desire that our family should be one unbroken around the throne of God in Heaven, and realizing the fact that some of her children for whom she had prayed so much would not be able to reach her bed-side in time to talk with her again in this life, she sat up in bed only a short time before she became unconscious to the things of this world and repeated the following verse, which she bid them to ever remember as her last token of advice:

1. Have you not heard what dreadful plagues
Are threatened by the Lord
To him who breaks his father's law
And mocks his mother's word.
2. When children their Redeemer fear
Instructed by his word,
Their, life, their joy, their love, their fear,
Will center in the Lord.
3. Religion will be their chief delight
And Christ will be their friend,
To guide their youthful steps aright
And lead them to the end.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.
Greensboro, N. C.

N. B.—Following schedule figures published only as information and are not guaranteed.

1.00 A. M.—No. 29 daily, Birmingham Special, through Pullman sleeping and observation cars New York to Birmingham and Richmond to Birmingham. Luring car service.

12.48 A. M.—No. 32 daily, Southern's Limited, Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville, Augusta and Aiken to New York. Dining car service.

12.55 a. m.—No. 112 daily for Raleigh and Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh open at 9.15 p. m.

[illegible] a. m.—No. 30 daily, Birmingham special. Pullman sleeping and observation cars from Birmingham and Asheville to New York and Birmingham to Richmond. Dining car service.

2.25 a. m.—No. 31, the Southern's Southeastern Limited, Pullman sleeping cars from New York to Asheville. Day coaches. Dining car service.

3.45 a. m.—No. 45 daily local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7.10 a m.—No. 8, daily local for Richmond, connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7.20 a. m.—No. 37 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited Pullman drawing room, sleeping cars and club and observation cars New York to new Orleans. Pullman sleeping car New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon Pullman chair car Greensboro to Montgomery, solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

[illegible] a. m.—No. 108 daily local Greensboro to Goldsboro.

7.35 a. m.—No. 11, daily local through to Atlanta, sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

[illegible] m.—No. 154 daily except Sunday for Ramseur.

8.15 a. m.—No. 237 daily for Winston-Salem and North Wilkesboro. Pullman sleeping car Raleigh to Winston-Salem.

9.30 a. m.—No. 44 daily for Washington and points North.

9.40 a. m.—No. 144 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro; handles Atlanta Raleigh sleeping car.

12.30 p. m.—No. 21 daily for Asheville, Waynesville and local points; handles coaches and chair car through to Asheville and Waynesville.

12.50 p. m.—No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12 30 p. m.—No 21 daily for Asheville.

12.55 p. m.—No. 7 daily for Charlotte and points south.

1.40 p. m.—No. 36 daily U. S. Fast Mail for Washington, New York and points north; handles Pullman sleeping cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman sleeping car Asheville to Richmond Pullman chair car Greenville, S. C., to Washington. Day coaches. Dining car service.

2.20 p. m.—No. 207 daily for Winston-Salem, and daily execept Sunday for North Wilkesboro.

2.30 p. m.—No. 151 daily except Sunday for [illegible]

[illegible] .o. 230 daily except Sunday for Madison.
Ramseur.

2.30 p. m.—No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4.20 p. m.—No. 22 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles chair car to Goldsboro.

4.55 p. m.—No. 131 daily for Mt. Airy.

6.10 p m.—No. 35 daily U. S. Fast Mail for Atlanta and points scuth Pullman sleeping cars New York to New Orleans and Birmingham and sleeping car Richmond to Asheville which car can be occupied until 7 a. m. Pullman chair car Washington to Greenville, S. C. Day coaches. During car service.

6.35 p. m.—No. 235 daily for Winston-salem.

7.30 p. m.—No. 43 daily for Atlanta Sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10.13 p. m.—No. 38 daily New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited Pullman sleeping cars New Orleans, Macon, Asheville and Charlotte to New York and Pullman chair car Montgomery to Greensboro. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

10.20 p. m.—No. 233 daily for Winston-Salem.

10.31 p. m.—No. 12 daily local for Richmond; handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman, Vice-President and General Manager, Washington, D. C.; S. H. Hardwick, P T. M., Washington, D. C.; H. F. Carv, G. P. A., Washington, D. C.; R. H. DeButts, D. P. A., Charlotte, N. C.; 0. F. York, P. & A., Greensboro, N C.

Dr. J. E. Wyche.
DENTIST.
Office in Benbow Arcade, S. Elm St.,
Rooms 348 and 350,
Greensboro. N. C.
Office phone 29, Residence phone 22.

Many times during life she expressed a readiness to go home to Heaven at any time the Master called. Only a few hours before she departed from this life, while some of the children were trying to relieve her intense suffering, she said, "Let me go, children. I want to go where storms never come and summer never ends." Her suffering during the last hours was very great and at times the intense pain erased from that loving face the smile it always wore, but as the soul took its flight back to the God who gave it, that smile returned and still rests on the face, showing that while death has destroyed the body of clay, it was not able to mar the beauty of that pure soul.

We, her children, feel and know that mother is now in Heaven awaiting our coming, and we sincerely ask the prayers of all Christian people that we may meet her there without the loss of one.

The Children.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF
STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner
W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE,
EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

IMPORTANT FORESTRY MEETING IN ASHEVILE.

Nation-wide Association comes to our mountains! Board of Directors of American Forestry Association to hold spring meeting in Asheville. Convenes the last week in March. Examples of applied forestry at Biltmore the principal attraction. The North Carolina Forestry Association has been invited to be well represented at this meeting. One day will be spent in listening to addresses on forestry matters and on the second day a trip will be made through the Biltmore forest to study the results of twelve years of forestry practice. The North Carolina Forestry Association is in close affiliation with the American Forestry Association, which is the only national organization devoted exclusively to the promotion of forestry, and it is hoped that many members of our State Association will take this opportunity of getting into closer touch with the nation-wide movement.

Little Theodore—Ma, what did moths eat before Adam and Eve wore clothes?—The Snark.

Little Marie almost choked one day at the dinner table, and after being duly pounded on the back recovered and said:

"A piece of meat went down my drink pipe instead of my eat pipe."

Mrs. Casey.—Yisterday was Mrs. Maloney's birthday, and her husband give her a silver taypot.

Mrs. Murphy—Solid?

Mrs. Casey—Sure, you're joking. How could she put tay in it if it was solid?

—President Wilson caused quite astir by politely but firmly rejecting the offer of the Chevy Chase Club, a Washington country club, to extend him an honorary membership. President Roosevelt, President Taft, Vice-President Marshall and other leading Americans have accepted this courtesy, but Dr. Wilson, it is understood, does not wish to be under obligations to anybody—and besides, he says, the public business will absorb all his time.—Pathfinder.

—William Huggins, 104 years old, has enrolled as one of the students at the North Dakota corn and clover convention. Mr. Huggins is a pioneer, having gone to Dakota from Canada many years ago. He is interested in diversified farming, and says that "a young man should always keep up with the times."

—A big general store in Paris has recently opened a department where, in exchange for a number, a wife may leave her husband while she does her shopping, says Pele Mele, of that city.

—The "mother-in-law joke" is at least 5,000 years old. So says President Judson of Chicago University. The examination of ancient Egyptian tablets has disclosed that one of the early kings of Egypt got off a joke poking fun at his mother-in-law and that the joke was even then referred to as being centuries old.

A RARE BOOK.—There have been sent to this office some copies of the "Life of Caldwell," by Rev. E. W. Caruthers. This is a historical work of value, besides containing two of Caldwell's sermons. While they last, they will be sold for 62 cents in cloth binding, and 87 cents in sheep. As the book is out of print, we consider this quite a bargain.

—The Oxford Orphanage Singing Class started out on Monday for another tour which will cover almost the entire state before it is completed, with two rest spells of two weeks each to break the tedium of the tour.

W. F. MEDEARIS J. F. PEEBLES W. L. PEEBLES
MEDEARIS-PEEBLES FURNITURE COMPANY.
Complete House Furnishers.
STOVES AND RANGES
Cash or Credit.
109 & 111 E. Market St.
Phone 823. Greensboro, N. C.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.
Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.
206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

OVER 65 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.
Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

—Morehead Township S. S. Convention was held in Greensboro last Sunday afternoon. An interesting session. Reports of schools show progress. Among the new officers is our Brother Baynes, of Grace Church.

—Mrs. Bean, of Randleman, was received into Grace Church last Sunday.

—Don't put off till to-morrow what should have been done yesterday.

—Pleasant Garden High School is receiving congratulations. Its representatives came out first in the State High School debating contest at Chapel Hill last week. There were sixteen schools entering. Finally the contest narrowed down to a struggle between Durham and Pleasant Garden, and the latter won. The debaters from Pleasant Garden were Grady Bowman (Methodist Protestant), and S. C. Hodgin (Quaker, we believe). Mr. Bowman is a son of Bro. W. A. Bowman and a nephew of Rev. J. H. Bowman.

—Complaint is made that our State Legislature appropriated large sums of money without knowing where it is to come from. State legislatures sometimes exhibit an amazing amount of folly.

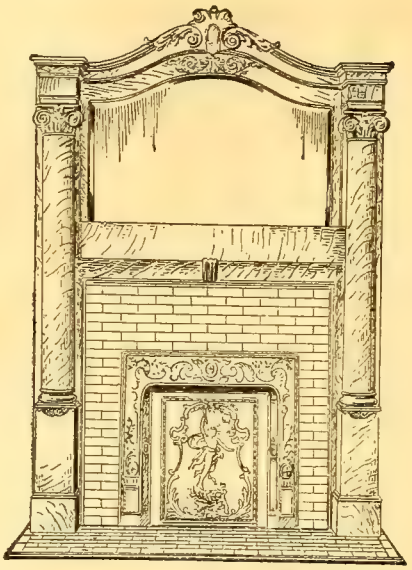
—A few years ago the Democratic Party was declared to be dead. Now it is triumphant. A Greensboro Democrat, referring to this fact, said: "The Republican Party is now said to be dead, but it wouldn't surprise me if it goes back into power four years from now." Such are the vicissitudes of politics.

—Our legislature began to do a good thing when it passed a law against smoking by minors in Guilford County. It ought to have made the application statewide.

—Printers have been exempted from jury duty by the legislature. This is a tribute to the worth of their vocation.

—Willie Jenkins, of Huntington, W. Va., at the tender age of 17 finds himself at the head of a family consisting of a wife and four children. He married a widow over twice his age and the children were thrown in.

—Bro. E. M. Holt, of Mt. Pleasant, referring to his pastor, Bro. Robt. Troxler, says: "I think we have as good a preacher as there is in the Conference. He is doing a fine work in our church."



Mantels, Grates, Tiles and Builders' Hardware.

If you intend to build a new house, or to improve an old one, don't fail to get our catalogue, showing the latest designs in mantels, grates, tiles and builder's hardware. We have designs to suit every style of architecture. It will pay you to write us.

ODELL MANTEL COMPANY,
(Odell Hardware Co., Owners.)
Greensboro, N. C.

ELON COLLEGE—CO-EDUCATIONAL AND NON-SECTARIAN.

Offers young men and young women in the Methodist Protestant Church exceptional advantages for higher college training. Courses offered leading to the degrees of A. B., Ph. B., L. I., Pe. B., and A. M. Certificate courses offered in Commerce, Music, and Art. Diplomas also granted in Music and Art.

Elon College is situated in the hill country in the Piedmont section of North Carolina. No sickness, healthful climate, pure deep well water. All the buildings heated by steam and lighted by electricity and supplied with water. A large gymnasium for men in process of erection.

Terms are very reasonable. Cost of all expenses ranges from $137 to $187 a year.

The Young Ladies' Home provides for board at cost for young ladies who wish to cheapen their living. This home is under the management of the College and the best possible care is taken of the girls.

The Boys' Boarding Club offers young men an opportunity of living at actual cost. By these boarding arrangements the cost of board and room should be reduced to about half the cost in private homes.

Any person interested should write foa Catalogue, Bulletins, and other information to

W. A. HARPER, LL. D., PRESIDENT,
Elon College, North Carolina.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.
Absolute Security for Your Savings
Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.
This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.
Greensboro Loan and Trust Company
J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XIX. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, JANUARY 16, 1913. NUMBER 8.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD. Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.

J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.

Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.

Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.

Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.

In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

THE PRECIOUSNESS OF OUR FAITH.

Believers in Christ, do you ever pause to think of and to realize the worth of the Christian's faith? Peter spoke of it, and spoke of it in view of the righteousness of God and our Savior, Jesus Christ. But our faith sees also the mercy of God, and it is this that brings to us our great relief when we are distressed with a sense of our sinfulness. What a great joy it is to feel that God is merciful enough to forgive our sins for Jesus' sake.

Then in time of trouble and in circumstances which would otherwise fill us with painful anxiety, how precious is the faith that God is overruling and will overrule in such a way as to bring good out of evil. In this time when our literature is so full of atheistic unbelief, the literature of the world, I mean; when men are writing and speaking as though human greed were about to devour everything; what a privilege it is to exercise the Christian's faith in God and to feel that God will never permit His people to be wronged beyond what is really for their own spiritual good. The Christian does not fear the oppressor, he does not expect to be ground into the dust by the monopolist. He is fully aware of the wickedness of wicked men, but he knows that God suffers the wicked to go only so far with their devices.

And how exceedingly precious is the faith of the Christian when fatal disease or old age comes upon him and he knows that he is approaching the end of life. He still loves life. He is not satisfied to close his eyes in a sleep that shall never end, but Christ has brought life and immortality to light, and with what satisfaction does he contemplate the joyous existence of the saint in glory.

The Christian has a hope which the world cannot give and cannot take away.

"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with every spiritual blessing in the heavenly places in Christ."

Let Christians prize their faith and pity those who have it not.

FALSE MODESTY IN THE MINISTRY.

We have heard ministers say that they make it a rule to wait for an invitation before going into people's homes.

The feeling that this is the proper course to pursue is a natural and proper one in making social visits, but in the case of the minister of the Gospel of Christ another feeling should have place or rather a group of feelings which will dictate a different course.

The minister should have such a regard for the spiritual needs of men that he will not wait for an invitation when he has a chance to do men good. There come times when even the doctor is guilty of criminal neglect if he waits for an invitation before ministering to a man in need. The ministerial call is not subject to the ordinary rules of social intercourse. The minister who has only the ordinary social feelings to guide him is not qualified for his work. He needs a baptism from above.

The minister's commission is a commission to go. He is sent, and he must not wait to be sent for. If the door is shut against him, then of course he must go elsewhere. But this will not often occur. It is more frequently the case that the minister's call will be welcomed. It is better to call and be rebuffed than not to call at all. It will do more good. It will set the people of the home to thinking about religious things and very likely the man rebuffed will be sent for later to talk with and pray for some one of the family. The minister must not think too much of his own feelings. He must expect to have his feelings hurt. He must be willing to have his feelings hurt.

We were glad to read in President Cecil's notes this week a reference to this matter. It is easy for a minister to fail at this point from a false modesty. It is not given to ministers to indulge in such luxuries as that of false modesty. The high commission of Heaven is surely authority enough to warrant the effort to help spiritually every one you may.

But let no minister take advantage of his license to approach men for spiritual service to promote his own social enjoyment. The minister must not forget his high calling.

SO MUCH TO DO.

We know people whose lives are filled with hard work, and yet they cannot accomplish near all they would like. They say, "There is so much to do." We see others who do not seem to realize that there is anything to do. Why the difference? We believe there is work for everyone. If all would do their part, it would not be necessary for some to do more than their part. This applies to each home as well as to the world as a whole. Parents sometimes wear themselves out before the time while their children are allowed to grow up in comparative idleness. The parents are to blame for this. They should require their children to do their part. Other parents go to the opposite extreme and impose on their young children burdens they ought to carry themselves. To do just right in the matter of work is a fine art. The matter should be studied.

—Please give attention to what Bro. Burgess writes concerning the Brotherhood. The communication was delayed in reaching us, but it is not too late now to do what he asks.

BRO. FOGLEMAN ILL.—Rev. W. D. Fogleman was in our office on Tuesday on his way to consult Dr. Long. He was accompanied by Dr. York, of Mebane. He asked that his appointments on Haw River circuit be called for, as he does not hope to be able to meet them next Sunday. He is suffering from diabetes, and has lost weight and strength. Let his parishioners and others pray earnestly for his recovery.

FROM JAPAN.

Ishinowaki,
Oct. 27, 1912.

My days are all Sundays and events crowd into one another so fast I find it difficult to keep track of myself.

For two nights Bro. Isokawa and I went 7½ miles to Iinoqawa. There were seven young men waiting to be baptized, nearly all of them having some official position in the towns and all of them drawing salaries. As all wanted to be immersed, we went to the river and as the young men were particular about the place we got into a big boat and were polled out about a couple of hundred yards to a shallow place and in the beautiful moonlight they were baptized by Isakawa. They now have a working church of eleven of whom two are women and teachers in the school. One of the two is a graduate of the Ulsenonaga Girl's school and she presides at the organ beautifully. The young converts have ideas of their own, they call their church "the church of Love." Each member has pledged himself to win some one else to Christ. They also contribute a penny a month each for buying books for a circulating library. They meet once a week for Mutual Bible study. They bought out all the Testaments we had to sell and wanted more. It was an uplift to be with them. They have material there of which good preachers are made.

While there I addressed the advanced students on "The Higher Patriotisms" which consists of a developed mind and heart adapted to making men live good lives for the sake of their country, and avoid all practice and business which tends to break down society and destroy manhood. After our last meeting in which the communion was celebrated with joy, we went to bed late, but started back to Ishinimaki as soon as we could and reached there at noon.

How would you like to have a pair of dog boots? Sleeping in Japanese beds with covers too short and yourself sticking out at both ends is no picnic in the winter time. Even when the bed is lengthened, I begin to freeze up at the feet and it is not a pleasant experience to pass the nights that way. When I sleep with all my clothes on, the rest of my body keeps fairly warm, but for my feet I finally conceived the idea of dog boots. What are they like? They are made out of the hide of a yellow dog tanned with the hair on and the boots which are six inches high are made with the hair inside. As the weather gets colder, I shall appreciate them more not only when I sleep, but also when I sit in the Japanese cold homes, trying to keep comfortable while we have conversation about the great things of God. The only objection to the boots is that you are likely to leave yellow dog hairs around where you do not want them. Still they are not so disconcerting as fleas.

Now for a day in Isinowaki and I will bring this letter to a close. Yesterday the 27th of October was the day for opening the new railway line from Ishinowaki to Kogota about 20 miles and the day was a gala day for the whole country round about. But we went at our morning service at the church as usual and were joined in our worship by delegations of young men and women from Iinogawa and Hisobuchi who had walked, some of them three hours to come to church and some of them four, the latter walking ten miles. I preached them a sermon on "The blood of Jesus," emphasizing the need of obedience to and devotion to Jesus in all things as a small return for His great love and sacrifice for us. After the sermon five women received baptism, three of them being kindergarten teachers. After this we had the Lord's supper together.

While Bro. Isokawa was busy with the candidates for baptism, I stood up and went closer to the baptistry to see and then a strange thing happened. An old man eighty one years of age (I spoke of him in a former letter), came forward, seized one of my hands, bent his head before me and put the hand he had seized upon it as if expecting that I had some miraculous power to bestow upon him. What is to come of his efforts to be saved in some other way than that which Jesus appointed remains to be seen. We are insisting with him on an absolute surrender to Jesus as the only way.

In the afternoon assisted by three young men, we opened a street meeting, sold all the Bibles Miss True had, and some Gospels. This meeting by taking turns in the speaking we kept up for two hours when weary throats and the lateness of the afternoon caused us to desist. But while the rest of us conducted the meeting Miss True distributed all the tracts she had. We regarded the meeting as in view of the crowds listened and the Testaments they bought as very successful. One of the boys wants to be a Bible student. (Not specially a theological student.) It would be very easy to gather up a company of students for Bible study and from the promising young men whom I have learned to love as I have met with them and prayed with them on this trip.

In the evening Bro. Isokawa and the young men opened a second street meeting while I preached again at the church. Later Bro. Isokawa came and preached a second sermon. The subject I discussed was that of the danger which so many people fall into of trying to see how little they can do for Jesus and still be saved. I tried to urge the importance of giving to Jesus such a whole hearted, loving service so that no question can come up either from the standpoint of one's own conscience or the criticism of others as to whether one is trying to do the will of Jesus. There is a path which is entirely safe and it certainly is a danger when one acts on the principle of trying to see how far he can wander away from it and not get lost.

For next Sunday other candidates have reported themselves as ready for baptism. On the whole it seems like the Lord gave special blessing to the church for that day and made it a banner day to His glory.

Sincerely yours in Christ,
A. D. Woodworth.

FAITHFULNESS.

The great virtue!

It is the virtue to which Jesus promises the crown of life: "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee the crown of life." Serving leads to ruling.

Did you ever notice that "being faithful unto death" at first covers a long period, but that it constantly changes its im pression of the mind? At first, affliction seems heavy, and as if to continue a long time. Later, the affliction becomes "light" and but for a moment, as Paul says: "Our light affliction, which is but for a moment."

The whole of time, as compared with eternity, is but for a moment. And faithfulness results in a "for more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." And the weight, then, is not in the affliction, but in the glory; and it is eternal.

Time is a "moment." When the son is one year old, and the father is forty, the father is forty times as old as the son. But when the son is forty, the father is only twice as old. When Moses had spent forty years of his life in exile it seemed to him that half of his lif had been so passed. But when he stood on Mount Pisgah, looking over the land of promise, it was only a third of his life that had been passed in exile. And when, thousands of years later, he met Jesus and Elijah on the mount of transfiguration, his previous exile of forty years must have seemed but "for a moment". What a joy then to him that he had been "faithful unto death"!

Every moment of a faithful life makes the period shorter. It is only one moment at a time that is required. And at any given moment, one may be nearly through; and on looking back it will all seem like a moment. What did Moses' faithfulness for 120 years seem like, when he appeared to Jesus on the mount, having been in glory for thousands of years? Earthly life is a "moment".

Faitfhulness is the great virtue: for on it depends the victory of the general, the reward of the soldier, and the success of every good cause.

Faithfulness tests the reality of every other virtue.

J. J. Summerbell.

Dayton, Ohio.

DIGNITY AND VALUE OF LABOR

Thank God for work.

Any sort, so it's honest.

Better still, if it's a job you love.

If it isn't, you had better keep on looking until you have found one that you can love. Otherwise, it's flat failure, or at best, mediocrity for yours.

Half-hearted effort never yet made a whole-soul man. No one was ever nerved to nobler achievement by the sight of duty perfunctorily done. Shoddy work is a shame.

One has traveled far along the road to Victory when he has become obsessed by the idea that he has simply "got to make good" after a clean, straight-up fashion; and that he has no alternative but to mix in the fight and add his quota to the day's battle for humanity. Such an one would be scandalized at the thought of putting less than his "dead level best" into his Task.

Don't worry about the Reward;only do the work and the reward will follow as the day and night. I have a sort of gnarled, knotty kink in my mental machine which makes me think that he who labors primarily for the Reward, will both miss the reward and botch the job. But, contrariwise, the reward has a habit of sneaking along after the fellow who is chiefly intent upon "delivering the goods."

I meet a man every day who, in the world's great mart may be classed as "unavailable" who, either through insufficient preparation, or want of earnest purpose, or both, have nothing to offer their fellows in exchange for place and preferment. These are the incompetents, the inefficients, the ne'er-do-wells, who complain that "luck" is against them. Their lives are passed in an effort to put as little as possible into existence while they seek to get as much as possible out of it.

We must give men something genuinely and solidly worth while before we may hope that they will give us much that is worth while. Certainly, this is fair. We must try to make them glad that such as we came into their midst, that we bore their sorrows and shared their joys. If for them we set examples of endurance, of fortitude, of patience and courage. thus the better nerving them for the batle they will hold out hands of gratitude to us.

Again, shoddy work is a shame.

Especially, if that work be religious work.

Slovenly methods and half-hearted effort have no more assurance of success in the church than in secular occupations, and are far more repugnant and reprehensible.

I have heard of churches that have made mighty and swift strides in growth by some strange, mysterious "short-cut" of human devising which seemed to exclude the need of much prayer, spiritual preparation and godly application of toil and prudence, but I have never seen, or been in any such churches.

It is better to be mistrustful of such reputed success. The Apostles had to work for their success. So did the Reformers. So did Wesley. And Moody. And Torrey. And so must we, if our success is to be solid and lasting. There are "wild-cat" methods in ecclesiastical, as in other realms, but these we should avoid as the pestilence.

Here's to a year of hard and sincere toil, may we be spared for its doing.

Henry Spencer Booth.

THE CALL OF THE WORLD.

Deeember the third, at night, West Market Street Methodist church, listening to mission lectures by Mr. Doughty. The same subject is before us, "The Call of the World;" it is fine. This is the most charming privilege of my life. If every church and Sunday school worker would attend these discussions and think over them, we all wouud be enthusiastic. I am waking up, I think. If not, I am having wonderful dreams.

To-night we are considering the factors that determine a nation's place among the nations. Sunday night we considered the "Wilderness" of the field, last night we considered the "Unfinished Task," and to-night "A nation's Place in the Task." Our prayer is that some glimpse of larger truth be given us to-day. As the prayer, we all unite in one petition that the Lord God may lay hold of the city of Salsbury where the Laymen's Missionary Movement is now in annual session.

In determining a nation's place among the nations of the following principles apply: accessibility, character of the people, character of religion, climate, natural resources, acquired resources, education, size, number of people, government, location and geographical features. Looking at the list and then at the map we

SIN AND SERVITUDE.

Every one that committeth sin is the bondservant of sin. .John 8:34. Golden-text for Sunday, Jan. 19.

It has been pithily pointed out that the two first chapters of the Bible deal with generation; the third with degeneration, and all the rest of the Bible with regeneration. At any rate the whole Bible is a monumental treatise whose central theme is Sin; of how man got into sin: and of how men may get out of the bondage of sin.

Be it said that many of the world's masterpieces of literature have been produced with Sin as their central theme: but nowhere in the realm of letters is there a more powerful and succinct setting forth of the origin of sin than in the third chapter of Genesis. Here we have a vivid picture of the beginning of sin in the world.

Satan, using the mosst subtle of all God's creatures, beguiles the woman by appealing first to her bodily sense. The tree had that which was good to eat, and then was beautiful to look upon. The aesthetic sense was appealed to. Added to this was the promise that she should be wise. Body, mind, and soul were to be soothed, appeased, pacified, elevated, edified.

And this is ever the persuasion and promise of sin. It makes one believe that body, mind, and soul will be benefited. It leads one to think that it will and can satisfy. Sin first persuades a person that, it is sweet, wholesome, elevating, gives liberty and sets free. And it persuades and promises the very opposite of what it is and does.

Adam and Eve were happy and were free, until they sinned. They then were neither happy nor free. The one iron-handed, cruel, heartless master in this world is sin. It puts its victims in bonds, and welds the chains of servitude mercilessly about the arms of its bending and bleeding slaves. It lays on the lash day and night and drives its suffering subjects to a more desperate and more deadly drudgery day by day. A sin stained life makes cowards and slaves of all whom it reaches and affects.

This is why we should dread and should hate sin so. It has no regard whatsoever for the high and pure and holy things, and evermore does the very opposite of what it persuades and promises. It would invade your home, and mind, and pluck the fairest flower therefrom and crush and trample it beneath unhallowed feet. It would sever every sweet and sacred tie on earth, and make of every happy home a veritable hell if it could. It would lead your son to a drunkard's grave, and your daughter to a prostitute's hell if such comes within the reach of its subtle influence, its heartless reach.

Sin is the sole cause of man's bondage, of the world's suffering, of earth's agonies, of hell's groanings.

And the only escape therefrom is in Him who conquered sin and gave Himself a ransom for many.

—From The Christian Sun

ANNUAL CONFERENCE OFFICERS.

President—Rev. C. A. Cecil, 117 Thurston St., High Point, N. C.

Secretary—Rev. N. G. Bethea, Henderson, N. C.

PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENTS.

Yadkin College, ...Jan. 4, 5.
Thomasville,....Wednesday night Jan. 8.
Reidsville, ...Friday, Jan. 10.
Guilford Ct.....Jan. 11 to 13.
Richland, ...Jan. 18, 19.
Randleman, ... Jan. 25, 26.
Pinnacle, ...February 1, 2.
Forsyth, ...February 3, 4.
West Forsyth, ...February 5, 7.
Mocksville, ...February 8, 11.
Winston Station .....February 12, 13.
Winston Mission .....February 12, 13.
Oak Ridge .....February 14, 16.

Pastors will please notice from my notes from the various fields, I state my claims met or not met and this will be continued during the year.

C. A. Cecil.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

Thomasville.

According to my plan of appointments on the evening of the 10th I reached the parsonage in Thomasville, and found the pastor and his new house keeper and his little daughter snugly housed by a good fire in a nicely furnished room, and it was neatly arranged and one could not help feeling perfectly at ease, and I sat there for a few minutes and then Mrs. Williams invited us to her good supper, and I certainly enjoyed the good things she had prepared.

At 7.30 we were in the church ready for our business meeting; but this being the week of prayer in Thomasville our meeting was deferred for 30 or 40 minutes and Bro. Wood and the Presbyterian minister of that city gave us some good talks on the "indwelling Christ," after which the conference was called to order, and we proceeded with the business. I want to say Thomasville charge has the banner as to conference attendance up to this writing; out of 16 officers 13 were present and quite a number were present who were not members of the conference, and this is as it should be; our quarterly conferences ought to be our big meetings, and some of those present said to me, "I really enjoyed it." Some advanced steps were taken as to class meetings and paying pastor's salary and all the members seemed to be enthused and determined to do a better year's work than they did last, so may it be.

The pastor of this charge, Bro. Suits, and the membership have done well. They have built the church and parsonage within the past five or six years, and they now have 142 members on roll and have promised to pay their pastor $500. with $85.00 general interests, and not one of their members is considered wealthy. I want the strong fields in the N. C. Dist. to see this; and their church has a debt on it. The membership expect to pay liberally to reduce the indebtedness this year. Bro. Williams is determined to try to do his full duty along all lines of work, especially on the line of pastoral work. Brethren, pastors of other denominations do much of this kind of work and if we hope to do well on our fields let us go into the homes of our people and they will attend church better and they will pay pastor's salary, and general interests better. I do not mean by this to insist upon pastors to gaddy around to get their salary or conference claims; but let your members know you are interested in their welfare sufficiently to go to see them, and have prayer with them when it is convenient for the family to do so.

Men in other professions work at their business in order to succeed.

My only motive in writing on this phase of the pastor's work is;I realize it is being woefully neglected on many fields of labor. I have no special reference to any pastor or field of labor.

I had a man say to me one time: "There hasn't been an M. P. preacher in my house for thirty years" and he did not live over 1½ miles from an M. P. church and several have made like expressions; but not in point of time.

Bro. Williams and wife are well served. Several said, "We like them." May this continue to be so. My claim over paid.

Reidsville.

On the 10th of Jan. I went to Reidsville charge, preached at 11 A. M. to a good congregation considering the recent organization of the church in Reidsville. At 1:30 the first quarterly conference was held, a good attendance of the officers and the business transacted very pleasantly. Pastor's salary was fixed at $350 and to be paid quarterly by the officials, and the writer advised that the general interest also be paid in the same way.

The parsonage matter between the two circuits was settled to the perfect satisfaction of both charges, I am glad to say. Several representatives from Haw River Ct. were present to assist in coming to an agreement as to the parsonage property and I was glad they were present, and to see the brotherly feeling prevail as it did.

We have a splendid church in Reidsville almost complete, and when it is, it will be a credit to our denomination and to the pastor and to all who have had anything to do in its erection.

I feel to say; but for the untiring untiring energy of the pastor, Bro. G. S. Kernodle and Sister Kernodle it is very doubtful if we would have had a church in Reidsville in several years to come. Several others deserve mention in connection with the enterprise, namely; Bro. Geo. Williams, McCollum J. D., Rube Mccollum, Mrs. Preddy, Mrs. Bertha McCollum, Mrs. Elmore, Mrs. Carroll and others I can't recall.

The pastor and his family are beloved by the people on this charge , and I am sure Bro. Raper will do well this year; only having three appointments he can visit the members and keep the min line both in church and Sunday school.

Glad to have Rev. W. D. Fogleman with us for preaching, and a part of the time in our conference.

Sorry to hear Bro. J. M. Jones was not regaining his health very fast.

My claim over paid.

Guilford.

On Saturday morning, the 11th of Jan. I left High Point for Hickory Grove charge, eight miles away, in my buggy and at fifteen minutes to eleven o'clock I was on the church ground ready for services. A very good attendance considering the inclemency of the weather.

The people heard the Word, and appeared to enjoy it thoroughly it was very plain and practical.—Services closed by prayer by Bro. J. A. Gray, son of Uncle Alson Gray.

Then came the good dinner and it is useless to say there was plenty of it, for all who have been in the Hickory Grove community know they are blessed with plenty.

After three-quarters of an hour we reassembled and conference was opened and we proceeded with the business.

There was a fair representation present, Shady Grove not represented.

The reports were very good this early in the year. Most all the churches had paid some on pastor's salary. One Sunday school gone into winter quarters. They have class meetings on this Ct. Good. The members of the quarterly conference obligated to pay quarterly and think all the conferences I have held have promised to do so, and if done there will be no deficit on pastor's salary on these charges.

Bro. McCulloch and I spent Saturday night with Bro. Erastus Jones; on Sunday morning we called by to see Bro. Manasseh Bowman and found him real sick.

We reached Red Hill in due time and preached to a small number. Took dinner with Bro. C. A. Ward. I went to Shady Grove, and Bro. McCulloch to Mitchells Grove and both had only a very few to preach to.

We went to Bro. W. M. Kirkman's and spent the night.

We left for Fairfield and found only a few present at the church; the services were very good.

Here Uncle Alson Gray the first M. P. preacher I ever knew rests in the Cemetery. He was a minister for 60 years and established many M. P. churches in North Carolina.

We took dinner with Bro. John Suits and left for our last appointment on this charge and had the more people to preach to than any appointment on the field.

Bro. McCulloch is one of our best men and pastors, and his people appreciate him and love him and he is well received. Claim paid.

Jan 14, 1913.

C. A. Cecil.

HALIFAX CIRCUIT.

The first quarterly conference for Halifax circuit met in Union Church on Friday, January 10th. Bro. N. W. Harrison was reelected secretary. He has served faithfully for several years already. The business of the quarterly conference was transacted in a manner that indicated perfect harmony. Stewards' report was fairly good.

It has been a great pleasure to have so many of our young people, who are off teaching and attending college, spend the holidays at home. They all have returned to their work now. Miss Annie Louise Wills has returned to Graham where she is teaching, Miss Lila Wills to Sanford and Miss Agnes Wills to Sted man where she goes to teach music. Bro. N. W. Harrison, Jr., "Nat," as he is familiarly known, and Miss Frances have returned to Western Maryland College. Nat preached here in Brinkleyville the 5th Sunday in December. I was away filling an extra appointment at Lee's Chapel, however I have heard his sermon favorably spoken of.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Boyd and family have moved from this place to Warrenton, N. C. We regret to lose them from our congregation.

We all feel deeply the loss of Miss Margaret Whitaker, "Aunt Margaret," as she was better known, who died at the home of her nephew, Rev. C. L. Whitaker, on January 9th. She had made her home here with Misses Mary and Harriet Wills for several years and we all loved her. She had gone away on a visit when she was taken ill and never recovered. A fuller notice will appear later.

Mrs. Pritchard united with Bethesda church last Sunday, coming from the Missionary Baptist church at Siler City.

J. E. Pritchard.

UWHARRIE CIRCUIT.

Dear President:

We held our first quarterly conference on Saturday before the first Sunday in January, with fairly good turnout, but not all of the churches represented. The business was transacted in the usual way. It seems that they did not make any definite plans as to raising the general interests nor the pastor's salary, but the most of the members that were there from the different churches said they were going to try to pay the pastor quarterly, but no steps were taken as to raising general interestts. I would like to have some plan from you. I would like to try the envelope plan, I believe it would work better than to just have collectors or to take up collections. I would like to know where to get them. Everybody seems hopeful of a successful year.

Yours for Christ,

Joel Trogdon.

CID, UWHARRIE CIRCUIT.

Rev. J. B. Trogdon filled his regular appointment the 12th inst and delivered a very touching sermon. It seemed to sink deep in several hearts as there were two that came forward for prayers to be saved before the close of this year. May there be many others that will be saved in this year of 1913 as we pray that this may be one year that will break the record of soul-saving. We see and feel the need of it as years pass.

I notice in the Herald about so many places that the people are pounding their ministers and why not the Uwharrie people get a move on them and give Bro. Trogdon one? for I do think if any one deserves it he does; for he has been so faithful to us.

Mrs. N. W. Lanier returned home last Saturday from Greensboro.

Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Crutchfield are all smiles. It's a boy.

Mr. Robert Helper has been visiting relatives in Greensboro for the past two weeks.

The farmers are busy plowing and prepreparing for another crop. But how many are preparing for their spiritual welfare?

We are sorry to say that our Sunday school had to go in winter quarters, but we hope to start up again in the spring.

Yours for Christ,

(Mrs.) N. W. Lanier.

P. S. Mr. B. W. Nance of near Piney Grove church got his barn and all its contents destroyed by fire on last Saturday night, the 11th. Loss about $700.00, with no insurance. Its contents were a good pair mules, wagon, feed stuff, dry feed, machinery etc. He is a good man and deserves the help of the people as well as the sympathy. Origin of fire unknown.

RANDLEMAN CIRCUIT.

Our first quarterly conference will meet at Mt. Lebanon church, January 25th, 3 P. M. Important business to attend to and the attendance of the entire official board is desired. President will be with us and will preach for us as follows: Saturday, January 25th, at New Salem, 7:30 P. M.; Sunday at Worthville, 11 A. M.; Bethany, 3 P. M. and Mt. Lebanon, 7 P. M.

J. B. O'Briant.

REIDSVILLE.

First, I want to say we have been so busy trying to get our church ready a few very important and appreciated things have been neglected. We have been very kindly remembered by several of our members and friends. Bro. John Pritchett gave us two turkeys, some sweet potatoes, holly and evergreen before Christmas. Mrs. T. E. Wray in a thoughtful way went about doing good, and a few helped her to present us with a purse of $10.00; besides we have received several smaller gifts. Sister J. A. Gunn came to the parsonage the morning of our first quarterly conference and left us butter, butter milk and a nice hen. This was so kind, thoughtful and God-like. We want to give them our best service.

On the morning of January 10th I was at the depot when No. 8 came in to meet our president, Rev. C. A. Cecil. We came on to our home and spent a little while. We are always glad to have him in our home. We were young men together, we use to work a good deal together in special meetings, and he licensed me to preach. We are friends of long acquaintance. We met in our new church in Reidsville for preaching service. He preached us a splendid sermon and many were the compliments. It was some what like a reunion, as he had served Haw River Circuit and several he had preached to were there and heartily took him by the hand. The good sisters gave us a dinner a king and queen would have enjoyed, if they had been any kin to an American, for we like to eat. Then the quarterly conference, Bro. Cecil chairman. As we were a new charge, we elected Bro. J. A. Gunn Secretary, and after a few searching questions from the chairman on the discipline we entered into the business of the conference. We have 18 official members and 12 present. The business was transacted in a business like manner. We endeavored to keep the unity of the Spirit of our Master. The parsonage matter came up and was settled so far as Bethany and Sandy Cross were concerned. The trustees of Haw River Circuit, three or four of their members were presest, also their pastor. They paid these two points $225.00 and asked for the house at once. I have been in a precarious situation ever since Annual Conference, one end saying "do not move or rent"—the other offering to rent till March or April. I simply did not know what to do, and I simply waited till our quarterly conference was held. I went all over town next day, but could not find a house. Some have been kind enough to offer us rooms till we can get a house.

I am glad to say the conference closed in harmony. Every one seemed determined to do his or her part. The salary was fixed at $350.00. Bro. Cecil advised us along several lines and asked for a hearty cooperation. He, in short, pointed out the duties of pastor and officials. We are truly glad he came and hope if possible he can be with us when we dedicate our church.

We had several new scholars today and am glad to say the children remained for preaching. I do not think I ever saw more interest manifested than there is now on this new charge. The Superintendent, J. D. McCollum, is a wide awake man; in fact, all our officers are. The choir already sings well. Sister Kernodle has consented to teach a class. She is a teacher of long standing and it will be fortunate to fall to her class. We elected Miss Nellie Hutcherson as teacher, so if any of the other teachers can't be there, she is to take that class. We are so glad to see Bro. Geo. D. Williams so much interested. He is there on time every time and his timely advice and suggestions are very much appreciated by pastor and all the rest. We began on time both at Sunday school and preaching service, and we expect to carry this out. We are using the "Little Cross and Crown system," hoping to gather in those who are out of school, and encourage regular attendance. All wore off the M. P. badge today, and took cards to give out to new scholars.

Bethany has an evergreen S. S. and Bro. John D. Baynes is working his school well. We hope to organize a school at Sandy Cross this spring.

I have had a number of calls to preach on the east of Reidsville, and have accepted one to preach on Thursday night after the 4th Sunday in South Reidsville each month. O, may this be a good year, and let us pray for each other and our president for his task is an arduous one.

Fraternally,
C. E. M. Raper.

HICKORY RIDGE, FORSYTH CT.

Since our last report to the Herald conference has been held and many changes have been made. We welcome our new pastor, Bro. A. O. Lindley, a successor to our former pastor, Bro. T. A. Williams, who served us faithfully for two years.

Bro. Lindley preached for us the second Sunday in December for the first time. He has made a good beginning for the New Year. We as a church realize that we have a great work to do. We believe that by giving our pastor our hearty support we can make this the best year our church has ever experienced. May God help us to begin now to work for the upbuilding of the cause. Bro. Lindley was with us again today and preached one of his good sermons. Since our circuit has been divided we are glad to have our pastor so near us. We know that greater good can be accomplished where the pastor has not so many churches as our former pastors have had. We as a circuit hope to build a new home for our pastor and family to move into before a great while. The lot has already been selected and some work has been done toward getting material for building.

We are expecting our president, Bro. Cecil, to be with us Tuesday, February 4, at 11 A. M. We are always anxious to have our president, as he always has in store for us something that is good and helpful.

Best wishes to the Herald.

Annie Sullivan, Reporter.

January 12, 1913.

CORINTH, LITTLETON CT.

Yesterday was our usual preaching Sunlay at Corinth and we had the pleasure of having our new preacher with us, Bro. Edwards. He gave us an excellent sermon, I think his sermon was enjoyed by all who heard him.

The congregation wasn't very large, but attentive, I believe we all learned to love our pastor on first sight.

On Thursday P. M., the 26th of December at 7:30 the S. S. children were made glad when a letter came saying that Santa was coming and was going to bring goodies for all the S. S. boys and girls. After some jolly Christmas songs and dialogue, snowballing, etc., the children were singing dear Santa Claus is coming and sure they weren't singing a mistake, for he was coming. Pretty soon sleigh bells were heard and Santa came in and no children there, Santa got in a hurry then to find the children; he soon found them. The Christmas tree was loaded with goodies, a few special presents were presented.

The goodies were distributed among the S. S. after a jolly good time, then the good night song was sung and Santa left.

I feel like I ought to say a few words thanking Miss Marie Moss for her kindness, she trained the children and worked faithfully until the Christmas tree was over with. Thank you, Miss Marie.

With best wishes to the Herald.

Nora L. Morris.

January 6, 1913.

MONROE CIRCUIT.

I went to Pageland December 14th and met with the good brethren, Sunday, 15th at Rose Hill. I love the people very much and trust they will like their pastor. Our 1st quarterly conference was held with New Hope church January 4th. Not many present owing to rough weather, but good congregation Sunday and Sunday night.

O. D. Stacy.

NOTES FROM GASTON CIRCUIT.

Back on the Gaston Circuit for the third year. I arrived in Gastonia on the twenty-ninth day of November and was received by the members of the Gaston Circuit and the people of Gastonia and Bessemer City, with a welcome that would make the president of the United States feel good! We have not received a regular "pounding" since the last annual conference, but we have been kindly remembered by our friends, as follows: by Bro. C. E. Deal and Mrs. Cornell a large basket full of fresh meats; Bro. J. F. Spencer, a large basket full of fresh meats; and by the members at Bessemer City, a large box full of fruit, candies, etc; a large fruit cake by Sister Ralde, and other nice cakes by Sister Hudson, Mr. and Mrs. Fralley, a large box full of cakes. Bro. and sister Brown, oranges, Bro. Pat Black, oranges, Sister Wm. Miller, fruits; and writing paper and envelopes for Mrs. Loy, by Miss Gertrude Hudson; Mr. Brown, pickles, and Mrs. Brown, tomato catsup. We wish to thank you all for the many good things that we have received at your hand. May the Lord bless you all.

The first quarterly conference will convene in Bessemer City on Saturday night before the third Sunday in this month at 7:30. All the officials are requested to be present. With best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

Fraternally,
D. M. Loy.

January 6, 1913.

MEBANE CHARGE.

Well, Christmas has come and gone. The young people who spent Christmas at home were happy. Many of them have returned to college and are again pursuing their text books. Our children were at home and were glad. Miss Roselle Ditmore, a student at the State Normal, spent Christmas with us. She helped to make the Christmas season happy.

We arrived at Mebane December 12, 1912. Our household goods came same day. Bro. Jno. W. Nicholson went to work looking up help, and although it was 2:30 P. M. before the first load was brought from the train, by night everything was in the house. Bro. Thompson and Bro. J. L. Amick were busy in the work. We wish to thank Bros. Nicholson, Thompson and Amick for their kindness. Well, since we have been in the parsonage the people have been very kind. There has been no stormy pounding, but the good things have been coming about as we could use them. It is better for a small family to receive a half gallon milk a day than to get a half barrel and then no more for a month.

Congregations have been fairly good, but I am hoping these may improve.

The prayer meeting attendance is unusually good. The Sunday school is doing fine work. The Christmas entertainment at Mebane church was above the average. The pastor and family were not forgotten. We greatly appreciate the thoughtful kindness of these good people. Bro. Jno. W. Nicholson hauled two loads of fine wood. It was so dry and hard and the axe so dull I was in despair. Relief came when Bro. Jno. L. Amick came over and hitched the hind wheel of his auto buggy to a circular wood saw and sawed the whole pile of wood. Bro. Amick is an R. F. D. man and some times carries the mail in his auto-buggy. I told him it looked like an imposition to drive the machine on the road in carrying the mail and then come home in the evening and make the thing saw wood. It looks almost like a man plowing a cow all day, milking her in the evening and then hitch her hind foot to a cord attached to the churn and then make her kick to churn the butter.

These are busy people. This leads me to hope that if they do not do all the good they ought to do along some lines they will not have much time to do much harm. They work six days in the week and rest the seventh. Thus far they are scriptural.

We are planning to inclose the back yard of the parsonage with a solid plank wall six feet high. It is hoped that the church and parsonage will both be painted this year.

We enjoyed having brother Cecil, the president with us. His words of encouragement and admonition in the quarterly conference and his sermons were very helpful.

With the compliments of the season to all my friends both of the ministry and laity, throughout the entire district and with a prayer for the success of all, I am,

Fraternally,
W. E. Swain.

HEBRON, LINCOLN CT.

We had Bro. Waldrop with us last Sunday. We are very proud of our new preacher. I think we will all like him and I hope he will like us. We have class meeting every 4th Sunday, have Bible reading Sunday evenings; also give the little folks a bible story which I think is very nice. We expect to order literature when spring opens. Pray for our young preacher that he may be a great blessing for the cause of Christ.

As we have had sickness and death in the family we neglected to report last month so I make this report till a new reporter is appointed.

Mrs. Lee Boyles, Reporter.

WOODLAND AVE. M. P. CHURCH.

We haven't sent a report to the Herald since we named our E. Winston Church. We had a very good Christmas entertainment this year. Mrs. Henry Martin trained the children before she left for her home to spend Christmas at Asheboro. A feature of the entertainment was an old time Christmas tree. Every child in the school took a great deal of interest in decorating the tree and putting presents on for their parents and friends. Each teacher gave their scholars a present and every member of the school received a gift off the tree besides their treat. We had 119 members that had been since the 1st Sunday in October. We were very glad to have Rev. Mr. Atkinson the new pastor of Grace M. E. Church, he made a splendid talk. Talks were made by Rev. S. W. Taylor, of the 1st M. P. Church and Mayor O. B. Eaton, which were enjoyed very much.

Last Sunday night a week Rev. T. H. Stimpson preached a very strong sermon. This is his first visit, we were very glad to have him, and hope he will visit us again soon.

Last Sunday Rev. S. M. Needham, the pastor, was back with us for the first time this year. We will have preaching every first and third Sunday nights, till they move here the last of March or first of April.

Mrs. Henry Martin has returned from her home in Asheboro. Mr. Martin sang a beautiful solo at the service Sunday night.

Mrs. R. L. Jordan who has been very sick for some time is slowly improving. Miss Maud, her daughter, is out again.

We are very sorry one of our teachers, Miss Nannie Carter, is very ill at her home with meningitis.

Our Supt., W. A. Speer, gave the school a surprise by presenting them a new piano for a Christmas present.

The attendance in S. S. is splendid now. We had but 51 today; the collection was $1.24. A great many of our scholars have measles.

Reporter.

HICKORY GROVE, GUILFORD CT.

Our pastor, Rev. T. F. McCulloch, preached for us the third Sunday in December. His sermon was plain, but impressive. I think Bro. McCulloch will make us one of as good pastors as we have ever had, and, brethren, let us hold him up with our prayers and means and we will have a glorious year on Guilford Circuit.

I know that the people will learn to love him especially when he visits their homes.

Our first quarterly conference convened at this church Saturday, January 11. Our president being present, he preached the eleven o'clock sermon which was grand. He told us something we needed in regard to our duty to God and the church. After a short intermission for dinner the conference was called to order, President Cecil in the chair. A portion of the scripture was read and had prayer, then Bro. Cecil asked the Conference some questions on the Discipline which we could not answer. I believe that some of us quarterly conference members will have to study the Discipline before we can do the business of the Conference as it should be done. All the churches represented but one. The business transacted in perfect harmony.

Pastor's salary fixed at $400.00 to be paid quarterly.

Some changes in the appointments:
First Sunday, Fairfield, 11 A. M. Mitchell's Grove, 3 P. M.

Second and fourth, Hickory Grove, 11 A. M.

Third, Red Hill, 11 A. M. Shady Grove, 3. P. M.

Best conference we have had on Guilford Circuit in years.

E. S. Jones.

CORINTH, LITTLETON CT.

Bro. Edwards moved in before Christmas. Has made a "round" on this work.

Gave us a "striking" sermon 1st Sunday. A few more and we will behave better, and get to work with more enthusiasm. But could you have attended our Christmas entertainment surely you could have seen signs of enthusiasm. A Christmas tree for the Sunday school and a play Thursday night of Christmas. The name of our play or cantata: "Santa Claus Having a Good Time." This was gotten up by Miss Marie Moss, and was carried out well. The children enjoyed it thoroughly, had a jolly old Santa Claus. In the midst of the play, he accidentally sat on or near a candle and singed his suit which added more laughter to the occasion. We want our Supt. to order Easter exercises right away so that we may be ready for Easter.

Church was requested to meet last Wednesday to revise class-books and to make out assessment plans for ensuing year. W. J. Morris and G. L. Barnes met, made out assessment best they could. Pastor and one or two others did not attend because of sickness in the home that day, the remainder had no excuse.

December 25 G. Emmitt Carter and Miss Margaret Addie Speight of Rosemary, N. C., were united in marriage by her pastor in the M. E. church. Emmitt belongs here, joined when a boy, was always loyal.

Mrs. Almon Pittman and husband visited her father Christmas.

Mr. Emmitt Carter and bride visited his father, Mr. A. E. Carter, a day or two ago.

Miss Nora Morris visited her aunt, Mrs. Warren, near Heathsville, Christmas.

G. S. Barnes and wife of Newport News, have returned home after a stay of five weeks here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Barnes.

Miss Lillie Glasgow of Louisburg visited the writer during the holidays.

Arthur McDaniel of Enfield, visited his cousin, Alvin Willey, Christmas.

Fannie Barnes.

January 13, 1913.

P. S. First Quarterly Conference meets at Corinth Saturday before 1st Sunday of February 11 o'clock.

F. B.

EDEN, HALIFAX CIRCUIT.

Chritsmas has come and gone and how we all enjoyed giving to our friends and being remembered by them. The holidays were pleasantly spent, the Christmas entertainment, the visit from friends, and best of all the memory of the birth of Christ.

Our pastor filled his regular appointment at this church first Sunday; preached a "new year" sermon which was enjoyed by all present.

The year 1912 is numbered with the past. How short the year seems to have been. The time for the new year's resolutions is upon us. Let each be resolved to keep the resolutions made.

New responsibilities, new duties, and new opportunities are upon us. Let's make our lives more useful and helpful to each other than we have ever done before.

Guess you all heard about our preacher, Rev. J. E. Pritchard's marriage to Miss Laura Kate Vestal. We were glad to welcome him and his wife last Sunday. May God's choicest blessing surround them forever. We wish for them a long and peaceful journey through life.

Mr. Dausy Hardee after spending Christmas at home has returned to Buie's Creek to school.

Mr. Exum Hardee from Pinehurst spent Christmas at home.

Mrs. Lonnie Williams spent the Christmas holidays with his relatives at Spring Hope.

Success to the Herald and a prosperous new year to all of its readers.

Irene Hawkins, Reporter.

January 6, 1913.

MT. PLEASANT, MT. PLEASANT CT.

I think Bro. Troxler has been pleasantly received by all. His last year's experience enables him to adapt himself at once to the work. He has been preaching some practical sermons. We are hoping for a good year in the Lord.

Mrs. Turby Coble was buried January 8th. Dr. W. A. Coble the 13th. Only two other members now living that were members in 1857 and 1858, both are Cobles. The Amicks and Cobles were most numerous in the early history of our church. The Cobles still number 20. The Smiths now outnumber the Amicks, being 43.

We are expecting Bro. J. E. Stafford at his post in S. S. soon; he has been greatly missed, as he was nearly always present. If we could get as faithful teachers and pupils as we have Superintendent we believe our S. S. would be a greater power for God.

S. A. A.

BURLINGTON.

The Sunday school attendance dropped considerably last Sunday, due to the rainy weather in a large measure. 136 were present, who did not regard the weather condition.

Our church and Sunday school deeply sympathize with Bro. C. M. Coble, whose father died last Saturday.

The Philathea class held a very interesting business meeting Monday night at which plans for raising funds for the class were discussed.

We hope to give a more complete report next week.

Reporter.

January 14, 1913.

BURLINGTON BARACA CLASS.

Sunday, January 12th, attendance 29, offering, $1.56.

C. B. Way, Press Reporter.

TABERNACLE, TABERNACLE CT.

Dear Herald:

Since our reporter for this year has not yet been named, and no recent report from our church has been given, I venture to write unbidden.

Our first quarterly conference was held on Saturday before the first Sunday in January. Preaching by our new pastor at 11 o'clock. Business transacted harmoniously all the way through.

We were loath to give up our former pastor, Rev. C. A. Cecil, who has served us with such untiring faithfulness the past three years. But since the conference elected him to the honored position of president we willingly let go our hold, realizing that he was entering a field of even broader usefulness. And our prayers go witth him, that in this very responsible position, he may indeed be guided by the Holy Sprit, and be given physical strength to meet his obligations. Especially in this hour of bereavement does he have our deepest sympathy. Since he could not come back to us, however, we think the conference could not have come nearer pleasing every body on the entire circuit than it did by sending us Rev. T. M. Johnson.

We think Tabernacle circuit has been fortunate in having good pastors any way, not only this year but in years agone as well.

Our S. S. is doing fairly well, but vast room for improvement. During this year we hope to make a better record than last. We already feel that a new strength has been added in the persons of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, both of whom are specially interested in this line of work. We are glad to welcome them not only to our church but to the community as well and as we work shoulder to shoulder we hope to be mutually helpful to each other.

We are sorry to note that Miss Lelia Kirkman has for more than two weeks been confined to her room witth grip. Miss Lelia is among our best teachers in the S. S., but has, for more than a year, been unable to attend regularly on account of the continued illness of her brother, Stacy, who was also faithful in attendance until thus prevented. His condition does not seem to permanently improve. The family have our sympathy.

We were saddened last week by the death of Mrs. James Hackett, much known as "Aunt Lou," who for years has been a member of Tabernacle church. For more than a year she has been in declining health, but the end was not expected so soon. The large concourse of people attending the funeral and the uncontrolled grief of the bereaved ones showed with what esteem she was held. She told her husband and son before starting to the hospital that if she did not get back alive all was well with her soul, which testimony, of course is a great consolation to them in these hours of loneliness.

Rev. John Heath is very, very feeble, confined to his bed most of the time.

Lucilla Hardin.

January 12, 1913.

MT. CARMEL, PIEDMONT CT.

Our new preacher, Bro. Shelton, preached for us last first Sunday. He preached us a good sermon. We think we will like him fine. Mt. Carmel has been on the decline for a few years, but we feel encouraged now and expect to have a larger congregation by next preaching day. I know we have only a few members but if he continues to preach as he commenced the people will come out. We want to start up Sunday school in a few weeks and will hope to get a new organ or have the old one repaired.

I must say a few words for the Herald. I have not been taking it quite a year. I am liking it fine. I don't think I can get along without it. I life to read the brothers' and sisters' letters and hope they will continue to write. I feel that I ought to say some thing for Brother Suits as he gave us lots of good preaching and we found him to be a fine man and also he had a nice family and was loved by all that met them. I hope they will like their new home and have the richest blessings of our Heavenly Father.

This is my first letter to the Herald and I will not make it too long for fear it will find its way to the waste basket Will close with best wishes to all.

Mrs. S. J. Kennedy.

Tabernacle Circuit.

Our quarterly conference was held Jan. 4th with a fairly good attendance. The reports showed the forces to be well organized and in fine shape to begin the year's work. All church officials had been elected at the closing up of last year. They have a uniform plan all over the circuit for handling the finances—one set of stewards to collect pastor's salary and another set to collect all other interests. These advise together but work separately. However, Moriah has in addition to the board of stewards who collect a treasurer whose business it is to handle the funds and pay the bills. If every pastor would organize his work as well for each succeeding year, it would start easy. Of course, it will take work to carry it on, no plan will work itself, somebody must work it. The advantage here is the workers have been selected in advance. The plan is to pay pastor quarterly, so far as they have paid in about that proportion taking the circuit over, though some churches have not. I am urging that the stewards for general interests collect in the same systematic way.

The Trustees are planning to make some needed improvements and repairs on the parsonage. There is an all-the-year-round Sunday school at each church. The activity in the Moriah and the Julian schools seems marked. The Tabernacle superintendent is planning for a Home Department campaign, and is endeavoring to arrange to start a Teacher Training Class. The Ladies' Aid Society of the Julian church is a live and interesting organization.

Death has made some inroads thus early in the year. Mrs. Hannah Jane McCulloch, aged 83, was buried at Tabernacle Jan. 7th; Mrs. Charlotte Louise Hackett, aged 61, was buried at the same place on the 10th; and Mrs. Leola Bell, aged 44, was buried at Moriah the 13th.

I should have mentioned above the splendid Christmas tree at Moriah and exercises by the children on Christmas day. The pastor wishes to express his heartfelt thanks for a kindly remembrance by the Moriah church membership in the form of a pair of splendid driving gloves from the tree. The pastor and family wish also to express hearty thanks to the Julian people for liberal and useful additions to the larder sent by the delegation to the quarterly conference. The kindness of the people around us here at the parsonage continues unabated, in so many ways. For all these things we are thankful and shall strive to make ourselves helpful to the people.

T. M. Johnson.

Forsyth Ct.

The good people of this circuit have shown many kindnesses to their pastor and his family, since their arrival on this field. On Friday of Christmas week, tho' a cold day, a number of them gathered at their pastor's home, bringing many good things with them, to leave for our use—such as apples, beans and corn, butter, cake, candy, chicken, flour, dried fruit, lard, meats, molasses, potatoes etc. Some who could not come sent us their donations; and others gave theirs later.

Brother Robert Cox is largely responsible for this pounding. He had informed us that his father was coming up to see us that afternoon; but did not intimate any one else was coming with him. But they did.

We are indebted to the Coxes, Hines, Shouses, Stultzes, Sullivans, Longs, and others for their kindness to us. They have our heart felt thanks. May God in some way enable us to repay them; and bless them abundantly.

But we have been accustomed to such acts. The people whom we had served before had treated us in the same manner more than once. In fact we have never served a people where they did not in some way similarly treat us.

It is pleasant to serve a people so kind, and we are hoping not only to have a

Continued on page 12.

Some of the Strange Sights.

Motoring in Miami is one of the chief means of amusement and fortunately for me my big brother has a car which he does not mind using for my comfort and pleasure, for I have already traveled over a great many miles of this beautiful country. I had planned some side trips before coming here but he keeps me so busy going with what time I am giving to the study of my sermons for my summer campaign, that if new things keep coming up I do not know when I am going to get very far from this place.

Some time ago a Mr. Thompson, a fisherman of this place caught, a fish that measured 45 feet in length, 23 feet in circumference and weighs 25,000 pounds. My brother wrote me about this fish when it was caught and I thought my! that sounds like a fish tale to me. But I saw the sight for myself the other day as they were hauling it on a wagon to the place on Twelfth street where they now have it where you can see it by paying a quarter. But I saw it on the road and still have my quarter. I do not think fish would have any trouble swallowing a man like Jonah while he was running from duty; but the fish do not get big enough to take in a man who is on the job God gives to him. I want to keep busy while down here, for you see I am close to where the big fish stay. I see a great many things in this town to take folks in not near as large as that fish in size, yet just as large so far as danger is concerned. The evils of the present day to envelope the one who neglects his duty are after us without taking ship to some other port.

I was down at the wharf the other day and saw three hammer headed shark some eight to ten feet long. They had just been captured and brought in, and I was told that the shark was to the water what the buzzard is to the land. They were not very attractive creatures.

This is a great place for fish. They catch the Spanish mackerel in abundance. And the king mackerel are so large that the people buy them by the pound as you do steak at home, only the fish are much cheaper and they are fine. I have enjoyed the King fish as they generally call them here as much as any food I have ever eaten.

They tell me here that some of the bones in my face are beginning to disappear already; I do not know about that as it will take a great deal to get me away from my lean condition. But this bracing salt breeze and delightful sunshine is certainly helping me to get rested and refreshed as I have not been for some time.

We visited the Natural Bridge over Arch Creek one day since coming here and it is as great a curiosity as the Natural Bridge in Virginia. We got out of the car and walked down the water and it was a beauty to behold. The water was clear as crystal and we could see the bottom though it was deep at the bridge. Mrs. Bethea discovered a fish, a white slipper, and a bucket lid in the bottom of the creek and I understand that it is a good place for fishing and bathing.

One does not have to go to art to find the most interesting thinge in the world, for God has placed so many things here to cause us to have a greater reverence and admiration for Him as we find something to cause us to realize that He is the greatest of all artists and designers.

Yesterday we went in company with Mr. Blackburn, the Presiding Elder of the Miami District, and Mr. Davis, the pastor of the M. E. Church, South, here to see what is called the "Devil's Punch Bowl." This is a place in south Miami overlooking the open Atlantic where it is supposed that sea pirates once went in to hiding, and drilled a hole into the rock to get fresh water for their boats. There are a set of steps leading down to the water and right near the steps is the Bowl with water in it. The swamp is dense right above the sea wall and I shuddered as I thought of what may have happened back in the days when sea pirates were so plentiful.

Dr. Davis said; "Wouldn't this be a fine place to sit on your front porch and make a sermon here looking out into the mighty deep?" But my, no one of the preachers I know could afford a place there, as land is high here owing to the fact that there are so many people buying lots here for winter homes.

Here at this remarkable place Hon. W. J. Bryan has bought a large tract for a winter home and I guess there will be thoughts brought to the world from this place of inspiration that the ordinary man would not bring forth if the place was in his hands. Mr. Bryan calls this home now and I am hoping to hear him before leaving as he offers to talk to Miamians free of charge when here after this. My wife had the privilege of hearing him since coming here before I came.

I was glad to see a familiar face the other day as I came in with my mail. A Methodist Protestant too. I noticed in the paper the day before that a Tar Heel had come in and I had decided to hunt them up, but they got the go on me. So when I walked in who should I find talking to wife but Mrs. Kime from Burlington. It is always refreshing when you are among strangers to find an old acquaintance. She is not a stranger here, having spent some time here last year. Well, we see all kinds of people here from every quarter of the globe. The boats that ply from here to the Bahama Islands carry a great many people that are out sight seeing. This Extension that goes out to Key West is one of the wonders of modern railroad building. Hope to give you something from my own observation soon. The tourists are beginnign to fill up the town now and that gives the eople here something to do as that is their principal dependence for a livelihood. Last winter they had over one hundred thousand visitors here. Just think of it. That means that there is a great deal of money turned loose here. The preachers say that they can't do much revival work here in winter as the people who reside here are so busy with those who are here to have a good time. You know it is not customary for church folks to take their religion with them when they go on a pleasure trip and it seems to me from what little experience I have had that is the time it is needed more than any other time. I want to tell you in my next paper something of the fruits and flowers of this delightful clime.

N. G. Bethea.

Miami, Fla.

FROM BRO. PICKENS.

Editor Herald:

Ever since the last annual conference I have thought that I would write a letter expressing my regrets that I could not attend at least one day of the session. It is always a real pleasure to be there for I meet many friends of my boyhood days when life and love and friendship and hope and faith are fresh and strong and unsordid. That is the period in which the lives of others are knitted and webbed into ours, and are drawn to us "with hooks of steel". Extra work and unexpected engagements delayed my leaving South Georgia a few days so that I got home too late to permit my reaching Burlington for a single session of conference except on Monday. Early Monday morning I was at the station and bought my ticket for Elon, the place of meeting that day, but the extra work and travel had overtaxed my strength, and at the last moment I decided that I was unfit to go so gave my ticket to Capt. Rankin. Another year must pass before the privilege will serve again. I trust that a kind providence will spare all my friends—they are all my friends—till then.

The three heroes of the cross who passed to their rewards for faithfulness last year I have known and loved so long that my mind runneth not to the contrary, and with my tears I would gladly drop flowers upon their graves, and record here the cherished links of my fond memory of them. Most intimately of the three I knew Bro. Garrett. His influence came into my life when I was a mere lad and he with others kept house, boarded themselves, in a room on College Hill at Yadkin. His cheerful, social, genial nature was sunlight on the darkest day. His language was always chaste and pure, and his demeanor was at all times exemplary. I recall many occasions on which these splendid characteristics manifested the true conception of gentility and unswerving loyalty to his high ideals. The inner force of his life was so hampered and fettered by physical defect that it did not become effective and useful as it otherwise would have been. With the prison house unlocked, and the schackles unloosed we will know and enjoy his full stature of manhood when we meet again.

Imprisoned behind only two avenues of communication which are easily restricted, and with only five external senses, any one or more of which may be defective, we do not know of the hosts of intellectual and moral giants about us who are effectually covered from our recognition as are the diamonds of the unturned earth.

In the contemplation of the influences of such impenetrable barriers as are possible in physical defects, so often not conspicious, how potent is the injunction, "Judge not," and how more greatly are we impressed with the duty to be charitable towards others.

Our new president, Rev. C. A. Cecil, my neighbor and friend, assumes the burdens and responsibilities of the office with a dignity, determination and hopefulness that gives promise of best results. He is progressive, capable and thoroughly in earnest. His letter of suggestions in a recent issue of the Herald was timely and indicative of his thoughtful cossideration for both pastor and people, and if followed would be productive of a heartier cooperation and great development in the church work. Strength to his arm.

With New Year greetings to all readers of the ever welcome Herald, and with cheers for the Editor I am, with all good wishes,

R. T. P.

Concerning the Brotherhood.

At the last session of the Brotherhood it was decided to so amend the constitution as to admit non-beneficiency members. An amendment providing for this, and, possibly, a more rapid increase in the permanent fund, will be presented to the Brotherhood at its next regular session. I suppose his amendment will be adopted. In view of this it is the purpose of the Sec. to correspond with those who were once non-beneficiary members and see if they are willing to have their names enrolled again. The Sec. also suggests to each member that he make a canvass of his field for a list of non-beneficiary members to be presented to the next regular meeting of the Brotherhood. This may seem premature but the exigency of the case demands it.

It was also decided that those who would pay up back dues within one month should be reinstated. As this article is at least one month late I suppose it is still in order for those who wish to renew in this way to send their money to the Sec.

The President ruled that a member cannot get in arrears more than three dollars, unless more than one member dies within six days. Or, in other words, when a member does not meet his dues inside of sixty days from the date of notification he ceases to be a member: and, of course, receiving no protection from the Brotherhood, he cannot be due anything. But if more than one member should die within sixty days, and a member should fail to meet the first call, he would be due to pay on all succeeding calls in the sixty day limit just as on the first call for the reason that he receives protection during that time. The ruling further provides that those who come back in this way shall pay fifty cents additional as an initiation fee. This is because of the fact that really come in as new members.

This article should have appeared appeared several weeks back, and was written and sent, but from some cause or other it failed to reach the editor, or if it reached him it was lost or overlooked.

J. A. Burgess, Sec.—Treas.

THANKS.

To J. W. Jenkins, Millard Martin and Mr. Stubbs for ½ ton of coal.

J. F. Dosier.

The Duty of Children.

A child should always say what's true,
And speak when he is spoken to,
And behave mannerly at table—
At least so far as he is able.

—Robert Louis Stevenson.

WE SHOULD PARTICIPATE.

The celebration of the hundredth anniversary of the birth of David Livingstone, the great missionary to Africa, is now engaging the attention of the churches, especially those of England and North America.

He represents the noblest type of Christian missionary both in his life and in his heroic, self-sacrificing labors.

He opened the door of Africa to the world, and opened the door of the world to Africa with the result that slavery was given its deathblow, and the Gospel began to diffuse its light and power for the moral transformation of the people and the development of their life in all its relations.

The prominent features of his character and life need to be deeply impressed upon young and old in our churches today, and his masterful faith, indomitable courage and persistent efforts to discharge his duty in the midst of multiplying difficulties and sufferings in African wilds ought to be held up to our people as an inspiration and incentive to more devotion and unselfish service for the good of men through the activities of the church.

Our board is preparing to have the celebration observed by our people generally, except the special service of songs, recitations, etc. provided by the Missionarl Education Movement for use by Sunday schools.

We will not antagonize the Easter Service of our Board of Home Missions, nor change our long established plan of holding Children's Day service.

We do propose, however, to enlist our pastors by supplying them with suitable material, free, with which to do certain things.

PRELIMINARY WORK.

1. Announce the celebration, insert items in your local church paper, etc. See that "Livingstone the Pathfinder" (Price 50 cts at our book concern) is in your Sunday school library, and call attention to it. This much can and ought to be done.

2. In several prayer meetings before March 19th, Livingstone and foreign missions should have some place, and special prayer offered on behalf of foreign missionaries, native workers and heathen peoples.

3. Five minutes should be given to missionary exercises in the Sunday school for four Sundays. This will give glimpses of Livingstone, etc.

4. Programs will be given for Young People's Societies. Not difficult, and are uplifting. Missionary or other committee can arrange this.

5. Several Mission Study Classes on Africa or any other country should be started. Call for volunteer leaders. Pamphlet "How to Organize" free.

THE CELEBRATION.

Sunday, March 16th preferred, March 23rd if more suitable. Pastor to preach on Livingstone, his work and foreign missions, including our own work. Secure the full amount of your assessment for foreign missions that day, if you have had to delay that long, and send it immediately to me. More anon.

FOR YOUR IMMEDIATE ATTENTION.

Do not fail to send me your assessment at once. Do not fail to have your school make an offering for storm damages, etc. in Japan. Do not fail to send me your last year's Children's Day offering. Two came last week.

Fred C. Klein,
Cor. Sec.-Treas.

316 N. Charles St., Baltimore, Md.

Begun on page 9.

pleasant year; but a successful one.

A lot has been purchased at Rural Hall, upon which we hope to see a parsonage built this year. Brick have already been placed on it for the foundation.

Pastor.

President's appointments for Forsyth.

Dalton's Chapel, Feb. 3rd, 11 A. M.
Tabernacle, Feb. 3rd, 3 P. M.
Hickory Ridge, Feb. 4th, 11 A. M.
Oak Grove, Feb. 3rd at night.
Maple Springs, Feb. 4th, 3 P. M.

UNION CHAPEL SUNDAY SCHOOL.

We have recently purchased screens for all of our classes, which proves to be a great help to both teachers and scholars. Sunday was the day for the election of officers and teachers. Mr. J. W. Davis was elected as Superintendent, Mr. J. L. Stone as Assistant Superintendent, Mr. Melville Edwards as Secretary and Treasurer, Miss Lillian Huff as organist. The same teachers were re-elected.

Our pastor gave us an excellent sermon on "Seed Sowing," showing us the importance of sowing good seed while a youth. We also had some special Christmas music prepared. A solo, "A Dream of Home," was very efficiently sung by our pastor.

Our pastor, Rev. N. G. Bethea, left Sunday afternoon to join his family in Miami, Florida, where they will spend the winter with his brother.

On last Friday night Miss Gussie Finch entertained her Sunday school class at her home; it was an enjoyable occasion and all went away feeling they were better by having met in this pleasant and hospitable home.

Reporter.

BRO. T. T. HICKS AT MT CARMEL CHURCH, GRANVILLE CT.

Our pastor, Rev. N. G. Bethea, being away, Bro. Hicks interested us Sunday last. For me to introduce Bro. Hicks to you (that is, the North Carolina Conference) is useless, as Bro. Hicks, his ability and his importance, is so very well known to the above mentioned. Taking up the law-breaker, he carried him from "shooting the rabbit out-of-season" to the unreasonable case of murder. This of course was a great illustration of the stepping stones to ruin. A minimum, then easier a medium and then a maximum deed of violation. Bro. Hicks so beautifully pictured this that even the children seemed greatly interested. Of course the law and the Bible being so closely related this could be more readily appreciated. Truly it was great to be there. Will be glad to have Bro. Hicks with us again.

W. Polk Garrett.

GREENVILLL CT.

Our new pastor, Bro. J. A. Ledbetter, filled both of his appointments here last Sunday. He preached at Philadelphia at 11 o'clock. Preaching from the first chapter of Genesis. Subject, the creation of the world. Am sure it was enjoyed by all. The writer was glad to worship with these people.

Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock he preached for us at Hobb's Chapel, using for his text John 20:25. Subject the unreasonableness of unbelief. The sermon was largely for the church. It was enjoyed and we may profit by it.

We all like Bro. Ledbetter very much and we feel he is the right man in the right place. We enjoyed having him in our home.

Dora Pair, Reporter.

January 6, 1913.

REHOBOTH, ALBEMARLE CT.

As the reporting of various S. S. Christmas entertainments is now in vogue, we're glad to say that we can do like wise.

For weeks we had been anxious about the funds to meet the expenses we were planning, and just how and where it would come from, when the nickels, dimes and dollars came in with such a rapid pace not only from the members of our little S. S., but outside friends, from the pack peddler to the book agent, who felt the spirit of Christmas giving, and on these unexpected sources helped to respond, until we knew that there was no doubt about a real success.

When Christmas morning dawned, many were hurrying to be at Rehoboth on time, for not only two Christmas trees filled so tempting and pretty, but "dear old Santa Claus" was said to be coming too, and so many never had seen this dear old fellow. So with the assurance of meeting him, muddy roads were not a bit of a hindrance then.

The children's march and exercises most over, a big noise of ringing bells and a whoa! to the reindeers and behold! the old Santa came up the aisle limping as though it might be his last trip; then he spoke of the need of an automobile, or better still an airship, to carry him on his endless journeys to and fro. But he made the children and the entire congregation happy as he distributed candy in abundance to all, even the negroes in the gallery. And when he continued so helpful with distribution of presents galore, it was plain to be seen he was not so old, certainly not, when it was learned that he was an old time friend of church ect., the same Willie Blount who always loved to cooperate at Rehoboth.

But to our minds the best part of all was the beautiful spirit of harmony expressed, and the splendid appeal our dear Superintendent, W. J. Cahoon, made for the repairs of the church resulting in $8.00, very good for an unexpected call, and not large audience. This means something for the coming preacher to continue on.

The 1st Sunday being an ideal day, our S. S. of only 19 was well represented and our wide awake Superintendent couldn't let the opportunity pass for the election of S. S. officers etc. This resulted with the following officials and teachers for the year: Sup., W. J. Cahoon; Assistant Supt., Cornelius Tarkington; Secretary, Neal Tarkington; Assistant Secretary, W. E. Blount; Treasurer E. T. Sexton; Teacher Quarterly class, W. E. Blount; teacher Intermediate class, Callie W. Tarkington; teacher card class, Mrs. W. E. Blount. These are not all members of this church, but dear co-workers who love to help strengthen the cause of Christ, and how much we love them, we cannot tell. With sensible men and women to help us, we take fresh courage. The presence of Bro. C. Tarkington in our midst is more than helpful. He is known as the strong supporter of Edenton church, and has represented our Eastern work at several conferences. To any friend who may feel sufficient interest, we will be very grateful for any amount of help to remodel this dear old mother church of the Albemarle Circuit. Changes have made a serious effect here, and it is quite a struggle with us, but to beautify this sacred structure, means new life and all that is good.

May this be a year of many blessings for Editor and the many readers.

Sincerely,
Callie W. Tarkington.

Gladys Satterwhite.

On the night of the 14th of December 1912 Miss Gladys Satterwhite, daughter of Bro. and Sister Hunter Satterwhite, passed into eternity. She had been sick for about twelve months. Part of the time her suffering was very great, but it was borne with great patience. Her death was triumphant and glorious. She had lived for Christ here and because of this had no fear in going out to meet him and live with him in eternity. In her days of health she displayed the spirit of obedience, and in the hour of death she was interested in those left behind. This was the very spirit of our Master; and shows that she was one of his disciples: for to have the spirit of Christ is to be of Christ. The sad thing about this death is the life did not seem to be finished. Gladys was young. Her life was just beginning to unfold into usefulness. Viewed from the human side it has been lost not only to the home, but the church and community. But in the great plan of our Father it is not lost. It cannot be lost. We wish she could have stayed with us: but who knows but that the great purpose of God is better served in her death that if she had lived?

We believe her triumphant death will be an inspiration to her friends traveling on the "King's high way," and we trust that her pleadings for her loved ones away from Christ may prove the power of God unto their salvation.

The deep sympathy of all who are familiar with the circumstances goes out to the stricken family. We believe, and know that God will bind up these broken hearts and in his own good way make good the loss.

J. A. Burgess.

BRO. McSWAIN ASKS PRAYER.

I am now in Richmond county for a few days nursing my little six-year old boy who has a broken arm. Will you all (Herald readers) pray that it may result in nothing more serious.

J. E. McSwain.

—Don't send us articles without sending us your name.

—Forsyth Circuit has bought a lot and is getting material to build a parsonage.

—Mizpah and Friendship congregations will note what is said elsewhere of Bro. Fogleman's sickness.

—Bro. W. A. Spear, of Winston, made his Sunday school in Woodland Ave. M. P. church a Christmas present of a new piano. Wasn't that fine?

—Bro. F. C. Klein is chairman of the credentials committee of the Annual Conference of the Foreign Mission Boards now in session in New York City.

—James Sinclair, a prominent Boston man, is dead from blood poisoning as the result of a scratch on the cheek dealt him by a woman who was wearing a long hatpin.

—That was an interesting find Bro. Dosier reported last week—tin in coal. We wonder if it was not done by some of the upheavals of nature, molten metal being forced into a fissure in the coal.

—Dr. W. A. Coble's death removes perhaps the oldest physician in Guilford County. He was over eighty years of age. He was an uncommon man, a man of many interests, besides being a skilled physician.

—Last Monday the N. C. Electoral College met in Raleigh and cast their votes for Wilson and Marshall for President and vice president of the United States. H. M. London, of Pittsboro, was chosen to carry the vote to Washington.

—The new publishing house of the Christian Church at Elon College is approaching completion, and Mr. Montgomery, of Troy, Ohio, who is to superintend the mechanical work, has arrived and entered upon the work of selecting supplies and arranging for the work. They hope to begin the printing of The Christian Sun in a few weeks.

—The impeachment trial of Judge Archbold ended on Monday in his conviction. The penalty is his removal from office and his disqualification for ever holding any office of honor, trust or profit under the United States. It is a great disgrace, but he was adjudged guilty of using his position as federal judge to further his private interests and those of his friends at the expense of justice.

—We have read with intense interest a book recently sent us by the author, Mr. Sidney Tapp, of Kansas City, Mo. It is entitled "The Struggle" and portrays the conflict going on between the people and the men of great wealth who are guilty of overreaching the people. It was written seven years ago and may be taken as a sort of prophecy of the manner in which the conflict will end. The prediction is that the people will win a complete victory without shedding a drop of blood. The author has such confidence in the Anglo-Saxon race that he expects this outcome. He describes the rich malefactors in such a way that one recognizes and identifies them. In the closing chapters they are brought to justice and sentenced to the penitentiary by state courts for terms varying from ten to twenty years. One of the heroes of the book is "Mr. William Fitchen, of Personel county, N. C.," in whom North Carolina readers will recognize our late governor.

—Representative Roberts, of Buncombe County, has introduced a bill in the legislature providing for the establishment of a training school for teachers in the western part of the state. He asks the appropriation of $25,000. It is expected that the town to which the school goes will donate an amount equal to that offered by the state, if the bill passes.

—Senator Stubbs, of Martin county, has proposed that the question of holding a constitutional convention be submitted to the people of our state at the next general election. In case the measure carries it is provided that the prohibition law be not amended or considered. This provision was thought necessary we presume to allay suspicion that the object might be to overthrow prohibition.

—Peace negotiations between the Turks and the Balkan allies do not end in agreement so far, and there is prospect of a resumption of the war.

—Bro. J. H. Redding is involved in litigation with the Cape Fear Manufacturing Co., each claiming that the other is debtor.

—The Ohio River is in flood and people are being driven from their homes.

QUARTERLY REPORT BLANKS.

The matter of having printed the quarterly rpeort blanks adopted by last conference was left in my hands by the conference secretary. It was hoped that these blanks would be in the hands of the pastors soon enough for each to use them for the first quartterly conference. I will not attenmpt to explain in detail but one circumstance after another has delayed the work until now. In a few days, however, these blanks will be sent to each pastor.

Geo. L. Curry.

Minutes Wanted.—If you have more than you need, report to the Herald office, as some calls have come since the supply was exhausted.

—Bro. Matthews and wife, of Siler City, made a visit to friends in the east after Christmas.

BETTER C. E. MEETINGS.

By Charles A. Hines.

Notes on Topic for Jan. 19—Matt. 18: 18-20.

This meeting is to be led by the prayer-meeting committee—you will sit at the front—and each one have a definite well prepared part. You are to show the others how to do. Make it an ideal meeting—no part long, singing, interesting, entertaining.

All Christian Endeavor meetings should include periods of sentence prayers. Nothing better trains the members to Christian activity, and nothing furnishes a higher spiritual tone for the meetings. If the leader does not call for them, let the president or some other member.

A meeting that begins in a rut is likely to continue in a rut, and through novelty is not to be sought for its own sake, yet a novel mode of beginning the meeting contributes much of its freshness and interest. Do not always start with singing; begin sometimes with prayer or with Bible-reading; and do not always have the Bible read in the same way.

When the meeting is advanced to some high or spiritual thing, and the leader wishes to quicken conscience and lead the members to heart decisions, then is the time for silent prayer. The theme for this prayer should always be indicated by the leader—sometimes several themes, one after another.

The leader should never read what he has to say about the topic. Better three sentences spoken face to face, though stammeringly, than five minutes of eloquent oration directed at a piece of paper. Do not try to commit to memory what you wish to say. Get ideas that fit into one another so that each is suggested by the preceding, and you will have no difficulty in remembering them.

An always valuable method of prayer meeting is the distribution of questions bearing on the topic. These questions should be handed preferably to the less efficient members, and always long enough in advance to permit of careful preparation.

Bible Hints.

Read 1 Tim. 3:15. The aim of anybody of true Christians is to witness to the truth. Christian Endeavor stands for certain truth that it has emphasized; and each ought to strive to set forth all truths in their right proportions.

Read 1 Tim. 3:16. All truth is stamped up in Christ's person and work. The work of any society of the church is to see that He is preached to all people. This missionary work of any society is one of the all important and essential feature.

Read 1 Pet. 2:9, last part. We may rejoice in what our society has been able to do, in the noble men it has had, in the money it has given, in the schools it has established, in its growth, in its many activities. But the object of it all must be to glorify God; if, through it all, men are not led to His glory, the whole is a failure.

WHEN HAROLD WAS A FARMER.

Ida Blaisdell Tibbetts.

Harold Brooks had been ill all winter. He began by having a severe attack of the measles; then he had a long siege of the whooping cough. His cheeks had lost their rosy color, and he had no ambition for either study or play. "What the boy needs is a year in the country," declared Dr. Bain. Father and Mother Brooks gazed at each other thoughtfully. Then mother's face lighted. "Uncle Ed's farm!" she exclaimed. "Just the place!" agreed Father. So it came about that Harold went to live with his uncle Ed and Aunt Anna on their farm in Mapleville.

At first Harold was lonely. It was early spring. The frost was coming out of the ground, making it very muddy, and the air was damp and chilly. Harold wanted only to lie on the couch in the sitting-room, or cuddle into the depths of the big easy chair by the fire. But Aunt Anna's delicious toast, with sweet, creamy milk and plenty of fresh eggs, soon made him feel stronger. Then there came a warm, sunshiny morning when a robin chirruped, and a bluebird sang on a twig of the apple tree outside Harold's bedroom window. "Come, Harold," called Uncle Ed's cheery voice up the stairway, "we'll plan our gardens today."

"Our gardens!" Harold was out of bed in a hurry. He didn't know anything about gardening, but anything to do in partnership with Uncle Ed was sure to be jolly.

"We'll look over the land today," said Uncle Ed after breakfast, "then we'll decide what to plant. You are to have a quarter of an acre all your own. You may plant what you wish, and have the profits. If you get only a rich coat of tan and a rugged, healthy body, your time will be well spent."

After they had been around the farm, and Uncle Ed had explained about the ploughing and harrowing and furrowing that must be done, he gave Harold several seed catalogues to look at. "Choose what you like, only not too many kinds," he advised. It was not easy to decide, there were so many gay-colored pictures of fine vegetables; but Harold talked it over with Aunt Anna, and when evening came he had made up his mind. "Popcorn!" he announced. "A small bed of lettuce and radishes; but most of my garden is to be popcorn, with a few yellow pumpkins for pies and Jack-o-lanterns!"

Uncle Ed laughed at his nephew's eagerness. "Well done!" he exclaimed. "You'll make a first-rate farmer, I know!" and he gave Harold a slap on the shoulder that made him feel that he and Uncle Ed were the best of chums.

All the spring and summer Harold's letters to Father and Mother Brooks were full of his garden: How the ploughing and planting were done; how he watched for the first blade of green to appear; how he made a horrible man out of straw and old clothes to frighten the crows; how fast the lettuce and radishes grew, and how he sold them to Mr. Lake, who kepe summer boarders; how he hoed the corn and kept out the weeds; how long the pumpkin vines were growing and what large, yellow blossoms they had; how the tassels were appearing on the corn and little silky ears were growing on the stalks; how round and shiny the tiny green pumpkins were; and how Uncle Ed and Aunt Anna called him their "little farmer!" And Aunt Anna's postscripts told how brown and plump Harold's face was getting, and what a fine appetite he had.

When autumn came, there was harvesting to be done. By this time Harold had learned to harness and drive old Ben, so he was able to get his corn and pumpkins into the barn without Uncle Ed's help; and Aunt Anna celebrated the event by making him a most luscious pumpkin pie. Then he and Uncle Ed had jollytimes husking their corn. Uncle Ed worked on his big golden ears of field corn while Harold husked his smaller ears with their pointed kernels. They took turns telling stories, and sometimes they sang together as they worked.

At dinner one day in November Uncle Ed said, "I saw Mr. Bradford, the grocer, at the village, this forenoon, Harold, and he said he would buy your corn. He would like it this afternoon. I have promised to help Neighbor Brown get in his winter's wood, so I can't go with you; but you can harness old Ben and take the corn to the village yourself, can't you? Marketing is part of a farmer's work, you know."

"Oh, yes!" answered Harold, delightedly.

"It looks like a storm," objected Aunt Anna.

"O Aunt Anna, no matter if it does

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday. for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem. and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington. New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p.m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington. D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,
DENTIST.
Office in Benbow Arcade, S. Elm St.,
Rooms 348 and 350,
Greensboro, N. C.
Office phone 29, Residence phone 22.

storm! It won't hurt me," pleaded Harold.

"He's neither sugar nor salt," laughed Uncle Ed. "He can go in the covered wagon, then he will be protected if it should snow. He ought to get home in good season."

It took Harold so long to select the corn and to tie up in bags it was rather late when he started. "Hadn't I better go with you?" asked Aunt Anna. "Old Ben is so slow that I am afraid you won't get home till after dark."

"Oh, no, Aunt Anna! Don't you worry about me! I shall be all right!" replied Harold, confidently.

Old Ben jogged along at a gait that was little faster than a walk, but Harold was so warm under the thick fur robes, and so sheltered from the wind, and so proud because he was allowed to go to the village alone, that he thoroughly enjoyed the ride, and did not care if it was almost dark when he reached Mr. Bradford's store. Mr Bradford was a kindly man who liked boys, so he paid Harold a good price for his corn, and gave him some candy to eat on his way back home.

When Harold left the store it had begun to snow; but he snuggled happily down under the warm robes. Old Ben was willing to trot a litle faster towards home, and he knew the way too well to need much guiding.

When the snow commenced to fall, Aunt Anna looked anxiously out into the gathering darkness. An hour passed. Then Uncle Ed got uneasy, too. "The boy must be all right," he said, assuringly. "Perhaps he was delayed at the store. Guess I'll light the lantern and go to meet him."

The snow was coming fast now, and Uncle Ed's tracks were soon covered. On he plodded for half a mile. Then he called at a house to make inquiries. The family had neither seen nor heard anybody drive by since dark. "I am afraid he has met with an accident," said Uncle Ed, anxiously.

"I'll harness my horse and go with you to meet him," said the man of the house obligingly. So the two men started out together. They went the entire distance to the village, but no sign of Harold. The store was in darkness. Much perplexed, they hastened to the store-keeper's house, where they found that Harold had started for home at five o'clock. "I don't know where to look for the little chap now," said Uncle Ed, hoarsely.

"The best thing to do is to ring the church bell and get people out to hunt," said his companion.

It was the custom in Mapleville to ring the church bell to call the men of the village together whenever there was a fire or a serious trouble of any kind. The church stood on the road towards home about three-quarters of a mile from the store.

"Kling! Klang! Kling!" pealed out the bell on the snow-laden air. "Kling! Klang! Kling! Trouble! Trouble Trouble! Kling! Klang! Kling!" Presently flickering lights glimmered in the darkness, and men and boys came running through the snow.

Harold started up from his cozy nest undr the warm robes. "Where am I?" he thought. "Oh, driving home from the village, of course! I am passing the church now. But why is the bell ringing tonight?" He could hear the shouts of the men, but could see nothing. "How dark it is!" he said to himself. Then he found that old Ben was standing still. He slapped the sorse with the reins, but the animal simply backed a little. "Guess

W. F. MEDEARIS I. F. PEEBLES W. L. PEEBLES
MEDEARIS-PEEBLES FURNITURE COMPANY.
Complete House Furnishers.
STOVES AND RANGES
Cash or Credit.
109 & 111 E. Market St.
Phone 823. Greensboro, N. C.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.
Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.
206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

SEEDS
Fresh, Reliable, Pure
Guaranteed to Please
Every Gardener and Planter should test the superior merits of Our Northern Grown Seeds.
SPECIAL OFFER
FOR 10 CENTS
we will send postpaid our
FAMOUS COLLECTION
1 pkg. 60 Day Tomato 20c
1 pkg. Princess Radish 10c
1 pkg. Self-Growing Celery 20c
1 pkg. Early Arrow-head Cabbage 15c
1 pkg. Fullerton Market Lettuce 10c
Also 12 Varieties Choice Flower Seeds 25c
$1.00
Write today! Send 10 cents to help pay postage and packing and receive the above "Famous Collection," together with our New and Instructive Garden Guide
GREAT NORTHERN SEED CO.
1305 Rose St. Rockford, Illinois

I'd better get out and see what's the matter!" exclaimed Harold, beginning to feel frightened. He felt his way out over the wheels, then jumped. Much to his surprise, instead of landing in the soft snow, he jumped hard against something that seemed like the side of a building. Much dazed, he scrambled to his feet. He could hear the snow blowing and beating upon a roof over his head.

"Boy lost! Boy lost!" sounded the cries of the men. "Ed Shaw's boy's lost!"

In great bewilderment, Harold crept between the wagon and the side of the building out into the open air. "Here! Here!" he shouted, at top of his lungs.

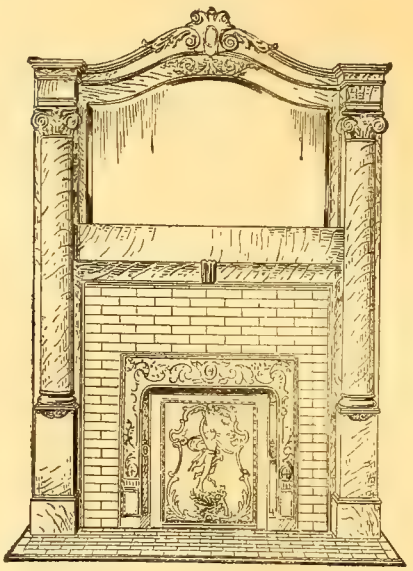
In a moment a lantern was thrust into his face, and he was surrounded by a crowd of men and boys. "Well, I declare!" laughed one of the group. "Didn't have to hunt long, did we? Here's your boy, Ed, safe and sound, and your horse and wagon are under cover in the horse-shed!"

"How came you here, Harold?" asked Uncle Ed, his voice husky from the anxiety through which he had passed.

Harold hung his hear. "I must have gone to sleep," he answered, sheepishly. "That's all I know about it."

Aunt Anna, sensible woman that she was, had a good fire and a pot of steaming-hot cocoa on the stove when Uncle Ed returned with Harold; but her white, drawn face showed how she had worried. "I think our little farmer would better do his marketing by daylight until he gets old enough not to go to sleep on the way home," she said, softly, as she folded a crestfallen boy in her arms.

When Father and Mother Brooks came to the farm for a visit, a few days later, they found Harold so strong and well that they decided it was time for him to returned to the city to go to school. But Harold decided that he will be a farmer again when he is a man.—Zion's Herald.



Mantels, Grates, Tiles and Builders' Hardware.

If you intend to build a new house, or to improve an old one, don't fail to get our catalogue, showing the latest designs in mantels, grates, tiles and builder's hardware. We have designs to suit every style of architecture. It will pay you to write us.

ODELL MANTEL COMPANY,
(Odell Hardware Co., Owners.)
Greensboro, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.
Absolute Security for Your Savings
Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.
This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.
Greensboro Loan and Trust Company
J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE—CO-EDUCATIONAL AND NON-SECTARIAN.

Offers young men and young women in the Methodist Protestant Church exceptional advantages for higher college training. Courses offered leading to the degrees of A. B., Ph. B., L. I., Pe. B., and A. M. Certificate courses offered in Commerce, Music, and Art. Diplomas also granted in Music and Art.

Elon College is situated in the hill country in the Piedmont section of North Carolina. No sickness, healthful climate, pure deep well water. All the buildings heated by steam and lighted by electricity and supplied with water. A large gymnasium for men in process of erection.

Terms are very reasonable. Cost of all expenses ranges from $137 to $187 a year.

The Young Ladies' Home provides for board at cost for young ladies who wish to cheapen their living. This home is under the management of the College and the best possible care is taken of the girls.

The Boys' Boarding Club offers young men an opportunity of living at actual cost. By these boarding arrangements the cost of board and room should be reduced to about half the cost in private homes.

Any person interested should write for a Catalogue, Bulletins, and other information to

W. A. HARPER, LL. D., PRESIDENT,
Elon College, North Carolina.

To all Whom it May Concern.

I take this method of expressing my appreciation to all my brethren and friends for their expressions of sympathy by letter and otherwise in my recent bereavement in the loss of my daughter.

High Point, N. C. Jan 14, 1913.

C. A. Cecil.

—Married by Rev. J. T. Taylor on January 8th at 6:30 o'clock P. M. at the residence of Mr. G. B. Taylor, Mr. J. C. Cluck of Mountville, S. C., and Mrs. Lillie Cluck, of Parrotsville, Tenn.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

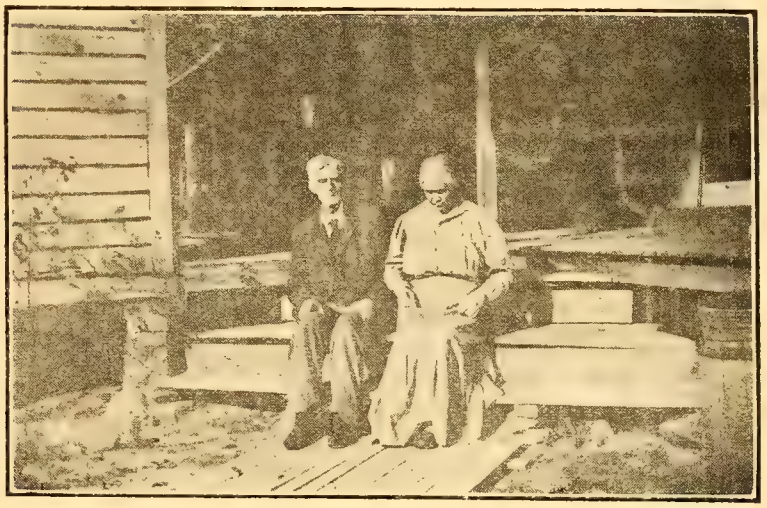
Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XIX. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, JANUARY 2, 1913. NUMBER 6.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.
Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.



A MISTAKE OF RELIGIOUS BUSINESS MEN.

So many business men show no interest in the church or the cause of religion that it is matter of gratulation when one is found that does manifest an interest in these things. And when hundreds and thousands, as in recent years, become active in support of the work of the church in any of its departments, it is an occasion of great rejoicing.

The wide spread interest of men in foreign missions which has developed in recent years is fresh in mind, and the good results of it in enlarged contributions are well known. The Men and Religion Forward Movement came next in the effort to enlist men generally in all departments of the lay work of the church.

It is very encouraging to see the men of a community putting themselves personally and zealously into the work of the church. But it would be much more encouraging to see them continue in the work year after year. Doubtless some will do so, but there is great danger that many business men will decide that it is easier for them to have the work done by proxy, and proceed to substitute for their own personal work the hired labor of somebody else. This danger is peculiarly great in the case of business men because they find it more economical in their material affairs to hire many things done than to do them themselves. By very force of habit they are tempted to pursue the same course with respect to the work before them in the realm of morality and religion.

Those who hire somebody to do their religious work for them do not seem to see the main point. They do not see that the blessing of such work is largely the spiritual development of those who do the work freely and voluntarily. The man who does the work because he is hired does not get this blessing in its fullness, neither does the man who hires him. And those for whom personal work is done, knowing that those who come to them are hired to do so, are not impressed as they would be if it were known to be an act of pure charity.

The layman makes a great mistake when he hires somebody to do what he ought to do himself in the work of the church. It is right and necessory to hire pastors and other workers, but it is a great wrong to depend exclusively upon them.

REV. J. E. HARTSELL.

In the death of Bro. Hartsell, the editor feels that he lost a friend, tried and true. We join with the bereaved of his own family in the sense of personal loss and in doing honor to his memory.

The President of the Annual Conference has named persons to prepare an obituary, and we will not anticipate what they will say.

In the picture on this page, we see Bro. Hartsell and his wife at their home where their son, Rev. H. J. Hartsell, took a snap-shot of them. This is Bro. Hartsell's last picture, and shows him, a superannuated minister, waiting quietly for the end he believed was soon to come. He died on Sunday, December 22, 1912.

—President Taft recently visited Panama.

—Senator Overman was operated on for appendicitis in December.

—Charles Ross has begun the practice of law in Lillington, the county seat of Harnett Co., N. C.

—Dr. C. E. Moore, associated with Drs. Hyatt and Jarboe, has opened a sanitarium in the Yates and Hobbs building in the business portion of Greensboro.

—A counterfeit five-dollar silver cirtificate is said to be in circulation which is so good an imitaton of the genuine that it is exceedingly difficult to detect the difference.

—Thirty-three of the forty men tried for conspiracy to dynamite have been sentenced to prison. The longest term is seven years. Other terms vary from one year to six years. All say they will appeal from the decision of the court.

—President-elect Woodrow Wilson last Saturday, December 28, celebrated the 56th anniversary of his birth at the place of his nativity, Staunton, Va. Immense throngs of people gathered to do honor to the eighth son of the Old Dominion to be made president of the United States.

IN THE BEGINNING.

In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. Gen. 1:1. (Golden text for Sunday, January 5.)

It is vain to spectulate about this beginning; you cannot concieve of how it took place. Neither science, philosophy nor revelation can carry you beyond it, nor explain the mode and manner of it. Like many other truths we meet in life; it is fundamental and neither has nor needs explanation. The only possible or needful explanation about it is found in the next word, "God." In the beginning God. That is sufficient, God was there. He ordered it; He looked after it; He arranged and directed it, and that is sufficient.

What was before this beginning? How did it go about beginning? How did beginning begin? How silly and senseless the questions, unless is added the one word, God. Just that and nothing more. This is the lesson of today, and of this text: to put God first. Just place Him at the beginning.

This is now a new year. Place God at the beginning of it. This is a new day. Place God at the beginning of it. This is a new plan you are making. Place God at the beginning of it. This is a new experience you are having. Place God at the beginning of it. Every beginning is a bad beginning unless God is placed there. We should begin nothing without having God in it.

The Bible order is the only right order —"In the beginning God." And no one of us orders any thing right unless we follow that order. We must place God first, just like the Book does. That is why the Bible is the Book of all books,— it places God at the beginning and then keeps Him there all through. "Seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you." The Bible carries out its own thrilling command, and is an illustration of how mighty is the meaning of it.

How long was the world in creation? Over what period of time did the creation extend? That time still abides and creation goes on. In the beginning was God, and God created then and He has been creatng ever since. He alone is the Creator. Man makes nothing; man cannot create. God alone is capable of the creative act. Man brings together, in new and varied forms and shapes, parts and parcels of God's creation; but from the beginning until now man never has created anything. Man's efforts are all confined to the moving act. Man moves things together or takes them apart; but he never has created anything. Man may plant and cultivate and bring in the harvest; but God alone creates, gives the increase. How helpless and hopeless is man without God. We are the creatures of His handiwork and are absolutely dependent upon Him. In our beginnig, in the world's beginning, He was. How important it is that we have and keep Him in all our beginnings.

Let us strive this new year to have Him in all our undertakings, in all our plans, in all our purposes, in all our hopes, ambitions, aspirations. "In the beginning God." No day is a right day and no plan is a right plan until man has placed God in the beginning of it. "O Lord undertake for us."

—From The Christian Sun.

CHRISTMAS.

Christmas commemorates an event rather than a time. The date is not so important as the fact. Let critics war over dates and theologians over the celebration of the day; the spirit of the event will still remain. Jew and Gentile share alike in the revenue from its observance, and the significance of the manger story gathers strength from age to age. It is not kept alive by law or gospel: it is the inherent expression of the gospel itself. Never while baby cries or mother prays will Christmas vanish from the thought and observance of man. It is the spirit of Bethlehem filling every place and every home with thought of the Son of God. The angel song no more dies than sunlight dies because the sun seems to set. The sun follows its own shadows around the globe. Angels sing and toilers hear their praises around the world. The joy of that Judean night has multiplied itself on a thousand hills, and glad as those shepherds were, when they told what they had seen and heard, are the uncounted children who run to and fro to show and tell what Santa Claus has brought. Every Christmas present comes on angelic wings of love.

Christmas wakes up a sleeping world. It hushes the grinding wheels of toil. It lightens the load of millions of hearts. Care hides herself when Christmas comes. Age feels young, and children are as rich as men. The air trembles with laughter and night shines without the stars. Christians measure the gifts of God, and wicked men immerse themselves in self-indulgence forgetful of His care. But the idea the spirit, the fact, the tremendous impulse of Christmas, moves on toward a more intelligent, more spiritual observance of the day. Revelry desecrates the event, degrades the revelers, and mars the significance of the advent of the world's Redeemer. But it will not always be so. Bethlehem's star will some day shine in an unclouded sky and angels or men will sing praises in an undefiled air. Then earth's toilers will rejoice and have glad news to tell their fellows, and the reign of peace will begin on earth. Capital and Labor are Siamese twins and the pain of one is the pain of the other, and the death of one is the death of the other. They cannot separate without the death of both; and mutual affection only can make either happy. Jesus came to bring peace among men and joy among angels. Babies bring angels to earth though the cradle is a manger. Gold, frankincense, and myrrh, wisdom and homage are all laid at the feet of the child. "Despise not one of these little ones; for I say unto you, that in heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven." The greatest night in time up to the night when Jesus was born was that night when the Judean hills echoed the song of angels and the hurried tramp of shepherd feet to the stall in Bethlehem, where they found the newborn King; but millions will be happy on this Christmas of 1912 where one was happy on that first Christmas day. That child has filled the childhood of the world with multitudinous joy. Peeping out from silken covers of down, or quilts patched out of worn garments by horny fingers, little eyes in millions of homes gleam with delight as they look for the plump silk hose or darned stockings on the wall. The pencils of light that fall acorss rosy faces on Christmas morn reveal happier hearts than the lights on Belshazzar's banquet hall. Hush! I hear the heart beats of millions of children dreaming of Christmas morn. The lights are all out. The house is still, save the beating of anxious hearts. Hark! the grey dawn mantles the world with the slow but sure light of the rising sun. The stars fade away into the white light of the new day. A million eyes open and a million bare feet press the carpet or the bare floor. It is Christmas morning. The shout of infant voices fills the world. Parents look out with tear-filled eyes of joy and hear the story of Santa Claus again. The armies of Alexander, of Xerxes, of Marius, of Napoleon, pale in numbers and power before this army of grateful childhood. Gladness fills the world. The tin horn leads the procession of triumph through the streets of a conquered world. "Joy to the world, the Lord is come." Would you believe it? the Prince of Peace already reigns. To be sure, some men will turn this glad week into debauchery and reel to their homes or to the prison house with no sesne of gratitude or word of praise; but humanity moves on toward the time when every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess the name of Jesus Christ. W. W. Staley.

A PORTABLE CHURCH.

Through the kindness and promptness of the Home Mission Department of the Southern Christian Convention, the Delmarvia Christian Conference is now in possession of the only Portable Church building in the world. This is not a tent the construction of its splendid new steel built of the same material that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company is using in the construction of its splesdid new steel passenger coaches. It is absolutely fireproof. It is as comfortable in winter as in summer, and as cool in summer as it is warm and weather-proof in winter. It will accommodate 300 without crowding, and by using chairs affords a fine floor space for social gatherings, and makes possible any sort of class formation in graded Sunday school work.

We expect to open our portable church to the public at Magnolia, Del., next Sunday afternoon. This will be a Christmas service, with a sermon by the writer and music by my Dover choir and male quartette, rendering the same music given in the People's Church in the morning. I will endeavor to send you a report of this notable occasion. This is the realization of one of my fondest dreams. The taking of the message of God to the people. Christianity in motion. The Gospel on wheels. The making available to neglected localities all that is needed to regenerate, educate, and elevate the masses. The bringing to the people of all classes the pleasing and refining influences of social relations and intercourse under the directions and guardianship of the church. The making our young people content with life in the country and small town, and saving them from the baleful lures of the city, by furnishing them with wholesome diversion and opportunities for proper and necessary emotional expression through the social functions of the church. These are a few of the features constituting the mission of the Portable Church.

There is every indication that a number of these portable steel church buildings will be sent out in the very near future. My heart is made to rejoice over this cheering omen of the hastening day when the knowledge of our Lord shall cover the earth as the waters cover the deep.

A. W. Lightbourne.

GOD ANSWERS PRAYER.

It is an old, old story that all know who have put it to the test that God hears and answers prayer. But every personal experience of the kind is both new and interesting.

In the Monday papers this week is related an incident which though it is from the son of the richest man in the world, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is as true and interesting as if it had been the testimony of the poorest man in all the world. It was at Tarrytown, New York, before a large audience at the Y. M. C. A. last Sunday that young Rockefeller related his experience about the answer to prayer in the following manner: "when he faced the crisis of his life and happiness and usefulness to the world depended upon decision, he prayed to God for four years, night and morning to guide him on the right path.

"Suddenly one morning before dawn had broken he arose from his bed and lighted a lamp. He said the path of his life had been then and there made as clear to him as though a sign was before him pointing out the right road for him to follow. He took his pen and there in the early morning committed himself to the life he should lead. What the crisis was or how he committed himself he did not say.

"No man can prove to me that there is nothing in prayer after my experience," he said. "God answered me."

"IF ANY MAN OPEN THE DOOR."

By Ruth G. Wiant.

A friend was telling me some of her experiences in the Dufferin Hospital in India. One impressed me as particularly significant. She was seated on the veranda of the hospital one afternoon reading, when a high-class Hindu woman came up steps and asked for an interview with Miss Henderson. My friend arose to speak to her, and as she did so a copy of Holman-Hunt's picture of Christ standing outside the closed door, fell out of her book to the ground. The woman quickly picked it up and looked at it.

"Tell me about this," she said, her errand forgotten, as a woman long ago forgot her "water pot." "What does it mean?"

Miss Henderson told her, and the woman went away.

Summer passed into autumn, and autumn into winter, and there was snow on the mountains, and the air was chill when Miss Henderson went to call upon this woman.

As she came near the house she saw the door standing wide open. She entered and—the physical need of the woman foremost in her mind, for she was a trained nurse— at once said: "You should not have your front door open so. The mountains are covered with snow, and it is cold."

Then the woman with half shy reverence, said:

"I knew it. I have seen the snow, and I have felt the cold, but thought that perhaps your Jesus might pass by, and I wanted him to find the dor wide open."—Dea. Advocate.

THE CHANCE OF THE MISSION SCHOOLS.

A writer in the Chinese Recorder gives the total number of missionary schools in China as 3,728, with over 100,000 pupils. Of these schools more than two-thirds are of primary grade, the rest including academies, industrial, medical, normal, and Bible training schools, and colleges. The Chinese government reports 42,000 schools under its control; it has now primary and intermediate grades in every province of the empire, besides many professional schools, with a total enrollment of 1,500,000 students.

While the government schools altogether outstrip those under missionary control in numbers, in quality of teaching and management the mission schools far surpass the others. It is believed that it will take a generation at least for the government schools to reach the standard of the others, which, beyond question, furnish the model for China's educational development. Perhaps seventy-five per cent of the textbooks used in the government schools have been prepared by Christians or under Christian supervision. In the matter of teachers in these 42,000 schools, one-third, who have been held over from the old style teachers, are still giving instruction in the classics after the old way, for the lack of better qualified instructors less than one third of the returned students from Japan. There are perhaps 200 Europeans and American teachers; the rest, more than one-third, are largely those who have studied for longer or shorter time in the mission schools.

Thus it appears that the educational work of the missions has furnished to new China a model of its schools, most of its text-books, and a considerable portion of its teachers. When the government system of schools covers the whole country, as it now does a part of it, it is estimated there will be 100,000 schools instead of 42,000. If the present policy continues, there is no reason why mission schools cannot furnish teachers for government institutions up to the measure of their ability to produce them. In this way mission schools, if properly supported, though fewer in number, may be able indirectly to spare the policy of the government in the education of the youth of China's four hundred millions. This fact Dr. Proctor, the writer of the article, deems the greatest challenge made to the American people in this generation

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

Mebane.

On Saturday morning, Dec. 21, I left High Point for Mebane Charge. I found Bro. Swain in waiting for me at the station. Soon we were in the parsonage and found Mrs. Swain and her children all at home, and she was not long in preparing a good meal.

After dinner Bro. Swain and I were on our way to Hebron, three miles in the country, where the first quarterly conference was to meet.

The conference assembled and after some preliminary service the business was transacted in a very pleasant manner. There was not a large attendance of the officials which I regretted, for I believe I can help the pastor and charge more by coming in contact with the leaders of the church than I can by preaching to the masses. The conference decided, and so ordered, they would pay pastor's salary quarterly and make an effort to raise half of the general interest assessment by May, and I trust they will succeed.

All our pastors should begin on their general interests early in the year, and have a plan, and work the plan, for no plan will work itself. I have heard of some just taking what we call a "hat collection" and trying to raise the various collections in that way; but that will not do if one expects to get all the assessments in full, on his charge.

I had the pleasure of spending Saturday night with Bro. and Sister Henry Nicholson, and found in their home two bright little girls who could sing like larks, and I also found Sister W. D. Fogleman stopping with her daughter and it was very pleasant to be there.

On Sunday A. M. I went to the Church at Mebane, and found a goodly number of S. S. pupils present, and Bro. J. L. Amick the Supt. in charge, and have heard no better singing in some time than they did both in Sunday school and preaching service at 11 o'clock. Dr. Swain conducted the preliminaries and I endeavored to preach and the people were good listeners, and some enjoyed the discourse well enough to tell me so, and I trust the service will be productive of good.

Bro. Swain and I took dinner with Bro. John Nicholson and wife, and through the kindness of Bro. John I had a pleasant ride out to Hebron where I preached to a small but attentive congregation.

Mebane is one of our best fields, and is made up of some of the best people in our Conference; for I have known some of them for thirty-five years; they were good when I first knew them, and they retain the same spirit of helpfulness.

The pastor has a good opportunity to develop, and increase the membership by doing the much needed pastoral work of both churches, and I am persuaded Bro. S. will see his duty in this phase of the work. He and his family are well received.

Piedmont.

According to appointment on the morning of the 24th I left High Point for Mt. Pleasant, eleven miles west, where the quarterly conference was to meet. Preaching at 11 o'clock A. M. not a large audience but interested as I pointed out Pastors', official's and private members' duties to them.

At 1 o'clock the conference was called together by singing, Scripture reading and prayer. Chairman announced conference ready for business. The first business was to elect a Sect., this is a new field; we had no official roll, minutes, or minute book; but we soon got in shape, and found two of the churches not represented; the other four churches were fairly well represented considering the newness of the field. Fixing the plan of appointments and pastor's salary gave us the most trouble; but finally we reached a satisfactory adjustment of both. Salary fixed at $325. it ought to have been $400. It's wonderful how cheap some people want a preacher to work, and some preachers are like men in other vocations, they do some very cheap work. I find in my short experience brethren have failed to raise class books, elect officers for the ensuing year, and fail to administer the Lord's Supper as per Discipline and have no definite plan as to now and when the pastor's salary and general interests are to be raised and paid. Brethren, let us inject into our work in the church more business, and we will succeed better; our people want to know what we want them to do and many of them will do if they can.

The people seem to be well pleased with their new pastor, and the members of the quarterly conference promised to pay him quarterly, and to try to influence the entire membership to do the same. Let the entire membership assist Bro. Shelton in his work. This being his first charge he will need encouragement, for preachers do not have smooth sailing all of the time: there come times in their work when they do not know what to do or say for the best. Then is when they should have help and advice from their helpers, and too they should not forget to call upon the great Leader to direct them at all times.

My claim not met in full, for the reason I did not visit all the churches on the charge. I deem this statement necessary.

Lebanon.

On the evening of the 28th I drove out to Mechanicsville to one of Rev. J. H. Moton's churches to hold his first quarterly conference by request, and found both the churches represented by three from one, and six from the other, which was a very small representation; but with no one to blame but the absentees, so far as I know.

It's a great pity when men are elected to attend to the Lord's cause they are so dilatory; but such is life; but is not such conduct or life tending to death in some instances? Oh: may the officials see their duty to the church, people, pastor, and to God.

The business was transacted pleasantly and to the satisfaction of the pastor and brethren present. This conference also agreed to pay pastor quarterly, and raise as much of the general interests quarterly as they could, and if they pay the pastor quarterly they will pay the other interests, for a certain per cent. of each dollar paid to pastor goes to the general interests. This is an ideal charge in many respects, for nine years in succession they have paid every cent of every collection; last year Lebanon failed just a little in paying out.

There have been two new churches built on this field since Bro. Moton has been the pastor, and the people have been on a strain to keep things going. There is some indebtedness on both churches; but the brethren hope this year to pay largely, and decrease the indebtedness, and when out of debt they can pay a much larger salary, and more general interests.

I preached at 11 A. M. on Sunady at Lebanon church, to what was said to be a very good attendance, and I trust the advice given was accepted and will be practiced by those who heard it.

From Lebanon I went to Pleasant Grove, 3½ miles south west of High Point for the second service, here I found a few people at the church; but by half past 3 o'clock there was a very good congregation present.

Here I again delivered my message to a very attentive people, and Bro. Moton says about the best people he ever served, for they give him no trouble about anything, church building or entertainments or any thing else, and I might say the same thing if so many of them were not related to me.

From what I could learn the pastor needs to do some pastoral work among the people of both churches, and I am sure Bro. Moton will do so to the extent of his physical ability. He is one of our most earnest, energetic ministers.

My claim over paid. C. A Cecil.

OUR MISSIONARY WORK.

The Board Meeting.

Besides the usual routine business, at the Board meeting held December 12th, in the Baltimore Book Concern Building, it was decided that Rev. E. I. Obee, home on well earned furlough and now visiting the churches of the Ohio Conference, be requested to arrange to return to Japan during the month of February, 1913.

Summary of Quarter Ending Oct. 1, 1912.

Twelve were baptized, and twenty-four applied for baptism.

There were 1061 members, 211 probationers, 383 absent members, 208 enquirers enrolled, total 1863. Forty-seven Sunday schools were conducted with 2648 scholars, increase over former qarter 501, and 120 teachers, total 2804. 3960 tracts were distributed, and 3213 visits were made.

It Is Not Too Late.

If your Sunday school did not make a Christmas offering for our foreign missionary work last Sunday, earnestly appeal to you in the name of our Lord and His work that you present the case to your school and urge them to make an offering, if only the regular Sunday collection, and send it to me without delay. An offering from every school is greatly needed. Please do not disappoint us.

Why This Continued Silence?

Our appeal for special gifts to repair our mission properties in Nagoya damaged by the greatest storm known there for over fifty years have brought to this date—Dec. 18th—only twenty-four responses from the entire denomination: one Conference collection, two C. E. offerings, 10 contributions from charges, and eleven personal gifts from individuals, and of the $1,000.00 which we urgently need, only $153.52 has been received.

It is with humiliation I publish these facts, but our pastors and people ought to know them that they may appreciate the gravity of the situation, and send speedy relief so as to avert further financial embarrassment.

Every individual and church that can possibly help ought to contribute something at once so that we may maintain our financial credit in Japan.

This money can be obtained from our churches through the efforts of our pastors in presenting the matter to our people and asking for a free will offering, and for this I plead.

Fred C. Klein, Cor. Sec.-Treeas.
316 N. Charles St., Baltimore, Md.

Don't permit your plate to get your stomach into trouble. Taking a pill does not solve the diet poblem.

WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

To the Auxiliaries of our W. H. M. S. Greeting.

To me has fallen the pleasant duty of writing the first letter for our New Year. And first I want to wish you all a happy, prosperous 1913. May our God bless each member of every auxiliary and each household represented. May He richly bless you in all spiritual blessings, and make you to abound in all the Christian graces. May he bless and prosper you in the material things of this life so that you may be able to glorify Him more than ever before by your gifts and offerings.

The past year has been one of great blessing and prosperity to the Woman's Home Missionary Society. God has wonderfully blessed and lifted us to higher planes of service.

Two great institutions, The Children's Home in North Carolina, and the Industrial School in Kentucky, now stand as monuments to the faith, zeal and earnest cooperative work of this Society. Neither of these buildings is complete yet, but ere May shall come and one year be complete, we believe that both will be finished and occupied—one by the little orphan children of the M. P. Church—the other by the dear boys and girls, of one of our mountain districts, who are longing for just the learning and the opportunities that our Kentucky school will give them. For more than a year women who knew the needs and saw a vision of what would meet these needs, prayed and worked for the fund to erect this industrial school. At last the General Board thought we had funds enough in hand to justify our going ahead, so in September the building was begun. The material was contracted for and the excavating for basement begun. Weeks of almost perfect weather has made it possible to carry the work forward continuously until the building is almost completed. Mrs. Everett celebrated Christmas by having a Christmas tree in the basement.

Now we need a furnace for heating, lights, and seats for four large school rooms, and one splendid chapel on the second floor. We need all sorts of machinery for our industrial work in the basement. No more needed work, and no more Home Missionary work can be done by the church than the women are doing right there in Kentucky. I visited the community last summer, and as I went into the homes there I could but thank God that I was,—in a small way at least—connected with so noble a work and one that appealed so much to those for whom we were doing the work. When I asked the boys and girls if they would come to school if we put up a building, I wish you could have looked into their faces and have seen them light up and their eyes sparkled as they would answer, "yes, we are coming." Nearly two hundred boys and girls are asking for admission. The young people of Compton, a small town five miles away, have gone to the rail-road authorities and secured reduced rates, or monthly school tickets over the road so that they can attend.

Mrs. Everett says in a recent letter, "To-day a woman came from seven miles away, walked this bitter cold day, with her twelve year old daughter to enter the child in our school. They are too poor to send all, so had some trouble to decide which should be the first to enter. They slept on the matter, and early the next morning the little two year old baby sat up and said, "I'm going to college." The entire county and the surrounding ones are interested, and are enthusiastic over the school, and tho we have builded even larger than our means we cannot promise admittance to nearly all who ask for admission. There is no work that we can do that will give a greater return than training and developing boys and girls. Recently I saw a letter written by one of the successful business men of this state to another man to whom he had loaned money to go through college. The writer said, "I feel that this has been the best investment I ever made." Here in the Mts. of Kentucky is the greatest opportunity our Home Missions have of making investments of this kind. Invest your prayers, your work, your money, yourself, for we need teachers. And the years will bring back to you the knowledge that your best investments are not in banks, stocks, rail-roads, or business concerns, but in human lives developing immortal souls.

Our executive committee of the W. H. M. S. will meet is Springfield, Ohio, Jan. 3d, 1913. Will every friend of this society pray for this meeting? We need funds, we need wisdom, and far reaching plans for the future of this great work. No one could ask for a better opportuntiy of making his life work last, as the generations come and go, than one has right there training these hundreds of young people into noble, cultured, Christian living.

To make a life in this world is the highest and greatest thing God has made possible. To use that life training other lives to their highest and best is to me the best use possible for a life.

After the Christmas holidays Miss Nellie Feelumlee, known to many of our auxiliaries, will be added to the corps of workers in Kentucky. Then we need more workers, and more money to support them. We need also noble men and women who will support scholarships in the school; for not all of these boys and girls will come from homes where they can afford to pay tuition, and many will come from homes too far away to return each evening, so will have to board in the school. May our God hear and answer through His children the need of these His own. Yours in His name, Margaret K. Dixon.

High Point, N. C. Dec. 28, 1912.

THE MISSION OF THE PICTURE CARD.

(Taken from an article in the "Missionary Link" written from Shanghai, China, by Dr. Julia N. Wood.)

As I walked I noticed two Chinese lads who were evidently regarding me as something of a curiosity. They had good faces, and wished I knew enough of their native tongue to converse with them. Like an inspiration came the thought of some picture cards in my hand-bag left over from Sunday school the day before. Coming back I asked them if they would like to hear about them. Then I told the story in as good Chinese as I could command, and was surprised that they seemed to understand so much. I invited them to come to Sunday school to learn more about Jesus, then continued my walk. When I turned to come back there was a man leaning over the boys, and as I passed they were explaining the pictures. Soon another joined the group and then another. A crowd can gather in China more quickly than anywhere else, I think, and it was not long before there were fifteen or twenty interested and curious listeners and questioners.

A man in the uniform of a railway employe stepped up and asked if I were going on the train, and had a ticket. When he found out I was waiting for a friend he said I must have a ticket just the same. I asked him where to buy it. He answered in Chinese, "You give me the money and wait here. I will return." So I continued my walk, and in due time the ticket appeared with the information that the train was late and would not be in for some twenty minutes or longer. The boys in the meantime had been the center of attraction. Soon I realized that the nga-kok-nyung (the foreigner) was also drawing a crowd. What to do I did not know, so I prayed to be guided. A man asked me if I were an American. Another asked how long I had been in China, complimenting me on the use of their language (for the sake of being polite), while another ventured to ask my age. At this I smiled, and heard some one say I had not understood. Another remarked that according to "foreign custom" women do not tell their ages.

All this time additions were being made to the crowd. As I stepped back a little an old man asked if I were afraid. To this I replied that I considered all Chinese my friends. Just then a company of soldiers went marching by. Some one spoke about the New Republic of China "as very like America," and many questions were asked about the dear old States. I never felt more patriotic in my life than during those few moments, when to that interested crowd of Chinese I tried to tell something of the sufferings and struggles of those early days when our own country was in the making. Again the queer sound which meant "America very like China." They told how good America had been to China, returning the indemnity fund which had built a school to educate Chinese young men. Then the most wonderful opportunity of all came as I told them why I had left my own loved native land. For most of my listeners this was the first time the "Old, old story" had been told. To them it was new and every face was animated. Just as I had finished there sounded the whistle of the train.

While watching for a familiar face as the coaches passed, a Chinese lad suddenly shouted noong-kuh-hang-yew ("your friend"). And sure enough, with a large bunch of crimson azaleas from the mountains in one hand and a suit case in the other, came the one for whom I had waited. As we came to the outer gate I recognized one of my audience of a few minutes before carefully punching tickets. As we passed through he smiled, and in excellent English bade us "Good night."

A MISSIONARY INCENTIVE.

Living Water.

The doctrine of the return of the Lord is a powerful factor in promoting missionary zeal. They who are looking for him to appear erelong in the clouds of heaven, are hastening to send the gospel to the pagan world. Ah, how we have played at missions! What awful indifference! What if a population twice that of Boston dies every week without having heard of Christ, or that annually the number equals that of the British Isles! What matters the twenty-five millions of child widows in India, the horrible atrocities of the African slave-trade, the girl babies left on the streets to die in China, the tens of thousands of innocent girls dedicated in the name of religion to a life of shame; the brutal treatment of prisoners, most of them probably innocent; the wholesale degradation of women; the countless millions of lost souls! A drowsy, sluggish church pays little heed to these things. They are living in reckless disregard of their obligations to the heathen.

One hundred thousand who never heard of Christ die every day, while the women of America pay far more for artificial flowers for their hats and bonnets than the entire church of God gives to. Mismidst the glad chimes of Christian churches, as to awaken them to their great privilege and obligation of bringing the light of Jesus Christ to this land ere the night of eternal darkness settles down upon it!

Although I am not a professed Christian myself, I believe in Christian principles. I have been associated with Christians and missionaries whom I like very much because of their sterling character and brotherliness. During the revolution the Christian natives were of great help to the Revolutionary camps and served in the Red Cross. I believe that Christianity is the kind of religion that China needs.—General Lan "Tien-wai," Chinese Revolutionary Army.

The first ambassador to America sent by the New Chinese republic is Chung Mun Yew. He was one of the first group of young men sent to this country to be educated under the Chinese indemnity fund, and received his instruction in Yale College.

"The Chinese Revolution, by Arthur J. Brown, is a recent publication of the Student Volunteer Movement, intended for mission study classes. The price is $.75.

An editorial in the "Missionary Herald" (American Board), says "Statistics of the Kumi-ai (Congregational) churches in Japan for the year 1911 show a net increase of 345 members." Commenting on the smallness of the number, three to each church, the writer goes on to say: "And as those who live in glass houses are not in position to throw stones, it may be well to remember that the figures of the New Congregational Year-Book show a net gain of only one-half a member for each church in the United States."

—Please write it 1913.

—A happy new year to one and all of our readers.

—Make the year 1913 a better and happier year than 1912 was. It can be done in this way: be better yourself, and seek to make others happy.

ANNUAL CONFERENCE OFFICERS.

President—Rev. C. A. Cecil, 117 Thurston St., High Point, N. C.

Secretary—Rev. N. G. Bethea, Henderson, N. C.

PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENTS.

Yadkin College, ...Jan. 4, 5.
Thomasville,....Wednesday night Jan. 8.
Reidsville, ...Friday, Jan. 10.
Guilford Ct.....Jan. 11 to 13.
Richland, ...Jan. 18, 19.
Randleman, ... Jan. 25, 26.

Pastors will please notice from my notes from the various fields, I state my claims met or not met and this will be continued during the year.

C. A. Cecil.

THE POSTAL CARD.

W. F. Kennett, Editor.

For several weeks the Postal Card has has not been issued. This one will be longer than usual.

OUR ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

I left Conference before its adjournment and was not present when a vote of thanks for entertainment was tendered. My home was with Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Hay, of the M. E. Church, South. Rev. W. R. Lowdermilk was my fellow guest. I have always had a pleasant Conference home, but never a more delightful one than this or a more pleasant and agreeable fellow guest than Lowdermilk, notwithstanding he had a very sore arm and suffered much pain.

BACK AT WORK.

For the 16th time I was assigned to Flat Rock circuit and at once entered upon the year's work. I have preached in all the churches once and at Flat Rock twice. The 1st quarterly conference was held Saturday before the 4th Sunday in December. The pastor's salary had not been fixed at the 4th quarterly conference and so came up at the 1st conference for the new year. The salary was placed at a figure perfectly satisfactory to both pastor and people and with hardly any discussion.

CHRISTMAS CHEER.

Never have the kind people of Flat Rock circuit remembered us so generously at Christmas as this year. The mistress of the parsonage remarked, "This will probably be our last Christmas on Flat Rock and the people seem to be determined to make it memorable."

The finest turkey gobbler that has ever come to us was sent by an "elect lady" of Palestine church and the wife of one of the best stewards I have ever known. This turkey graced our table on Christmas day. A mammoth fat hen was sent by an "elect lady" of Flat Rock church and is scheduled for the New Year's day dinner. From many sources there came sausage, gack bone and spare ribs, lard, pigs' brains, butter, pumpkins, sourkrout, eggs, potatoes etc., etc. A Bethel brother—one of our best farmers—'phoned the pastor requesting him to drive up to his home. The pastor found that this brother had slaughtered 1,302 pounds of pork and wished to divide up with the preacher. From others there came articles of wearing apparel and kind Christmas greetings. Such kindness warms the heart and makes us wish that we could be of more service to the people than in the past and that there should never be any necessity for a change, but "variety is the spice of life" and such good people deserve the spice and so the mistress of the parsonage is probably right in thinking this will be our last Christmas here, but it will not be because we are tired of being loved and kindly treated. To all we say thanks and God bless you. For all my brethren in the pastorate I wish a happy and successful new year—I love them more and more as time goes on—and the aged and superannuate heroes, may God's richest blessings attend them. Our first offerings this year are for them and the full amount of the assessment must be raised.

The passing of Bro Hartsell touches my heart. I well remember his remarks at Libery when giving up the active work and asking for a superannuate relation. He was one of our best, one of our grandest heroes of the cross. I shall never forget a sermon I heard him preach from the text, "I can do all things through Christ who strengteneth me." Of him it may be truly said—

"Servant of God, well done!
Thy glorious warfare's past;
The battle's fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last."

Stokesdale, N. C., Dec. 30, 1912

MOCKSVILLE CIRCUIT.

Dear Herald:—

I reached my new field of labor on December the 21st. Was met by Bro. Cartner at the station and he carried us to his home, where we were kindly received by Mrs. Cartner, and the children, who did everything they could it seemed to make us happy. After spending two days with them, we went to the Parsonage where we were met by a number of our new neighbors to welcome us to their town, and all its social comforts and privileges. We have a nice Parsonage and it is furnished with the most of the furniture, and is located in the main part of the town on Main street, among the best people of the town of Mocksville. We are delighted indeed to be in this noble community.

The children thought that we would not have any Christmas because we were moving away from our old friends, but we never had more in our life.

Bro. Cartner brought us the first Christmas gift—a load of wood which was most needed at the time, and repeated it with another load of wood, and a shoulder of meat. Mrs. Cartner, with milk and butter. Mrs. Anson, with loaf, butter and coffee. Mrs. Swaim, with cakes and fruit. Mrs. Everheart, sugar. Mrs. Click potatoes and preserves. Mrs. Martin canned fruit. Miss Lelia Martin, a nice tie, M. E. S. S., apples, oranges, nuts and candies and other good things. Some others brought gifts whose names I cannot give. We appreciate these gifts and hope that God will give them greater gifts.

We are looking forward to a good year's work for the Master.

I will be at each church on the Mocksville Circuit, at the usual time beginning the first Sunday in January.

the first quarterly conference will convene at Bethel, on Saturday before the second Sunday in February.

I hope to have the President with us on that day. Brethren, will you come and help us to plan for the year's work? I am here to help you, will you help me to help you? if you will God will help us and bless all.

Bro. Cecil, I expect to cooperate with you in the work of our Lord to carry out every plan to success.

With best wishes to the Herald,

J. W. Self.

December 26, 1912.

GUILFORD CIRCUIT.

Quarterly conference at Hickory Grove, January 11th, 1913.

President's appointments:

Hickory Grove, ...Jan. 11th, 11 A. M.
Red Hill, ...Jan. 12th, 11 A. M.
Shady Grove, ...Jan. 12th, 3 P. M.
Fairfield, ...Jan.13th, 11 A. M.
Mitchell's Grove, ...Jan. 13th, 3 P. M.

T. F. McCulloch, Pastor.

MT. HERMON CIRCUIT.

The first quarterly conference will convene at Bellmont church at 11 A. M. on Saturday, January 4th. A full turnout of the official members is much desired.

E. G. Lowdermilk, Pastor.

HALIFAX CIRCUIT.

The new conference year is starting off nicely on this circuit. On the 1st Sunday in December there was a good congregation at Eden church which fact made the pastor feel glad. Then when the stewards handed over two month's salary in advance we were again pleased.

A year ago while Bro. Gerringer was pastor of this work the circuit paid off a debt of $276.00 on the parsonage. This year the circuit has raised $241.00 with which to furnish the parsonage and now Halifax has one of the nicest, most comfortable parsonages that this writer has seen.

Well, about that pounding. One day while we were all busy getting the furniture in the parsonage, a wagon come into the lot loaded with wood. The driver said that Mrs. T. H. Taylor sent it and that there was more to follow, there being two cords in all. Of course we were delighted. Then on Monday before the writer started away on his trip up state, Mr. H. E. Thomas and his family—our good Presbyterian friends—sent a whole buggy load of things for the pantry, in fact the supply was so complete that a family could have kept house for some time. Again on the evening of December 16th the people of our church here stormed us and brought a load of general supplies. Those represented in this pounding were Mr. N. M. Harrison and family, Mr. J. H. Vinson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Wills, Misses Harriet and Mary Wills, Mr. T. H. Taylor and family and Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Neville. After spending a very pleasant time with these friends we wished the blessing of our Heavenly Father upon them and they went to their homes. On the following morning Bro. F. M. Taylor's buggy came with another load and on these packages we found the names of Bro. Taylor's family, J T. Davis, J. R. Taylor and Miss Annie Taylor. Then on last Monday morning before breakfast Bro. E. L. Lee of the Lee's Chapel church drove up and said he was representing just a few of the Lee's Chapel people. On the packages he brought we found the names of Bro. Lee and family, Mrs. Ellington, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Warren, J. G. Lee, F. M. Porter and family, and Mrs. Lou Browning. But this was not all. On Tuesday morning Bro. Y. A. Spivey of Ringwood church sent his buggy just loaded down with good things. To sum the whole thing up will say we now have eight sacks of flour, a sack of meal, forty three pounds of sugar, eight gallons of canned fruit and everything else good and useful in about the same proportion. For all these things the pastor and his wife feel profoundly grateful. The people have been so kind in every respect since we began keeping house that we just don't know how to express our appreciation. Though it makes us both feel like entering upon the new year's work with renewed energy and a greater determination to do more than ever before.

J. E. Pritchard.

LINCOLN CIRCUIT.

Dear Readers:—We left Caroleen on December 11th; have been on the work a little over a week. But before we left Caroleen the good people of the church and Sunday school gave us a surprise as they came crowding in to our home, and presented us with a nice laprobe and pair of gloves which added much comfort to us on our journey to our new home. We were glad to have them with us in our last hours there. May God bless the dear people of Caroleen; our hearts have been tied to them so long.

We got to the parsonage on Friday. We were called to the house of Bro. Frank Bean on Saturday on the account of his little 3 year old boy being burned to death. It was supposed that it fell into the fire while its mother was doing some work just outside the house.

The funeral was conducted by the writer at Bess Chapel on Sunday evening after which it was laid to rest in the Chapel cemetery.

On Monday we came home and began work. Before we got all our things up the good people came in with arms loaded with things that were fine for the table, such as flour, meat, sugar, potatoes, cabbage, rice, sausage, canned fruit, dried fruit, baking powder, soda, chicken, pumpkin, butter. The good people who come were, Bro. and Sister W. C. Childers, Sister Emma Bess, Dora Bean, Mary Bess, Mary Lenhardt, Mr. G. C. Bean, Bro. J. J. Childers, Miss Hattie Bean, Mrs. Foster, Miss Anna Hull, and others have showed their kindness to us.

We held our first quarterly conference at Macedonia on Saturday, December 21. There was some dissatisfaction in the conference about the division made by the boundary committee at the annual conference. We were glad to have Bro. W. D. Reed with us in our quarterly conference. It was our privilege to come around by old Bro. Hartsell's; but it was sad to find him so low. He doesn't look as if he could be here much longer, and he said it would be a relief to him if he could leave this world.

Pray God's blessings on him and his family.

H. E. Waldrop.

Cherryville, N. C., R. 3.

P. S. Since we wrote this we have been called on to conduct the funeral of Bro. James E. Hartsell. He died on Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. His remains were laid to rest in the Laurel Hill cemetery on Monday, December 23, 1912. Bro. Hartsell leaves a wife, seven children (4 girls and 3 boys) to mourn his loss. He was born October 30, 1841, died December 22, 1912, aged 71 years, 1 month, 22 days.

Bro. Hartsell was a noble man, had given his life to the services of God.

When he was suffering on his death bed he told his wife that his work was done, and he wanted to meet God. He was willing to go. May God bless his wife and the girl, Miss Sarah, who are left at home.

H. E. Waldrop.

PIEDMONT.

Our first quarterly conference was held at Mt. Pleasant church on the 24th of December. The President preached for us at eleven o'clock, and it is needless to say he preached a good sermon. After preaching we had an intermission of about 30 minutes to partake of the many good eatables the good sisters had brought out, after which, the conference assembled to transact the business, with Bro. Cecil in the chair. All of the business was carried out in a spirit of love and unity.

We are among a good people and we are looking forward to a prosperous year in the Master's vineyard. May the Lord bless all of His people, and make us a greater blessing to others.

A. D. Shelton.

R. D. 4, High Point, N. C.

CONCORD.

On my return from conference I found a nice fat turkey which was presented to us by the young men of the Thomasville Baraca Class for Thanksgiving dinner. We wish to thank these young men for their kindness. We also wish to thank Bros. Dickens, Harris, Carmichael, Wood and Warner for their kindness to us after we shipped our things. We wish to thank Bros. Warner and Welburn for assisting us in getting our things to the depot. May God's richest blessings rest upon these dear people. On Thursday morning, December 12th, it was with sad hearts that we bade them good bye.

On arriving at Concord we immediately realized that we were among kind people. Their kindness commenced as soon as we arrived. Bro. W. H. Scarboro sighted us to his home where wewere welcomed by his good wife. After partaking of a splendid dinner, we departed for the home of Bro. Sides where we were kindly received and spent the night. The next day we were cared for by Bros. Teeter and Blackwelder. Our household goods arrived on Saturday. Bro. Sides furnished the team. Bros. Earnhard and Teeter assisted us in getting them out of the depot. These brethren have our sincere thanks. No one knows better how to appreciate such deeds than one who knows the expense and hard work of moving.

About 35 or 40 of the good brethren and sisters came is on Saturday night and spent a short while with us. After they were gone we found they had supplied us with many things needed in the home, such as sugar, coffee, lard, butter, canned fruit, meat, fish, apples and oranges, and various other things too tedious to mention. We greatly appreciate these tokens of kindness and trust that we may be able to prove our appreciation by serving them in a way that will bring great prosperity to our Zion and glory to God.

We were glad to have Sisters Laura Dickens and Ruby Jones from Thomasville to worship with us yesterday.

Edw. Suits.

SPRING CHURCH.

Dear Bro. Cecil:

We are now into our work on Spring Church circuit. We have been kindly received. Preached twice at Spring Church and Lebanon. Congregations good, very attentive to the word. We held our first quarterly conference for Spring church last Saturday, December 28, 1912. About one half of the officials present. Session very harmonious. Salary over paid to date. All seemed desirous of a good year's work. Plans were laid to make all our desires effective. We have been kindly remembered at the parsonage by many of the people with something to eat, which has added much to our comfort and happiness. Meats of various kinds, canned fruits, potatoes, milk, butter and vegetables. I will not mention names as that will take too much space, but each one will know that all the things given have been thankfully received by the pastor and family. We are expecting a great work to be done here this year on Spring Church circuit.

To the Greenville circuit, I will begin work there 1st Sunday in January. Will be at Philadelphia 11 A. M., Hobb's Chapel, 3 P. M. Hope to have good congregations at each church,

Yours in His name,

J. A. Ledbetter, Pastor.

REIDSVILLE.

We had planned to dedicate our church yesterday, the 5th Sunday. Our church is ready except the benches have not come. They were promised by the 15th inst. We have postponed indefinitely. We are working for an organ and carpet.

We will hold our quarterly conference on Friday before the 2nd Sunday in January. Bro. Cecil is to preach at 11 A. M. and hold our conference in the afternoon, beginning at 1 P. M. We hope to have the pews, but if not we have 78 chairs and can get the loan of others. Officials, will you come? It is very important that you be there.

I have been to Bethany and Sandy Cross twice since Conference and will go there again the 3rd Sunday if not providentially hindered. These places are very hopeful now, and are highly pleased with the present arrangement. The last time I was at these points I could see the congregations had grown in number and also in interest. Bro. Womble, the M. E. pastor of the Main Street M. E. church, was away yesterday and asked me to fill his appointment at 11 A. M. which I did. It was a pleasure to worship with them, and I had many hearty invitations to come again. Hope the force of our M. P. Herald had a pleasant Christmas, together with all the readers of the Herald and all others.

My wife has been confined to the house for over a week with deep cold. She seems to be improving now.

May 1913 be a glorious year for our Lord and His Kingdom.

Frternally,

C. E. M. Raper.

—Bro. J. M. Jones continues quite sick, is confined to his bed, can scarcely move at all. His good wife is very much fatigued and has been quite unwell, but is better. Bro. Jones has been sick since about the middle of October.

LA GRANGE.

Dear Herald:

After conference closed I spent a few days in Burlington, then went to Greensboro, Reidsville, Charlotte and then to my old home town, Matthews. A week was spent there and then I started for La Grange stopping in Rockingham, Hamlet, and Raleigh.

We had preaching in La Grange the 3rd Sunday in this month. The other churches will be visited in January.

The Hickory Grove Sunday school had a Christmas tree, and our La Grange Sunday school had a Christmas entertainment for the children at the home of Miss Nannie Sutton. I have not been well since I came home, but have managed to be up part of the time. Hope my health will be better soon.

J. H. Abernethy.

December 30, 1112.

ROCKINGHAM.

Dear Herald:

As I came from my old home at Matthews I stopped in Rockingham and spent a day and night. In the afternoon Bro. M. D. Braswell took me over to St. John's church in one part of the city. Here we have a valuable lot with a nice church on it. The church needs painting, and there is a small debt on it, but it is well located, being near one graded school and in a short distance of the Rockingham railroad, a new road running from Rockingham, N. C. to Bennettsville, S. C. As Rockingham is a manufacturin g town it covers a good deal of territory. There is some talk of this new railroad putting up a depot near St. John's church in addition to the other depot on the other side of town. There is a Sunday school at this church, superintended by Bro. Collins, one of our faithful members in Rockingham.

The night I was in town we had preaching at Pee Dee church in another part of town. The congregation was fairly good under the circumstances and we had a pleasant service. There are some loyal Methodist Protestants there.

Yours truly,

J. H. Abernethy.

La Grange, N. C., Dec. 30, 1912.

ASHEBORO STATION.

Rev. C. A. Cecil, President.

Dear Brother Cecil:

Please to accept this my first quarterly report from this charge.

We moved into the very commodious, convenient and comfortable parsonage here the 6th inst., and have got about settled now and ready for regular, systematic pastoral work. We found the parsonage neat and clean—quite an appreciable consideration—thanks to Bro. Johnson and his good wife. And the people showed us much kindness, sending around a variety of good things to eat; and the Ladies' Aid Society very promptly put some improvements into our new home, and are studying and planning to add others as soon as able to do so. We have had much to encourage us. We have received nothing but kindenss. The social life here seems to be very pleasant and the mistress of the manse and the children are counting on a happy year with such delightful people. I shall be very happy as soon as I can find plenty of pastoral work to do—very soon I hope. Our first quarterly conference is to meet next Monday night, January 6th. Your presence then or at any other times, as well as your help in any way would be appreciated.

Fraternally,
T. J. Ogburn.

ROCKINGHAM.

Since our last, we have not received a regular "pounding," but have been remembered in a substantial way by our friends, as follows: By. Mrs. W. S. Braswell, butter; Mrs. Webb, butter; Mrs. Haley, preserves, oysters, and vegetables; Mrs. Tucker, candies, fruits and meats; Mrs. J. W. Jenkins, chicken and vegetables; Bro. Lassiter, fresh meat, potatoes and peas; Mrs. Solomon, lard, vegetables, etc.; Mrs. Davis, oranges, fruits, and nuts; Mrs. Dr. Webb, Christmas turkey.

Thanks for these kind tokens of good will and appreciation, coming not only from M. P's, but from M. E's., Baptists, and Presbyterians also.

J. F. Dosier.

ANDERSON AND YABOROUGH NOTES.

We have made one round since conference. Found good congregations. More interest manifested than the two years before at the beginning. All churches took Thanksgiving offering for orphanage: Yarborough, $5.00; Liberty Hill, $6.75, and one box of chickens by the ladies of the church; Fair View, $4.04; Harmony, $4.15. A nice choir loft has been built in Fair View church by the Ladies' Aid.

These charges met all claims last year. Pastor received about $85.00 over salary, the Cross Keys appointment paying $35.-00 of that. As the circuit does not require pastor to count what this appointment pays on salary it was not reported to Conference.

We have been remembered by the following: A Christmas box from the Ladies' Aid Society of Fair View church containing all the boys a nice suit of clothes which numbers three; wife a nice silk waist, beautifully made; pillow cases, handkerchiefs and tie for preacher. Last, but not least, a large fruit cake to which a good deal of attention had been paid.

Mrs. Ben Pearson, nice clothing for the children; Mrs. Fate Yarborough, Mmes. Tensley, Ed Bobo, Carrie Owens, Mary Owens, Sarah Farrow, L. H. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Erby Rice, Mr. Dunaway, Miss Mattie Lou Balentine, eatables of various kinds, much appreciated. Virginia Balentine, a nice tie. Miss Sudie Medlock, one dollar. Mrs. Moore, handkerchiefs and collar. Mrs. Taylor, handkerchiefs, fruits and candy, and Miss Kate Medoce, tie and handkerchiefs.

A nice present from the following men: Bros. Lee Pool, Ed Bobo, Horace and Will Pharam.

We are very thankful to all these for these gifts. Many of them were not in small quantity.

W. A. Lamar.

THOMASVILLE.

Dear Herald Readers:—

We are all aware of the fact, that both a new calendar year and a new pastoral year are both nearly upon us, and with each come new duties, new responsibilities, new trials, and new opportunities. Can we look back over our year's work and speak for yourselves, and say, well done; or do we feel like the last year was a hopeless failure? Anyway, whatever success we had during last year, be it good or bad, let's not be discouraged, but let's start in the new year with a determination to succeed, let's make our lives more useful and helpful to eachother than we have ever done before.

Real services bring happiness not only to ourselves, but to others as we travel through the rough journeys of life, up the difficult hills, and over sunny heights, let us have Jesus as our guiding star in every instance and when we pass each milestone along our journey, let each in succession become an altar on which e present our obligations of gratitude and praise. If we truly do our whole duty in protecting truth, honesty, and right living we will spend a happy year, though it be the hardest year that we ever witnessed.

Let us remember the words of Solomon, "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches."

So let us go on cheerily and be heartily turning our backs on the past, only thinking of our reward, and when the dawn of the last day of the following year reaches us, we can find ourselves looking back over our year's work, with that sweet sacred memory of time well spent.

Our lives are only what we make them. We can make our lives useful or we can throw ourselves away and make complete failures. God didn't intend for us to live a useless life here on earth; at this instance the old familiar song comes to memory, "I will work, I will pray, in the vineyard, in the vineyard of the Lord, I will work, I will pray, I will labor every day, in the Vineyard of the Lord."

We changed pastors this year. We wish our ex-pastor, Bro. Suits, a successful career in his new field.

We regret very much to lose him, but such seemed to be the spirit of the church. We have Bro. T. A. Williams with us this year, who comes to us highly recommended. He preached for us the 3rd Sunday and at night; we were most favorably impressed with his first efforts. Both sermons were both logical and inspiring and we heartily congratulate him on his fine beginning.

We welcome him as our new pastor and expect to give him our loyal, heartfelt support that he and all pastors need to fit them for successful work.

Cooperation means success, ununited means failure. Let's be up and doing, join hand in hand with each other and push forward to the end of our journey and when our race is ended in this world, we can reach that place where the Master has already prepared for us "and from which bourne no traveler ever returns."

Our Christmas tree came off Wednesday night and was a most successful event. It was adorned with many useful as well as beautiful presents, and everybody went away seemingly pleased. The crowd was the largest that ever assembled in our church and the behavior exceptionally good for such a large crowd.

Our pastor will again be with us the first Sunday in January. Being off on his "Honey Moon," we haven't had the pleasure of hearing him only the times mentioned above, but guess that we will be supplied constantly after that date, as he will then be a resident of our beautiful little city. He is a pleasant companion and we welcome him and his newly wedded bride as residents of our town.

Success to the Herald, and a prosperous new year to all of its readers.

D. R. Connell.

PINEY GROVE, UWHARRIE CT.

Kind Editor:

I will in the beginning tell you all that we are so thankful that we have Bro. Trogdon back with us another year, and I trust we all will lend him a helping hand and a prayerful heart that this year may be the brightest of all for him. The past year has been one full of misery and pain. May the Lord give him back his health, and sufficient grace to overcome all difficulties that may overshadow his pathway through life is my prayer.

We as a church are made to mourn the loss of two of our oldest members. On last Wednesday the eighteenth at nine o'clock A. M., the death angel visited the home of Mr. Joshua Morgan, and took for his own their kind and loving mother. Their father had been dead several years and five children had preceeded her to the home beyond, and four children and several grand children and friends by the scores are made to mourn the loss of one that lived with us all to the age of ninety-one years and a few months, and was so kind to all she met. She was a mother to the motherless and the writer knew how to appreciate her motherly kindness as she is a motherless child. No doubt but Heaven was made to rejoice, while we all are mourning her loss, which is Heaven's gain. Some day if we are faithful we can go and see her again, where there will be no parting, but all will be joy and peace for ever more. On the same date at eleven o'clock P. M. the home of Uncle Beverly Surratt was made lonely, O, so lonely, when the Lord said, Good and faithful servant, you have suffered enough down there, come up higher where all suffering is over now and forevermore. He was accidentally shot in the leg just two weeks before he died, and that day they had his leg amputated from which he never recovered. He left a widow and five children and several grand children and a host of friends. May the Lord comfort them in their lonely hours, and help them to follow such examples as were laid before them by the one that is gone. We can't tell how we do miss him in our church. It seems like we can't give him up, as he was one of our class leaders for years, and so many times he told us how to live faithful and to get closer to the Lord, and was made to rejoice and praise his holy name. He is gone from us, but his works will follow after him. While we are mourning over the absence of him no doubt but he is rejoicing in Heaven with the angels above, and some day we will go up higher and see him as he is. I close wishing the Herald and its many readers a merry Christmas and a happy new year.

Minnie Hill.

BURLINGTON.

Our Sunday school attendance Sunday-December 22, was 169, and last Sunday it was 140.

The following is a list of the new officers of the Sunday school for the ensuing term: J. G. Rogers, Supt., L. W. Holt, Assistant Supt.; C. E. Hornady, Secretary; C. B. Way, Assistant Secretary; Miss Lula Foster, Organist; Miss Lillie Shatterly, Assistant Organist; Paul Davis, Librarian; Chas. Stafford, Assistant Librarian; G. L. Amick, Supt. Home Department; J. H. Boon, Assistant Supt. Home Department; T. T. Stafford, Secretary Home Department; Miss Lena Lineberry, Supt, Cradle Roll Department.

On Sunday morning, December 22, our Sunday school donated its offering, which amounted to about $7.00, to the orphans at Denton. On last Sunday morning the school decided to give every first Sunday's offering in each month to the M. P. Children's Home at Hight Point.

Last Sunday night the school held its Christmas exercises, which consisted of songs, recitations and a dialogue appropriate for the occasion. Each part of the exercises were rendered in a splendid manner. A very large audience attended the exercises. An offering for foreign missions was taken.

Mr. E. H. Coble, a member of the Baraca class of our Sunday school, and Miss Retta Williams, a member of the Philathea class, were united in marriage on Wednesday morning, December 25, the ceremony being performed by Bro. Davis, our pastor. They are very popular among a large circle of friends who wish them a long and happy life.

We are very glad to have Bro. W. E. Crutchfield, former secretary of our Sunday school, move back to Burlington, after residing in Winston-Salem for a few months.

C. B. W.

December 21, 1912.

BURLINGTON BARACA CLASS.

The Baraca class of the Burlington M. P. S. S. held its election of officers and teachers last Sunday morning, the result of which is as follows: Dr. W. A. Hornaday, President; J. H. Boon, Vice-President; T. T. Stafford, Secretary; Paul Davis, Assistant Secretary; C. B. Way, Treasurer and Press Reporter; L. W. Holt, Teacher; Rev. T. E. Davis, Assistant Teacher.

Attendance, 22; offering, $.68.

C. B. Way, Press Reporter.

CHRISTMAS AT EDEN.

A climax to the season's activities was a Christmas tree at Eden Friday night, December 27. Credit is due Mrs. Eugene Hamill and Miss Lassie Hardee for the program consisting of a number of beautiful Christmas songs, recitations, drill and pantomimes which were rendered to a large and appreciative audience.

All were very favirably impressed by the appropriate address by Mr. John P. Wynn of Durham, a member of the faculty of Durham High School. Special mention should be made of the pantomime, the "Dance of the Snowflakes," "Christmas Bell Drill" and "Christmas Stockings." The drill, with all of the children in uniform, was beautiful, and "Christmas Stockings" was one of the very best recitations it has ever been the pleasure of the writer to hear. It was the best Christmas tree the oldest members of Eden ever remembered.

Geo. R. Bennett.

SPRING CHURCH.

We have had the privilege of having our new pastor, Rev. J. A. Ledbetter, with us for the last three Sundays. As he didn't arrive and get settled here in time to fill the appointment in upper Greenville, he stopped over with us the third Sunday and conducted a prayer service. He began his work here the fourth Sunday morning which was the regular appointment. And last Sunday being the fifth he had no regular appointment at any place, so he preached for us again. His sermon was greatly enjoyed by a small but attentive congregation.

Bro. Ledbetter enters hopefully into the work, and we trust the church will continue to go forward as in the past. The first quarterly conference was held here last Saturday. Business was transacted with Mr. H. E. Vassar elected secretary.

On Christmas night we had a Christmas tree here, after the children rendered their pieces which was done very nicely, a collection was taken for the Orphanage. Our Sunday school is yet alive and trying to stay alive during the winter months. Have reorganized. New officers and teachers will take their places next Sunday with Mr. G. W. Massey, Supt., Mr. E. C. Dimick assistant, Mr. M. F. Massey Sec. and treasurer, Mrs. C. E. Dimick, organist, Mr. G. F. Robinson teacher for class No. 1, Mrs. E. C. Dimick for class No. 2, Mrs. H. E. Vassar, class No. 3, Mrs. C. E. Dimick, class No. 4, and Miss Nannie Massey for class No. 1. We will also have prayer meeting here next Sunday morning under our new class leader, Mr. J. A. Robinson.

Wishing all the Herald readers a happy and prosperous New Year.

Your for Christ,

Nannie Massey.

December 31, 1912.

CHESTNUT RIDGE, ORANGE CT.

Our pastor, Bro. Stubbins, filled his regular appointment the fourth Sunday; he preached an excellent sermon. His subject was, "Born in a manger."

We were very glad to have with us yesterday Rev. D. R. Williams and family; he preached at 11 o'clock. He certainly gave us a lot of valuable suggestions along the various lines of church and Sunday school work. May the Lord bless him and his. After preaching services a treat was given to the Sunday school which was enjoyed by all present.

The average attendance for the year 91; average collection, $1.10. We closed our S. S. for the first quarter.

We were glad to have our ex-Supt., Mr. T. R. Hayes, with us, also Prof. T. O. Pender. He sang a beautiful solo, "When Mother Prayed."

Mr. and Mrs. Stubbins are spending the holidays at Ringwood, N. C.

Wishing the Herald and its many readers a happy and prosperous New Year.

Reporter.

December 30, 1912.

FRIENDSHIP, YADKIN COLLEGE CIRCUIT.

We are very much pleased to have our beloved pastor, Rev. H. L. Powell, return to us for another year. On the last 4th Sunday he filled his regular, and first appointment for this conference year. He gave us a splendid Christmas sermon. May we as members co-operate with our pastor and be co-workers with the Lord, may much and lasting good be accomplished this year, 1913. We are always glad to have Bro. Powell visit us in our homes. He says he is the new preacher, but looks very much like the old one. On last Thursday at 2 o'clock we held our Christmas exercises and tree; all enjoyed it very much, especially the children. We were glad to have our pastor with us on the occasion. He made us a good talk, but it was all too short.

Recently Mr. Roy Snider and Miss Annie Hobbs were married. We hope not to give them up in our church and Sunday school work, as they are faithful attendants. May they live a long and happy life.

Much success to the Herald and its readers in the new year.

Reporter.

PINEY GROVE, SILER CITY CT.

The year 1912 will soon be numbered with the things of the past. How short the year seems to have been! The time for new year resolutions will soon be upon us. Let each one be resolved that they may keep the resolution made through the entire year.

We were glad indeed to have Mr. Bowman sent back to us of 1913. He filled his first appointment the first Sunday in December. May this be the best year we have ever known.

We had a Christmas tree and entertainment on Christmas eve. The tree was just beautiful and the children rendered their songs and recitations nicely. Every thing was a success. Our pastor was with us and made a most excellent talk.

A few of our Sunday school scholars showed their appreciation to the Superintendent by presenting her a nice rug. Mr. Bowman after maknig a nice little speech (such as all of us can't make) presented it to the Superintendent. As the writer was the happy recipient she has a right to know it was appreciated more than tongue can tell.

We will continue our Sunday school through the winter season. Average attendance for the fourth quarter, 1912, was 40. We reelected the same officers for the next six months. We have purchased a new organ which will be a great help to our Sunday school and children. Mrs. C. A. Cooper is our organist.

Mr. Bowman will take a collection for the orphan children on the next Sunday evening. May each one do what they can for this great cause. A most prosperous new year to all the Herald readers.

Mrs. J. A. Cooper.

GILE'S CHAPEL, RICHLAND CT.

We gladly welcome Bro. Whitaker back to our circuit this year. On last night our pastor closed a five days' meeting at our church, in which Rev. D. A. Braswell was pulpit help. Mr. Braswell certainly has endeared himself to all who came out to hear him preach, and we love so much to entertain him in our homes. We trust our heavenly Father will spare his life for many years to spread the Gospel news. There were no open conversions, but I do believe the result will be that souls will yet be converted from those burning words that fell from the lips of Mr. Braswell. The church seemed to be greatly revived, and if we will take home to our souls the sweet message that he delivered to us we will grow thereby. Mr. Braswell, come again.

We are glad that our pastor is so moved and so energetic as to begin this important work so early in this conference year.

We were also glad to have our former S. S. superintendent, Rev. Joel Trogdon, and wife and two sweet little children with us on last Sunday. Bro. Trogdon delivered an excellent sermon at the afternoon service which we enjoyed very much.

I suppose next Sunday we will reorganize S. S. and hope to be evergreen through the winter, as it has been many years since our S. S. has even taken a rest.

Mrs. W. M. Stevenson has been on the sick list for a number of days and doesn't seem to improve very much. Hope she will soon regain her health.

Mrs. W. R. Hamlin, Reporter.

REHOBOTH, GRANVILLE CT.

Christmas has come and gone and how we all enjoyed giving to our friends and being remembered by them. The holidays were pleasantly spent, the rest from school, the Christmas entertainments, the visit from friends and those members of the family who have been absent, and last and best of all the memory of the birth of Christ. All of these things made us glad. How much more vivid does the story of the Christ-child seem after reading Ben Hur.

The exercises at Rehoboth on Christmas Day were good and enjoyed by all. The program consisted of recitations, dialogues, solos, duets, a quartette and singing by the choir. The pieces were carefully selected and carried a strain of laughter all the way through. Apples, oranges, candy and nuts were passed to the whole crowd. We hope that this will help the Sunday school. We see the great importance of having these special services for the children and we are already planning a picnic and a Children's Day service for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Bethea and children are in Florida. A card from them a few days ago told of their pleasant visit down there. Our people are happy over the return of these good folks to Granville circuit.

Mr. Williams from Henderson is to preach for us next Sunday.

We are glad to have Mr. John Mundy and family back in the Sunday school.

Miss Ida May Floyd, after a six weeks' spell of typhoid fever, is out again.

We wish for all the Herald readers a Happy New Year.

Hattie Harris.

Hebron, Mebane Charge.

Our new pastor, Bro. Swain, began his work on the third Sunday morning Dec. at 11 o'clock, preaching an excellent sermon. We all love our new pastor and believe much good may be accomplished during the new year, 1913. We gladly welcome our pastor and family on our charge and also into our homes.

The first quarterly conference was held at Hebron Sat. before the fourth Sun. at 2:30 o'clock. Both churches were well represented. We were glad to have with us in our conference our new president, Bro. Cecil. We feel that he was a great help in the conference. His remarks were indeed helpful to all. Wish every member could have been present. He also gave us an interesting sermon on Sun. P. M. at 3 o'clock. Bro. Cecil assisted in a protracted meeting at Hebron two years ago, and we all learned to love him and are glad to have him visit us. We will not forget Bro. Edwards, our former pastor, and truly hope that the Lord's blessings may rest upon him in his new field of labor and may much good be accomplished through his work.

Best wishes to the Herald and all its readers.

Lelia McAdams.

Dec. 30, 1912.

New Salem, Randleman Ct.

We are all glad the Conference sent our Pastor back. We all wish him great success this year.

We have preaching first to third Sunday 3 P. M. We have a very good S. school; the attendance is not what it should be.

Mr. I. W. Hinshaw died at his son's in this place. Buried at Level Cross; burial services conducted by Rev. J. B. O'Briant.

Christmas passed off very quietly here. Bro. J. B. O'Briant and wife are spending holidays visiting friends and relatives in the eastern part of the State. We expect them home in a few days.

Will close wishing the editor and the readers a prosperous New Year.

Mrs. J. N. Caudle, Rep.

Canaan.

I now write for Christmas as our tree is now loaded to be given out this evening. We have a very nice one. Wish you all could be with us and see our Sunday school and see their drill and see all their other exercises this evening. We have 100 scholars and hope to have more before the next year closes. We are proud of every scholar and teacher. We had our new Pastor with us. We are pleased with him and believe the rest are pleased. Brother Plyler was present; we were glad to see him. We don't think he has had any show; don't see how he did as well as he did. May the Lord bless him and spare him and help him not to be discouraged in preaching the word of God. Brother Shelton will be with us Sunday night again; hope he may be successful in every attempt to do good; sorry that the quarterly conference is right when our Christmas tree is, this afternoon. Would like to be there but think it my duty to stay with our Sunday school. Pray for us that we may be of some acct. to our Sunday school and to all around us. Yours Truly,

G. L. Motsinger.

Where Are We?

Conference came and Conference went. East Winston was divided.

Mt. Carmel wants to know "Where we are at." East Winston don't claim us, Yadkin College don't claim us. We have not seen any body who can tell what circuit we are on.

If any body can tell us what circuit Mt. Carmel and who is our pastor and what is his address we would be very thankful for the information.

J. E. Faw.

R. F. D. No. 4, Winston-Salem, N. C.

(Piedmont Circuit, we understand.—Editor).

HARMONY GROVE, FORSYTH CT.

Bro. G. H. Austin filled his appointmen the fourth Sunday. We certainly regret the loss of our former pastor, Rev. T. A. Williams, and are glad to say that we have never found a more faithful pastor. Bro. Williams certainly served the Forsyth people with faithfulness and love, but he was called to preach in another field. We welcome Bro. G. H. Austin whom we all learned to love several years ago.

Our Christmas entertainment was the 25th of December. The children all spoke well. I think it was about the best we ever had. We will organize next Sunday. Hepe we will have a better attendance the coming year.

Wish the Herald and its many readers a prosperous new year.

From A Member.

ANOTHER QUESTION.

I want to know what the Pastors and S. S. workers think of the advertisements on the cover of our S. S. Journal and Quarterlies? For my part I want all Patent medicine cut out.

S. A. Alexander.

Liberty, N. C.

Newby—Adams.

Married December 22nd, at the home of J. B. O'Briant, Randleman, N. C. Mr. J. W. Newby and Miss Fannie Adams, both of Randleman, Route No. 1.

Mr. Newby is a prosperous young farmer of Randolph and Miss Adams known as a very nice and industrious young lady.

They have many friends who extend congratuulations.

The ceremony was performed by the undersigned.

J. B. O'Briant.

Gunn—Hester Wedding.

A beautiful wedding was solemnized last evening at 7:30 o'clock at the First Methodist Protestant Church when Miss Nina Lee Hester was united in marriage to Mr. Arthur T. Gunn of Danville, Va.

The church was beautifully decorated with ferns and palms and the pretty color scheme of white and green was most artistically carried out.

Over the improvised altar a graceful arch was built of greens, from the center a large wedding bell of green with the clapper of tiny electric lights, was suspended.

Just before the ceremony Miss Rosa Dean beautifully played "Humoresque," followed by a lovely vocal solo, "Believe Me If All Those Endeavoring Young Charms" sung by Miss Anna Farrow.

The wedding party entered the church to the inspiring tones of the "Wedding March" from "Lohengrin," played by Miss Dean.

The ushers, Messrs. Ira White, Ellis Ashburn, C. D. Allen and Milton Cash, entered first, followed by the dame of honor, Mrs. E. E. Williamson of Shelby.

Mrs. Williamson was handsomely gowned in pink crepe de chine, over satin, wearing a large black picture hat and carrying a large bouquet of pink roses.

Little Miss Hilda White Hester, the pretty small sister of the bride, was ringbearer. She wore a beautiful lingerie dress and carried the ring in a long-stemmed Calla lily.

Preceding the bride the maid of honor, Miss Edna White Cummings, entered. She was beautifully gowned in blue, wearing a black picture hat and carried an arm bouquet of pink Enchantress carnations.

The lovely bride, handsomely gowned in a going-away costume of King's blue, entered with her father, Mr. J. William Hester. Her bridal bouquet was of bride's roses.

The bride was met at the altar by the bridegroom, Mr. Gunn, who was attended by his best man, Mr. Walker Moore of Reidsville.

They were united in marriage by Rev. S. W. Taylor. During the ceremony Miss Dean softly played "Lovely Night," from Tales of Hoffman.

The bridle party left the church with the beautiful tones of Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" as a recessional.

Mr. and Mrs. Gunn left on the 8:10 train for their bridal trip to northern cities, with the good wishes and congratulations of their many friends. They will be at home after the first of January in Danville, Va., where they will reside.

An attractive feature of the wedding was the handsome display of presents consisting of cut-glass, silver, china and brass.

We promised to write you again about the ringing of wedding bells in Winston but we feel quite incapable of doing the occasion full justice, so attractive and lovely were all the appointments of this most beautiful marriage.

The bride has been our faithful and accomplished organist for several years and her pastor as well as many friends say of her "She is the best organist I ever saw," and her gentle winning, affectionate, manner won for her very many admiring friends, and when she leaves our city we know how sadly we shall miss her. At the last service in our church a vote of thanks and appreciation was tendered her in her absence and $20 dollars in gold as a bridal present.

The bridegroom has been in our midst for several years and has endeared himself to our church and people by his godly walk and conversation. He has been faithful and efficient in every duty that the church imposed upon him and as we listened to the solemn impressive ceremony that made those two rare and excellent young people husband and wife we invoked Heaven's choicest blessings to surround them forever and we sincerely hope that some favoring gale of Divine Providence will restore them to our church and people in the near future.

Reporter.

DOUBLE WEDDING.

Wednesday, December 18th, 1912, Rev. T. A. Williams of Thomasville, N. C., and Rev. S. M. Needham of Winston-Salem, N. C., were married to Misses Ola and Julia Stimpson of East Bend, N. C., at the home of the brides' parents.

Messrs. Williams and Needham are both popular young ministers of the M. P. Church. The former stationed at Thomasville, N. C., the latter at Winston-Salem, N. C.

The brides are sisters and the accomplished daughters of Rev. T. H. Stimpson of the M. E. Church, South.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. D. R. Williams of High Point, N. C., in the presence of a few friends and relatives.

After serving dinner the bridal parties went to Donohue to take the train for High Point and other places. Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather the occasion was a very delightful one.

The fine dinner, such as we always find at Brother Stimpson's and the genuine hospitality acceded all, made the occasion a happy one.

May God's smiles rest upon these who have assumed the sacred relations of matrimony. And his peace be with them always.

J. M. Vogler.

Trogdon-Johnson.

Married at the home of J. B. O'Briant December 18th, Miss Myrtle Johnson and Mr. Talton Trogdon, both of Worthville, N. C. Mr. Trogdon is a successful farmer near Worthville and Miss Johnson is post-mistress at Worthville. We presume since she has taken upon herself the responsibilities of being mistress of a home she will retire from public service. We wish for them a long and peaceful journey through life.

J. B. O'Briant.

NOTICE!

Any member of Granville charge desiring copy of Conference Minutes if you don't care to send ten cents by mail drop me a card and I will send copy and collect when I get home.

N. G. Bethea,
Miami, Fla.

NOTICE!

A meeting of the Trustees of the Methodist Protestant Children's Home is hereby called to meet in the city of High Point on the 14th day of January, at 3:00 o'clock, P. M.

Business of importance will come before this meeting, and it is desired that as many of the Trustees as can do so will be preent. It will be necessary at this meeting to elect the Superintendent and complete the organization by electing a Vice-chairman of the Board of Trustees, adopt by-laws and transact other important matters that will demand attention.

Respectfully,
J. M. Millikan,
Chm. Board of Trustees.

We wish to inform the friends of the Methodist Protestant Children's Home that we will make a final report of the campaign for funds and publish same in next week's issue of the Methodist Protestant Herald. We had intended doing this this week, but owing to the rush of business during the Holidays, it has been impossible to get the data together and make the report as complete as we would like, so we have deferred the matter until next week. We will say, however, that we have about reached the $20,000.00 mark, and work on the building has progressed as rapidly as possible owing to the delay in getting material, and the Building Committee informs us that the work will be pushed from now until completion, and we request all our friends to remit as early as possible for their pledges, as sufficient funds are not being received to meet the demands of the Building Committee.

Respectfully,
T. A. Hunter, Chairman,
J. M. Millikan, Sec & Treas.

FROM WINTER TO SUMMER IN 48 HOURS.

As you requested me to write you something of the strange sights in Florida, will begin by telling you something of my trip down here.

Left Henderson at 6 o'clock P. M. December 22, with the thermometer at freezing. Bro. John Floyd, the man who has kindly consented to keep my horse for me while away, says, "What you pulling off your overcoat for?" I replied that my folks had written me to leave it at home and bring my rain coat and I thought I would take them at their word. It was well I did, for I have been going in my shirt sleeves ever since coming here.

But I started to tell you about my trip. You know that a late train becomes a later train on a long trip. We reached Jacksonville Monday morning at ten and there I found Brother Graham Pickard, an old boyhood friend of mine, waiting for me and I very soon found that he knew every nook and corner of the city as he is a real estate man and is prepared to make it interesting to a visitor. He was a good boy when I knew him 22 years ago and rather than to have lost his interest in church affairs as he has prospered in the world, I found that he is one of the teachers in a big Baraca Class in one of the Methodist churches of the city. It is very gratifying to find old friends engaged in the work of the kingdom. I know some times I have gone into places where old associates live and it always made me feel sad to hear that they had gone to the bad and had neglected to improve their time for their own good and the good of others.

Jacksonville is a very interesting place. I spent the day there and Bro. Pickard took me over the most interesting part of the place; and then when his Rambler car began to speed along the country roads, I didn't enjoy that in one sense, because I couldn't say "we have roads like this in Vance County where I live." But the scenery was grand and I wish that I could make a pen picture describing it, but that is beyond my power, so will not attempt it. for it kept me busy saying, "Just look at that!" This pleased my friend I am sure, for while he loves the Old North State and the people from there, yet he thinks Florida is ahead of them all.

One amusing thing that took place on the S. A. L. train before I leave this part of my trip: An old lady who seemed to have traveled a great deal was on her way back to her winter home on the West Coast, and she was telling about having the malarial fever and what kind of a diet the doctors had prescribed. They have put me to eating peanut butter and I would like for you people to try it. "Why yes that's all right, just stick your finger down in there and pull you out some." I got interested right away and raised up to see how many would accept the invitation. Quite a number dipped in and tasted. I was surprised because I thought all Northerners were particular on the germ question and I was sure from the looks of my hands and some of theirs I would not want them to put their fingers in what I had to eat without washing. One man had quite a laugh at his wife as she understood the old lady to say that peanut butter was good for the yellow fever.

Being on the train with Northern tourists, I got hungry to see some children. After we passed Columbia and Savannah and our train began to do local work then the Southern folks began to get on with their children and that began to seem more like home.

After spending the day in Jacksonville and enjoying every moment of the time seeing the sights and talking over old times I boarded No 37 East Coast train at 9:30 P. M. for Miami.

Next week I hope to tell you something of my trip for 387 miles down the East Coast of Florida.

N. G. Bethea.

Miami, Fla., Dec. 27.

A PATHETIC STORY.

What Rum Does.

I was sitting at my breakfast table one Sabbath morning, when I was called to my door by the ringing of the bell. There stood a boy about fourteen years of age, poorly clad, but tidied up as best he could.

He was leaning on crutches; one leg off at the knee. In a voice trembling with emotion, and tears coursing down his cheeks, he said: "Mr. Hoagland, I am Freddy Brown. I have come to see if you will go to the jail and talk and pray with my father. He is to be hung tomorrow for the murder of my mother. My father was a good man, but whiskey did it. I have three little sisters younger than myself. We are very poor and have no friends. We live in a dark and dingy room. I do the best I can to support my sisters by selling papers, blacking boots, and odd jobs; but, Mr. Hoagland, we are awfully poor. Will you come and be with us when father's body is brought home? The Governor says we may have his body after he is hung."

I was deeply moved to pity. I promised and made haste to the jail, where I found his father.

He acknowledged that he must have murdered his wife, for the circumstances pointed that way, but he had not the slightest remembrance of the deed. He said he was crazed with drink or he never would have committed the crime. He said: "My wife was a good and faithful mother to my little children. Never did I dream that my hand could be guilty of such a crime." The man could bravely face the penalty of the law for his deed, but he broke down and cried as if his heart would break when he thought of leaving his children in a destitute and friendless condition. I read and prayed with him and left him to his fate.

The next morning I made my way to the miserable quarters of the children. I found three little girls upon a bed of straw in the corner of the room. They were clad in rags. They were beautiful girls had they had proper care. They were expecting the body of their dead father, and between their cries and sobs they would say, "Papa was good, but whisky did it."

In a little while two strong officers came bearing the body of the dead father in a rude pine box. They set it down on two old rickety stools. The cries of the children were so heartrending that the officers could not endure it, and made haste out of the room.

In a moment the manly boy nerved himself, and said: "Come, sisters, kiss papa's face before it is cold." They gathered about his face and smoothed it down with kisses, and between their sobs cried out: "Papa was good but whisky did it! Papa was good, but whisky did it!"

I raised by heart to God and said: "O God, did I fight to save a country that would derive a revenue from a traffic that would make one scene like this possible?"—Youth's Outlook.

NOTES.

—R. R. Ross is to represent Randolph County in the legislature. Randolph now has but one representative.

—Eleven deaths from cerebro-spinal meningitis occurring in a short time caused 202 people to leave Midville, Ga.

—Paul Beall, aged 12, was shot just before Christmas with a toy pistol. The ball passed through his stomach. He was taken to St. Leo's and operated on. The issue is in doubt.

—Manufacturing increased more than 100 per cent. in the Southeastern States in the decade ending in 1910. Last year 448 new industrial enterprises were established in the Southern Railway territory.

—W. J. Teague, of Asheboro, is engaged in making Tax Calculators. He has special type writers made for the purpose. His Calculators are called for in many diferent states, as they are great labor savers and are carefully and accurately made so that they are reliable.

—James W. Swain, formerly linotype operator in this office and now a student in the University of Virginia, came home for the holidays. His father put him to rolling a wheelbarrow, whereupon he said if he had known that, he would have come home in the night and left the next morning before daylight. But it is important that young men learn how to roll wheelbarrows as well as manipulate logarithms.

—The southern sweet potato was given effective exploitation as a table delicacy on Wednesday, December 18, when the Southern Railway, the Cincinnati, New Orleans and Texas Pacific Railway, the Alabama Great Southern Railroad, the New Orleans and Northeastern Railway and the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, joined in advertising the day as "Southern Sweet Potato Day," serving the sweet potato in various styles on their dining cars.

—Among the many phenomena of the past twelve months which together have made this a record year, so far as material growth and prosperity in the United States are concerned, perhaps the most astonishing is disclosed in the later report of the census bureau at Washington. According to that report the Southern States in which the production of cotton is the great agricultural industry have now passed all the other States of the Union in the ultilization of cotton for manufacturing purposes.—Wall Street Journal.

—The furniture manufacturers of North Carolina are rejoicing. The Interstate Commerce Commission has decided that the railways must give them the same rates to the Pacific coast that they give to Virginia shippers and others. The Commission in rendering its decision makes this statement:

"Largely as a reslt of a policy in rate making these defendants are penalizing the Carolina-Pacific coast trade approximately $40 per car, thus restricting petitioners' zone of trade, and we are unable to find upon the record that the continuance of existing unequal conditions is warranted by dissimilarity of competition or other circumstances. Our conclusion is, and we so find, that it is unfair for transcontinental carriers, parties to joint through tariffs and rates, to impose upon Carolina territory the burden of higher rates than those contemporaneously participated in and charged by such carriers from Virginia cities and other points in Virginia and from points in eastern and New England territories, and that

W. F. MEDEARIS I. F. PEEBLES W. L. PEEBLES

MEDEARIS-PEEBLES FURNITURE COMPANY.

Complete House Furnishers.

STOVES AND RANGES

Cash or Credit.

109 & 111 E. Market St.

Phone 823. Greensboro, N. C.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.

Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.

206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

OVER 65 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Fresh, Reliable, Pure
Guaranteed to Please

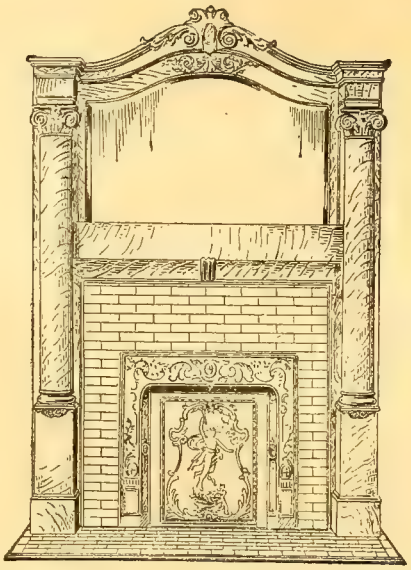
Every Gardener and Planter should test the superior merits of Our Northern Grown Seeds.

SPECIAL OFFER
FOR 10 CENTS
we will send postpaid our
FAMOUS COLLECTION

1 pkg. 60 Day Tomato	20c
1 pkg. Princess Radish	10c
1 pkg. Self-Growing Celery	20c
1 pkg. Early Arrowhead Cabbage	15c
1 pkg. Fullerton Market Lettuce	10c
Also 12 Varieties Choice Flower Seeds	25c
	$1.00

Write today! Send 10 cents to help pay postage and packing and receive the above "Famous Collection," together with our New and Instructive Garden Guide.

GREAT NORTHERN SEED CO.
1895 Rose St. Rockford, Illinois



Mantels, Grates, Tiles and Builders' Hardware.

If you intend to build a new house, or to improve an old one, don't fail to get our catalogue, showing the latest designs in mantels, grates, tiles and builder's hardware. We have designs to suit every style of architecture. It will pay you to write us.

ODELL MANTEL COMPANY,
(Odell Hardware Co., Owners.)
Greensboro, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.

This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE—CO-EDUCATIONAL AND NON-SECTARIAN.

Offers young men and young women in the Methodist Protestant Church exceptional advantages for higher college training. Courses offered leading to the degrees of A. B., Ph. B., L. I., Pe. B., and A. M. Certificate courses offered in Commerce, Music, and Art. Diplomas also granted in Music and Art.

Elon College is situated in the hill country in the Piedmont section of North Carolina. No sickness, healthful climate, pure deep well water. All the buildings heated by steam and lighted by electricity and supplied with water. A large gymnasium for men in process of erection.

Terms are very reasonable. Cost of all expenses ranges from $137 to $187 a year.

The Young Ladies' Home provides for board at cost for young ladies who wish to cheapen their living. This home is under the management of the College and the best possible care is taken of the girls.

The Boys' Boarding Club offers young men an opportunity of living at actual cost. By these boarding arrangements the cost of board and room should be reduced to about half the cost in private homes.

Any person interested should write for a Catalogue, Bulletins, and other information to

W. A. HARPER, LL. D., PRESIDENT,
Elon College, North Carolina.

the present adjustment unjustly discriminates against their traffic, in violation of section two of the act."

"Defendants will be required to establish and maintain to Pacific coast points, North Pacific coast terminals, and points taking the same rates, rates on bedroom furniture and chairs within the description here involved, from points in Carolina territory as that term is here employed, which shall not exceed rates contemporaneously maintained on the same commodities from Virginia cities and other points in Virginia and from points in eastern and New England territories."

—Will Carleton, he poet, died at his home in Brooklyn, New York, last month. His parents lie buried in the little town of Hudson, Michigan.

Farmer Barnes: "I've bought a barometer, Hannah; ter tell when it's goin' ter rain, ye know."

Mrr. Barnes: "Tell when it's goin' ter rain! Why, I never heerd o' sech extravagance! What do you suppose the good Lord hez give ye the rheumatiz fer?"—Puck.

"Son, why don't you play circus, It's great fun. First you make a sawdust ring."

"Where'll I get the sawdust, dad?"

"Here's the saw. Just saw some of that cordwood into stove lengths. You can have all the sawdust you make."—Pittsburgh Post.

In China the American Board has a parish within the neighborhood of 25,000,000 people. The working force, including American missionaries and native workers, numbers 850, or one Christian worker to about 30,000 people. Only fifty of the missionaries are ordained preachers, making two ordained workers to every million people.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XIX. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, DECEMBER 19, 1912. NUMBER 5.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.

J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.

Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.

Rule in Dealing with Suoscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.

Subscribers can remit diecrtly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.

In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

NO PAPER NEXT WEEK.

We wish all our readers a Merry Christmas. Following our rule, and that of other religious papers, we will observe the week, take a needed rest, and issue no paper next week. We know this rest is needed, and we are sure it will not be given grudgingly. The next issue of the Herald willl be that of January 2, 1913.

STORY OF ONE MAN'S FAITH.

Collier's Weekly prints an interesting story concerning Charles L. Goodell, pastor of the largest Methodist church in the world. From this article the following is taken:

"I am just out of state's prison!"

Dr. Goodell was in the midst of a revival service when a man stood up in the aisle and shouted these words at him in a voice that was harsh with excitement. The preacher paused in his discourse. The audience sat breathless and transfixed. Every glance was turned upon the man in the aisle. His head was bent forward. The muscles of his face were set. The beam of his eye rested steadily upon the minister. After a moment that was tense almost to painfulness, he repeated his statement and amplified it.

"I am just out of state's prison. I was guilty of all that was charged and of things which were never found out. You have been saying things here which are tremendously true or terribly false. You have been talking about some One who could save people from their sins. You said it made no difference how wicked a man had been if he repented; that his sins would be blotted out. You said he would know he was forgiven and the sense of condemnation and guilt would be gone. Now, if you are saying what you do noit know to be true, you ought to be ashamed. If you are holding out to a man like me a hope when there is no hope, you ought to stop it."

At this point, without appearing to cease speaking, the man's voice seemed to die out of him and he stood silent, but with the intensity of his pose unrelieved —and his hungry eyes searching the face of the preacher. The sincerity of the man obviously entitled him to every consideration. There was tragedy in the lines of his face and in the tones of his voice. He took some steps nearer, to bring himself directly in front of the chancel, and, stretching out his hand in a gesture of appeal, said:

"I want to know, sir, whether you believe that this religion you are preaching can save a man like me. You said that Jesus saved a thief on the cross. Do you believe that Jesus can save a thief now?" The man's chin quivered and his eyes swam as again the voice died out of him. The entire audience was moved by the force of his appeal. Dr. Goodell confessed that he felt it to his heels, but he felt also his faith rise within him at the challenge. He reached across the chancel rail and took the appealing, outstretched hand in his, saying, in a voice for all to hear:

"My brother, I have honestly declared a message in which I believe. I can not afford to preach a gospel that is not true, and I will not. I am ready to make this contract with you. If you will meet the conditions which are laid down in the Bible, by which a man may come to God, and you do not find salvation, I will never again go into this pulpit to preach!"

Something like a sigh swept over the audience as they realized the significance of the issue thus joined. As for the two men, they knelt together at the altar. There was an earnest exposition of the way of life by the doctor with the open Bible before him, with eager, earnest listening by the man. Thereafterr the minister prayed fervently, and the seeker himself uttered a few broken sentences. There were other incidents of the revival service that night, but nothing comparable in importance to this one, and the congregation was dismissed in suppressed excitement. The service on the following night had been announced, but with the stipulation that Dr. Goodell would not preach except upon the condition which all now understood.

As the congregation passed out and left the doctor alone, and finally the man who had challenged his Gospel so strangely was also gone, Dr. Goodell began to feel a sinking of the heart. He realized that he had risked all the future of his ministry upon the chance issue of affairs in the soul of a highly emotional creature who had strayed into his meeting. Yet he reasoned with himself that he had done right and only what an honest preacher could do. He believed that redemption began here and now. If this man—if any honest seeker couldn't get it, then either there was no such thing or else he, the preacher, did not know how to proclaim it, and might therefore as well cease to preach as to continue.

However, Dr. Goodell did not sleep much that night, and the next day was a restless one for him. Some of his parishioners thought he had been too rash and came to tell him so, but he withstood their urgings. Night came, and the hour for service. Dr. Goodell was at the church, but did not enter the pulpit. Instead he sat just under the chancel rail with his eyes upon the door. Would the man come? Would he come a conqueror or a miserable failure, confessing defeat? The time to preach at length arrived, but the man did not. Dr. Goodell announced another hymn, and the congregation stood and sang:

"There is a fountain filled with blood," etc.

As the last note died hasty steps were heard in the vestibule, then the doors swung open and a man—the man—with hair disheveled and his features dripping perspiration, rushed down the aisle.

"The car broke down," he exclaimed, breathlessly, but—and his voice rose in hoarse notes of triumph—"you can go ahead and preach!"

SOME DIFFICULTIES IN BIBLE TRANSLATION.

Some of the difficulties in Bible translation are of a curious nature, being concerned solely with the forms of the proper names of individuals, places, etc., occurring in the Old and New Testament. In translating the New Testament into the Nama or Hottentot language of South Africa, the very name of Jesus creates a difficulty from which no escape is possible save by strict conformity with the peculiarities of this somewhat primitive form of human speech. The device, so commonly resorted to by biblical translators, of simply transplanting the Latin Jesus and Christus (or Greek Christos) will not avail here. For in the Hottentot tongue -s is a suffix indicating the "female," and Jesus, or Christus, would really signify that the principal figure in the New Testament story was a "woman," a view that would certainly antagonize completely modern Christian theological doctrine. The Hottentot suffix which indicates the "male" is -b and, therefore, Jesub and Christub are the forms which these names must take in order to be thoroughly exact and grammatical. And in line with Christub and Jesub must also be Paulub, Moseb, Amob, Judob, Thomab, Zaccheub, and many other biblical names. Only Ahab, Job, Beelzebub, Jacob, Moab, and a few others would pass muster in the form best known to us. And Rahab, at whose house the spies of Joshua lodged, would find her name changed into Rahas, while the more famous Sennacherib could retain his with impunity.—Professor Alexander Chamberlain, in Harper's Magazine.

YOUR CONGRESSMAN AND LIQUOR.

This week the liquor interests and the temperance people measure arms at our nation's capital. The Kenyon—Sheppard, Webb—McCumber interstate liquor shipment bill is under consideration in Congress as a special order. The object of the bill is to give protection to States that have voted to protect themselves. But the liquor people do not want the people to have their choice in the matter. The saloon is ever selfish, and would destroy, if it could, every sacred right given to a people if only it might promote further its own selfish and nefarious business. The liquor people are alarmed. They fear that the people are about to assert their rights, and obtain that which belongs to them. Listen how they cry out: The following is from Bonfort's Wine and Spirit Circular of November 25:

"On December 16 the Kenyon Bill (S. 4043) will be the special order of business. This bill is the most dangerous measure ever aimed at the liquor traffic. What have you done to help defeat it?

Your Senator and your Congressman are your representatives and must listen to your protest. This bill must be killed. It will not die unless Senators and Congressmen are made aware of the strong opposition to it. You can do a great deal to help defeat this bill. If you fail to do your part don't complain if the bill passes and your business is ruined. It may mean ruin to more than one concern if the Anti-Saloon League succeeds in winning. The passage of the Kenyon Bill will be the biggest victory ever won by the Anti-Saloon League. They know this and every effort is being made to force this bill through. What are you going to do about it?"

And the National Wholesale Liquor Dealer's Association, under date of November 20 sent out the following letter:

"The Anti-Saloon League has perfected arrangements to storm the United States Senate.

Thousands of Anti-Saloon League delegates have agreed to meet in convention in Washington, December 16, 17 and 18.

The Kenyon Bill is on the Senate Calendar for December 16. We wrote you on November 18 to see your Senators and Congressmen personally at once. Have you done so?

Better drop all other matters and see your Senators and Congressmen personally at once, and explain the evident intention of the Anti-Saloon League to intimidate Congress through their proposed National Convention on December 16, 17 and 18 in Washington.

Advise this office at once of the results of your efforts.

Do not fail to do your share in this crisis. Also advise this office by return mail whether you will agree to go to Washington for December 16, 17 and 18 and aid this association in defending your business from destruction.

If you fail to volunteer to join the army formed for our defense, don't blame anyone but yourself if defeat is the result."

So would the forces of immorality, the advocates of liquor and the saloon, defeat, if they might this bill which simply means that a community that has asked, by their votes, for immunity from liquor dealers shall have what they ask for. But ever more in this world the forces and powers of righteousness and peace and truth have to push their way forward and upward through prayers and pleadings, through effort and sacrifice, against the powers that would drag men down and lay them in the dust.

—From The Christian Sun.

THE CHILD.

Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given. Isa. 9:6. (Golden Text for Sunday, December 22.)

Christmas is the children's time. The period celebrates the birth of a Child. The whole season emphasizes childhood. Where there are no children there is not much Christmas. Go into a home where there are no children, and, as a rule, Christmas is a dull time. It takes children to make Christmas. You have to see children, hear their merry laughter, their glad songs, their happy shouts, to realize what Christmas means.

This is why Christmas never grows old. Every Christmas is a new Christmas. It is a season of novelty, of hilarity, of glee and gladness. Child life is always new. The experiences of childhood are fresh and vital and buoyant; ever changing, but never old. We can never get away from the fact that Christmas is the celebration, the anniversary of the birth of a child. "Unto us a child is born."

How vivid indeed is Isaiah's prophecy. He lived in a dark time; an age of sin and shame and oppression; a period when the many had few rights and privileges and when the wicked few were tyrants, despots and heartlessly cruel. The previous chapter (8) of Isaiah sets forth this dark time; and out of the gloom the prophet looks into the centuries yet to be and sees a great light. He beholds the light of a day yet to be, a light whose glory should fill the world and whose luster should shine out to all the dark corners of the earth. More and more does the prophecy come to be seen in its fulfillment. The far corners of the earth are receiving the light. More people will celebrate Christmas this year than ever before. In thousands of homes the glad songs will ring out this year where they have not rung out before. More and more is the fact of the Child's birth, and the Child's worth, coming to be known and felt. He is the Prince of Peace, and the world will come to know it. It behooves us, therefore, to make this Christmas time that which it really is, the celebration of a Child's birth. How may this be done?

1st. Childhood is innocent. In our sports, pleasures, privileges, pursuits at Christmas time we should seek to be innocent. To be unkind, over indulgent, sinning against self and others is certainly not the way to celebrate the birth of the Child.

2nd. Childhood is happy. It is free from care. It is trustful, imaginative, hopeful. We can celebrate Christmas by seeking happiness, especially the happiness of others. Possibly the cares of the past year have weighed heavily upon us. There have been disappointments, broken plans, disappointed hopes. Now is the time to take fresh hold, look out on to the future, see the great and the good and the cheerful things that loom large in the distance. Unto us a child is born. Let us be child-like—imaginative buoyant, hopeful expectant.

3rd. Childhood is grateful. How glad children are of gifts, pleasures, privileges. Their whole being, expression, face, features, conduct tell of their gratitude for any favors shown. Here indeed is the deepest significance of Christmas. We should be thankful. We should rejoice that unto us, unto the world a Child is born, which child is to be the salvation of the world. This Child is our hope. How glad indeed, how intensely grateful we should be, for what Christ was, and for what it means to the world.

—From The Christian Sun.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Rev. A. O. Lindley receives mail matter at Rural Hall, N. C.

—Rev. L. H. Hatley should be addressed at Democrat, N. C., this year.

—North Carolina has a post-office named Day Book. One of our subscribers has recently moved to that point.

—"It is more blessed to give than to receive." Many will experience the truth of that teaching this Christmas season.

—A Merry Christmas to one and all of our readers. It is a season of joy, gladness, the giving of gifts and making hearts glad.

—West Virginia also did the great and graceful thing in piling up a 70,000 majority for prohibition. The cause of temperance and sobriety marches on.

—We were pleased to have a call from Bros. H. O. Proctor and C. H. Howard on their way to Raleigh at the time of the Farmer's Convention.

—Bro. Raper writes that our new church lot in Reidsville would now sell for $2,500, with the church off. It cost much less.

—The churches of America support more than 7,000 missionaries, 30,000 native helpers, and more than 10,000 mission schools in foreign fields.

—"It cost a million dollars to elect Gov. Woodrow Wilson president, but it was worth it," remarks an enthusiastic contemporary. That can be better said three or four years from now than now.

—Railroads feel aggrieved because the Post Master General is trying to make them carry the increased quantity of mail matter at the former or even reduced rates. They are appealing to the people for fair treatment.

—The Anti-Saloon League is moving mightily this week to get the Senate to pass the Kenyon inter-state liquor shipment bill. The temperance hosts have gathered in Washington from all quarters and the fight is on in earnest.

—Mr. James Irvin, of Bellevue, Pa., gave us a pleasant surprise last week by suddenly appearing in our office. He travels for an iron manufacturing firm in Canton, O. He goes into new territory and works up business. They call him their "missionary."

—Early next year we expect to change our day of publication from Thursday to Wednesday. This will necessitate prompter action on the part of some of our reporters, but the change is called for in order that the paper may reach many readers before Sunday.

—A company of 25 women began a pilgrimage of 140miles on foot—from New York City to Albany,—last Sunday to deliver in person to Gov. Sulzer on Dec. 31 a petition asking for woman suffrage in New York. The women are evidently in earnest.

—They have formed, in New York, a Society for the Prevention of Useless Giving; and taking the first letter of each word in the long name and adding S as a conclusion you have "Spugs," by which name the Society is to be called.

—President Wilson will have 10,839 offices at his disposal. For each of these you may estimate ten applicants. Now to hear and personally discriminate in all these cares is no easy task. The President will have enough to keep him busy for six months any way.

—Jesus the blessed One came to make this a brighter, happier, sweeter world to live in. Many will get an idea of what that means next week when all of us try to make others happy. And in the years to come men will seek all the year round to make others happy even as we seek it now for all too brief a season. Christ's life and teachings will yet make the world one glad, glorious Christmas season. We hay hasten that day by seeking ourselves to make the world about us happier and better day by day.

The Progressive Party had a Convention in Chicago last week. The attendance was reported large and the meetings enthusiastic. New York has been decided upon for permanent head quarters A Commission is to be sent abroad to study old World conditions in government.

—Dr. A. T. Fowler of Mt. Vernon, N. Y. in addressing the Baptist Congress recently in Ithaca, N. Y., on "What is a Baptist Church," said that of 496 leading Baptist divines in England who replied to his enquiries, 401 reported that they receivd into church membership unimmersed members.

AS TO DIVISION OF CHURCH PROPERTY.

At our last Conference there were several circuits divided, among them, Haw River Circuit. Before the division, Haw River had a parsonage and in that division the parsonage as located fell to the Reidsville circuit. Now the Annual Conference at High Point in 1905 adopted this rsolution: That in the division of circuits having a parsonage that part of the circuit that retains the parsonage shall make a just and equitable division of parsonage property, paying a just pro rata part of the value of said parsonage to the quarterly conference so set off.

(Signed by) A. J. Harris,
C. H. Whitaker,
Committee.

Now I want to know, does that mean present value or the value when bought? I ask for information as I understand it means present value. Will our President, and ex-President give me the correct ruling as to the division of circuits and who can retain the parsonage by paying the contributing churches their pro rata part at present value of parsonage and lot.

Thos. R. Totten.
R. F. D. 1., Wentworth, N. C.

CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

"What shall I give to thee, O Lord?
The kings that came of old
Laid softly on Thy cradle rude
Their myrrh and gems of gold.
"Thy martyrs gave their hearts' warm blood,
Their ashes strewed Thy way;
They spurned their lives as dreams and dust
To speed Thy coming day.
"Tyou knowest of sweet and precious things
My store is scant and small;
Yet were Thou here in want and woe,
Lord, I would give Thee all."
There came a voice from heavenly heights:
"Unclose thine eyes and see;
Gifts to the least of those I love,
Thou givest unto Me."

—Christian Union.

THE CALL OF THE WORLD.

This is Monday night, December 2nd. I am at the West Market Methodist church in Greensboro taking lectures on Missions delivered by Mr. W. E. Doughty, Gen. Sect. of the Laymen's Missionary Movement of the United States and Canada.

Union services of the Protestant churches of the city were held at this church last night at which Dr. Doughty spoke for an hour holding his students spellbound. It was a great treat to the people of the city.

He is now conducting mission studies in groups of two or three nights. The first is "The Call of the World," and the second is "Mission Method in Sunday School." Quite a little bunch is now gathered, fifty people or more. This is not as much as I expected indicated by the demonstration last night, but I suppose this augurs well for Mission interests in the city.

The room is decorated with a Perry picture of Jno. G. Paton, the map of the world, a Chinese flag, a United States flag, the Christian flag, and pictures of Mohammedon women and their life and Kim Sang Silk who was the first Korean preacher.

To-night he is saying, Christ said, "The field is the world." Men are now saying "The world is my market." The one question asked probably more than any other relative to missions is, "Does it succeed?" This is a very natural question. It is the first question asked of every business. The answer thereto is a fact which is not framed for the benefit of some Missionary enthusiast. Christ is really winning the world; His agencies for carrying the Gospel are multiplying; and the signs of the time are the increased numbers of workers, churches, mission points and stations, and the great followers compared with the past.

As an illustration of this, only a few years ago, missions were impossible, from this the development went from the impossible to the possible but still was improbable. This was a time when the church thought missions might be done but the difficulties in transportation and acquiring languages for practical use with the foreign tongue was a task beyond our reach. But God would not let His people alone; the Gospel to all the people became impearative and could not be dispensed with, in fact it has now become inevitable. This is a beautiful representation of "The Growth of the Missionary" concept. "It is an answer to the statement that their field is the world, and the missionary concept of the missionary thought of the present age, is that this field is the market.

There are a few secrets to the world market of commerce. Men sow the seed of their product. They had or could produce the goods; they advertised and put their stamp upon them with "99 and 144 per cent. pure"; they took advantage of transportation and if they had none, they created it; they studied the point of accessibility; they made a constant study of the field and placed their products upon the markets, accessible to most people. The Standard Oil today to introduce its product in China, or any other country, goes to the capital of that country realizing that there is the strategic point for the market. And then they employ their agents in every section of the country and collect lots of capital for effective business.

How about the business of the Lord? its success is based upon the same prinples. We have got to create and meet the need of the Gospel in heathen lands. and we have got to convince the people that the article we have is what they need; we have got to employ the agencies now rapidly increasing for carrying it them; we have got to place it at points of accessibility, we must place it at strategic points where we can give it to the largest number of people and of influence. We have got to introduce a constant study of the field, send out agents and employ lots of capital for the furtherance of the same.

The next question is the place of strategy. Such places are the places now known as the most responsive, most accessible, and contain most numbers. There are also negative points of strategy, viz., the neglected, and the most needy, the changing races and the strategic places

To-day, Korea, Japan, Porto Rico, and India may be mentioned among the places most responsive to the Gospel; and it is in South America that educational missionaries are in most demand.

The neglected and most needy portions of the field are Africa, South America and China. I will not take the time to describe the bigness of these fields as he describes it except to say that it was decided at the World's Missionary Congress that in order to stop the sweep of Mohammedanism that is simply threatning all Europe, to draw a line of Christianity by stations for thousands of miles through the midst of Asia. This is what Mohammedanism is now doing for Africa to stop Christian missionaries. They are running a line of Mohammedan stations fifteen miles long through the continent.

South Africa, educationally; New York has as many theachers as all of South America with the exception of Venezuela and Columbia which have only a few hundred. Brazil as big as Europe, and from Paro at the mouth of the Amazon for a thousand miles there is not a single mission station. Bolivia is fourteen times as large as the state of New York and it has only eighteen workers. Africa has three thousand miles of seacoast with only 97 workers and along this coast are the graves of a thousand or more Christian churches swept by Mohammedanism. Arabia has a seacoast of 1500 miles with no missionary at all. Many other countries all over Asia are rehcarsed before our minds showing the bigness of the task. Lumping it all together there are 119,000,000 people in the world totally unprovided for. Is there faith enough to grasp and carry this task? Experience is that when a Christian understands the call of Christ, there is only one reply,—Obedience:

My what a task there is for us! To evangelize the world means to give every man and woman time and opportunity to know Jesus Christ. Our great task is to give the world the needed product, let them take the goods and supply the need all over their territory. This makes it important to foster and cultivate the mission cause, "Not America for America's sake, but America for the world's sake." Not us for our sake, but us for God and humanity. In this we lose our lives to find it in the power and glory of Christ. The missionary must decrease and the native missionary must increase. America is responsible for her own salvation, and so all other countries.

"God had promised universal dominion to His Son." We are the agencies of that dominion and we must cause our people to know the sheer bigness of the great task, in which we find a fourfold glory, the handling of the immigrayour society, let each individual observe countries millions compelled to study us. and the mingling races challenging America to evangelize all the rest of the world. Is America able to assume her task? with these conditions existing, it seems that God is preparing this nation for the greatest work He ever did.

H. E. Rountree.

— Miss Helen Gould who at 24 inherited a fortune of $10,000,000 and who in the 20 years since has given away to charity and benevolences several millions, but who by business prudence has trebbled her fortune, is engaged to be married soon to Finley Sheppard of St. Louis a successful railroad man.

CHRISTMAS LETTER.

The happy holiday season is again with us. In this letter I want to say "Merry Christmas" to each and every reader of The Sun. Let us congratulate one another that a merciful Providence has brought us safely thus far upon the precarious journey of Life. As the old year draws to a close let us pause for a little rest and a moment's reflection upon the pathway over which we have just come before we enter the unknown and untried ways of 1913.

The first thing suggested to us by our meditation is the fact that we have come over the lap of time now drawing to a period at a surprisingly swift pace. It is but a brief while since we stood upon the threshold of the now closing, expiring year. As we peered wistfully out in the direction in which its way was supposed and hoped to extend, its three-hundred and sixty-five divisions appeared to stretch away almost interminably. We would have abundant leisure in which to do the things we were planning. We had the still remaining months of winter, with the good cheer and companionship indoors, and the long, snowy, wintry evenings in which to plan, to read, to chat, to hope, to love. Beyond Winter, were the green, verdant meadows of Spring, with balmy southwinds, twittering birds, tender, modest violets, bursting buttercups, and life abundant springing again from the frozen earth. Let again beyond was the golden Summertime, with luscious fruits, azure skies and cool, secluded nooks and woodlands crannies where, 'neath the o'erarching boughs of some forest monarch, festooned with moss and ivy, near the murmuring music of some waterfall the tired city man with book in hand might find the rest and relaxation which he craved. Still on beyond, dreamy, imperial Autumn, with her gorgeous banner of flaming sumac and silver and bronze and gold, far-flung along the distant summits of the once purple hills. And finally, our year was lost in the dreary mist and grayness of another Wintertime, almost too far distant to be clearly perceived or much cared about. We began our journey deliberately, thinking that we had plenty of time in which to enjoy the bewitching panorama which was before us.

But alas for our fancies. We have been whisked along so rapidly that the memory of the changing, shifting landscape along the way remains for the most part merely as a confused blur. Hardly had we been a week out from our starting-point when we began to get up speed and we have been coming at that rate ever since, until now we are approaching another terminal-point when we are putting on brakes and slowing down for a little while only to resume the journey by and by.

Looking backward over the way today and recalling it as best we may we are impressed with the fact that not only has it been shorter than we expected, but that it has also been different from what we expected, different in many ways.

At points the travelling was much wilder and rougher than we had anticipated. Sometimes it seemed that we would be lost in the depths of a trackless wilderness. Onward through the gloom we sped, not knowing what Power was guiding or impelling us. Over yawning chasms, from far down within whose inky depths torrents of despair sent up a threatening, sickening roar; past precipies of unknown height where a single step aside meant destruction; through narrow, tortuous gorges and defiles of difficulty we came, only again to rush through smiling fields and by placid waters, peacefully murmuring their way to the sea. But always a Something, a Something kindly and good has been our Guide, our Engineer and we have not been afraid.

Then along this way our fellow-travellers have been in many cases other than those we expected. To some who started with us we have said farewell, hoping to strike glad hands with them here, others we shall meet we know not when or where, but surely not upon any highways of Earth. Into that dim, mystic Shadowland they have gone and await us Otherwhere. Then, by way of recompense, into our lives new friends and kindly have come, their smiles and faces gladden our hearts and with them, hand in hand we travel onward.

Then we have not accomplished all that we had expected. That task, which at the beginning of the year seemed so easy and simple proved intricate and involved and from it we turned disappointed, baffled and oppressed with a sense of our own incompetence. We have perhaps, in the midst of our failure been cheered by Browning's philosophy,

> "Not what a man does,
> But what he would do
> Exalts him."

But, whether earthly failure or success has been our portion, our Heavenly Father's mercy has remained. Through all the days that are no more he has loved us, cared for us. Therefore, away with all that is gloomy and morbid. We have so many things to be glad for. Let there be a happy song in the soul as we come to one more blessed Christmastime. For the pure joy of living and working and loving let us be glad.

To the despondent and discouraged I would say: Gather yourself together, look up and get busy. Put away the thought of anxiety, of gloom, of failure. Stiffen up, morally and physically, and renew your trust in yourself, your fellows and your God. Become possessed by some true, noble and worthy purpose and you will win

To the sick, the disabled, and the bereaved ones I would commend the utterance of our Lord during that awful agony in the Garden when "he sweat as it were great drops of blood." There, in his hour of mortal agony we hear him groaning "If this cup pass not from me except I drink it, Thy will, not mine be done." May this example of Divine heroism and resignation cheer you upon your way. At best, our suffering is only for a time and we have read in an ancient chronicle of a great company who, through much tribulation had come up to the city of God.

To the stranger, far from native haunts and health I would cheerily say "Howdy do" I too, who thus salute you am a stranger throughout all the peopled earth together with all others who, with Paul "have here no continuing city" no certain abiding-place, but who seek "a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." And, as we face the New Year my wish for each and all beneath whose eyes these lines may fall is that so beautifully expressed by Van Dyke in a few lines which I quote according to the best of my recollection:

"Let me live my life from day to day,
With forward face and unreluctant soul.
Not hasting to, nor turning from the goal
Nor holding back in fear from what the future veils
But with a whole and happy heart
That pays its toll to youth and age
And travels on with cheer
So let the way wind up the hill or down,
Through rough or smooth, the journey will be joy,
Still seeking what I sought when but a boy:
High adventure, new friendship and a crown,
I shall grow old, but shall not lose life's zest
Because for me the road's last turn shall be the best."

Henry Spencer Booth.

Make some one happy during the Christmas season.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, DEC. 29.

By Charles A. Hines.

Subject:—"Missionary Needs." II Cor. 8:1-9.

We are living in what is perhaps the most distinctly missionary age of the modern church. I say "modern church" for the reason that I do not believe we have yet approached the missionary zeal and enterprise of the early church.

The man who opposes missions ought not to accept the Christian religion, because had it not been for foreign missions in the early church the Anglo Saxon race might never have learned to know the true God and His Son Christ. "Go ye into all the world; and preach the gospel to every creature" rang in the ears of the disciples and the later followers. Why should it not ring with equal clearness to us in this day?

Missionary enterprises need men and women, money, prayer, information, system. The home church does not take the kindly and intelligent interest it should in foreign work. Church members individually and collectively are not concerned enough with the world's salvation.

Need of Men and Women.

"How can they hear without a preacher?" That question, asked at the beginning of Christian history, remains unanswered. It has been well said that every Christian should consider himself called to be a missionary unless he or she has a distinct call to remain at home. The burden of proof is on the Christian, if he stays at home. To-day missionary work is so varied that all kinds of ability can be used—Bible-readers, doctors, teachchers, industrial workers, printers, and so on, as well as evangelists. The mission boards always have more places to be filled than they have suitable men and women to fill them. The Student Volunteer Movement has only partially met the great need. There is not a mission field in the world, home or foreign, that is not in desparate need of more workers. Hundreds have gone from Christian Endeavor societies, but thousands more should go. May it not be that God is calling some from this society?

Need of Money for Missions.

Money is consolidated life. Every dollar represents the time and strength and thought that some one had to put into earning that dollar. Therefore, in giving our money for missions we are really giving our time and thought—our life. We cannot give well unless we spend time and thought upon the matter. We must not give at haphazard or without care. We must know what our income is, whether it is regular or irregular, or we cannot tell whether we are giving much or little in proportion to what God gives us. Therefore, we must keep account..

Needs of Missionary Prayers.

Missionaries themselves are constantly asking that they may be upheld by the prayers of the Christians at home. They evidently place the first in their list of imperative needs. They feel themselves absolutely unequal to their great tasks, and know that the allpowerful help of God is to be obtained in answer to the faith-filled prayers of God's people. Many times decisive triumphs on mission fields have come immediately in answer to such prayers, though they have been long withheld before.

Do You Know.

1. That the neglected fields in America present startling conditions calling for serious considerations? There are 10,000 towns, 300 to 1,000 population, each, in States west of the Missouri River and the Pacific Coast wherein the Christian faith is not preached by anybody, nor the Bible taught.

2. In Utah there are eleven counties, in Colorado, five, where there are no churches of any name save Mormon. Populations are pouring into rich regions and schools and churches are utterly inadequate in number and too remote in distance to care for the people. In fully one-third of the State of Colorado half the people have no religious privileges whatsoever.

3. In Montana, 60,000 to 75,000 of the population reside five miles or more from any church. One very rich valley of the state, fifty-four miles from a railroad, with a population of 5,000, growing rapidly and capable of supporting 50,000 people, has but one church.

4. In North Dikota, fourteen counties have but three places in each for worship. Four thousand school districts have no religious privileges whatsoever.

5. One county in Idaho has a rural population of 9,000, with no regular preaching service. In another county, with a population of 18,000, only three of its sixty-five school districts have regular preaching services.

6. Literally thousands of foreigners in all the states never heard the Word of God. Fifty thousand Indians in the United States are sun worshipers and pagans and have never heard of Christ.—American Home Missionary.

Notes on C. E. Topic, Dec. 22.

Subject—"What the Coming of Christ Has Done and Will Do for the World." Luke 1:67-79. (Christmas Meeting).

The leader should try to picture to the meeting present day conditions if Christ had never come into the world. Would not all of the world be as it is in the darker places? What has this coming meant to government, to civilization, to invention, to education, to material prosperity, to moral and social welfare?

Trace briefly the history of the nineteen centuries and point out the more important decisive historical events that have been offered by the religion and followers of our Master.

Civilization.—James Chalmer, the heroic missionary whom Robert Louis Stevenson called "the Great-heart of the South Seas," said that after twenty-one years of experience among the savages of the Pacific islands he had never found a people there, or a single man or woman, who had been civilized without the gospel of Christ. Wherever he found a friendly people, one that would welcome a stranger, a Christian missionary had been there before him.

Progress.—Columbus never saw the continent of America, only the outlying islands. He did not dream of the great stretches of plain and mountain, or river and lake and forest that lay beyond. These things remained for the gradual discovery of decades. The shepherd and wise men and disciples did not dream of the joys that Christ was bringing to the world. These have been the unfolding discoveries of centuries.

Peace.—An infidel artist was commissioned to make a caricature of a Salvation Army meeting . He went to the meeting, but his storm-tossed heart was so impressed by the peace which he saw upon all the faces of the workers that he became a Christian. Christ came to bring peace to the world, and this peace has entered the souls of all who believe on Him.

Health.—Hospitals are unknown in pagan lands. The sick are cast out to die,especially if they are old. If there are doctors, their medicine is a horrible concoction, doing nothing but harm, and their superstitious rites are abominable. Dirt and indescribable impurities are everywhere in heathen countries. Diseases born of filth kill their millions there. Christ, the good Physician, has established hospitals, built up sanitation, inspired a desire for cleanliness, taught us to care for the body, which is the temple of His Holy Spirit.

The above are merely suggestive and just a few of those treated in the Christian Endeavor World. There are many others you can use, among them:

Salvation, Cheer, Promise, Safety, Reform, Incarnation, Opportunity, Freedom, Development, Missions, Bible, Democracy, Riches.

WHY DO HEATHEN WOMEN NEED WOMEN PREACHERS?

By Rev. Ellen G. Gustin, Attleboro, Mass.

There are two very simple reasons for this fact, and the most abundant proof to justify the sending out of women qualified either to etll them the simple story of the life and love of Jesus, or when need requires, to minister to bodily suffering as we women with Christian homes and Christian husbands cannot readily conceivee. In order to fully understand what heathendom means, we must face the awful fact that nowhere in the world outside lands where human nature is lifted above its animal side, is woman any thing but a toy or slave to man. There is no real home life where God, the Father Almighty, is not known, even in Christendom, and much less in heathen lands. Then imagine, if you can, what it would mean to you if a woman came to you in your home, where man could not easily come, and, sitting down beside you, told you quietly that what she was telling you had made her what she was, and would, if you would only listen and believe, make you what she was in peace and gentleness and power and bless those that you love. Do you not see what it would mean to any woman, however degraded and desolate, to hear from another woman the dear old story that has given to each of us Christian women all that has made the life worth living?

No man can have the intuitive knowledge of what Jesus must mean to women accustomed only to see in men either her tormentors, or, at best, her more-or-less gentle master. Heathen women need to hear from other women differentiated only from themselves by the knowledge of Jesus, all that His Gospel holds for them of healing and blessing. It would be well if female ministers to heathen women could also be wives and mothers. The saddest side of life to heathen women lies in the awful sorrow of wifehood and motherhood; but if there cannot always be married missionaries to preach Jesus to heathen women, then let them be single women, to whom this precious work is given, ask the Lord to bathe her soul in such a realization of Himself, and such a memory of the saintliest woman sufferer she has known, that the woman to whom she speaks shall realize that the one speaking to her is not only the Savior of all but has seen sorrows as deep as those of her auditor, confronted and healed. If you can go and tell the "story of Jesus and His love," in the name of Jesus go but whether you go or stay in your home I beg you to pray as you never prayed before for those "who sit in darkness and in the shadow of death."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR IN INDIA.

In Travancore the Christian Endeavor union is a new feature which works well. Union meetings are well attended. Christian Endeavor means much to those shy village girls that take part in public meetings, as they have been taught in the society. The movement means much to women in India. Some of them go out and tell their heathen sisters about Christ.

One society has four meetings every week and has kept up this record for a year. One meeting is for prayer, one for Bible-study, one for singing, and one for a general address.

There is a boy's society that gives an annual feast to two hundred poor people. These boys preach the gospel in the villages, visit from house to house, teach the illiterate to read, and so forth. These features of the work are common. Other societies help the church music, conduct Sunday schools, give addresses, distribute tracts, ring the church bell, arrange the chapel for service, and so on.

In the Neyoor hospital there is a society in the leper ward which sends contributions out of its poverty for mission work. The members occasionally give up the meat allowed them and use the money for missions.

India Endeavorers like to name their societies. There is a leper society at Sholapur called "guide-posts." A boy's society is named the "workers" society, and we find such names as "bearer-of-good-news" society, the "senior conquerors," "little soldiers," and "little stars."

During the summer hollidays the girls in the Marathi Mission school at Sholapur work for money and are using it to support one of their number at school. They watch in turn if any one is sick and needs this service. They are presented their dormitory with a table, and former members are given a chair to the church.

Something New.

The sense of progress is a factor in every successful society, and it is gained by introducing new plans.

Have a new plan for the prayer meeting often, such as a meeting of all prayers or all testimonies.

Have a new plan for each committee one every month.

Have a new plan for the social, such as a social where each member of the society, when called upon, is expected to propose some game, or do something for the entertainment of the company.

Put the business meeting at an unusual time or in an unusual place, and see how much it will gain in sprightliness.

Have a new form for the consecration meeting, as the roll called at haphazard and not in alphabetical order.

Some vigor of initiative is required to break with any routine, and that is no small part of the value of new plans.

Faith in Christian Endeavor.

Thirty years of success and increasing service is enough to prove the permanence of any Christian institution, and that is the reason of our society. It has had to meet the opposition born of misunderstanding and unfamiliarity. It has encountered the friction that comes from the readjustments necessary when any method is introduced. But the principles of our society have been tested thoroughly by the wisest and most practical men of all the churches, and they have not been found wanting. They have proved themselves adapted, like Christianity itself, to all races and nations. They are useful equally in all denominations. And they have been practically self-propagating.

Better Bible-Reading.

Read with a commentary, and the best one you can afford. Dummelow's, recently published, is the best one-volume commentary in existence.

Have a regular time and place for your reading. You will thus be far more likely to read the Bible at other times and places also.

Spend some time always in thinking over what you read; it is made your own only by meditation.

Read every day until you have come across some passage that will serve as the inspiration for the day.

THOUGHTFUL OFFICE BOY.

The office boy looked at the persistent lady artist, who calls six times a week, and said firmly:

"The editor's still engaged."

"Tell him that doesn't matter. I don't want to marry him."

"I haven't the heart to tell him, miss. He's had several disappointments today."—Sketch.

—W. F. Blair, of this city, after a hard fight for his life under the charge of murdering Thompson, is acquitted. He claimed that he was acting in self-defense.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

I visited Welch Memorial charge Dec. 10, and held the first quarterly conference; found Rev. D. R. Williams at his post of duty, with a goodly number of his officials present, and they seemed to be interested from the time I entered the church until I left, and I trust they will continue to be as much concerned about the work the entire year as they were during time of my visit.

The Conference was opened in the usual way, and then the Chairman announced the Conference ready for business. At this time some questions were asked as to who were members of the quarterly conference, etc.

Then the official roll was called and but few were found to be absent, and some of them were sick, and others did not have enough interest and care for the office they were elected to fill to be present, and to assist in laying plans for the work during the year: this may appear to be a little plain: but is it not the truth?

The business was transacted in harmony, and all were ready to cooperate and take part in all forward movements, and there seemed to be no other thought in the minds of any present only to go forward in every phase of church work.

The pastor's salary was raised $50. and he to be paid up in full once a month. This is as it should be on all fields, and it's being more and more practiced as the years come and go, and may it continue to spread until all our fields pay at least monthly.

Bro. Williams is popular as a preacher, and pastor, and his people like him and his family, for they have been showing it in a substantial way by pounding him. I see no reason why this should not be the best year in the history of the charge. My claim was met in full.

Orange Ct.

On the 13th inst. I started for Orange Ct. and arrived at Union Grove Church in time on the 14th to fill my appointment at 11 A. M.

There was a small but attentive congregation. My hearers were mostly quarterly conference members, and not near as many of them as ought to have been. I trust they will do better in the future.

After the sermon the pastor made some announcements and then came dinner Quarterly conference convened at 1:30. All churches represented, and the members present seemed interested and did business with dispatch until we came to the question of pastor's salary, and here we lingered for a time, and finally the salary was fixed at $700. with a promise they would make it $800. when they could consult their churches, if possible to do so; and I believe it is possible, and I am sure that many of the brethren that were present wanted to do so and I am expecting it to be done.

There is to be some church improvement at two of the churches on this charge during the year, and they are beginning to arrange to raise the means to do the work.

This charge placed itself on record to pay the pastor quarterly; at least most of the officials obligated to do so, and to use their influence in their churches to enlist the membership to do so.

At 11 A. M. on Sunday I preached in Chestnut Ridge church to a fairly good congregation; it was not their regular preaching day: but those present seemed to be good hearers; but I am fearful all had not been "doers" from what one of the stewards told me about the pastor's salary and the general interests. Brethren, do not let this occur for the year 1913; begin to meet your obligations at the first of the year.

Took dinner with Bro. and Sister Geo. Crutchfield.

At 7:30 we found ourselves at Efland church ready to preach and a fine congregation present to hear the Word. The Efland people have a beautiful church complete so far as I could see and I am sure the people are proud of their church edifice, and I hope all will join the pastor in a forward movement in the building up of our Zion on this charge.

Bro. Stubbins is well revived so far as I could learn and he has large opportunities before him. There is much pastoral work on this field to be done, and Bro. S. has a new horse and I believe he will do it. My claim not met in full on this charge.

On the morning of the 17th I boarded the train in Hilkboro for Graham, and reached there in due time, and found Rev. G. L. Curry, pastor of Graham and Haw River charge, in waiting for me, and he and I visited our church in Graham, and I found the church and grounds in good shape, and was informed by the pastor the indebtedness on the church was only one hundred dollars. We went from the church to the parsonage where I met with Mrs. Curry and her two little tots, and she had prepared for us a good dinner like most preacher's wives can do. After talking with the parson a while, we walked around to Dr. Goley's home and met his family and Mrs and Miss Carrie Henly, and soon my car came and I left for Burlington to hold the first quarterly Conference. Will visit Bro. Curry's field later.

Burlington.

I arrived in Burlington in due time, and stopped at the parsonage with Bro. Davis and family and found him at home and in a splendid humor and ready for the work of this quarterly conference. which convened at 7:30 o'clock, with eleven official members present out of 27. Where were the other 16, who were under the same obligations as the eleven that were present?

The business was transacted by those present, to the atisfaction of the pastor, as far as I could learn.

Salary for pastor $800. and a good parsonage well furnished and they endeavor to pay pastor's salary monthly. This church failed to pay quite all of the general interests the past year; but all who attended our Annual Conference will remember the amount of improvement made at Burlington last year and can make the necessary allowance.

From what I could see and learn they expect to pay all claims in full for 1913. This church is a working church, and is doing good in the community and there are large possibillities for our church in this town, and the pastor has an opportunity before him that all pastors do not have.

Much pastoral work needs to be done and Bro. Davis will have the time to do more this year than last because he was so much of his time loooking after the church building and getting it ready for the annual Conference.

The Sunday school supt. reported progress, and increased attendance since Conference. No pastor or Supt. should be satisfied with a less number in S. S. than the membership of the church.

I trust the entire membership will cooperate with the pastor in reducing the indebtedness on the church property.

Thanks to the pastor and people for their universal kindness to me in my visits.

My claim paid in full on Burlington charge.

C. A. Cecil.

Tabernacle.

The pastor and his family are fortunate whose lot it is to serve such a people as this. It must be their habit to be kind else they could not have crowded so much kindness into the less than a week we have been among them. The continued unstunted, multiplied kindness by some families round about the parsonage reaching us before we had gotten out of Greensboro and incretsing in inverse ratio as the distance between us and the parsonage decreased and then intensifying after we had reached the parsonage filled our hearts with gratitude and makes the temptation strong to mention their names in this communication and also to enumerate the things they did and do and keep on doing. But I have a notion that such a people prefer in their modesty that their names be not published in this connection and the great number of kind acts makes it impractical to mention these in detail.

Then a number of the Moriah people including some not members of our church, came down one afternoon by buggy and automobile and swelled considerably both the contents of our larder and the gratitude of our hearts. Here again the temptation is great to mention names but I desist.

I have heard it said that "three moves are equal to a fire" but I am about to conclude that a few moves like this would be equal to a year's supplies. The Asheboro people began it by pounding us just before we moved and kept it up until we were moving, in an intensified form by "sending in" and also lavishing upon us in their own homes. Then the people over here took it up and carried it on, for all which we are profoundly grateful. I wish also to acknowledge with gratitude the willingness of the Tabernacle people as shown by setting the parsonage in order and in providing teams to convey us and our property out and of the delegate to Conference in arranging with them to do this.

Each of the four churches has been visited in two Sundays. The First Quarterly Conference will be held at Tabernacle Saturday before the the first Sunday in January. The work seems to be well arranged. The people are hopeful and ready for a good year's work.

Dr. Feeman visited three of the churches last Sunday in the interest of the North Carolina College at Westminster, Md. He brought us good cheer and helpfulness. I do not know how much we helped the cause he represented as he had not counted up.

T. M. Johnson.

Greensboro, Rt. No. 6, Dec. 16, 1912.

CENTER AUXILIARY.

Thank-offering service was held at Center the 2nd Sunday in December. Having been organized just a year we decided to hold our Thank-offering service in December instead of waiting until February as most societies do. Instead of our regular program we had a sermon on Missions by our pastor. Rev. W. M. Pike preached a real good sermon, showing very plainly the differences between our position and that of the heathen, and how we may fulfill God's command by sending them the gospel as it was sent in times past to our fore-parents. We trust that the service was not in vain, but that the good talk Mr. Pike gave us may reap rich reward, and that the mites given may help to save a poor sister or sisters whose lot has been cast in a heathen land.

Thank-offering collection $3.26. $13.41 have been sent to branch treasurer. This with $41.20 collected for Miss Forest last spring, makes a total amount of $57.91 for foreign misisons from Center for the year 1912. Amount of contingent money used for home expenses, $1.20. Amount retained in treasury at present, $.15. We have not elected our new officers yet, but expect to do that at our next monthly meeting which is to meet at the home of Mrs. J. W. Whitehead 1st Sunday in January, 2:30 P. M.

Mrs. R. W. Lindley, Cor-Sec.

ORANGE CIRCUIT.

Union Grove:—1st Quarterly Conference convened with our church December 14. Rev. C. A. Cecil was with us and gave us an excellent sermon in the A. M. from 1 Cor. 3 chapter 9th verse. It was mainly to the members of quarterly conference, but it was good for us all. Mr. Cecil was pastor of this work 25 years ago. The ones that knew him were glad to welcome him among us, but how few of them are among us now, and we all want him to come again soon.

Quarterly Conference was about as well attended as usual on this circuit, but I have no idea the ones who were not present had any more urgent work at home than ones who were present. Brethren, you had better be about our Father's business while you have time and opportunity, for you will soon have to give an account of your stewardship. Mr. C. H. Jones was elected secretary. We had the most instructive and interesting quarterly conference this writer ever attended.

We are glad to have Rev. R. C. Stubbins for our pastor and glad we are all back together. I hope we will show our appreciation of our pastor by giving him our hearty support in every way possible. We trust it will be a good year for the Lord's cause all over the state.

We were glad to have Mrs. Cecil with us, we are always glad to have our own come home.

Our church took collection for Orphan's building the 5th Sabbath in September, we understood it was $10.00. We have never seen it credited in the Herald. We would like to know why?

With best wishes to Herald and all its readers for a merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

B.

December 16, 1912.

Mechanicsville Church, High Point. Rev. J. H. Moton is pastor of this church, recently built at a cost of near $3,000.

Uwharrie, Ct.

Dear Bro. McCulloch: I want to say that the Herald is always one of our most welcomed visitors at home and I believe there are many homes where it might become one if it could only pay them a visit or two. It might help us pastors very much if you could send out a few sample copies or send us a few to hand out to our people. I just spring this, though you need not print this if you don't want to, but I hope to get many of my people to reading the Herald this year that have not been doing so. We are very sorry to note the serious accident of Bro. Beverly Surratt, who got shot last week in the leg by accident and is not expected to live: but has always been one of our best men and when he is gone his good works will follow him in his children and many others. He is 76 and can't live long at the longest. May the Lord bless the entire family.

We trust we may have a good year this year in advancing the kingdom of Christ.

Notice.

The first quarterly meeting to be held at Mt. Zion on Saturday before first Sunday in January. Preaching at 11, A. M., transact business at 2 P. M. I trust that every church may be represented as the Pastor's salary must be apportioned to each church.

J. B. Trogdon, Pastor.

Dec. 12, 1912

GREENSBORO.

Our new pastor began his work on the second Sunday, preaching morning and night. He enters hopefully into the work, and the church will continue to go forward as in the past, we trust. During Brother Ogburn's pastorate there was a large increase in membership. Bro. Ogburn went after men, and by his personal effort won many. He believed in personal work, and Bro. Andrews believes in it not less.

Bro. J. C. Morris and wife, of Haw River, lately moved to Greensboro, were gladly received into the church the first Sunday. We are expecting other important accessions soon from removals to our city. This cause alone should make churches in our city grow, but we are not satisfied merely to receive those who have been previously received into the church elsewhere: we want to reach and win the unsaved in our city. This is a great work for all of the churches of Greensboro.

Next Sunday night the Sunday school will give its Christmas service in which gifts will be received for the orphans.

Work on the Children's Home still progresses, though it has been held back somewhat by the inability to get lumber.

The board of stewards met last week and organized, electing W. W. Hunter as chairman, R. T. Wills, treasurer, and W. S. Jones, financial secretary. The chairman announced on Sunday that they had decided to let the members assess themselves. The stewards will make an apportionment to be revised and amended by the individual member. By this systematic method of procedure, church moneys can be paid more easily than in any other way. Pay as you go is the right way as well as the easy way. All our churches would do well to adopt the plan.

YADKIN COLLEGE CT.

To the Official Brethren: Bear in mind and forget not. The first Quarterly Conference will convene at Shiloh on Saturday before 1st Sunday in January, 1913. Preaching at 11 o'clock by our new president, Rev. C. A. Cecil, dinner, business of Quarterly Conference. Let every official member be present and let stewards be diligent and bring a good report from each church.

H. L. Powell.

Last Sunday was a good day and a very busy one. Rev. C. E. Forlines was with us representing the work of Westminster, Md., preached at Shiloh at 11 o'clock A. M. Bethesda at 3 P. M. and W. Lexington at night. Fairly good congregations. And it would be needless for me to say here that he preached excellent sermons. We were all helped and inspired by his visit and delighted with his sermons. May the blessings of God rest upon Bro. Forlines and his great work and service which he is rendering our beloved church.

H. L. Powell.

THOMASVILLE.

Dear Editor:

I am still alive and on the Lord's side and never felt the need of Him more in my life. Our pastor, Rev. Edward Suits, left us last Thursday morning, December 12th, for his new field of work. May the Lord abundantly bless him and his. Bro. Suits has preached to some of us for years and some of us he has preached to from childhood to young womanhood and young manhood and it was with a sad heart that we gave him up, though what is our loss is someone else's gain. Bro. Suits will always be remembered by many of his friends.

Think, fathers, mothers, brothers and sisters, where you, your children and friends might have been if it had not been for the first M. P. church of Thomasville, N. C. Then think who founded it and stuck to it through cloud as well as through sunshine. Was it not Bro. Suits?

If I am fortunate enough to get to heaven I expect to see Bro. Suits there with many, many stars in his crown for what he has done for Thomasville. Bro. Suits will be rewarded in heaven, if not on earth. To love and understand Bro. Suits we must sympathize, pray, weep, and rejoice with him. He speaks plain and for the right, it may seem hard for us, but the reason it does we don't want God to hold to us, but we want to hold to God so when we want to do worldly deeds we can turn God loose and go where God can not go with us. We are too much like Sam Jones said, "Like an old ox in a dry lane, with good pasture on either side, but all he got was what little he nibbled through the cracks."

What we must do is get on the Lord's side and stand boldly for the right.

Brothers and sisters, if you are not bettered by Bro. Suits' long stay with us it is your own fault, for while he left with a sad heart, he left with a clear conscience, he did what he could.

While some do not and will never realize what Bro. Suits has done for Thomasville, yet some of us know and realize what a hard task Bro. Suits has had in building the first M. P. church of Thomasville. I thank God for sending such a man to Thomasville.

Our new pastor, Rev. T. A. Williams, has arrived and preached for us last Sunday. I pray that the people will cooperate with him better than they did Bro. Suits and that the ensuing year may be a prosperous one.

With all good wishes for a Merry Christmas, I am,

Yours in Christ,

"Catharine."

ORANGE CIRCUIT.

Efland charge and Orange Station have again been united and has taken its former name, Orange circuit.

We now have a very well arranged circuit of three churches paying a salary of seven hundred dollars. Our parsonage is almost clear of debt. Our churches are out of debt.

Chestnut Ridge and Union Grove are old organizations with a great many loyal Methodist Protestant Christians (of course there are some who are not loyal, but that gives the loyal ones a work to do.)

The church building at Chestnut Ridge is a new, large and attractive building. The church building at Union Grove is small and needs repair. The members know it and expect to make things more beautiful and comfortable by the earliest spring days. Along the line of finance Union Grove has been the banner church of the circuit. Efland church is what might be called a young organization with a new building that we are proud of. This church has made a good record in the past and we are expecting with its loyal support to make a still better record.

Bro. Cecil, our new president, was with us the 14th and 15th of December. He was a great help to us in our Quarterly Conference. His sermons were timely and good. His general remarks, and advice to pastor and people, did us all good and we highly appreciate them. Bro. Cecil has the interest of the Conference greatly at heart, and is seeking to arouse a religious and systematic business interest in ministers and lay members alike.

Our circuit passed resolutions to pay salary and conference claims at least quarterly and in some places monthly.

We enjoyed having Mrs. Cecil come with Bro. Cecil on our work, she is a member at Union Grove.

We united in marriage at the parsonage last Sunday P. M. Mr. Otis Cranford, of the Baptist church and Miss Orpah Crawford, of the Methodist Protestant church. They went away happy.

R. C. Stubbins.

December 17, 1912.

BURLINGTON.

We had 166 in Sunday school last Sunday. The assistant superintendent announced that the election of officers would be held next Sunday. We trust there will be a good attendance because it is important that the best and most capable men be elected to fill the various offices of the school.

On last Wednesday night, December 11, Dr. C. E. Forlines, of the faculty of Westminster Theological Seminary, was with us and preached a most excellent, yet simple, plain and practical sermon. After the sermon Dr. Forlines, who is in the state in the interest of the North Carolina Cottage of the seminary made an appeal for contributions, and received a very hearty response.

According to the announcement President Cecil made his appearance at our church Tuesday night, Dcember 17, and presided over our First Quarterly Conference. The excellent manner in which he conducted the conference caused complimentary remarks from many. He certainly gave us a big lot of valuable suggestions along the various lines of church and Sunday school work, and if the suggestions and plans are put into practice the coming year, we will surely have a successful year's work.

C. B. W.

December 18, 1912.

MITCHELL'S GROVE, GUILFORD CIRCUIT.

Our new pastor, Rev. T. F. McCulloch, filled his appointment second Sunday and as usual preached a very helpful sermon. We are delighted to have Bro. McCulloch for our pastor again. Some of us especially feel that his sermons and his coming into our homes and visiting his members as we think a pastor should do has been much help to us in the past and we feel sure he will be a great help to us again. May we the members of our church all work together and do much good and not only we, but we hope the entire circuit will be so united with our pastor that a mighty work will be done this new year.

Our Thanksgiving exercise was good and collection very good which was five dollars. Some of us are thinking and praying about giving the tenth of all our income another year. We feel we should give more and get more blessings. Some do not think we should give one tenth of all our income to the Lord, so I feel that I would be glad for all preachers that think we should do so to preach it to their people one sermon in each year so we may give and do all we should do, and I also feel the preachers ought to preach more temperance sermons. It's true we have one Sunday in the year set apart in our Sunday schools to teach temperance, but to my mind that's not enough. There's so much intemperance all over our land. It seems we as Christians are not doing what we should do to drive this great evil back. O may God help us as Christians to do all we can to help the young to be temperate. We know we are told to be temperate in all things, but it does seem the drink-habit is destroying the peace and happiness of so many homes and I do fear we that have such happy homes and are free from drink in our own homes are not as much concerned about the homes that are so unhappy on the account of drink. May we be more concerned about such homes. May we be willing to spend and be spent for others is my prayer.

M. P.

WELCH MEMORIAL.

I returned to my charge November 29. Have filled all appointments so far. Held our first quarterly conference December 10, President C. A. Cecil, presiding. Officers elected for 1913.

We were glad to have Bro. Cecil with us, he made us a splendid talk after the business was transacted.

We want to thank about fifty of the members of Welch and friends of this community for remembering pastor and family with a good substantial pounding since Conference. D. R. Williams.

December 16th, 1912.

THOMASVILLE.

Bro. T. A. Williams filled his appointment Sunday and Sunday night.

We certainly regret the loss of our former pastor, Rev. Edward Suits, and are glad to say that we have never found a more faithful pastor. Bro. Suits certainly served the Thomasville people with faithfulness and love, but he was called to preach in another field, and we truly hope that the Lord will be with him and his and prosper them. May the Lord bless and keep them is my prayer.

We wish to congratulate the people of Concord for their choice of such a faithful leader and truly hope that they will give him their cooperation.

From a Member.

CID, UWHARRIE CIRCUIT.

Mr. Beverly Surratt who was accidentally shot by Mr. Wm. Loftin on last Friday was a week ago while out hunting remains about the same. He is in a very serious condition. He is a good Christian man and he has our sympathy for his recovery.

We are thankful to God and to the conference for sending us Bro. Trogdon again.

Mrs. T. J. Wright is visiting relatives in Thomasville this week.

Mr. Ben Gollimore and Miss Crissie Workman were married recently: congratulations.

Rev. T. A. Plyer and daughter, May, spent a few hours with us on their way to visit his mother at Albemarle.

We hope and pray that this will be one of the most prosperous years in the spiritual way we have ever had.

We did not have any services at Cid the 2nd Sunday. I guess the minister decided to take a little rest and justly needed it to. I am always glad to receive the Herald as it brings some good news from distant friends and lots of good advice.

A Worker for the Lord.

P. S. Wishing the Herald and its many readers a happy Christmas and a prosperous New Year.

CLEVELAND CIRCUIT.

Dear Bro. Cecil:

We held our 1st quarterly conference on Saturday before the 3rd Sunday in December. All the churches but one were well represented, and the work for the year was so pleasantly and satisfactorily planned that it makes us unusually hopeful. The brethren and sisters from our newly acquired territory were present with their faces lighted with expressions of hope, and gave expressions in word as well as in deed of their satisfaction with the work of the Boundary Committee.

The writer made his first pastoral visit 3rd Sunday and was so cordially received that he felt much like it was only a home going. The old part of the work has received us so kindly for the fifth year that it makes us feel that we don't know where the separation can be. They, too, are pleased with the plan of the work and are planning for a good year.

While this change in boundary will necessitate great sacrifices on their part, but still they are submittisg heroically and joyfully with the hope and faith in the fact that they, by so doing, may better extend the Master's Kingdom. They have bought the Fallston charge's interest in the parsonage at a cost of five hundred dollars. (Our Fallston brethren, we are told, are planning to build an uptodate new parsonage for their work, of which we are glad.) In addition to the expense of buying parsonage our people have pledged us as a support $505, which with the nice and fertile lot of two acres will give us a comfortable living.

We were glad to have Bro. Waldrop and his kind family stop over night with us on his way to his new field. I feel that Lincoln Circuit is fortunate in getting a young man of such consecration and promise as Bro. Waldrop, as we know him better we love him more.

We are delighted, too, to hear kind expression from Bro. Braswell's people of his noble work for the past two years on Caroleen charge, and of their appreciation of his return. May the dear Lord prosper us all abundantly this year.

Pastor.

MIDWAY, HAW RIVER CT.

Next Sunday we hope to welcome our new pastor, Rev. W. D. Fogleman, at our church. We have never seen him, but feel sure we will like him.

Our S. S. is moving along nicely. We have raised $10.00 for the church at Reidsville. We are very busy now preparing for a Christmas tree and entertainment which will be on the night of December 25th. Will ask all the Herald readers to remember us in your prayers that we may be successful in our undertaking. We invite all who can to come and enjoy Christmas night with us.

Mrs. E. P. Butler who has been to St. Leo's Hospital has returned to her home much improved in health. We hope soon to have her back to her class of little children in Sunday school.

We had prayer meeting the second Sunday conducted by Mr. J. D. McCollum.

We will close wishing the editor and all the Herald readers a merry Christmas.

Ella V. Apple.

December 17, 1912.

CONFERENCE MINUTES.

A number of brethren have sent me their post office address and as so many have come in since Conference, some this week, that I want to make this statement through the paper. The minutes were placed in the hands of the printer the day after Conference closed as I never left Burlington until the matter was ready for the press with the exception of a few reports etc., which were sent to press inside of a week. The proof has been read and I was hoping to be mailing the minutes by the time this notice reaches you. I put in the addresses of each preacher to the best of my knowledge, where there was no change I put it the same as last year. So if there is any fault to find you can put it on me for hurrying up the minutes before you took a notion to tell me of your address. Remember there was a deficit from last year and that had to be paid; and there's not enough in hand to pay the printing bill this time, so the instruction of Conference is to sell your minutes and send the proceeds to me immediately and the balance if there be any, and there should be if all minutes are sold, will be held over for publication next year. Minutes will be sent to pastors on charges raising a minute fund, and these are to sell and forward the amount to me at once. Where brethren paid out of their own pockets I suppose you will be expected to get your money back if you can.

After this notice my address will be Miami, Florida, until further notice, as the good people of Granville have granted me a vacation for a much needed rest. I have arranged for my appointments to be filled if the weather is open.

Hoping that the minutes will reach every one in time to get them out first of the year, and that the glad season of Christmas may bring many joys.

Sicnerely,

N. G. Bethea.

Henderson, December 14, 191..

CORRECTION.

In my report of December 5th this line is left out between Conference steward, Rev. J. R. Hutton, $3.43 and New Hope S. S., $5.03. The amounts including New Hope and following were new amounts given to the Children's Home Building Fund.

Yours,

Mrs. A. G. Dixon.

MARRIED.

Rev. Jesse Eli Pritchard and Miss Laura Kate Vestal were united in marriage at Siler City, the home of the bride on the 12th day of December at 1:30 P. M. The occasion was a most delightful one. On the evening before, from 8 to 10 o'clock, the would-be bride gave a most delightful reception that was joyfully participated in by about 40 friends.

The numerous, beautiful, valuable and useful presents were presented, and artistically arranged to the pleasure of all, and of course to the great joy of the popular bride. After cake and cream was served all went home and the groom went to the Hadley hotel to dream of the happy event of 1:30 P. M., the next day. The marriage came off exactly at the appointed hour in the parlor of the bride's parents, witnessed by about 20 intimate friends.

Immediately after the ceremony the happy pair took the south bound train to Sanford, and then via of Raleigh, to Littleton, from there across to Brinkleyville, to the parsonage of Halifax circuit where they expected to arrive at about 4:30 P. M. on the 13th for the first time to take supper in an M. P. parsonage. The supper was expected to be in readiness on their arrival.

The congratulations and best wishes of a host of friends accompany them. The groom is one of our most promising youngg men in the ministry. The bride is an accomplished young lady of a most congenial disposition and well qualified for a minister's wife.

The ceremony was performed by the undersigned. J. H. Bowman.

On Sunday evening, December 15th, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Harper, Henderson, N. C., Mr. Martin Ira Fletcher, and Miss Anna Bet Harper were happily married by the Rev. Mr. Daily, pastor of the M. E. Church, South. The parlor was beautifully decorated with ever-green and by 6:30 was packed to its full capacity. At 6:55 Rev. Mr. Dailey took his place and promptly at seven came the ushers in the following ordr Mr. Eugene Murphy, and Miss Cicelia Reames, Mr. Clarence Pridgen and Miss Maud Fletcher, the groom's sister, Mr. Lonnie Reames and Miss Lucy Lee, Mr. Buck Holmes and Miss Pollie Moore. the bridal couple. The bride was neatly gowned in white silk trimmed with pearl beads, and the groom faultlessly dressed in blue serge. The words that made them one were beautifully and impressively spoken. Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher will at present take rooms at the home of the bride's parents. We wish them a long, happy and successful life in this world, and eternal life in the world to come.

One Who was Present.

—As a result of their part of the shooting up of Carroll county, Va. Court last March, Sidna Allen gets 35 years in the penitentiary and his nephew, Wesley Edwards, gets 27 years. It seems to have paid these two to escape and live as out-laws for a season, till sympathy could be aroused, as others of the clan are to go to the electric chair. Sympathy goes a long way in this world, and those who die have none to speak and present their cause.

THE EMPTY STOCKING.

There's an empty stocking hanging
From many a little bed,
Where the God-blown dream hangs over
Each sleeping curly-head;
And the vision gathers nightly
Of a day that's soon to come
When little feet thould patter
To the music of the drum.

There's an empty stocking hanging
By many a wind-blown door,
That must wait in vain for Christmas
In the grey haunts of the poor;
And eyes that now shine brightly
Shall, through a rain of tears,
See nothing there on Christmas
But the sorrow of the years.

But out where splendor centres
In the mansions of the great,
No call will go unanswered
No tot will vainly wait;
The Christmas horn will summon—
The Christmas drum will roll
The tide of joy in magic
Through the gateway of each soul.

But where one gift would brighten
The dark of weary days,
No reindeer's hoof will thunder
Out poverty's dreary ways;
And so, for God's white season—
For some wee dreamer's cause—
Don't you think that you might whisper
Just a word to Santa Claus?

Grantland Rice.

GORDON'S PIGEONS.

Gordon Ellms lived in the country. When his uncle Harold was visiting there, at Christmas time, he had invited Gordon to come to the city in June and return the visit. "Wouldn't you like to come?" he asked as Gordon seemed to hesitate to give his answer.

"Yes, Uncle Harold, I would like to go to the city very much, but—but— I'd rather not go in June. The birds will all be here then," Gordon answered frankly.

"O, well, we can make that all right. I'll promise to furnish you with all the birds you can take care of," his uncle said with an assuring smile.

"Birds in the city?" quired Gordon.

"Yes, birds in the city, and tame. Well, you'll have to see them to reealize just how tame they are," replied his uncle.

After this promise, Gordon was eager for the visit. It sometimes seemed as if the month of June never would come around. There had not been time to ask his uncle any more questions about this feathered tribe that made the city a homing place in June, when all other birds sought the leafy byways of the country; for he was waiting to board the train when the conversation had taken place, and the engine was blowing the warning whistle.

But it was June at last, and Gordon was in the city. That afternoon Uncle Harold was going to take him to the park. Here he was to find the bird companions that had been promised him, and Gordon's heart was drumming an eager tattoo as he approached the enchanted spot.

Uncle Harold had provided a paper bag full of peanuts. "The birds will expect them," he said as he gave them into Gordon's keeping.

"My! what a lot of pigeons!" Gordon exclaimed as they were walking along the path to the fountain.

"Perhaps it would be a good idea to begin using your nuts," his uncle suggested.

Gordon shelled a few of them and scattered them upon the ground. In an instant there was a whir of wings and a flock of pigeons flew to his feet.

"Hold one of the nut meats in your hand and stand perfectly still," directed his uncle.

Gordon obeyed, and a pigeon alighted upon his finger and secured it. A squeal of delight from its benefactor sent the beautiful creature fluttering to the ground, to return, however, when coaxed back by the bribe of another nut meat. The little boy screamed with terror and delight when he suddenly felt two rather prickly claws treading upon his head.

"You ought to have your picture taken now, my boy," laughed Uncle Harold; for Gordon was by this time completely surrounded by pigeons from his feet to his head, while a score were cooing upon the ground, eager for a chance to occupy a hand, shoulder, or even his curly head.

When the peanuts were exhausted, the pigeons teased for more with soft coos that were very delightful to listen to, and strutted back and forth upon the ground, displaying their richly tinted feathers as they straitened their necks for another peanut.

"We must lay in a large supply tomorrow," Uncle Harold observed as, seeing that no more food seemed to be forthcoming, the whole flock spread wings and flew off to another feeding ground.

After that Gorden spent a part of every day at the park. His little feathered friends learned to expect him, and it was no unusual sight to see them around him like bees around clover blossoms.

"I think I like city birds as well as I do country ones," he confided to his uncle as he stood surrounded by the pigeons on his last visit to them before going home.

"One satisfactory thing about them is that they are here all the year. You do not have to make their acquaintance all over again every spring."

"If I come Christmas, shall I find them here?" quired Gordon.

"Yes, and possibly more of them," assured his uncle.

"I guess, then, I'll come in the winter next time; then I can see our birds too," wisely responded the little boy as he stroked the shining back of the beautiful. cooing pigeon upon his hand, which was persistently crowding its bill into the peanut treasure that the bird was seeking.—Helen M. Richardson.

DAVID'S CHANCE.

Miss Raynor, waiting in the vestibule of the church, was in a state bordering on despair. David Ryerson, a boy of ten years, had been arrested and released on probation and for more than a week she had been making futile efforts to find a place for him in a Christian family. Bright little fellow though he was, all doors were closed to him—a homeless street lad. Bad habits, of course. The deaconess could not deny it, but Mother Street had been his only teacher.

A few days before she had brought the question of David's future before Mrs. Hunt, and her decision in the matter had been promised for that night. Should she decline to help, the anxious deaconess felt that her resources were at an end. At last she entered and Mis Raynor read refusal in her handsome face before the words came, courteous but final. "I have thought seriously about your request, Miss Raynor, and though I dislike to refuse you, I must say that I do not feel it my duty to comply with it. If he were not such a bad boy, we might consider it, but with his character, we do not think it at all advisable to take him."

"But he isn't a bad boy, Mrs Hunt," the deaconess insisted. She had studied him carefully, and recognized the promise of good in his character. "He has just 'come up' on the street and has known no other life. If he could have a chance now in a good home, it would change his whole future."

Mrs. Hunt shook her head. "It would be unwise for us to attempt it," she said. "Any child would be a responsibility, but one of this type—no, I really cannot think of it." She moved on to her seat, while the deaconess, though keenly disappointed, smiled and shook hands with the next comer just as if little David were not "on her heart."

It was the evening of the Christmas concert and though still early, the church was filling rapidly. Two little waifs from the mission Sunday School slipped into the pew with Mrs. Hunt and sat gazing in rapt admiration at the decorations.

Presently the Primary Department filed in to their raied seats on the platform and Mrs. Hunt's face lit with pride as she distinguished her sister's little daughter Bernice among them. She was herself childless. The youngsters at her side began talking in low tones.

"There's Mary Holt."

"An' Warner Stetson; he goes to my school now."

"I see Bernice Davidson."

"Where?"

"Right on the front row. My, ain't she pretty!"

"Um—don't you wish we could be fixed up like that, Nell? Say, I wonder how it would seem to live to her house. Her father ain't ever drunk, I bet."

"I s'pose it must be about like Heaven all the time," was the answer with a little sigh. Such a state on earth was beyond comprehension to the midgets.

There was silence for a moment. Mrs. Hunt, her attention drawn to them by their mention of her niece's name, scanned the children with interest.

"Nell." The little face was drawn with perplexity as the child attacked the great problem of the ages.

"Uh-uh."

"I wonder why it is that some kids are born pretty like Bernie an' have fathers and mothers who love 'em an' have everything, seems like, while we never have nothin' pretty and get knocked 'round 'most any way. Miss Benson says God loves everybody, but if He does, wouldn't you think He'd see that they all got some sort of a chance?"

"If I was God, I would," the other replied gravely. "There, that's the man who plays the organ, Annie. Him with a red pink."

"A chance"—the very word Miss Raynor had used. But did not everyone have a chance? Mrs. Hunt had never seriously considered the matter; it had seemed to her that the boys and girls who were really worth while would rise above their surroundings. But it certainly must be hard. Her eyes rested upon Bernice with her sweet face and dainty dress then turned to the poorly clad children by her side. A vision of Bernice with a drunken father came to her and she shuddered. Yet those who were as truly God's little ones with as inherent a right to normal childhood—who would be to blame if their lives were wrongly directed? As things were now, they certainly had not an equal chance with other better favored children. And this David, of whom Miss Raynor had spoken, had never known any other life. Perhaps God intended David's "chance" to come through her.

At the close of the program, she sought the deaconess. "I may have made that decision a bit hasty, Miss Raynor," she whispered. "I'll talk the matter over again with Mr. Hunt; maybe we can provide for your semi-delinquent David after all."

That was a year ago in the Hunt household to-day a boy is learning a new life; he is breaking away from old habits and old associations; before him lies a future bright with hope. David is having his chance.

How many boys and girls there are who needs homes opened to them, only God and the various workers know. The childhood of the land, her young manhood and womanhood, constitute the nation's hope. Shall we allow her rich treasure to be literally thrown away on the city streets for want of that protection and influence which makes the highest type of manliness and womanliness possible? Phillips Brooks has said: "He who helps a child, helps humanity with a distinctness and an immediateness which no other help given to human creatures in any other stage of their human life can possibly give again."—Deaconess Advocate.

—Church Family Newspaper states that King George has caused the following letter to be sent by his private secretary, Lord Knollys, to F. C. Brading, secretary of the Scripture Gift mission:

"Dear Sir: I have had the honor of submitting your letter of the 15th instant to the king and am directed to inform you in reply is quite true that he promised Queen Alexandra as long ago as 1881 that he would read a chapter of the Bible daily, and that he has ever since adhered to this promise.

"Yours very truly, Knollys."

—A dollar a day for 40 years has been the contribution to his church of C. H. Knights, a member of the Englewood Baptist church in Chicago. The fact is told by the Rev. Smith T. Ford, pastor of the church after Mr. Knights had laid his 14,600th dollar on the contribution plate.

Mr. Knights began his systematic giving of a dollar a day to the church while he was a young man in his twenties and on a modest salary. He never allowed anything to interfere with the daily allowance.

—At the recent session of an annual conference the writer heard one of the old preachers who began his ministry over 60 years ago and who has served a large number of the poorest charges on the smallest pay, say that he had never served a hard work in his life. That man's faith and courage had softened the hard places and he was happy in service. A few years ago the same man was appointed to a little charge in a far way swamp section of the state, and when some one expressed sympathy for him in going to such a work he smiled and said: "Brother, I am glad to go. I shall find the sinful son of some good mother there and I shall try to help save him." And no one who knows that godly man, now superannuated but still happy, can doubt the utmost and absolute sincerity of his words.—Greensboro Daily News.

—Miss Hattie Harris, of Oxford, wins prize No. 7 with this sentence, containing all the letters of the alphabet:

"J. W. Zatch quickly vexed my big, fat, strong pig."

—Friends of Bro. E. M. Witty showed their appreciation of his faithfulness as superintendent of the Moriah Sunday School by sending him the M. P. Herald.

—Two of our preachers conspired to get married the same day and carried out their conspiracy yesterday. They are Revs. T. A. Williams and S. M. Needham. They married sisters, daughters of a minister in Fosythe whose name we have not learned. Rev. D. R. Williams was the officiating clergyman on this interesting occasion.

—Rev. J. A. Ledbetter writes from Pleasant Hill, N. C., his new post office. He is favorably impressed with the place.

—Rev. T. A. Williams shoud be addressed at Thomasvile, N. C.

—Rev. H. E. Waldrop gets his letters at Cherryville, N. C., R. D. 3.

—The Fifth National Corn Exposition is to be held at Columbia, January 27-February 8, 1913.

"Pa, what's a genius?"

"Ask your mother, she married one."

"Why, I didn't know ma had been married twice."—Houston Post.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:29 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special. Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte connecting for Atlanta and points South.

4:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

4:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 236 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p.m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR, NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche.

DENTIST.
Office in Benbow Arcade, S. Elm St.,
Rooms 348 and 350,
Greensboro, N. C.
Office phone 29, Residence phone 22.

HEADACHES.

How to Cure Them and How Not to Cure Them.

A headache is a popular disorder. Nearly everybody now and then disgraces himself with one. A headache is not a disease in itself. It is just a danger signal. It is Nature's fog horn, announcing shoals near by. It is usually a sign of some functional disorder, something gone wrong. Right then is the latest date for filing an inquiry with yourself to find out the cause of the disturbance in the "upper story." Most headaches are easily preventable. The cause will usually be found if we will sit down and analyze our acts for the last twenty-four or thirty-six hours. It will frequently be found to be due to something we have eaten or drunk, causing slight digestive disturbance or constipation. Working in close, poorly ventilated rooms, worry, anxiety, and too close mental application are also frequent causes of headache.

If every one would play fair with himself and refuse to treat his headache until he had first made an earnest, honest effort to locate the real seat of trouble, and then remove that cause and resolve to sin no more, we would have fewer drug habitues, dope fiends, coffee topers, and Cocoa-Cola drinkers.

To cure a headache don't try the drug route. Beware of the get-well-quick schemes. They are dangerous, particularly for weak hearts. After you locate the cause, endeavor to apply the remedy in the opposite direction. If it is indigestion, give your stomach a rest for a meal or two. If it is constipation, relieve the situation and then don't stop up your plumbing system again with such foods. Eat more fruits and vegetables and drink more water. If it is the lack of exercise and ventilation, take a walk in the open air. Walk slowly at first and increase your speed a little as the pain subsides.

If the headache is still rebellious, take a hot foot bath and apply a cloth wrung from cold water to the head, neck and face. If it is very severe, apply an ice bag to the base of the brain. Mustard plasters applied to the forehead and back of the neck constitute counter irritation and drive away the excess blood. Care should be taken that they do not blister.

NNervous headaches yield readily to the soothing efforts of rubbing. If possible, get some one else to rub from the middle of the forehead backward across the temples gently for a few minutes.

There is undoubtedly an unprecedented opportunity for a forward movement in China. Antagonistic forces are going to put up a fierce challenge to the hosts of God in that land, worldliness, materialism, science without Christianity, commercialism, etc. What a crisis is on there! Are we going to be wise and have understanding of the times to know what we ought to do? Christianity is responsible for the climax in China, and as we see the old walls crumbling to the ground are we going to lay down our weapons? We dare not stop. We must go on and finish the task God has laid upon us."—Selected.

—The significant statement is being made concerning the local churches in Hirosaki, Japan, over which the late Bishop Honda was once pastor, that during its thirty years of existence it has sent out sixty preachers into the work. Many of them are among the prominent leaders of the Japan Methodist Church.—Selected.

—President Taft, it is announced, has accepted the Kent Professorship of Law in Yale University.

W. F. MEDEARIS J. F. PEEBLES W. L. PEEBLES
MEDEARIS-PEEBLES FURNITURE COMPANY.
Complete House Furnishers.
STOVES AND RANGES
Cash or Credit.
109 & 111 E. Market St.
Phone 823. Greensboro, N. C.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.
Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.
206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

OVER 65 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.
Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

ANNUAL CONFERENCE OFFICERS.

President—Rev. C. A. Cecil, 117 Thurston St., High Point, N. C.

Secretary—Rev. N. G. Bethea, Henderson, N. C.

PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENTS.

Piedmont, ... Dec. 24.
Lebanon, ... Dec. 28.
Yadkin College, ...Jan. 4, 5.
Richland, ...Jan. 18, 19.
Randleman, ... Jan. 25, 26.
Thomasville,....Wednesday night Jan. 8.
Reidsville, ...Friday, Jan. 10.
Guilford Ct.....Jan. 11 to 13.

Pastors will please notice from my notes from the various fields, I state my claims met or not met and this will be continued during the year.

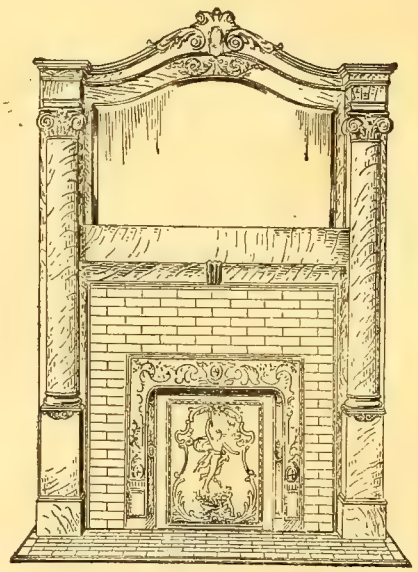
C. A. Cecil.

NOTICE TO PASTORS.

The minutes of Conference are now ready to be sent out. Let each pastor sell them and send the proceeds to Rev. N. G. Bethea, Secretary of Conference, as ordered by Conference.

C. A. Cecil.

—We saw Bro. J. E. Stafford in St. Leo's Hospital last Sunday. He was resting well and hoped to be able to go home in a week. His account of the accident differs from that published in the papers. He was in the bottom of the well with Mr. Brown engaged in digging out the tamping of a charge of giant powder that had failed to explode. He thinks that a spark from the steel igniting a stream of powder left in the crevices of the rock caused the explosion. He became unconscious and remained so for some time. Mr. Brown seems not to have last consciousness, for he caught the rope let down to them with his foot and was drawn up hanging head downward. A man went down and got Bro. Stafford out who was beginning to regain consciousness. His left hand was found to be so badly injured that the physicians amputated the arm below the elbow. The next day he and Mr. Brown were brought in automobiles to the hospital. Both were strong men: those not strong could scarcely have endured what they went through. It was reported that Mr. Brown would be blind, but Dr. Banner hopes to save one of his eyes. Bad as the accident was, one can easily see that it might have been far worse.



Mantels, Grates, Tiles and Builders' Hardware.

If you intend to build a new house, or to improve an old one, don't fail to get our catalogue, showing the latest designs in mantels, grates, tiles and builder's hardware. We have designs to suit every style of architecture. It will pay you to write us.

ODELL MANTEL COMPANY,
(Odell Hardware Co., Owners.)
Greensboro, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.
Absolute Security for Your Savings
Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.
This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.
Greensboro Loan and Trust Company
J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W. M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE—CO-EDUCATIONAL AND NON-SECTARIAN.

Offers young men and young women in the Methodist Protestant Church exceptional advantages for higher college training. Courses offered leading to the degrees of A. B., Ph. B., L. I., Pe. B., and A. M. Certificate courses offered in Commerce, Music, and Art. Diplomas also granted in Music and Art.

Elon College is situated in the hill country in the Piedmont section of North Carolina. No sickness, healthful climate, pure deep well water. All the buildings heated by steam and lighted by electricity and supplied with water. A large gymnasium for men in process of erection.

Terms are very reasonable. Cost of all expenses ranges from $137 to $187 a year.

The Young Ladies' Home provides for board at cost for young ladies who wish to cheapen their living. This home is under the management of the College and the best possible care is taken of the girls.

The Boys' Boarding Club offers young men an opportunity of living at actual cost. By these boarding arrangements the cost of board and room should be reduced to about half the cost in private homes.

Any person interested should write foa Catalogue, Bulletins, and other information to

W. A. HARPER, LL. D., PRESIDENT,
Elon College, North Carolina.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XIX. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, DECEMBER 5, 1912. NUMBER 3.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.
Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can remit diecrtly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

WANTED—A NEW CHURCH NAME.

From the report of the meeting of the committees on union between our church and the church of the United Brethren in Christ we note that the name agreed upon is "THE UNITED PROTESTANT CHURCH (Composed of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ and the Methodist Protestant Church)."

It is a matter for rejoicing that they were able to agree upon any kind of a name. Desirable unions have many times been thwarted by a stubborn insistence on some particular name, as though the name were more important than the work of the church.

We are not going to urge any objection whatever to the name proposed or to any other name that may be agreed upon as a reason against union, but while the matter is not finally settled it seems in order to cast about for the best name available.

The name proposed will be objectionable to some because of its great length. When you are asked to what church you belong, you will find no special pleasure in saying, I am a member of The United Protestant Church (Composed of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ and the Methodist Protestant Church). Even if you abbreviate to initials and say —I am a member of the U. P. C. C. O. T. C. O. T. U. B. I. C. A. T. M. P. Church, the time taken to tell is considerable and the information conveyed not very complete.

It was of course not to be expected that either of the old names would be retained unaltered as a name for the enlarged church. We somewhat regret that the committee did not feel free to cast both names away and seek a new name brief enough and appropriate enough.

Between the two old names we feel a preference for our name because of its brevity and for their name because it better expresses the essential spirit of the two churches—that of fraternity. We would be glad to see a name adopted that would express the thought of brotherhood. That is our great distinguishing spirit. In other churches the fact cannot be disguised that the church is essentially a set of rulers and subjects. We are a band of brethren. No form of organization should ever be accepted that will make us anything else. And we believe this fact constitutes our strongest ground of appeal to men to come into our fellowship—we are brethren in Christ.

And why should we choose a name that indicates an attitude of protest against the ways of other Christians? Is not that sort of thing a little out of date in this age of liberal Christianity? Would it not be better, instead of protesting against customs that do not seem to us the best, simply to show to others a more excellent way? Let us have a name that advertises our virtues rather than other people's faults, a name short enough to repeat and euphonious enough to hear.

Who will suggest such a name?

ABUSING THE ASSESSMENT PRIVILEGE.

In the church or at least in most churches there is no taxing power. There is no officer or set of officers who can say to the individual, You must pay so much or be excommunicated. When the individual joins the church he agrees to pay as God gives him ability. This agreement and his obligation to God bind him, but his fellow church members have no authority to decide for him how much he should pay to carry out his agreement and to discharge his obligation to God. But the liberal church member is willing to refer the matter of individual contributions in some cases at least to a committee who after investigating the need can estimate the amount of money required and who can with approximate fairness apportion the amount to be raised among all who are to be contributors.

But a committee or board to whom has been given by general consent this prerogative of laying an assessment may abuse its high privilege. It may lay an assessment much in excess of the needs of the work and far in advance of the ability of the members to pay. When it does so trouble results. Sometimes the thought is that not near all will be raised and we would better call for much more than will really be needed. Such a course seems to have been pursued in two or three cases recently. Our own Conference failed to undertake the full amount of its assessment and we find our M. E. brethren in their Fayetteville conference facing the same difficulty. The following preamble and resolution were signed by eight of the nine prsiding elders; but they were finally withdrawn out of respect to the oppostion.

"Whereas the combined assessments for benevolent causes outside of the individual charges has reached an amount in excess of 50 per cent of the salaries; and

"Whereas the last general conference very largely increased the assessments and the churches have uot yet been able to adjust themselves to the increase; and

"Whereas any increase of assessment at this time in all probability will fail to increase the total amount raised and will but disturb the equitable balance now existing between theese sacred causes; and

"Whereas the careful study of the field at large convinces us that a further increase at this time will tend to check the hopeful tendency to a large and liberal free will offering on the part of our rural churches (which must inevitably be our support in any really adequate advance), make progress in self-support on the part of our mission charges impossible, and tax some at least of our charges to a point of open rebellion, therefore

"Resolved, That the different boards of this conference are instructed, on making their assessments for the coming year, in no case to make the total assessmment for any board greater than it was during the year just passed, and that they make appeal for much larger amount, which they urgently need and which our people are as a whole well able to furnish, to the judgment and liberality of our people by making plans to present their causes and to solicit free will offerings in excess of the assessments.''

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Rev. R. M. Andrews has a second daughter, aged a few days.

—Rev. T. M. Johnson has decided to live at Tabernacle, we are informed.

—Mr. Crowson again becomes editor of the Burlington News.

—Rev. W. R. Loudermith is teaching in addition to his work as preacher and pastor.

—Rev. J. F. Dosier stopped in Greensboro for a day on his way from Conference.

—Rev. W. D. Fogleman went to Mizpah last Sunday to meet his first appointment on Haw River Ct.

—Rev. R. M. Andrews came to Greensboro last week to arrange for thebeginning of his work as pastor of Grace church.

—Rev. T. J. Ogburn preached a Thanksgiving sermon at Grace church last Sunday. He is busy moving to Asheboro, his new field, this week.

—Mr. Benjamin Clarida who lived near Gibsonville and who was a brother of Bro. W. F. Clarida came to his death by an accidental shot from his own gun, caused by a dog, while hunting rabbits. How unexpectedly death comes sometimes.

—Herbert Ogburn was home from Baltimore last Sunday. He is a medical student in John Hopkins University. He did some important work for Greensboro physicians with instruments brought from Baltimore while he was home during the summer.

—Miss Ivy Lillian Trogdon, daughter of Bro. I. L. Trogdon, of Tabernacle, is to be married to Mr. Thomas Garland Smith December the nineteenth, nineteen hundred and twelve, three o'clock p. m., in Tabernacle M. P. Church. This we believe is the first marriage in the church there. At least, we recall no other.

—Rev. W. F. Ashburn, feeling the need of rest, has taken no pastoral charge this year. He is living at Newton, N. C. We hope for him complete recovery of his former vigor. He is too valuable a worker to be out long. He writes that the brethren have his prayer and sympathy in the work.

—Bro. Cecil in his first paper as president calls attention to some of the prime conditions of success in the work of the church. The importance of them is not always realized, and we will do well to give the attention Bro. Cecil asks to these things.

—Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk brought his wife to the hospital last Sunday. She underwent a serious operation on Monday which she stood well. Bro. Lowdermilk is hopeful of her early recovery.

—Bro. W. W. Hunter and family recently enjoyed a visit from Mrs. Hunter's father, Mr. Crews, from near Kernersville. He was at Grace Church last Sunday.

—Rev. R. M. Andrews expects to preach at Grace Church next Sunday. He was in our city one day this week in quest of the parsonage key.

—Bro. Suits began his work in Concord last sunday. He was pleased with his new field and enters upon the work hopefully.

—Among the visitors at Grace Church last Sunday was Mrs. Cheek, formerly Miss Lilian Thompson, of Chestnut Ridge.

—Bro. Ogburn had an unusually large congregation last Sunday to hear his Thanksgiving sermon.

—President-elect Wilson was once a student in Davidson College, N. C.

—As a result of the war between Turkey and Italy, Italy gets Tripoli.

—G. L. Johnson, father of the Progressive candidates for vice president, did not vote for his own son. ''My boy is on the wrong side of the fence,'' he said.

—Governor Marshall, of Indiana, who has been chosen for vice president of the United States when a small boy, attended one of the Douglas-Lincoln debates and sat on the lap of each while the other spoke.

—Nine states have given the ballot to women. These are Arizona, Kansas, Oregon, Washington, California, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, and Idaho. The first three went for woman suffrage in the recent election. The advocates of equal suffrage say they will continue till every state in the Union is won.

—The income tax amendment has been approved by 32 states and disapproved by four; namely, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Utah. Only four more state are required to make the amendment law. The following states have not yet voted: Delaware, Florida, Louisiana, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New Mexico, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Vermont, Virginia, West Virginia and Wyoming.

PRIZE NUMBER SEVEN.

To the one who constructs the shortest sentence containing all the letters of the aphabet. This should be in by December 20th.

Recent prize winners are Miss Garnet Michauz and Mr. Vance Garrett. (Prizes will be mailed soon.)

THE BAPTIST BIBLE.

This name, no doubt, will be that by which the book will commonly, and properly, be known, since it is issued by the American Baptist Publication Society, authorized to undertake the work by the Saratoga Baptist Convention of 1883. It is the product of Baptist scholars, and has for its chief distinguishing feature the translation of the Greek word ''baptism'' by ''immersion'' in all cases. On the title page, however, it is called ''An Improved Edition,, of the Holy Bible ''based in part on the Bible Union version.'' This version, prepared mainly by Prof. T. J. Conant, included only the New Testament, although Professor Conant, before his death, had made a beginning at the Old, finishing four books. The American Bible union was formed by Baptist seceders from the American Bible Society, and issued this New Testament in 1862, with a second revised edition in 1865. Our copy, which we have often consulted with profit, is marked 10th thousand. It was a fine piece of work, anticipating many of the best things in the Revised Version of 1881 but immersion always appeared instead of baptism, and we read about John the Immerser instead of John the Baptist.

The present undertaking was set on foot in 1889, the different sections being assigned to Baptist scholars, and a third edition of the Bible Union New Testament was issued in 1891. The New Testament in the volume now just completed is the fourth edition of that work first put out fifty years ago. One of the main differences is—perhaps it may be regarded in the nature of a compromise—that now the ordinary transliterated form of the Greek words, ''baptize,'' ''baptism,'' etc., appears first in the verses, followed immediately, in parenthesis, by the translations ''immerse,'' ''immersion,'' etc., with a note saying: ''Both forms are to be regarded as part of the text of this version, and either or both may be used.'' It will be a matter of no little interest to ascertain, as time goes on, which rendering will be preferred in most Baptist pulpits, and what amount of popularity this Improved Edition may secure. It is scarcely in the line with the strong tendency of today towards church federation and the things which make for Christian union. It will help to build the barriers instead of reducing them, and postpone the time when there can be hearty co-operation among all the forces of Protestant Christendom. We shall have three Bibles—the Roman Catholic, the Protestant, and the Baptist—which seems a pity.

However, apart from this intrusion of a sectarian contention—with which, of course, we cannot sympathize—scarce anything but praise can be spoken of the volume. It has many admirable features and many superior renderings. The most prominent of the former is the careful avoidance of so-called "sacred style," as shown in the archaic and obsolete ending, "eth." We have, for example, in all cases "love" and "lead" in place of "loveth" and "leadeth.", which brings the word of life, it seems to us more closely home to the heart and mind of the reader, giving increased reality and and vigor. An effort has been made in other directions to modernize the style, bringing it a little nearer the "Twentieth Century New Testament," which, we believe, is a gain. We have, for instance, the "letters" of Paul always in place of "epistles," retained even by the American Revised Version. Another improvement over the American Revised Version is the putting of large portions of the prophetical books (wherever the utterances are poetry) into the poetical form of print.

There are no marginal refrences, so that the page appears more like that of other books. There are many notes at the bottom, chiefly textual. But there is a decidedly new departure in the insertion of many notes, some of them considerably extended, which offer explanations, a little in the commentary method. They are a very decided help to the understanding of the Word, and of course might easily be much multiplied. Our space permits us to cite only a very few of these: On Judges 4:21 it says, concerning Jael's deed: "Neither the act itself nor Deborah's approval is to be judged by the rules of our higher civilization." A lengthened explanation is given, at Joshua 10, where, by a bold poetic figure, the sun and the moon are spoken of as if they were standing still. In Isaiah 23:13, where the American Version has "land of the Chaldeans," this version substitutes "Canaanites," and explains in a note why "Chaldeans" must be wrong, although it is the accepted text. Under Luke 23:33, where it renders "A Skull," instead of the usual Calvary, taken from the Latin Vulgate and having the same meaning, it shows that "exactness of translation compels this rendering."

We must make mention of a few other places, out of many, where the Improved Edition shows real improvement and manifest superiority over the American Revised Version: 1 Cor. 13:8 "Now abide faith, hope, love, these three," instead of "now abideth." Matt. 28:30: "I am with you all the days to the end of the age," instead of "always even unto the end of the world." John 4:24: "God is spirit," instead of "a spirit." Acts 14:-22: "I perceive that ye are very much given to the worship of divinities," instead of "very religious." Matt. 6:34: "The narrow will have its own anxiety," instead of, "The morrow will be anxious for itself." Isa. 1:13: "I cannot bear iniquity," instead of, "I cannot away with iniquity."

In some other places the Improved Edition, following the former Conant Edition, has failed to catch the true thought which the American Revised Version correctly brings out. In Heb. 12:17, for example, it retains the old "he found no place of repentance," where the better reading is, "he found no place for a change of mind in his father." and in 1 Cor. 4.4 it gives us, "For I am conscious to myself of nothing," where surely it should be, "For I know nothing against myself."

In another class of passages it is probably right, but its rendering will not, perhaps, commend itself so generally to readers, who cling, naturally but not wisely it may be, to the familiar words. This version ventures to substitute "happy" for "blessed" in Matt. 5, Psalm 1, Psalm 119, and other places: "Happy the poor in spirit." It gives the strictly literal translation of "Praise ye Jah," instead of Hallelujah, which is the transferred Hebrew, in the final Psalms; also, "Jah is my strength and song." It transfers to the text many of the renderings which are put in the margin of the American Revised Version, and frequently they seem to us better, as in John 3:3, "born from above." In Gen. 3:-7-21, it has "the man" instead of "Adam," but the regular proper name appears in Gen. 4:25:, 5:1, etc. It renders the Greek word "Hades" by "the underworld," instead of transferring it, as the Revised Version does, and gives "infernal regions" for "hell" in 2 Pet. 2:4; but "hell' appears in Matt. 5:29-30, and in a few other places.

We must not make further citations, although we should much like to do so, for we have scanned the pages with much satisfaction. They give every evidence of careful, scholarly work. The translators have been able to benefit by examining all that has been previously done, and have not been hampered apparently by the necessity of getting a majority vote from among a large number of men. While this fact diminishes the authority of their production, it lends it additional freshness and boldness.—Zion's Herald.

HOW THE GARDEN OF EDEN LOOKS TO-DAY.

By Frederick Simpich, U. S. Consulor Service.

Forty miles west of old Bagdad, in the vast level valley of the historic Euphrates, near Hit of the Hittites—lies the traditional Garden of Eden. Such is the interesting conclusion of Sir William Willcocks, the famous Egyptian engineer and Bible student, and many other authoities agree with him.

"Out of Eden came a river which watered a garden, and from thence it was parted and became four rivers." And these four rivers, known in Bible days as the Pison, Gihon, Hiddekel and Euphrates—the ancient "River of Babylon"—have been identified by Sir William.

It was while studying, surveying and mapping Chaldea previous to starting work on the giant irrigation scheme planned for Mesopotamia, that Willcocks became convinced that the real Garden of Eden lay in the region described.

The Garden of Eden lies away over in Turkish Arabia, too far from the beaten tourist trail to draw many sightseers. Probably not a dozen white travelers see it in a whole year. To reach Chaldea, the safest and surest route lies through the Suez, over Pharaoh's bones in the Red Sea, through the Straits of Bab-el-Mandeb, up the hot Persian Gulf, and thence five hundred miles up the winding Tigris and Euphrates.

Finding myself not long ago at Bagdad (old home of Sindbad the Sailor), I decided to see for myself just what Eden looks like to-day, and to get acquainted with the people who now inhabit the old traditional homestead of Adam and Eve. I wanted to see Babylon, too, and the excavated palace of King Nebuchadnezzar —where the handwriting appeared on the wall—and I wanted to get a picture of the reputed Tower of Babel, which still lifts its battered head above the flat, empty plain of Mesopotamia.

So I crossed the odd pontoon bridge that spans the yellow Tigris at Bagdad, slipped through the massive West Gate, passed the supposed tomb of Zobedia, and mingled with the pilgrim horde on the great Shia caravan trail that stretches down from Turkestan and Persia, crosses Chaldea, and enters the golden-domed mosques at Kerbela and Nedjef. Millions have passed this way in the centuries, bringing with them the salted and dried bodies of their dead for burial in the sacred soil outside the walls of their holy Shia cities. Two hundred thousand mummified human bodies have passed through Bagdad in a single year, borne by these Shia devotees. For miles along this strange highway, our "arabanah," drawn by four galloping mules, passed these weird death caravans, silent and mysterious. The bodies of departed relatives were carried in oblong bundles, lashed to the backs of pack animals Veiled women rode in queer, cage-like boxes, slung one on each side of a mule or camel. The men, clad in the round, hard caps and padded clothes peculiar to Persians, marched behind, prodding any lagging donkey or camel.

For miles out of Bagdad, not a human habitation, a tree, or any living green thing broke the empty solitude of the dry, flat plain. Yet the whole desert was marked off like the checkerboard with the ruined, half-filled canals which in ancient times watered all Mesopotamia, and made it "the cradle of the race and the granary of the world." Here and there, wind-torn mounds, glistening in the sun with broken tiles and fragments of glass, showed the sites of once prosperous cities, whose very names are now forgotten. In all the forty-miles journey from Bagdad to the Euphrates, we saw but one human habitation—the mud-walled khan of Mamoudieh, built beside a desert well.

It was late in the afternoon when a mirage-like fringe of date palms raised themselves from the western horizon, marking the banks of the Euphrates and the edge of the Garden of Eden. At nightfall we reached the Arab river town called Mussayeb. Hungry jackals wailed in the tumbledown cemetery outside the village. Redolent camels and goats crowded the narrow bazaar streets; odors of Bedouin cooking arose, and on the flat, Moorish roof of a coffee-house a tom-tom beat and an indolent dancing-girl amused a group of Bagdad Jews and Armenian wool-buyers. The muezzin's call to prayers awaked the town at sunrise.

This, then, was Eden! But how different from the paradise of Adam's halcyon days! What ruin, what wreckage wars and the ravages of ages have wrought! Yet what romance, what tragic events have been staged in this remote nook of the world! Scores of giants in history have passed this way since the episode of Eve and the serpent. Cyrus, Tamerlane, Ghengiz Khan, Alexander, Herodotus, Marco Polo, all famous in the annals of the East, have invaded this Garden of Eden. Just to the north ran the old wall of the Medes. Farther up the Tigris basin stands ancient Nineveh, where Layard and others unearthed so many wonders, and whence came the famous cuneiform tablets, confirming the Bible story of creation, the fall of man, and the flood. Northeast of Eden lies ruined Opis, once the world's center of wealth, and the site of the great dam which irrigated all Mesopotamia. And when the invading hordes distroyed this dam, all canals ran dry, crops withered, the famishing people perished or fled to the hills, and the ruin of Babylonia began.

Is it to restore this lost fertility, to give back a rich, productive Garden of Eden to modern man and a land-hungry world, that one of the greatest irrigation schemes ever planned is now being carried out here in Mesopotamia. Millions of acres of rich land, idle for ages, highly adapted to cottongrowing, grain and fruit, are to be reclaimed. Sir John Jackson and Sir William Willcocks—it was the latter who built the great Nile dam at Assouan and won fame in Egypt—have been engaged by the Turkish Government to direct this important work. Nearly $100,000,000 is required to complete this giant enterprise, which is already well underway. Willcocks says the ancients were scientific irrigators, and that all he has to do is to clean out many of their old canals and ditches, which will answer perfectly for use in his new system. At the British engineers' camp below Mussayeb, I saw four thousand Arab workmen busily digging a new channel for the Euphrates. A concrete-mixing machine from Chicago and tons of American interlocking steel piles are being used to build a great dam in the bottom of this false channel. Already the price of land in the Garden of Eden, and as far away as Bagdad and Amarah, has risen on account of the progress of this reclamation work, The Arab, under foreign guidance, makes a good laborer. It was only when the British introduced a steam engine—the first ever seen in Eden—that a few of the Bedouins became nervous. Desert sheiks came from miles around to see the strange smoke-horse with fire in it."

Among these wild deserts Arab life is as primitive as in Abraham's time. Sheep are still slain to seal a vow. The salt or bread covenant is observed, and when a man dies his tent is torn down and destroyed. Old names like Joseph, Moses, Alexander, etc., are still in common use among Arabs, though pronounced "Yusuf," "Musa," and "Skandar." To divorce his wife a man may repeat the formula "Ent telek" three times; usually saying it once makes the woman behave, and its final repetition is not necessary. The "evil eye" superstition is common, and the first injunction given a visiting foreigner by experienced Arabian travelers is that he must not point at animals or persons in Arab settlements. Arabs say a man gifted with this malign power can look at a bird flying in the air and that it will drop dead; that if he chooses to cast his wicked spell on a camel, it may go lame, or a child so selected will be struck blind. None of the lower classes can read or write, but the Arab is noted for his ready wit and his habit of speaking in allegory.

From the engineer's camp I follow the course of the old river of Babylon down to the famous city of Nebuchadnezzar, where the German Oriental Society is digging up the records of four thousand years ago. I saw the famous stone lion; the basrelief of Nebuchadnezzar himself, with his quaint, curly beard; the stone goose which was the standard of weight in Babylon grocery stores; the odd tribe of kinky-tailed cats; the thousands of queer dishes, urns, vases, utensils, figure of men and beasts, bath tubs, bowl-shape coffins, and cuneiform tablets which have been unearthed by the careful Germans. They showed me the magic name of Nebuchadnezzar stamped on numerous bricks, and I walked through the very banquet hall where, peradventure, the handwriting came on at the feast of Belshazzar and "a thousand of his lords." On the perfectly preserved walls of the palace I beheld the strange figures of mytheological beasts, and the everlasting bull, which held a high place in Babylonian worship. Under German guidance a host of Arabs have toiled—toiled for a quarter of a century—digging carefully, as they dig in Pompeii, not to crack or ruin the priceless treasures which lie buried everywhere. And each day brings some new surprise.

From the mounds of Babylon, you may look off for miles in every direction—the view that led Nebuchadnezzar to boast of his great city. To the west is Ezekiel's tomb, to the south the Tower of Babel, to the east the great arch of Ctesiphon and the tomb of Salman Pak, private barber to the Prophet Mahomet. In Nebuchadnezzar's time the plain about was a waving mass of verdure, grain and fruit; canals of water traversed it everywhere, and here and there cities dotted the landscape. No wonder he was proud!

It is to reclaim this historic land, to make the Garden of Eden over again, that the irrigation works and the famous German-Bagdad Railway are being built.

Now a wave of modernism sweeps the long, changeless East. As it reached out to transform China, so the long arm of progress is reaching out to Turkish Arabia. From the Mediterranean the inevitable railway to link Europe with India is stretching forth. Already trains are running on its western length, and the German engineers have surveyed it into Bagdad. The historic, untamed Euphrates is to be bridged at last, and Europe's dream of a railway to Persian Gulf is about to be realized. Even an aeroplane race from Constantinople to Bombay, crossing the Garden of Eden enroute, is now being discussed in the press of Europe. Soon excursion trains may be run to the traditional Garden of Eden, souvenir postals of the Tower and the famous stone lion may be sold in curio shops at New Babylon, and another of the world's once inaccessible regions will echo to the whistle of the engine.

Such is Eden today—vast as the basin of the Mississippi, and just as productive, if irrigated. Who can say that in a few years the Garden may not blossom again, a paradise as beautiful as when it staged the world's first romance?—The Christian Herald.

OUR FOREIGN MISSIONARY WORK.

Did You Read It?

The illustrated appeal published in last week's paper was intended for every reader. The two pictures showed some of the effects of the great storm which damaged all our college building in Nagoya. The repairs will cost more than one thousand dollars, and the Board appeals to our pastors for a brief statement to their people, and that an offering be received to meet this extraordinary demand.

If special gifts are not received for these repairs, the Board will be involved in debt to that amount, as regular receipts are needed for the regular expenses of the different departments.

I plead for a prompt and generous response to this urgent call. That this year great educational work must be carried on, the 397 young men enrolled must be sheltered, and the repairs are, doubtless, completed ere this, but the money to pay for the same has not been contributed, despite my several appeals. The Board can only turn to our pastors and people for relief at this critical stage, and I hope that man contributions will be received at once.

Of Vital Importance.

It is our plain duty to help the young in our Sunday schools to develop the spirit of benevolence, and to appy their zeal, energy and means in the church's activities.

Annually we have asked our superintendents to teach and emphasize the true idea of Christmas—God gave His Son to be the world's Savior, and that He commands us to make Him known to all peoples. And that they may give some expression to their appreciation of His gift and all which flows therefrom each school is asked to make a Christmas offering for our foreign missionary work in Japan.

We owe them this training, and the Board needs their aid to avert financial embarrassment caused by lack of income to meet the successful growth of the work, and the need of sending out another missionary etc.

We need the cooperation of every school in the denomination. Last year some schools voted to dispense with their usual Christmas treat, and voted the cost thereof to the Board's work. Others voted a sum out of their treasury, and many exerted themselves to secure a large offering.

Please, note that the Board does not publish a Christmas Service, as that matter is left with each school to determine for itself.

For Our C. E. Societies.

The C. E. Societies are urgently requested to make a special Christmas offering which will apply on the support of their missionary, Rev. E. J. Obee, who is to return to Japan early next year, and that involves additional expenditures.

The Societies of the Maryland Conference are earnestly asked to make an offering also at Christmas for the support of their Missionary, Rev. L. Layman. The whole amount promised ought to be raised, and this will afford a favorable opportunity to aid therein.

More societies ought to send for the missionary service "A Vision" tableaux, Scripture reading, etc., and use it for imparting information, and securing funds for the work.

You Need This.

Brother superintendent, you ought to send to our Book Concern for a copy of "Five Missionary Minutes" and use it in opening or closing your school exercises. It is full of splendid things dealing with missions, and will arouse interest and inspire your young people. 50 cts. a copy Do not forget to get one of the large colored missionary maps of the world for the wall—$3.00, and those six missionary charts on bond paper, $1.00, on cloth-backed paper $2.00. Provide the best things for your school, and work for the largest possible results for the Kingdom.

It Is Still Provoking Serious Thought

Friends are writing about the Board's Annuity Plan which provides for an increase while you live, and, at your death, the money you give the Board will be used in the foreign work. This plan prevents any contest, as often happens with a will, and all expenses, delay, etc., and the giver knows his wishes will be carried out, because, by giving his money to the Board, and receiving the Board's bond which stipulates what interest he is to receive during life, he becomes his own executor, and he also helps to guarantee the future of our foreign missionary enterprise. Detailed information will be gladly furnished to interested parties.

Now Is The Time.

You can benefit your young people, and secure an interested corps of workers if you will organize Mission Study Classes. The pastor, the Sunday school teacher can do this. An evening a week for eight weeks, the book cost 35 cts. a,nd one of practically any land can be secured. Write for a pamphlet "How to Organize a Mission Study Class," sent free to one who will organize a class.

Fred C. Klein,
Cor. Sec.-Treas.
316 N. Charles St., Batlimore, Md.

BULLETIN OF THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S UNION.

It is Kansas City, June 5, 6, 7, and 8, 1913. Our next convention of the Young People's Union has been planted in this splendid western city and is being cultivated by an aggressive committee of which the Rev. W. H. Riley is chairman, and Miss Mildred Holliday, 31st St. and Stewart Ave., is secretary. We are assured of every preparation for a royal reception to all Methodist Protestants. It is for our young people to stand by their leaders in developing a strong program that shall incite to larger plans and effort for the Church and Kingdom. Remember, too, that the "end of the convention is the beginning of the effort." The convention is not an end in itself. It is the annual review. The achievements of the year are rehearsed and out of our successes and failures we determine a line of action for the future.

It is our hope to, give concrete expression to the ideals advanced at the Baltimore convention last May. Some of them are presented as a working policy for the Conference Union and for the individual Sunday schools and C. E. Societies.

We want every conference to have its own Young People's Union. Is your conference organized, and do you hold your conventions statedly at least once a year? If not, why not? Some of our mission conferences may not be able to maintain a union of their own, but wherever possible, it is needed in the interest of expansion and efficiency. If your conference is not organized for business among the young people along these lines, will you please write the undersigned and suggest a way by which we may help?

Another thing: Please bear in mind that we are planning to have every conference represented at Kansas City. Kansas City is beyond the Methodist Protestant center of population, but we must not let the convention suffer on that account. Every conference union can easily provide for the expense of at least one representative. Most unions will have several, no doubt. Will Conference Union officials wage a campaign in the interest of the convention?

We are arranging an efficiency scale by which to measure the various Unions. It is on the basis of the following seven standards:

(1). Complete statistics sent to the Board of Young Peopl's Work by April 15, 1913.

(2). A 10 per cent. gain in new Christian Endeavor Societies.

(3). The proportionate share of $2,-500 contributed by each Conference Union for Missions.

(4). Missionary Instruction and Mission study classes in 50 per cent. of the schools and societies.

(5). The assessment of 5 cts. per member for the Board of Young People's Work paid in full.

6). The Conference Union represented at the denominational conventions at Kansas City, 1913.

(7). Information and agitation for the Methodist Protestant Church.

Crates S. Johnson, Pres.,
Young People's Union.

A QUESTION.

There is a question in my mind that I have been wanting to ask for some time. It has given me much concern. This is the question: How much time should a Christian minister spend in the modern games and worldly amusements in order to become a successful soul-winner and best reflect the image of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ? I ask for information because I want to be a successful soul-winner and reflect the life of my Lord and Master.

Fraternally,
D. A. Braswell.

SOME SUGGESTIONS TO PASTORS AND OFFICIALS.

Pastors should enter their fields of labor as early as possible after the close of Annual Conference, especially those who are assigned to a new charge. The people want to see the new pastor and hear him preach.

The next duty of the preacher is to meet all of his appointments and to be there on time, and his next duty is to preach the word, and feed the flock of God; and this will require reading the Bible, and the study of the word. Paul said to Timothy, "Preach the word; be instant in season, and out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort," etc. Next, the pastor should study the church register in order to know his people and should seek to find out where they live, and find who of them are sick and need a pastoral visit.

Again, he should read and study our church discipline and be able to lead and develop his people as to the law and government of our church. Many other things could be suggested to the pastors; but I stop for this time and turn to the officials.

Dear brethren of the laity, do you realize the responsibility that rests upon you and especially the officials?

See your duties laid down plain and simple in our discipline on pages 125 to 129. Please read and learn your duty and do it. Go to your Quarterly Conference like men, and help your pastor plan, and work for the advancement of your local church, and the charge you may be on, and for the spread of the gospel of Christ, and for the advancement of God's Kingdom on earth. What our Conference needs is more of the spirit of our Master, and more and better leaders, both among the ministry and laity, and may we permit the Lord to make us leaders of men.

Brethren of the various charges, receive the man of God assigned to your work by the Annual Conference, pray for him and work with him, and make him a power for good in your midst.

Go to your first Quarterly Conference, and make both the old and new pastor feel you are going to cooperate with him in his work, and stand by him in every good word and work.

I am aware this communication is unlike any a president of the N. C. Conference has written in twenty-five years, but I am sure some of these things would have helped me if some man out of his experience had spoken out on them.

I will close for this time by saying I am getting in shape to be with some of the brethren in their first quarterly conferences, and shall be glad to attend as many as I can. If any can hold their Conferences on other days and nights than Saturday I can attend more of them, and I want to attend on the new made fields, if the brethren want me, so far as I can.

C. A. Cecil.
High Point, N. C., 117 Thurston St.
December 2, 1912.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS.

We, your committee on Ways and Means, beg to say that we have recommended different plans at different times and finding that the brethren have their differnt plans and times for collections, we therefore recommend the prosecution of such plans on the different fields as are the most effective in teaching the people liberality and also teaching them the importance of supporting the different causes to which we are asked to pay.

After investigating we find that the work being done at the Orphan's Home belongs to the Methodist Protestant denomination, especially the North Carolina Conference, therefore be it resolved,

(1). That we recommend that each pastor see to it that an "Orphan's Home Day" be observed in each church at which time a program suggested by the executive committee of the Woman's Home Missionary Society may be used, the claims of the Orphan's Home be presented and an offering taken, the time for holding the day being left to the quarterly conference.

(2). Believing that it is most important that the children of the church and Sunday school be interested in the Orphan's Home, we recommend that collections be taken once a month in each Sunday school for the benefit of the Orphan's Home.

(3). We recommend the organization of Women's Home Missionary Societies, Young People's Societies, Children's Missionary Bands where it is at all possible, and where it is not possible, that one to three ladies be appointed by the pastor of each church whose duty it shall be to solicit offerings in cash and supplies such as clothing, food and such other things as can be profitably used by the Home; the pastor to report the names of said committee as soon as appointed to the person in charge of the Children's Home.

(4). Resolved, that each church holds a service in the interest of the Children's Home and the collection on Thanksgiving Day, or the previous Sunday, or as near these dates as possible.

(5). That this report be published in the Methodist Protestant Herald in the months of May and October, accompanied by one or more articles under the supervision of the chairman of the Executive Committee of the Women's Home Missionary Society.

(6). That all money and supplies be sent to Miss Etta Auman, Denton, N. C., until further notice be given.

The Executive Committee of the General Conference has assessed the N. C. Conference the following amounts: Foreign Missions $3,600; Home Missions, $3,600; Colleges, $2,160; Young People, $600; Ministerial Education, $960; Seminaries $840; General Conference $120; a total of $11,880; an increase of $6,784. We do not want to go on record as being rebellious.

(1). But in view of the fact that the reports coming up from the pastors of the various charges show a large deficit,

(2). That a number of our best charges are asking for a reduction in their assessment claiming that they cannot well pay the present assessment,

(3). Other charges claiming that if a small reduction could be made it would encourage them to pay in full,

(4). Our own Conference needs more church extension money than we are now raising, and yet we are afraid to increase the assessment for fear it will discourage our people,

(5). We believe that any material increase in Conference assessment will decrease rather than increase the collections.

(6). Inasmuch as the N. C. Conference is building a Children's Home that will cost them with what out side help they get $20,000. and that it will cost from $3,000 to $5,000 to maintain it, therefore we recommend the following assessments:

President	$1,200
Home Missions	2,000
Foreign Missions	2,500
Church Extension	3,250
Ministerial Education	450
Seminaries	500
Young People	100
General Con. Fund	70
Superannuates	800
Bible Society	65

N. C. Conference Fund on charges that pay pastor $500 and over $2 and all others $1.

The apportionment is as follows:

	President	Church Ex.	Foreign Mis.	Home Mis.	Superannuates	Ministerial Edu.	Theo. Sem.	Bible Soc.	Young Peo.	Gen. Con. Fund	N. C. Con Fund	Total
Alamance	32	75	50	56	18	13	19	1	2	2	2	270
Albemarle	20	25	20	11	10	7	8	1	1	1	1	105
Anderson	17	40	25	19	10	6	8	1	2	1	1	130
Asheboro	17	65	35	27	12	6	6	1	2	2	2	175
Asheville	6	20	10	5	2	1	2	1	1	1	1	50
Buncombe	24	40	30	25	1	1	11	1	1	1	1	136
Burlington	15	85	40	34	9	9	6	1	1	2	2	204
Caroleen	5	15	30	13	6	5	3	1	1	1	1	81
Caldwell	3	11	7	5	1	2	1	1	1	1	1	34
Cleveland	25	60	46	55	14	8	17	1	2	2	2	232
Concord	10	40	45	30	12	5	12	1	2	2	1	160
Davidson	17	60	35	40	5	3	14	1	1	1	1	178
Denton	6	11	20	12	7	4	2	1	1	1	1	66
Fairview	12	45	25	35	5	6	6	1	1	1	1	138
Flat Rock	27	70	62	50	20	8	21	1	2	1	2	264
Forsyth	12	50	35	40	8	3	3	1	2	1	1	156
West Forsyth	13	50	35	40	8	3	3	1	2	1	1	157
Fallston	20	50	45	20	15	2	2	1	1	1	1	158
Gaston	6	24	22	12	10	1	1	1	1	1	1	80
Gilburg	5	10	10	8	2	2	2	1	1	1	1	43
Graham & Haw R.	13	30	21	12	8	6	2	1	1	1	1	96
Granville	27	85	52	50	20	10	13	1	2	1	2	263
Greensboro	27	140	100	45	30	27	25	1	2	1	2	400
Greenville	13	46	27	15	20	7	6	1	2	1	1	139
Guilford	20	40	40	40	4	2	3	1	2	1	1	154
Halifax	30	70	70	40	15	12	7	1	2	1	2	250
Harmony	5	6	5	5	11	3	1	1	1	1	1	40
Haw River	27	65	50	50	15	10	10	1	2	1	2	233
Henderson	30	185	90	60	35	20	14	1	2	1	2	440
High Point	17	90	61	65	25	22	14	1	2	1	2	300
La Grange	17	29	20	17	10	5	4	1	1	1	1	106
Lebanon	6	26	15	20	5	4	2	1	2	1	1	83
Lincoln	22	55	45	40	10	5	3	1	2	1	1	185
Littleton	28	92	60	57	20	12	8	1	2	1	2	283
Mebane	17	40	26	20	11	11	15	1	1	1	2	145
Mecklenburg	17	24	13	11	5	4	1	1	1	1	1	79
Monroe	7	28	17	16	6	2	2	1	1	1	1	82
Mocksville	20	40	35	30	12	8	4	1	2	1	1	154
Mt. Hermon	30	76	60	45	18	8	6	1	2	1	2	249
Mt. Pleasant	20	57	37	25	11	13	8	1	1	1	1	175
Oak Ridge	27	86	60	40	13	12	6	1	2	1	2	250
Orange	23	45	61	35	9	8	7	1	2	1	2	194
Pinnacle & Mt. Zion	20	67	46	35	12	8	10	1	2	1	2	194
Piedmont	12	40	40	40	15	2	4	1	1	1	1	157
Pensacola	5	6	15	10	3	1	3	1	1	1	1	47
Randolph	32	66	60	41	18	10	9	1	2	1	1	241
Richland	24	60	50	36	12	6	7	1	2	1	1	200
Randleman	25	55	25	30	21	6	15	1	2	1	1	182
Roanoke	30	72	65	40	20	10	9	1	1	1	2	251
Rockingham	6	20	12	11	9	2	10	1	1	1	1	74
Reidsville	8	20	10	15	10	5	5	1	1	1	1	77
Saxapahaw	20	46	40	30	8	9	5	1	1	1	1	162
Siler City	12	30	23	15	10	5	6	1	1	1	1	105
Spring Church	12	51	25	27	10	4	8	1	1	1	1	141
St. Paul	20	59	40	20	14	7	5	1	1	1	1	165
Stanley	25	65	50	30	26	8	21	1	2	1	2	231
Tabernacle	35	96	95	43	20	2	8	1	2	1	2	325
Thomasville	6	20	20	15	10	5	5	1	1	1	1	85
Uwharrie	16	17	18	25	3	3	4	1	1	1	1	90
Vance	35	57	55	37	11	11	13	1	2	1	1	224
Welch	8	9	5	5	4	2	3	1	1	1	1	40
Why Not	27	65	60	61	16	13	15	1	2	1	1	262
Winston	27	80	55	50	12	12	3	1	2	1	2	245
Winston Mission	5	10	10	10	10	5	4	1	1	1	1	58
Yadkin College	35	65	50	55	30	5	11	1	2	1	2	257
Yarboro	20	42	30	38	13	5	8	1	2	1	1	161

FOOT NOTE.—Your Committee is aware of the fact that a number of charges believe that this assessment is too high. This may be so, but let all charges remember that the Conference gives us a certain amount to apportion. This we have done to the very best of our ability In doing so we have taken into consideration, pastor's salary, membership, ability to pay, willingness, and every thing else that we think should have a bearing, and have carefully and prayerfully considered the whole and made the assessment.

Your Committee.

HAW RIVER CIRCUIT.

The 1st quarterly conference is called to meet with the class at Fairgrove on Saturday, the 14th of December at 11 o'clock.

A full attendance is very much desired, as matters of importance will be before the conference.

W. D. Fogleman.

December 2, 1912.

YADKIN COLLEGE CT.

I returned from our Annual Conference at Burlington: found a plenty of work, as I knew so well the great needs here. This is my fourth year on this charge. Many have been the kindnesses shown us since we were assigned. They have been too numerous to mention and I can only speak from time to time in a general way.

Much appreciation has been manifested on my return, and several of our friends and members have sent in supplies for the table. I met three appointments on last Sunday, congregations good. Work of Official Boards is already being planned and we will soon be busy in all departments of church work. We closed a very successful year's work and are planning for a greater and more useful service for our Master. We ask the prayers of all our readers.

Our first Quarterly Conference will convene at Shiloh on Saturday before 1st Sunday in January, 1913; preaching at 11 o'clock, dinner, business of quarterly conference. We hope to have our new president with us at this time. Let every official member from each church be present, as business will be important.

We ask and expect the cooperation of every member of the churches. To do the best work for our Master there must be cooperation.

Yours for the greatest success in our Master's Kingdom,

H. L. Powell.

BURLINGTON.

Sunday school attendance was 162 last Sunday. The school decided to have a Christmas exercise, and a committee was appointed to train the children for the service.

On Sunday morning at 11 o'clock Rev. J. H. Abernethy of La Grange, who remained in our city for a few days after Conference adjourned, preached for us, using as a subject, "Faith." Rev. Mr. Abernethy is kindly remembered by our people here, he having served us as pastor four years ago. At the evening service he gave one of his lectures entitled, "Alone, but not Forsaken," which was of course, a religious lecture. Our people were very much delighted with both the sermon and the lecture.

The regular monthly business meeting of the church was held Monday night, and considerable business pertaining to the church work was transacted.

Rev. C. E. Forlines, D. D., of the Theological Seminary at Westminster, Md., will visit our church on Wednesday night, December 11th. We hope he may have a large audience.

Rev. and Mrs. R. M. Andrews are receiving congratulations upon the arrival of a baby girl at their home last week.

The Jr. Philathea class of our Sunday school, who gave a play entitled, "The Peak Sisters," in the Graded school Auditorium here sometime ago, repeated the play at Gibsonville, N. C., last Saturday night, which was quite a success. Several of our people accompanied the girls on the trip, witnessing the play.

C. B. W.

December 3, 1912.

PILOT CHURCH.

Our hearts were again made to rejoice when we read in the columns of our dear Herald that conference did so good to us as to send us back our beloved pastor, Bro. Hunter, as it seems to me the longer he stays with u s the better we learn to love him and the more like home folks he is with us, and so we thrice welcome Bro. Hunter back, and earnestly pray that the coming year, 1913, will be a much better success with us than the past one.

We held church meeting at our church Saturday, November 16, at 2 P. M. Business was duly transacted.

With much success to the Herald and its many readers.

I am,

Etta Whitaker, Repr.

December 2, 1912.

LEE'S CHAPEL, HALIFAX CT.

We are all delighted to hear of the return of our beloved pastor, Rev. J. E. Pritchard, for next year. He has done a great work on this circuit the past year. His sermons are always interesting.

Bro. Pritchard filled his regular appointment at this church last 3rd Sunday. As usual his sermon was good. Communion service was held after preaching.

Bro. Pritchard preached at the Fosburgh Camp to quite a large and attentive congregation.

On the 22nd of November a box party was given at the home of Bro. F. M. Porter for the benefit of the parsonage. Quite a neat little sum was realized.

With best wishes for the Herald and its readers.

Reporter.

CANAAN, GUILFORD CT.

Our president was with us the 2nd Sunday night in November. We were very glad to have him with us; would like to have him come round often—he is a good one and preached us a good sermon. May the Lord bless him and give him a long life to help us people all over the land and country is our prayer. We still have a very good Sunday schol and we are now starting for Christmas. We want to make great men and women of all our children. The greatest men and women have sprung up from the farms.

G. L. Motsinger.

Stanly.

Our first quarterly conference will meet in Albemarle on Saturday before 3rd Sunday in Dec. Preaching at 11 A. M. and business of the conference in the afternoon. We earnestly desire the presence of all official members as this will be a very important conference.

Geo. L. Reynolds.

Albemarle, N. C. Dec 2, 1912.

Unionville, N. C.

We held Thanksgiving services at Mt. Moriah church last Thursday. The weather was so unfavorable that the people could not get out to church; the congregation was very small, but the people seem to be very much interested in Thanksgiving service. A collection was taken for the Orphanage which was $6.20.

We hold prayer service ever Wednesday night. Our Sunday school is moving on very nicely. May God help us that we may hold out faithful.

Lonnie L. Braswell.

Thomasville, N. C.

We are as a flock without a shepherd at present, but still holding together and very anxiously waiting for our new pastor, Rev. T. A. Williams, to come. He will find a hearty welcome awaiting him here and we believe he will have hearty cooperation of almost every member. Rev. Mr Suits who has been our faithful pastor for several years has been sent to Concord, and expects to move there soon. We hate to see him and family leave. He has certainly been faithful in preaching the Word and in work and has done much good here, and the best wishes and prayers for his success and happiness of many of us will go with him always. Mrs. Suits and dear little girls will be much missed in S. S. and by neighbors.

Thanksgiving Day an entertainment was given at night by the "Busy Bee" Society for the benefit of the Orphan children at Denton which was a success. Amount collected, $5.00.

Mrs. J. W. Boyles, Reporter.

Dec. 4, 1912.

Eden Halifax Circuit.

Our pastor filled his appointment at Eden Sunday. It was the beginning of a new year. I am glad to say we were blesed in getting our same pastor, Rev. J. E. Pritchard, back another year. We want this to be the greatest year's work we have ever had, and may the people work together in harmony and peace for the advancement of the kingdom. I am glad to say we carried the best report to Conference we have ever carried. Mr J. W. Hardee gave us a brief talk of how much he enjoyed going to conference with such good reports.

Mrs. Thomas S. Pettitt gave a "Box Party" at her home below Enfield Friday night, Nov. 15, for the benefit of Eden church, and furnishing the M. P. parsonage at Brinkleyville. The amount raised was $64.00.

Mr. Dawsy Hardee who has been attending school at Buie's Creek has been home on a visit to his people. We were very glad to see so many people out today, but hope still more will come.

I will also say that the first quarterly conference will convene at Union church Friday before the first Sunday in Jan.

The people are planning for a "Christmas tree" Christmas. Hope we will have much success. I will close with best regards and hoping you a merry Christmas.

Reporter.

Orphans' Home.

Recently we have been pounded in a way that has made us feel good both spiritually and physically. Fair Grove Ch., Why Not Ct., started the good work by sending 11 bus. potatoes, pumpkins, turnips, beets, canned goods, dried fruit etc.

Mitchfield Ch.: potatoes, cabbage and dried fruit. Julian Ladies' Aid, dried fruit, corn, potatoes, peas, cakes, shoes, hose &c.

Kernersville: Needle Work, Guild, hose, underwear, pillow cases, caps, hand towels. Burlington Ch.: canned fruit and vegetables, apples, preserves, jelly, dried fruit, rice, potatoes, and quilts.

Mr. Lee Altom and others: dried fruit, corn meal and potatoes, Mrs. Wall: potatoes, and pears. A. G. Morris: pork. Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Surratt: apples, raisins, peas, corn meal. Bro. Braswell: potatoes.

We wish we might thank each one personally who has remembered the Home in any way for your gifts are very much appreciated, as useful as well. We have many things for which we are thankful. The health of the children has been splendidly good the past year. They are in school and we hope developing as rapidly in mind as in body. They were delighted with the snow Thanksgiving day, but forgot this during the dinner hour.

Yours in the work,

Etta Auman.

Treasurer's Report.

Mrs. J. A. Burgess	$1.00
Mt. Zion Ch.	7.80
Shoals	6.00
Pinnacle	3.72
Pilot	2.80
High Point W. H. M. S.	40.00
Star S. S.	2.40
Henderson S. S.	5.10
Friendship S. S.	1.10
Tabernacle S. S.	.74
Burlington S. S.	2.50
Spring Valley S. S.	3.50
Giles Chapel S. S.	1.65
Winston S. S.	2.68
Shiloh, Yadkin College Ct.	4.85
W. Lexington	3.52
Lincoln Ct.	3.76
"Busy Bee Society." Thomasville	5.00
Conference Treas.	5.00
Mr. Wall Denton	1.00
Total	$104.12

CASH RECEIVED AT CONFERENCE BURLINGTON, N. C., 1912.

Pledges to Miss Mallett's Salary.

Rev. J. A. Burgess	$1.00
Rev. E. Suits	2.00
Rev. J. F. McCulloch	3.00
Rev. T. F. McCulloch	1.00
Rev. T. C. Amick	2.00
Rev. N. G. Bethea	1.00
Rev. D. A. Braswell	1.00
Rev. J. F. Dosier	1.00
Rev. J. A. Ledbetter	1.00
Rev. W. A. Lamar	2.00
Rev. T. A. Plyler	1.00
Rev. H. L. Powell	1.00
Rev. R. C. Stubbins	1.00
Rev. D. R. Williams	1.00
Mr. M. R. Brown	1.00
Rev. W. C. Lassiter	1.00
Mr. C. H. Jones	1.00
Mr. J. S. Pender	1.00

Miss Forrest's Collections.

Enfield, Rev. C. L. Whitaker	6.50
Dabney, Rev. J. A. Burgess	3.75
Caroleen, Rev. T. F. McCuloch	4.00
Concord, Rev. A. O. Lindley	7.00
Confereene St. Rev. J. R. Hutton	3.43
New Hope church S. S.	5.03
J. W. Baldwin	2.00
C. A. Finch	10.00
Pleasant Hill S. S.	2.36
Rev. D. M. Loy	2.00
Bethany S. S.	1.65
Rev. L. H. Hatley	5.00
Rev. G. H. Austin	1.00
On Pledges
Dr. F. T. Tagg	5.00
G. M. Stainback	1.00
H. A. Finch	5.00
Mrs. S. E. Montgomery	1.25

For Miss Auman.

Mrs. J. A. Burgess	1.00
Rev. J. R. Hutton	5.00

If any one gave me any that is not credited here will they please let me know. Some paid in last year's pledge and in marking it in last year's column I may have failed to remember all.

Mrs. A. G. Dixon.

—Rev. J. E. Pritchard and Miss Laura Kate Vestal are to be married on Thursday afternoon, December the twelfth, at half after one o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Vestal, of Siler City, N. C. We tender congratulations and best wishes. They will be at home in Brinkleyville after December 20th. Bro. Pritchard is one of our most promising young ministers, and with a good helpmeet will be prepared for more efficient service.

—Bro. Fogleman went to his first appointment on Haw River Circuit last Sunday, at Mizpah, and was called upon to hold a funeral service over the remains of a young man, Ogburn Smith, son of Bro. Charles Smith, of Brown Summit. Young Smith was 22 years old, and died from the effects of a hurt sustained at a saw mill several days ago.

MARRIED.

Delbridge-Knight.

At the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George L. Knight the writer united in marriage Miss Lela Knight and Mr. Wm. A. Delbridge, on November 14th. Miss Knight was our efficient organist at Lee's Chapel and Mr. Delbridge holds a responsible position with the Fasburgh Lumber Co.

We wish for them a long and useful career.

J. E. Pritchard.

MEETING OF THE JOINT-COMMISSION ON CHURCH UNION.

A meeting of the Joint Commission on Church Union of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ and the Methodist Protestant Church met in the parlors of the Great Southern Hotel in Columbus, O., on November 21, 1912. The following commissioners were present: United Brethren—Bishop G. W. Mathews, Chicago; Bishop W. M. Weekley, Kansas City; Bishop William Bell, Los Angeles; Bishop T. C. Carter, Chattanooga; Rev. Dr. W. R. Funk, Dayton; Rev. Dr. Funkhauser, Staunton, Va.; Rev. Dr. Broke, Toledo, Ia.; Rev. Dr. J. M. Knight, Knoxville, Tenn.; R. H. Bennett, Iowa, Kan.;; Judge S. W. Lott, Toledo, O.; G. A. Lambert, Anderson, Ind.; Rev. Dr. W. O. Fries, Dayton, O. Methodist Protestant—Rev. Dr. Lyman E. Davis, Pittsburg; Rev. Dr. T. H. Lewis, Westminister, Md.; Rev. Dr. M. L. Jennings, Pittsburg, Pa.; Rev. Dr. C. D. Sinkinson, Atlantic City, N. J.; Rev. Dr. D. G. Helmick, Weston, W. Va.; J. E. Peterson, New London, Ia.; J. F. Howe, Ionia, Mo.; Col. J. J. Barge, Atlanta, Ga.

Three of the United Brethren Commissioners and Mr. S. R. Harris, of the Methodist Protestant Commission, were not present.

The Joint Commission was organized by electing President Lyman E. Davis and Bishop G. W. Mathews chairmen of the Joint Commission, and Col. Barge, of the Methodist Protestant commission and Dr. W. O. Fries, of the United Brethren commission, secretaries. The announcement was then made that each of the two commissions had been duly authorized by their respective General Conferences to negotiate the organic union of the two churches.

It should be stated here that on the day previous to the date of the meeting of the Joint Commission each commission met in separate session for the purpose of interchanging views among themselves, to canvass the various questions likely to arise in the Joint Commission and to outline the matter to be submitted and to reach an agreement, if possible, upon all subjects considered.

After the oranization of the Joint Commission a short session was spent in devotional exercises, and then the Joint Commission was declared open for business. The first item of busines was the submission of resolutions adopted at the separate metings of the two commissions the day before, setting forth that the organic union of the two churches was deemed both desirable and attainable. The resolutions were adopted unanimously. Later in the meeting this was enacted, by a formal vote, into a Declaration of Union, subject of course to final confirmation by the usual legal process and legislative bodies of the respective churches.

It now being an accepted fact that the churches desire organic union and a Declaration of Union having been enacted, the next item before the commission was to decide on a name. This was the crux of the whole matter, and a matter upon which was divergence of opinion. The Union Brethren commissioners very magnanimously agreed to drop the name entire of their church and adopt another wholly different name. Some of the Methodist Protestant commissoners insisted that the word "Methodist" should form a part of the new name. Any combination with the name Methodist would be entirely satisfactory to them. Out of this difference grew a strenuous but brotherly debate, consuming several hours. Finally a sub-committee was appointed to whom was referred the selection of a name to be reported to the commission.

After careful deliberation the sub-committee with but one dissenting voice reported two names, first choice and second choice. The preferred name was The United Protestant Church; the second choice The United Protestant Church Composed of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ and the Methodist Protestant Church. After a full, free, earnest and brotherly discussion the latter name was adopted unanimously with three commissioners excused from voting. The name of the new church agreed upon by the Joint Commission therefore is

THE UNITED PROTESTANT CHURCH
(Composed of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ and the Methodist Protestant Church).

The name having been adopted nothing further could be done at this meeting of the commission except to appoint sub-committees to prepare a doctrinal statement and polity for the new church and to formulate plans for merging the various departments of church work. In accordance with this four sub-committees were appointed: A committee on Doctrine and Polity; Vested Rights and Publishing Interests; Educational Institutions; Missions and Benevolent Boards. These sub-committees are instructed to report to the meeting of the Joint Commission appointed to meet in Columbus, Ohio, on the 19th of March, 1913.

The members of the sub-committees were appointed as follows: Doctrine and Polity—W. M. Weekly, L. E. Davis, G. W. Matthews, M. L. Jennings, W. O. Fries, D. G. Helmick. Vested Rights and Publishing Interests—W. R. Funk, S. W. Lott, R. H. Bennett, L. E. Davis, J. E. Peterson, J. F. Howe. Education Interests—T. H. Lewis, J. F. Howe, J. E. Peterson. W. M. Mell, J. E. Broke, G. A. Lambert. Missions and Benevolent Boards—T. C. Carter, C. D. Sinkinson, A. P. Funkhauser, J. J. Barge, J. M. Knight, S. R. Harris.

A beautiful spirit of fellowship prevailed in the joint session of the commissions, Christly love abounded and the Holy Ghost directed all hearts. After what has been done the remainder, if characterized by the same spirit which prevailed at this meeting, will be easy.

The Joint Commission after one day's session adjourned to meet at Columbus, O., on March 19, 1913.—The Methodist Recorder.

FIVE-MINUTE MISSIONARY EXERCISES FOR THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Owing to the brevity of the time of the Sunday school session this five-minute plan of missionary instruction will be found well adapted to a large number of Sunday schools. Some of the apparent advantages are:

1. It is simple, but effective.
2. It does not require extensive preparation.
3. The items are very brief.
4. There is variety of material.
5. There is variety of preparation.
6. It produces definite missionary impression through consecutive presentation of missionary facts.
7. It will help to remove prejudice to missionary instruction in the Sunday school; for it proves not only how interesting missions are, but how intimately they are related to the Christian life.

Five Missionary Minutes, by George H. Trull, contains additional home and foreign missionary material for Sunday school use, enough for 52 Sundays. In cloth, 50 cents.

A CONFESSION.

I am the greatest criminal in history.

I have killed more men than have fallen in all the wars of the world.

I have made millions of homes unhappy.

I have transformed many ambitious youths into hopeless parasites.

I make rough the downward path for countless millions.

I destroy the weak and weaken the strong

(I make the wise man a fool and trample the fool into his folly.

The abandoned wife knows me; the hungry children know me; the parents, whose child has bowed their heads in sorrow, know me.

I live by the consent of the Christian voters.

I am Alcohol. —The Gospel Preacher.

WHAT THE MINUTES SAY.

We are but minutes. Use us well:
For how we are used we must one day tell.
Who uses minutes has hours to use;
Who loses minutes whole years must lose.

"FOR ALL HIS BENEFITS."

Mrs Drayton and her children stood on the porch of their home and watched with sad heart the burning of a neighbor's house across the fields a mile away. Mr. Dayton and the manservant had gone to help put out the fire.

"Poor little Johnny! Will he get burned all up, mother?" whispered Frank with quivering lips.

"No, no, dear; they have had time, I am sure, to get the children out; but much of the furniture and other things will be burned, I fear."

"O, but wouldn't it be dreadful if all our things got burned!" said Grace.

When Mr. Dayton came home after the fire he told a sad story of the loss of property. "All is gone," he said—"house, furniture, and clothing—only the people were saved. I feel very sorry for them. Mr. Lane has no money laid by to rebuild or to buy new furniture. It will go hard with him to even buy the necessary clothes for his family. For the present, Mr. James has put them into his little cottage on the hill which, fortunately, is vacant, and the rest of us must give or lend them necessary things."

The next day was Thanksgiving Day, and the children repeated after their mother their morning verses that she gave them: "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits." "What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits to me?"

"What does 'benefits' mean?" asked Frank.

"It means God's good gifts, my son; and when you think of all the blessings and comforts that are yours and are all around you you remember that they are God's benefits and do not forget him in the enjoyment of his gifts."

"And what does 'render unto the Lord' mean?"

"What we give back to God."

"How can I give anything to God? He has all he wants and I cannot see or touch him?"

Mrs. Drayton took up her Bible and read, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, ye did it unto me," and added: "Whenever we give to others who need, Christ says it is just the same as if we give it to him, and all the kindness we show them Christ finds pleasure in as if it were done directly to him."

For a few moments the children were silent, then Grace said: "Mother, if we were to be kind to the Lane children and give them things, do you suppose Jesus would think we rendered it unto him?"

"Yes, darling; and I am glad you are thinking in the same line I am. What shall we do?"

"Let us ask them to come and eat Thanksgiving dinner with us," said Frank.

"And let us give them some of our clothes and playthings," said Grace.

"I can spare them some furniture and bedclothing," said Mrs Drayton, smiling into their bright faces.

"And what shall I do?" asked Mr Drayton.

"Bring them over in your wagon to dinner," cried the children.

So all the Lanes—father, mother, and children—sat down to dinner with the Draytons and greatly enjoyed it; and when they went home each one of them had received a suit of clothes, and there was a box of bed clothes and another of provisions and a much prized toy was in the hand of each child. Cheered and comforted by this neighborly kindness, their hearts were thankful to God and the kind friends he had sent to help them. The Draytons were happy, too, that they had been able thus to "render unto the Lord" something for all his benefits to them and at the same time to be kind to others.—Mary Helm.

BABBETTE'S "TO-MORROW."

Babbette was singing to herself as she twisted a bit of dough and swung it across the top of the pie, now ready for the baking; the season of Thanksgiving had come, together with other hoped-for-pleasures of "to-morrow."

Indeed, she had enough to sing about, for the last stitch had been put in the pretty skirt which she had been bothering over for days, and better, far better than this, across the kitchen, on the wall, hung that mystery of a bodice, sent really and truly straight from Paris, which the grandmere had shipped to her long, oh, long ago, but which had gone astray in some way on the journey and had been given up at one time as lo. ever.

Why should she not sing? It h. a day, golden and mild, such as c. to us sometimes in the late 'November; she was drawing, too, of the joy of a coming day, and catching airily at the sides of her stiff-stuff dress, she whirled around a bit on her toes, in spite of her big coarse shoes—whirled around to the time of the tune she was singing.

Something had indeed happened to stir her blood, to set her joyous heart throbbing. Romaine and she had been actually invited to the finest and gayest house on the hill; why certainly she had cause to be merry.

She was already, in thought, decked in a bodice with which she felt sure none could vie in the village, in spite of the hill costumes and riches. Already she was whirling in her dream, shod in the wonderful shining slippers which Romaine had managed to buy for her by denying herself at many a lunch hour. Already she caught a glimpse of the lads of the village, a scrap shy of her and a bit "taken" with her—no, not with her exactly, but with that bodice; to think of it!—the bodice truly from Paris!—for she did not know that her face was the fairest, her braids the most golden, her voice the most musical to be found in all the village, even if she lived under the hill instead of on top of it.

It was the eve of Thanksgiving. The sun had lost itself among crimson clouds, but the reflection of its departing glory lay, like a golden veil, across mountain and forest, and swept onward and above to the silver fleece brooding in the far sky, like myriads of wings adrift.

But Babbette saw nothing o f all this at the moment, not even the fading beam across the oaken floor, or the oak tree's crimson leaves dyed redder by the farewell of the sun—the oak tree by the door; she did not even see Romaine for a time.

It was an absorbing dream that she was dreaming. All she saw of the smoky old kitchen was the bodice on its wall. She was at the dance even in her cloggy shoes and her skirt of old country homespun.

The world is full of dreamers; we all know how it is. A hundred dramas may be witnessed under the same roof, at the same moment; the scenes vary with the dreamer. And so it happened that while Babbette saw the bodice and the village dance, Romaine, just beyond the doorway on the footpath, saw the rapture of the passing day; the mystery of light in perfected beauty; the myriad wings of the far sky.

Thesy two lived alone—Babbette and

Romaine; alone under the little bent, mossy roof nestled close to one of the hills, over which a village had gradually grown up under a canopy of trees.

The father had left them years ago, when Babbette was but a baby girl; the mother a year ago—a year ago that very day.

Romaine had learned early to face life's problems perplexing to a lad; but he faced them. He did not try to turn his back upon them, and, when the mother fell asleep, he at least, felt the joy of having done for her all that a boy could.

To-day he stood beyond the doorway, where he had halted to take a drink from the old well. He remembered having stood there a year ago, the first hour after he and Babbette had been left alone in the world. He was yet but a boy, lithe and young, but freighted with a great care.

The mother, in time past, had helped to win the bread. She had held her sheltering arms around the two as best she could. Now everything was changed.

There was some money to be paid on the old house before it could be entirely theirs. There was a break up in the roof which called for immediate repair. There were many other things to be thought about and to be done; and above all, there was Babbette!—and nobody to care for either of them; nobody to see to it that Babbette was fed, was kept warm and happy.

He had raised himself from leaning against the well post on that day, planted his foot firmly on the ground before him, folded his arms resolutely across his breast and determined that he could, and would, by God's help win in his battle; aye, that Babbette should not even know through a word that there was anything to be especially anxious about—anything of doubt and of struggle.

Yes, on that day he had fought out the first of his battle and in the midst of his own sorrow had cheered away Babbette's first torrent of despair and tears. This had been his first step in his new role, for until then Babbette had known little of tears; she had been only a sunbeam.

And now, to-day he was looking back, looking forward—thinking man thoughts—aye, dreaming under the radiance of a fair, illumined hour.

He stood so long that Babbette caught a glimpse of him at last from the window and darted toward him, calling as she come "Oh, Romaine! Romaine! I have been longing for you! I have something to tell you! What are you doing standing here at the well?"

"I have been living over again a bit of my life, Babbette—looking back over the year that is gone."

"Nonsense, Romaine; and I have wanted to tell you—"

"No, it is not nonsense; I have been thinking of how it was with us at this time a year ago and how it is now; I wanted to think it all out as to what I am to try for in the next year, and it seemed I could do it best under such a sky as this—do you see it, Babbette?"

"Of course I do! I am afraid it will rain to-morrow—the sun has gone down in clouds."

"But, Babbette, the glory of them—look up."

"Do you think they look like angel's wings, Romaine?" she said.

He stooped and kissed her. He liked to have her find the thought for herself, and said to her softly: "We have been under them for a year, and I know we shall be under them the rest of the years."

"Yes," she answered, but did not know the half she was thinking of.

"To-morrow we will go and give thanks," he said.

"To-morrow. Oh, to-morrow I shall have no time for anything but to get ready for the dance! Oh, Romaine, we have been invited by the Reedy's on the hill—invited to the dance!" and Babbette circled over the grass for a moment, her skirt caught up gracefully on either side, her head tossed airily back and her face aglow as she turned and darted back to him, saying: "Oh, Romaine, Romaine—think of it! I can hardly wait until to-morrow!"

Life's battles are ever on. One pauses to take breath but to find the unexpected close at hand.

She was so glad and beautiful; she was rejoicing so in the approach of a new and coveted day; she was so glad, without a shadow from the evil that the world spins ever along the strands of time. He was facing the last cross of the fading year, just as she was dreaming that they all had passed.

"You are not happy, Romaine; has anyone done you a wrong?" and she laid her hands lovingly on his shoulders and looked up in his face.

He had managed to keep Babbette warmed and fed; he had paid the cost of mending the roof; he had paid a bit of the money due on the house; he had grown stronger and wiser in a year of conflict and circumstances, and kept his faith bright, his face aglow with the light of a steadfast, noble purpose; but how was he to shatter at a blow that hope built on the promise of a joyous tomorrow?

If he wavered for a moment and stayed his answer while he felt for words—the right words to say—and came near never saying them, he may be forgiven, for Babbette's joy was his joy; her life was bound closely in with his life, and his voice faltered when he said:

"Little sister, I can not; oh, I can not take you to that dance."

Babbette could scarcely believe her ears. She was too amazed to speak at once. Had not Romaine always gone with her everywhere, and now not go to the grand house on the hill!

"Do you believe that I love you?" he said so earnestly that she could then have believed it even if never before. "Do you believe that I only want to make you happy? I would not make you happy by taking you among people who would not help you to keep good and true and dear as you are today."

I can not begin to tell all she said; how she laughed at his folly, and that he was just pretending that he did not know that the invitation had come from the very finest folk of the village; how she stamped her foot at him, and coaxed, and scolded, and flew in a temper, and drenched herself in tears, and declared she had nothing to "thank" for if she could not go to the dance; and, what was more, if Romaine would not go with her where she wanted to go, she certainly would not go in the morning with him to any church, and finally just flew, sobbing, into his arms.

Then the two went into the kitchen, and the Thanksgiving pies gave warning that they would shortly resent being forgotten and burn black if somebody did not pay them some attention—and evening threw its gloom around where, less than an hour ago, joy had been gilding every pot and pan in the smoky old kitchen.

It was Thanksgiving morning when Romaine caught Babbette in his arms and drew her down close beside him.

"Little sister," he said, "if I did not love you I would not care if you became acquainted with people who would soon make you like one of themselves. You already have friends whose mothers were dear to our mother; friends with whom you can dance, if you like, and find joy; who are happy because they are good. Be content with these, little sister. Let us go on living and doing as we have been doing. God has blessed us all the year; we have had plenty, and I was afraid, being only a boy, that I could not do it all. Come, we will go together where our mother always led us as little children, and thank the Father who has been with us both through all the year."

Babbette looked up in the face bent over toward hers. She believed there was not such another face as Romaine's in all the world. She read in it every manly quality that a boy can have; she compared it in quick thought with the faces of lads of whom she had thought to dance at the village; she remembered the ill manners of the girls on the hill; of the gentle, sweet manners of the mother she had loved.

She laid her two hands on his shoulders as she always did when she was in earnest. "Romaine," she said, and it seemed she had suddenly grown from the child into a woman, "I will go where you go; I will wish only as you wish; you know better than I what will make us both happy; and do you know, Romaine, I think that always, when I am tempted, I shall remember the wings, the angel wings, that seemed to be over us last night as we looked at the far-away sky."—George Klingle, in New York Observer.

DIED.

William Gallant Smothers was born in Rockingham county in February, 1858, and departed this life November 12, 1912 in his 75th year. His boyhood and early manhood were spent in his native county where he had many devoted young friends. He volunteered at the beginning of the war and belonged to Company E. commanded by Captain Samuel H. Boyd. He was a brave and faithful soldier. And although he was often exposed to death his life was spared. He was in many battles, but he was never wounded. Though others fell dead in their places he was mercifully spared to come home again without injury. In 1868 he was happily married to Miss Sallie Dixon and their union was blessed with nine children, 3 boys and 6 girls, all of whom still survive. There are 19 grand children. For some time after his marriage he resided in the Flat Rock neighborhood in Guilford county. In 1889 he came with his family to Winston-Salem. For a year and more he served faithfully as the keeper of the Mickey Mill just outside the city limits.

For 19 years he has been the faithful night watchman at the Fries Mills. With unvarying regularity he went the rounds in the heat of summer and the cold of winter. No property was ever more sedulously guarded for this long period While he was living in his home near Flat Rock he made a profession of faith and connected himself with the Methodist Protestant Church and never moved his membership from the old Home church. He has been in declining health for several months, but has borne his sufferings with patience and resignation. He expressed his readiness to die whenever the Lord should call him. He came to his end after a long life as a shock of wheat is gathered to the harvest. He almost shouted aloud as he contemplated being forever released from pain and suffering and crowned with glory in his Master's presence. His wife and children, his other relations and many friends in the city and out will mourn his loss.

No more fatigue, no more distress
No sin nor hell shall reach the place;
No sighs shall mingle with the songs,
Which warble from immortal tongues.

No rude alarms of raging foes
No cares to break the long repose,
No midnight shock, nor clouded sun,
But sacred high eternal noon.

Rev. H. A. Brown, D. D.

LEONARD.

On November the 27th the deepest sorrow fell upon the home of Bro. Harper Leonard. On Tuesday A. M. after the older children had gone to school and father to work, the mother went to milk, little Pauline and baby sister left alone in the house. The mother heard a scream and when she turned to see cause she saw little Pauline covered in flames. The mother ran to the scene and smothered the flames; but, the dear sweet little girl was burned so badly that she died next day. Pauline was four years, nine months, and thirteen days old. The funeral was conducted by pastor at Shiloh in the presence of a large congregation of weeping and sympathizing friends and relatives. The remains laid to rest in Shiloh cemetery to await the Resurrection morn. She was an affectionate child, and sunshine of the home.

May the bereaved parents not weep as those who have no hope, for surely she is with Jesus and Heaven is dearer than ever before because there is another treasure there.

H. L. Powell.

STOVALL.

Miss Margaret Stovall passed to her reward November 29, 1912, aged 21 years and six months.

She joined Fairview M. P. church about eight years ago, and always attended church and S. S. when able, always ready to take part in any kind of church entertainments. She was a member of the Philathea class, she was also reporter to the Herald for a good long while.

Margaret was sick for nearly a year, but bore her affliction well, never complaining. She was always lively and hopeful. She often spoke of going back to Sunday school.

Margaret was so anxious for an education. At school, when her health permitted. She had just finished school when she was taken sick. Weep not, dear ones, though it seems hard to give up our loved ones. But we submit to the "One who doeth all things well," and remember that our loss is her eternal gain.

It is sad to stand by the death bed of our loved ones and see them breathe their last, but Margaret gave full assurance of going to rest. She asked those that stood by to meet her in heaven.

Oh! it was a sweet thought of meeting up yonder where parting will be no more.

She leaves a mother and two sisters, Mrs. Charlie Stout and Miss Donnie Stovall with a host of relatives and friends to mourn.

Her funeral was conducted in the home by Rev. N. G. Bethea at 2 o'clock. Bro. Bethea had to be at Burlington about 3 o'clock so he turned the service over to Rec. Mr. Hackney of the Baptist church.

"Sweet and peaceful be thy slumber,
Earthly cares with thee are o'er,
Never more to sorrow waking,
Suffering thou shalt know no more."

A. Friend.

"To the faithless the courage that is born of faith is inexplicable. To the faithful it is the only rational expression of belief in a God who is able to save to the uttermost."

Bobby: "I've been an awful good boy since I started going to Sunday school, haven't I?"

Mother: "Yes, dear, you've been very good indeed."

Bobby: "And you don't distrust me any more, do you?"

Mother: "No, dear."

Bobby: "Then why do you continue to hide the pie?"

But the kind of a friend we all look for
And the one that's worth talking about
Is the one who stays close up beside you
When you're all in, down and out.

—Elon College Weekly.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.
Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.
206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

GETTING EVERYBODY ENROLLED.

Many schools are now adopting the plan of canvassing the community or congregation of their particular churches with a view to getting everybody in reach in the Sunday school. This is not as big a task as it would appear on its face. Get several enlisted in the work and it can be done.

Go about it with a committee to make up a list of everyone in reach of the school who do not attend or does not properly belong to some other school. Then check off those who are members of your school and attend regularly. Have every member of the family visited and use the utmost endeavor to get their names on the regular roll. If this can be done, work to get them in the home, department, mothers' department, cradle roll, or in some way connected with the school.

A committee of twenty can canvass the usual size community in a single afternoon. Impress upon their minds that the next Sunday after the canvass will be a big day in the school. The novelty of the thing will bring a large attendance the next Sunday; it is then up to the teachers and superintendent to see that they are interested sufficiently for them to desire to come back the next Sunday.

WHERE EVERYBODY TOOK PART.

The program for the Christmas service of the First M. E. Sunday school of Everette Mass., contains thirty-three items. Many of them are musical, of course, but there was something for every class and for all ages: recitations, solos, carols by classes, exercises, readings and an address. Yet the program did not seem too long. "It was a new departure for us," says Superintendent A. C. Zimmermann, "to have everyone take part, but the service was very much enjoyed, so the people told us, and it was as much enjoyed by those who took part as by those who listened in the audience."

RELIEF WORK OF ONE CLASS.

The Men's Bible Class of the Evangelical S. S. of Holton, Kansas., with its membership of one hundred, has won favor and made a place for itself in the field in which it operates, by its activity, through its relief committee, in meeting the need of the less fortunate and dependent of the community. No condition of need or distress is ever reported to the class but what it is met at once by help and relief. Special activity is always in evidence during the winter season, as many as thirty homes being gladdened by this one class at Christmas time. The accompanying illustration shows one of two large wagon loads of goods distributed with their good wishes for a Merry Christmas during the last holiday season.

No one other thing has done more to advertise the class; the sympathetic touch always finds a warm response in the hearts of the people. It has fostered and developed a more intense loyalty among the members for every class interest; men always believe strongly in any organization that stands for practical and definite things. It has magnified the spiritual and practical Christianity in a generous sharing of what they have with those who have not, thus commending and attracting to Christ and his teachings those who have not yet felt the warmth and glow of the Christian life and its helpful service.

INTERESTING THE OUTSIDE.

Often there are business or professional men in a village who have not attended Sunday school for many years. Yet they are men of high character, whose example and influence would be of great service to the young people of the school. A general invitation might be disregarded, perhaps not understood to be given seriously. Hence, it will usually be better to ask those persons to give addresses or take other parts in the exercises of some special occasion. Or they may be asked to talk to some class on a particular lesson, or speak at the meeting of one of the clubs. Women of tact and social influence, may be asked to speak to girls' classes and clubs, on various kinds of undertakings best adapted to their organizations, on ideas of womanhood or gracious manners; skillful housewives may be intended to give courses of lessons in domestic economy, cooking, mending, cleaning, etc. When these persons have once contributed to the work of the school, their interest will be aroused, and they can be induced to undertake regular and permanent responsibility.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, DEC. 8.

By Charles A. Hines.

Subject—"Lesson of the Snow." Job. 38. 1-27.

This should be a meeting in which original thought should be brought from the pleasurable reminiscences of the snow and made to shed light upon a lesson that has many possibilities for spiritual uplift. The illustrations given below are suggestive; they are not meant so much for use, as to suggest other things to the reader. Work them in with an idea of your own.

As children we have watched the beautiful snow flakes fall, first giving the world a mantel of white, then by the following morning have the landscape wrapped in a blanket of several inches thickness. Can you not say something of the beauty, the purity, the usefunless and the sparkling splendor of such scenes.

Every member should have something to say in this meeting. Everyone can, to fail to do so stamps the member as entirely too reticent to praise God for the matchless work he does for his creation.

Thoughts on the Topic.

No one can walk through the snow without leaving tracks, and no one can walk through life without leaving tracks as conspicuous. You can track Abraham by his altars, and the Duke of Alva by his fires in which he had burned the martyrs, and Jesus Christ by the homes He brightened and the hearts he cleansed. What marks are you leaving behind you on your daily walk?

When snow is defiled there is only one way of purifying it. It must be melted and exposed to the sun and air, nature's great purifiers. And there is only one way in which a sullied heart may be purified, and that is the same: it must be melted in repentance, and must let God work His way with it.

Under the snow lie the roses and liles and violets, all semingly dead. But wait till the snow melts away in the spring, and you will find that they all have been kept safe for you. So under the snow lie the bodies of our dead ones, and they seem gone forever from our sight. But wait till God's springtime!

Even the deepest and coldest snowbank will melt under the rays of the spring sun. So even the coldest heart may be touched and melted if brought under the influence of the divine love.

When the snow melts, it feeds the streams, and fills the wells, and supplies fields, and contributes to the verdure of summer. So when hard, frozen hearts melt, they begin at once to live not for self, but for others.

Falling Flakes.

The snow flake is harmless, but how dangerous is the avalanche.

The snow flake is so innocent, yet mountains are swept clear, and vallies flooded.

The energy of the snow flake properly harnessed becomes a commercial value.

The snow flake is man's constant aid in extreme northern travel.

The snow flake has proven man's protection in the far northern-lands.

The snow flake has been the means of many choice pleasures for young people.

The crystal snow flake teaches mere man many beautiful lessons, and is the poets' inspiration.

The snow flake reflects the sun, likewise we should reflect the Son of Righteousness.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p.m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF
STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE,
EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,
DENTIST.
Office in Benbow Arcade, S. Elm St.,
Rooms 348 and 350,
Greensboro, N. C.
Office phone 29, Residence phone 22.

The spotless white of the snow flake is emblematic of innocence and purity.

The snow flake is the great white field upon the mountain and contains latent energy that by the warm touch of the Sun's rays becames an active force, and may set in motion the wheels of commerce. Christians likewise possess latent energy.

ELECTRIC SPARKS.

Don't forget to spell pray occasionally without an "r".

Don't have too many visions lest people come to regard you as visionary.

Don't permit your corps of Sunday school teachers to become corpse of teachers.

Don't issue checks on the bank of heaven except you have a deposit; your paper may be protested.

Don' imagine that it is your business to dance every time the devil begins to tune his fiddle.

Don't humiliate the faithful church-members by abusing those who are absent.

Don't discredit yourself in the estimation of others by asserting that you have not sinned for ten years; they know better.

Don't cheat a man in a trade and then ask him to become a Christian.

Don't vote the straight ticket until you have made it straight by scratching the crooked men.

Don't expect promotion if you are doing the least work possible, and stealing five minutes every chance you get.—Religious Telescope.

For Daily Reading.

Mon.,—Its purity ..... Ps. 51:7
Tues.,—Soiled souls ..... Rom. 3:9-18
Wed.,—Its transience .....Job 24:19
Thurs.,—Refreshing coolness Prov.25:13
Fri.,—Its crystals: order .. 1 Cor. 14:33
Sat.,—Instrument of punishment Ps. 148:8
Sun., Dec. 8.—Topic—

ANNUAL CONFERENCE OFFICERS.

President—Rev. C. A. Cecil, 117 Thurston St., High Point, N. C.
Secretary—Rev. N. G. Bethea, Henderson, N. C.

—Bro. L. W. Holt, of Burlington, is here this week serving as juror in the federal court.

—Rev. J. W. Holt, of the Christian church, has a brother who is a good member of the Methodist Protestant Church, another brother who is a Roman Catholic, a sister who is a member of the M. E. Church, South, and another (brother or sister) who is a Presbyterian.

—Mr. William Shaw, whose wife and sister both died of pneumonia contracted in nursing him, has since succumbed to the same disease. He was buried at Mount Hope on Wednesday.

WHY BUY RED CROSS SEALS?

Why you should buy Red Cross Christmas Seals, may be answered most effectively in the words of a twelve-year-old boy in the Duluth (Minn.) schools, who gave the following as his reason in a composition on this subject:

"The reason I put Red Cross Seals on my Christmas gifts is because every seal I use counts one cent toward stamping out tuberculosis in the city and for the maintenances of hospitals for that purpose. The seals are also used to raise funds to teach people the value of fresh air. Another reason I buy them is because my father died of tuberculosis and I buy them so that other little boys and girls won't lose their fathers as I did. Another reason is that if I am ever threatened with tuberculosis the doctors will have a fund to try to prevent it."

W. F. MEDEARIS I. F. PEEBLES W. L. PEEBLES
MEDEARIS-PEEBLES FURNITURE COMPANY.
Complete House Furnishers.
STOVES AND RANGES
Cash or Credit.
109 & 111 E. Market St.
Phone 823. Greensboro, N. C.

RECEIVED ON HERALD SUBSCRIPTION ACCOUNTS.

One dollar each—Rev. H. L. Elderdice, H. C. Nicholson, Dr. J. R. Reitzel, J. E. Stafford, Jas. H. Carroll, Mrs. Marshal Hatley, H. E. Waldrop, Mrs. J. D. Frost, J. E. B. Shutt, Loyd Cagle, Henry Bean, J. P. Boroughs, S. S. Cox, J. A. Willis, J. B. Vincent, J. P. Owen, J. W. Watson, N. F. Morgan, Miss Etta Whitaker, J. H. Howell, O. A. Hughes, O. D. Stacy, Mrs. J. F. Shelton, Mrs. Pattie Parks, Mrs. W. T. Neville, Mrs. T. S. Pettit, J. F. Bellamy, F. B. Neville, Mrs. J. H. Harris, E. T. Garrett, J. W. Davis, Mrs. Annie L. Davis, Mrs. Frank Pugh, D. W. Roberts, B. F. Lewis, W. T. Locke, J. W. Montgomery, C. C. Miller, Jas. A. Causey, Mrs. Kate Kime, M. H. Holt, G. N. Butner, O. W. Barber, J. F. Whitaker, Miss Attie Black, Mrs. Annie Stewart, Mrs. L. E. Williams, A. N. Roberson, W. L. Holt, Mrs. M. A. Whitehead, Mrs. F. E. Shamel, E. M. Ivester, R. A. Ivester, F. M. Porter, J. W. Angel, P. L. Walker, Mrs. W. C. Hunter, R. E. Patterson, Mrs. Maggie Suit, Mrs. G. P. Stubbins, Calvin Garmon, W. L. Holland, John Kiser, L. H. Sides, A. O. Lindley, J. S. Pender, S. L. Hayworth, T. M. Johnson, A. L. Foust, S. M. Kellam, H. C. Stout, D. B. Moore, Mrs. M. J. Turner, J. A. Turner, H. D. Rushing, J. A. Walker, A. M. Rankin, Mrs. J. M. Lloyd, D. A. Havner, Mrs. Pauline Carter, H. A. Finch, Mrs. Sallie Fuller, R. H. Hight, Miss Etta Hight, L. H. Stone, Miss Flora Cheek, Dr. Pickett, W. A. J. Sharp, Henry Pair, C. F. Hawkins, Mrs. J. E. Glasgow, Mrs. Z. B. Mitchell, R. C. Riggan, E. A. Powell, Mrs. Sarah Glenn, Joel Trogdon (per Rev. L. H. Hatley), J. H. Snotherly, L. M. Harris, Mrs. S. Powell, D. M. Qualls, L. W. McAdams, A. L. Lewis, Bertha Jones, J. S. McDaniel, Mrs. V. C. Wood, Mrs. S. J. Kenney, W. H. Scarboro, Mrs. J. S. Lewis, L. W. Burroughs, Mrs. C. V. Hauser, W. N. Pegram, Mrs. W. A. Foust, G. L. Amick, R. F. Williams, A. B. Holt, Mrs. W. M. Riggsby, Mrs. C. E. Crutchfield, Mrs. Lena Lineberry, C. G. Hunter, F. C. Klein, Mrs. D. P. Clark, Rosa Chambliss, J. B. Edwards, E. W. Chambliss, J. A. Robinson, J. P. Massey, T. W. Massey, Mrs. G. A. Isles, W. F. Ashburn, I. F. Pritchard, Mrs. M. A. Allred, Arthur L. Leonard, L. M. Canada.

Two dollars each: Mrs. T. F. Humphreys, Samuel Deviney, J. M. Millikan, S. B. Hammer, J. G. Rogers, Miss Lelia B. Holliday, Miss Hattie Wall.

Three dollars each: Mrs. Jesse Stephens, W. H. Hunter, Miss Mamie Plunkett.

Four dollars: Dr. I. N. McLean.

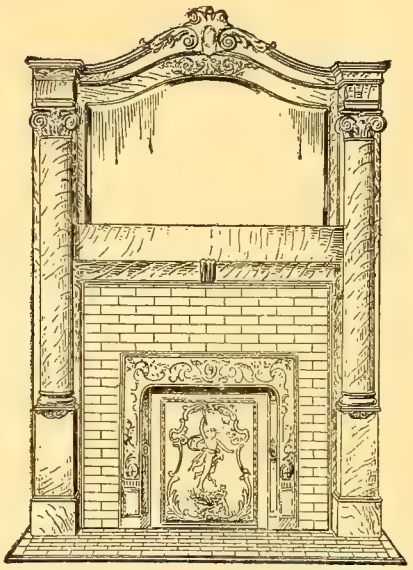
Six dollars: J. C. Sharp.

One dollar and a half: G. H. Austin, W. K. Hartsell.

Fifty cents each: Mrs. N. W. Lamer, Mrs. W. H. Jones, B. F. Willey, Miss Lessie Swift, C. R. Kingar, J. E. Moore.

Twenty-five cents each: Miss Lillian Highfill. J. D. Kennedy, Mrs. Alice L. Foster, J. A. Wooten, Robert Short, Miss Belle Star, Miss Matilda Alexander, Mrs. C. N. Davenport, Wm. Wiley, R. L. Loy, Mrs. J. C. Bodenheimer.

J. F. McCulloch, Publisher.



Mantels, Grates, Tiles and Builders' Hardware.

If you intend to build a new house, or to improve an old one, don't fail to get our catalogue, showing the latest designs in mantels, grates, tiles and builder's hardware. We have designs to suit every style of architecture. It will pay you to write us.

ODELL MANTEL COMPANY,
(Odell Hardware Co., Owners.)
Greensboro, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.
This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W. M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE—CO-EDUCATIONAL AND NON-SECTARIAN.

Offers young men and young women in the Methodist Protestant Church exceptional advantages for higher college training. Courses offered leading to the degrees of A. B., Ph. B., L. I., Pe. B., and A. M. Certificate courses offered in Commerce, Music, and Art. Diplomas also granted in Music and Art.

Elon College is situated in the hill country in the Piedmont section of North Carolina. No sickness, healthful climate, pure deep well water. All the buildings heated by steam and lighted by electricity and supplied with water. A large gymnasium for men in process of erection.

Terms are very reasonable. Cost of all expenses ranges from $137 to $187 a year.

The Young Ladies' Home provides for board at cost for young ladies who wish to cheapen their living. This home is under the management of the College and the best possible care is taken of the girls.

The Boys' Boarding Club offers young men an opportunity of living at actual cost. By these boarding arrangements the cost of board and room should be reduced to about half the cost in private homes.

Any person interested should write foa Catalogue, Bulletins, and other information to

W. A. HARPER, LL. D., PRESIDENT,
Elon College, North Carolina.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XIX. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 1912. NUMBER 2.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD. Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.

J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.

Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.

Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.

Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.

In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

CONFERENCE SERMON.

By Rev. D. A. Highfill.

Preached before the North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church at Burlington, N. C., November 21, 1912.

Text: Make full proof of thy ministry. II. Timothy 4:5.

Just forty-one years ago I joined this Conference at Salem church, near Saxapahaw, N. C. Then there were 32 ministers and preachers belonging to Conference and about 8,000 members in our Conference District. What changes have taken place in those forty-one years! All the ministerial brethren of that time have crossed over the river except Revs. J. W. Heath, W. C. Kennett, Geo. E. Hunt, and T. J. Ogburn. The greater part of the membership of our church in North Carolina has died in that time. Every preacher in the active work in the Conference now is a younger man than I am.

As Paul the aged, gave good advice to Timothy, his son in the gospel, so let me in this discourse, give some advice to you my younger brethren, especially as you have, by your votes, imposed this task upon me.

I feel the importance of this occasion. To preach to preachers is embarrassing to me under the circumstances. Wickedness of all kinds, infidelity of all shades, criticisms from all quarters heterodoxy in nearly all communities, indifference to orthodox religion and churches in all places, are on the increase. When I think of these things and the great salvation we are called to preach, and see what little effect preaching has upon the masses, I am ready to exclaim: "I can't preach; I don't know how!" Then, brethren, how incompetent I feel that I am to tell you how to preach.

I. God has given to the Church a ministry. This truth has been acknowledged by all men in all ages of the church. God calls men, not angels, to this great work. "Now then we are ambassadors for Christ as though God did beseech you by us, we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled unto God." "How can they preach except they be sent?" "Go, preach the preaching that I bid thee."

1. God's ministers are born to be ministers. "Paul was separated unto the gospel of God." Romans 1:1. It "pleased God to separate Paul from his mother's womb, and call him by His grace, to reveal His Son in him, that he should preach Christ among the heathen." Gal. 1:15, 16. I believe that before birth God is intending certain persons shall be His ministers; His angels watch over them in their earliest infancy, His Spirit leads and protects them in their youth, and some of them are made to feel even before conversion, that they must preach the gospel. Why does He not design such a thing. Does He not know the end from the beginning? Does He not know whom to call, and when to call? Surely He does.

2. Some men are converted that they may be preachers. That was the purpose of God in their conversion. It "pleased God to reveal His Son in Paul that he should preach Christ among the heathen." "I have appeared unto thee for this purpose, to make thee a minister and a witness both of these things which thou hast seen, and of those things in the which I will appear unto thee." Upon repentance and faith in Christ, God changes our vile nature, makes us new creatures in Christ Jesus, blots out all our sins, makes us heirs of Him and joint heirs with Christ, and causes us to "rejoice in hope of the glory of God." O, what a blessed experience this is! Now we can "tell to all around what a dear Savior we have found."

3. They are called of God to that work. The church of Christ is the most important institution in the world. The ministry is a very essential part of the work of the church, so much so that had we no ministry the wheels of progress and civilization would soon stop, and the work of the church would soon cease, and we would soon be drifting back into heathenish darkness, and millions of souls would be lost. God does not call just anybody and everybody to this great, glorious and responsible work. Christ called His twelve apostles. Paul was called to be an apostle. Jonah was bidden to go and preach to Ninevah. So the Savior now makes men feel it their duty to preach the gospel. They feel, "Woe is unto me if I preach not the gospel." They are dissatisfied if they engage in any other business, and are never content in any other occupation than the ministry, and they are often failures in every other undertaking. How wretched the young man called of God to preach who refuses to heed that call! I know something of that wretchedness by bitter experience, and by seeing it in others!

4. Those called to preach must preach or be lost. It is not optional with us like it is with other men. They can choose to be farmers, or merchants, or doctors, for a livelihood as they may please and there is no responsibility attached to them for their choice. But those called to preach must preach. They have no choice in this case. They are God's servants and must do God' work. They have been born and converted and qualified by gifts and graces bestowed upon them for this very work. God, in His wisdom, knew what He was doing when he called them to preach. No excuse will avail. Lack of education, a meagre support, bad health, aged parents to care for, nor any other excuse will be accepted of God in the final account. God says to them as He said to Jonah, "Go, preach the preaching that I bid thee," and they must go; otherwise they will meet with terrible storms on the sea of life, and some whale or another will swallow them at last. To refuse to obey the call is to call in question God's wisdom in calling them to engage in this work. To quit the ministry when in good health, and when not providentially hindered is to jeopardize the soul's salvation. To refuse to do God's will is disobedience, and disobedience is sin, and sin unrepented of ruins the soul in hell. To refuse to preach when called is to disobey and bring condemnation upon us; and to "preach the preaching that God bids us to preach" will be the means of "saving ourselves and those that hear us."

5. Each minister is to do his own work in his own way. "Make full proof of thy ministry," and not your farming or you merchandising, or your school teaching or your profession as a lawyer, or physician, but your ministry. Every preacher has a gift peculiar to himself. He should cultivate that gift so as to do the greatest good. No two preachers are alike and no two preachers can preach alike. Every one should present the truth as he sees it and not through another man's glasses. No preacher can do that and be as successful as he should be and have his mind divided between preaching and some other work. When Jesus called His disciples they left all and followed Him. Let our reading and studying and praying and working be for the purpose of understanding the one Book, and being "able to rightly divide the word of truth." "Make full proof of thy ministry." No man can do this if he imitates a Spurgeon, a Moody, a Sam Jones or any one else. Imitators are really not preachers: they are just imitators. And the man, who professes to be called to preach, and who gets up before a congregation and, from memory, delivers another man's sermon as his own is a thief, a hypocrite and a liar. He is a thief because he stole another man's sermon; a hypocrite, because he cannot preach, he knows he cannot preach, but he tries to make people believe he can preach; a liar, because he palms off on a credulous people a sermon as his own which is another man's production. I doubt very much the genuineness of the call of an imitator or plagiarist. If your style is bad improve it; if your gestures are not graceful make them graceful if you can; if you are eloquent use your eloquence, not for self-glorification, but for the salvation of men. By all means be yourself, and not try to be some one else. Get full of your message, and then deliver that message as the Spirit shall give you utterance to the glory of God. Get behind the Cross, take a view of the world through the blood of Jesus Christ, forget yourself and "preach the Word," "as a dying man unto dying men."

II. How to make full proof of your ministry.

1. Be sure that you are converted. It may seem strange to you that I should mention this as if I thought there were unconverted men in the ministry of our Conference. The history of the church in the past proves that there have been. I might mention a few persons whose names were once on our Conference roll who were not converted. Their scandalous lives proved that they were not converted. There are many ministers in our land, if their cold, formal and unsuccessful ministry is evidence have never "tasted the good Word of God and the powers of the world to come." How can I teach my child his letters if I do not know those letters myself? How can I tell sinners of the joy of salvation if I have never been saved? How can I sing;

How happy every child of grace
Who knows his sins forgiven,

if my sins are not forgiven, and I do not know they are forgiven? There are preachers in North Carolina to-day—a plenty of them—telling the people that we cannot know that our sins are forgiven. The reason they tell that is because their own sins have not been forgiven and their souls converted. No honest man, with the Bible open before him, will teach the people such stuff. But such stuff is taught, and people believe it. We should teach the people better, and one of the best ways to teach is to teach from experience.

"How can a sinner know,
His sins on earth forgiven?
How can my Savior show
My name's inscibed in heaven?
What I have felt and seen,
With confidence I tell,
And publish to the sons of men,
The sign infallible."

Our preaching should be largely from experience, but we cannot preach from experience at all if we have no expereince. Then let us know what we are talking about or keep silent.

2. Be sure God has called you to preach. Some men go into the ministry because their friends think they can preach and insist on their preaching, and sometimes some church thinks a certain person ought to have license to preach because he can sing well and pray well and is a good exherter. Many good exhorters have been spoiled by giving them license to preach. Some go into he ministry because they think they can have an easy good time in life, could be as useful there as anywhere, can get good salary and occupy an honorable position in society. These considerations should have no influence with any one. Nothing should induce or compel any person to enter the ministry but a "Woe is unto me if I preach not the Gospel." Nothing less than that could get me into the pulpit. I felt that I must consent to preach or consent to be lost forever. For four long years the indescribable struggle went on in my soul until at last I surrendered, and said before God, "Live or die, succeed or fail, I am going to try to preach and do my duty as I understand it." Brethren, I believe God can and does let a man know unmistakably, if he wants him to preach. If an earthly government appoints an ambassador to another government, the person appointed would know of his appointment; so Christ would not appoint us as ambassadors of His to proclaim His great salvation to a lost and ruined world without letting us know of our appointment. As preaching is such a great and important work, and there is such great responsibility attached to it, and as we may know whether we are called or not, how foolish in any one to preach if he is not called. To do so is to run before we are sent, to answer before we are called, to say we are ambassadors of Christ when we are not appointed, to be heralds of the Cross without divine authority, and to assume a responsibility that ought to make any man shudder. Whoever does this will be just as assuredly lost as the man called to preach and fails to do so. One is just about as disobedient as the other. Then how necessary that every one concerned upon this subject go to God for His guidance and help! I believe He will show every honest soul what he ought to do, and that soul should not hesitate.

3. Then when satisfied you ought to preach make the best preparation possible, educational and theological. This proposition is so evident it would seem to need no argument. The masses are becoming more and more educated, hence the greater need of an educated ministry. In this day of schools and colleges and numerous books on all subjects that a preacher should study and master, there is no excuse for ignorance. God does not call a man to preach whom He does not call to prepare to preach. If it is important for the lawyer, or the physician, or the statesman, or the schoolteacher and others to be educated, is is more important that the preacher be educated; for his work is more important than any other work can be. And we should be able to preach in the town and the country districts, to the learned and the ignorant, and to all conditions of society. How embarrassing to hear one of our preachers at the beginning of service, announce, "The hour for divine service has ariv;" or to hear frequently during the service "Jesus died for you and I," and other such blunders. Brethren, such grammatical mistakes are unpardonable in this day. An ignorant preacher compromises the church that sends him out. lowers the standard of the ministry and cripples his usefulness very much. He never can do the good he could if he had better preparation. And while it is so important that the preacher speak good English, it is more important that he have the best theological training. There are so many isms today that all our preachers should be well prepared to meet and refute them. And there is no better way to be prepared to refute the false doctrines of the present than to have the mind well trained with Methodist theology. If this preparation cannot be made by attending our schools and seminary, it can be made at home. Some of us older preachers, by the light of a pine knot, or an old fence rail, and later by a kerosene lamp, obtained in our homes about all the theological training we ever had. If a person is determined to have an education of any kind he can get it. Poverty, or weak eyes, or bad health, or large family, is no excuse for remaining in ignorance. "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." I expect some of us preachers would be ashamed of some of our sermons, if we were to see them in print just as we preached them. Then how necessary that we be close students of such works as Clarke's Commentary, Fletcher's Appeal, Watson's Institutes, Wesley's Sermons, and other works of a similar character. And don't forget to consult Webster occasionally. I once heard a young man try to preach upon a subject too profound for any ordinary young man. He roamed from Genesis to Revelation, pacing the pulpit from one side to the other, beating the air, not exactly like the reel of a reaper, saying but little to the point,because he knew but little, making a great noise because there was more sound than sense. After awhile the storm ceased and there was a great calm.

4. Jealously guard your life against everything that will mar or hinder your ministry. This is very essential. We are watched by everybody. Other people can take liberties we are not allowed to take The preacher cannot take a dram, or swear, or play cards without incurring the censure of every one, and he ought to incur it, and he ought to be put out of the ministry; and yet I had as soon have a dram-drinking or card-playing preacher for my pastor as to have one who will court and be engaged to several girls at the same time and then go off and not marry any of them, and probably he had had improper and immoral relations with some of them. A certain young man, once an itinerant in this Conference, and who was honored with a seat in the General Conference and who was an excellent preacher, in paying attention to a certain young lady made improper advances, when she reproved him by saying "I thought you were a preacher" he replied "I am a preacher, but I am a man as well." O, the shame of it! How silly and thoughtless some young preachers are! Just one imprudent act, or one thoughtless expression may ruin the reputation forever. And when the reputation is gone the influence for good is gone. The young man spoken of is out of the work do much good where he is known. Paul and will probably stay out, for he cannot said to Timothy, "Take heed to thyself and to the doctrine," a very important injunction. A minister's life preaches more loudly and eloquently than his tongue. A vain, proud, egotistical, haughty, untruthful, lazy, impure, or otherwise immoral person, has no business in the pulpit. Neither the man who is unsound in his faith, or who will not pay his debts. He will do more harm than good, a thousand times more. The awful responsibilities attached to the office and work of the ministry should cause us to be careful and prayerful and consecrated to God, and to our own work. We, in the past, have had to hang our hearts in shame because of the disgrace and ruin brought upon our church by the immoralities of a few of our ministers. God wants holy men to preach His holy word. We are to be witnesses of His saving power. Our lives are to conform to His holy will. God says to His ministers as well as to others, "Be ye holy for I the Lord your God, am holy." How awful the punishment that will be meted out to the unfaithful preacher who not only fails to do the good he might do, but also brings such reproach upon the name of Christ and such dreadful havoc upon the church!

"How careful then ought we to live,
With what religious fear,
Who such a strict account must give,
For our behavior here!"

5. Be firmly established in the doctrines of the Bible. This is all important in this day of sins and heresies and criticisms and denials. We should be thoroughly convinced of the truth of the Gospel. We should know wherof we speak. The trumpet should give forth no uncertain sound. No man should dare go into the pulpit and proclaim his doubts and negations. "We may know of the doctrine whether it be of God," and knowing the doctrine we should proclaim it with all the certainty and earnestness and fearlessness of the man of God. God calls men to "preach the Word," and they should preach that or nothing. We don't want to know what Darwin thinks, or Russell believes, or the German critics say: we want to know what God says. It is our business to tell the people what He says, and not what we think. We are responsible for what we preach and how we preach. God says "Go, preach the preaching that I bid thee." "Preach the Word." "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." Here, brethren, is your duty plainly laid down by our Lord. No man can be a sucesssful minister who is skeptical or wavering. He must know he has God's message to deliver and deliver it as such. The successful men of the past were the Pauls, the Luthers, the Wesleys, the Spurgeons, the Moodys, the Sam Joneses and many others who did not go about telling people that Christ was not the second person in the ever blessed Trinity, and that His death was not sacrificial, and that men were just out of harmony with God, and were not such great sinners, and that hell was not such a bad place after all, if there be such a place, and if there be such a place, there is no literal fire. They had convictions and preached them. They were assured of the truth of God's word and had no hesitancy in proclaiming that word. Their souls were alive with the love of God. They preached the greatness of the salvation obtained through faith in Jesus Christ and the awfulness of the damnation incurred by all who reject Him. They communed with God daily and their preaching was in demonstration of the Spirit and with power. My brother, if you are not fully assured of the truth of God's word, go home and wait until you are. We want men of faith; men of convictions; men of courage; men of prayer; men of power; men sent of God; Holy Ghost men; men who strive earneestly to spread Scriptural holiness over these lands; men who are doing all they can to build up the waste places of our Zion; men who are prophets seeing the kingdom of this world becoming the kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ; men who are never so happy as when engaged in revival work, leading souls to Christ. We have some such men. May God give us many more!

6. Remember that we are the servants of God, and that He will take care of us and reward us. If we are called of God to preach we certainly have a work to perform—a God-given work; and if we enter upon the discharge of that work and pursue it with humble confidence in God, He will take care of us until the work is done. We may have our trials and hardships; we may get out of money, the meal may get low in the barrel, and there may not be a mouthful of meat in the house, and things may look very gloomy generally, but the Lord will provide. We may get very hungry sometimes and be greatly inconvenienced because of the stinginess and niggardliness of our members, but we will not starve. The Lord will see that we do not starve if we are faithful to Him. Did you ever know a Methodist preacher to starve? Yet I believe the preachers should be well supported; and that circuit that can support the pastor and will not is dishonest. But the preacher that is continually harrassing his people about his salary will soon render himself unpopular and hurt his usefulness. While we need money and must have money, we ought to think less of money and more of the glory of God and the salvation of men. The Lord will provide in some way, if we only trust Him and do our whole duty. "Be careful for nothing" is the advice of the Apostle. We serve the King of heaven who owns "The earth and the fullness thereof." Our lives are in His hands and He will take care of them until our work is finished. And when our work is done we shall receive the reward for faithfulness here, "the crown of life which shall not fade away." "They that sow in tears shall reap in joy. He that goeth forth weeping, bearing precious seed shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bearing his sheaves with him." "They that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars forever." Brethren, if we thus "make full proof of our ministry" and "enter into the joy of our Lord," and see the thousands converted at our altars, "crowned with glory and honor" with ourselves, we will forget all our hardships and tears and labors and crosses and heartaches and sickness. Jesus will "reward us according to our work." And what a glorious reward! Eternal life! A crown of glory! The company of angels! Communion with Christ, our Elder Brother, who loved us and died for us, and "counted us worthy, putting us into the ministry!" Oh! just to see Him as He is, and to see Him forever will be heaven enough for me!

In view then of this great and glorious reward, let us be careful and faithful and prayerful and zealous and watchful and consecrated, "always abounding in the work of the Lord, knowing our labor shall not be in vain in the Lordd." Let us strive more earnestly than ever to get souls converted, saints strengthened in the faith, and the church built up, and so "make full proof of our ministry." Let the language of the poets be our language:

"E'er since, by faith, I saw the stream,
His flowing wounds supply,
Redeeming love has been my theme,
And shall be till I die."
"His only righteousness I show,
His saving truth proclaim,
'Tis all my business here below,
To cry, Behold the Lamb.
Happy, if with my last breath,
I may but gasp His name;
Preach Him to all and cry in death,
Behold, behold the Lamb."

CONFERENCE NOTES.

—Rev. F. C. Klein left on Saturday night to go home and see an oculist. He was suffering from an injury to one of his eyes caused by a chip.

—Rev. W. R. Lowdermilk left Conference before it closed because of a painful affection of one hand. He stopped in Greensboro and consulted Dr. Long.

—Bro. J. A. Gunn was taken sick on his way to Conference and detained in Greensboro for a day.

—Five young men were ordained as elders on Sunday morning. They were Bros. Troxler, Pritchard, Hatley, Self, and T. A. Williams.

The Conference requested the publication of Bro. Highfill's Conference Sermon in the Herald. We are glad to present it this week.

—Dr. Tagg preached in the Christian church in the morning and in the Presbyterian church a night, and then took an automobile ride to Greensboro with Bro. A. B. Kimball.

—Quite a number of Greensboro people visited Conference on Sunday.

—An auto full of Liberty people came on Friday.

—Capt. A. M. Rankin, Mrs. W. P. Pickett and Dr. Reitzel, of High Point were Conference visitors on Monday.

—Rev. C. H. Beck was preacher in the Conference church on Sunday night, drawing from the life of Jonah lessons for the minister of the present day. He made a good impression.

—The memorial service on Sunday afternoon was in honor of three ministers who have died within the year—Revs. E. A. Plyler, S. Simpson, and J. N. Garrett. Rev. G. S. Kernodle, Mrs. T. A. Plyler and Mrs. T. A. Williams were kindly remembered.

—The Stationing Committee this year was Rev. W. E. Swain and Bro. O. W. Hanner, of Winston. A special committee conissting of Rev. C. L. Whitaker and Bro. J. M. Millikan was appointed to station the ex-president and to name the pastor for Winston church whose delegate was a member of the Stationing Committee.

—The entertainment of Conference in the homes of Burlington was all that could be desired and in addition to that the people of Burlington gave large attendance upon the sessions of Conference, perhaps the best we have been honored with in any place in recent years.

—Dr. Harris Glascock, of Greensboro, visited Conference and her sister, Mrs, Kime, on the same trip.

—Rev. T. M. Johnson preached to the faculty and students of Elon College Sunday morning. His sermon was highly appreciated.

—Bro. Hill, of Denton, was present, the first day or two.

—Rev. R. M. Andrews and the choir of which he is leader delighted the Conference with their singing.

—Pastor Davis and his people had pushed work on the Sunday School Annex so as to provide rooms for committee work. This building when completed will afford room for a large amount of Sunday school work, besides enlarging the church auditorium and providing a place for the mid-week prayer meeting, ladies' aid society meetings, etc.

—Prof. Forlines told of his afflictions and how in answer to the earnest prayers of his pupils and others he was saved from a third surgical operation and being restored to health.

—President Cecil expects to travel the district, looking especially after mission points. He asks the prayer and cooperation of pastors and people.

—Rev W. M. Pike was in attendance, but has not yet fully recovered from his attack of typhoid fever.

—The Board of Church Extension for this year consists of Revs. C. A. Cecil, R. M. Andrews, A. G. Dixon and Bros. J. Norman Wills, R. H. Brooks, and M. H. Holt.

—Rev. H. W. Braswell stopped in Greensboro on his way home.

—That late last night's session ought to teach us to avoid the like again. We did not adjourn till after midnight on Monday night.

—The visit to Elon College was much enjoyed. The words of welcome of President Harper, Rev. J. O. Atkinson, "Uncle" Wellons (aged 87), "Uncle Jim" (Rev. Jas. L. Foster, superintendent of the Christian Orphanage) were from the heart. Then luncheon in the college dining hall was received with keen relish. We were delighted with the entertainment by the orphan boys and girls. Mr. Foster gave some statistics showing the great number of children still uncared for. The visit did us good in several ways and will be pleasantly remembered.

—Rev. T. J. Ogburn preached in the M. E. Church on Sunday morning. His sermon was highly spoken of.

—Prof. Forlines, who preached the ordination sermon and who is one of the honored professors of Westminster Theological Seminary, struggled up from the life of a cotton mill boy in Burlington. What he has achieved in the way of scholarship will inspire others who are now as he was then.

—Rev. J. D. Willams preached at Elmira Mill Sunday afternoon.

—Nearly all pulpits of Burlington were occupied by our ministers Sunday morning and night.

—The Protestant Episcopal church invited our Conference to a musical recital. Few of us are sufficiently cultivated in the niceties of music to appreciate it fully.

—Next Conference goes to High Point, and begins Wednesday P. M. instead of Thursday A. M. It is hoped by beginning earlier to avoid the necessity of a late session on Monday night.

—Several boundary changes were made. Three fields were made of Cleveland and Lincoln circuits. Two were made of Guilford, the new one being called Piedmont. Guilford now comprises, Hickory Grove, Red Hill, Fairfield, Mitchell's Grove and Shady Grove. Haw River circuit including the new church in Reidsville was divided into two charges known as Reidsville circuit and Haw River circuit. Some others were made in teritory not familiar to us. The Minutes will give fuller information.

—Quite a number of changes were made in pastoral relations.

—How would it do to elect the stationing committee a year ahead? Would not the members of it have more information to guide them? We ask the question, not because we are convinced, but to direct attention. The committee on pastoral relations is the most important committee of the Conference. The importance of its work and the complexity of its task require great deliberation. Is that possible with the present plan?

—Mr. Albert Sharp and Miss Lillian Sharp, of Moriah, were present on Sunday.

—Bro. J. H. Sharp visited Conference on Saturday.

—The electric railway company gave the members of Conference a free trolley car ride to Graham and Haw River and return.

—Dr. Tagg came early and remained till near the close of the session.

—This was a serious Conference. We heard but little humor and no jokes unless that was meant as a joke when a brother proposed to send two people to Kentucky.

—A call came to Bro. Curry to go to Kentucky and take charge of the school to be opened under the care of the Woman's Home Missionary Society. He referred the matter to the Conference and the Conference did not sanction his going.

—Revs. W. F. Ashburn and D. A. Highfill were at their request left without appointments. A few others were left in the hands of the president.

—Rev. D. A. Braswell was elected Conference Evangelist. This is an office that means little or much according to the man that holds it. Bro. Braswell has uncommon success in evangelistic work, and we believe he will made a record that has never been surpassed in our Conference.

—Caroleen carried off the Sunday school attendance banner this year.

—Graham and Haw River again won the banner for being the first to raise all claims for general interests.

NEW ARRANGEMENT OF PASTORS.

Albemarle—Lindley Gerringer.
Alamance—W. M. Pike.
Anderson and Larborough— W. A. Lamar.
Asheboro—T. J. Ogburn.
Asheville—C. W. Bates.
Burlington—T. E. Davis.
Caroleen—H. W. Braswell.
Caldwell—H. D. Garmon.
Cleveland—W. D. Reed.
Concord—Edward Suits.
Davidson—H. W. Hulin.
Denton—T. H. Matthews.
Fallston—T. A. Plyler.
Fairview—J. R. Hutton.
Flat Rock—W. F. Kennett.
Forsyth—A. O. Lindley.
Gastonia—D. M. Loy.
Graham and Haw Diver—G. L. Curry.
Greensboro—R. M. Andrews.
Greensville and Spring Church—J. A. Ledbetter.
Guilford—T. F. McCulloch.
Halifax—Jesse Pritchard.
Haw River—W. D. Fogleman.
Henderson—J. D. Williams.
High Point—A. G. Dixon.
Ivy and Buncombe—L. H. Hatley.
La Grange—J. H. Abernethy.
Lebanon—J. H. Moton.
Lincolnton—H. E. Waldrop.
Littleton— C. J. Edwards.
Mebane—W. E. Swain.
Mecklenburg—W. P. Martin.
Mocksville—J. W. Self.
Monroe—O. D. Stacey.
Mt. Hermon—E. G. Lowdermilk.
Mt. Pleasant—Robt. Troxler.
Oak Ridge—W. R. Lowdermilk.
Orange—R. C. Stubbins.
Pensacola—Homer Casto.
Piedmont—J. F. Shelton.
Pinnacle—A. L. Hunter.
Randleman—J. B. O'Briant.
Randolph—W. C. Lassiter.
Reidsville—C. E. M. Raper.
Richland—C. H. Whitaker.
Rockingham—J. F. Dosier.
Saxapahaw—G. W. Holmes.
Siler City—J. H. Bowman.
Stanly—G. L. Deynolds.
St. Paul—G. F. Millaway.
Tabernacle—T. M. Johnson.
Thomasville—T. A. Williams.
Uwharrie—Joel Trogdon.
Vance—J. H. Burgess.
West Forsyth—G. H. Austin.
Why Not—J. H. Stowe.
Winston—S. W. Taylor.
W. Winston—S. M. Needham.
Welch Memorial—D. R. Williams.
Yadkin College—H. L. Powell.

—Don't boost yourself.

—Snow this morning was a surprise. Winter begins before its time. Are we to have a long hard winter?

—Conference is over, and now the work begins. Some preachers will have to move, and this will necessitate delay in beginning in some instances.

—A few years ago our linotype machine broke down just at Conference time and interfered with an issue. This year the same machine snapped an indispensable lever and put itself out of commission. If we did not have two strings to our bow, we could not shoot at all this week. As it is, we are a day late. We were most anxious to be on time this week of any week in the year, but things are sometimes perverse, and when we cannot do what we would, we must content ourselves with doing the best we can.

—We are informed that the Herald does not reach some of our North Carolina readers till after Sunday. We would like to know whether this is true invariably or is it only occasionally. If it is necessary, we will in the course of a few weeks (when contracts expire) change the day of publication to Wednesday. But once in a while papers are miscarried in the mails, or labels are rubbed off, which things will still occur. It also illness of a workman puts us back a day. On account of this fact, it may be best to move up a day, so that we will have some margin in cases of unavoidable delay. But let us hear from any North Carolina subscriber whose paper never reaches him till after Sunday.

—"Without church literature the church would perish" declared Dr. Tagg of The Methodist Protestant, Baltimore; still very many interested in the church after a manner do little or nothing for the spread of church literature.

ANNUAL CONFERENCE OFFICERS.

President—Rev. C. A. Cecil, 117 Thurston St., High Point, N. C.

Secretary—Rev. N. G. Bethea, Henderson, N. C.

ELON COLLEGE APPRECIATIVE.

To Dr. McCulloch:

Permit me to say, Brother Editor, that the College and community here appreciates the consideration and courtesy shown us by the visit of the N. C. Conference of the M. P. Church during its recent session at Burlington. You could not have done us a greater honor. We could not but be appreciative.

We have always felt kindly toward your church. We feel more so now. And I am frank to say that no body of religious workers who have visited Elon impressed us more for earnestness and consecration to a great and noble work than did yours. You have our very sincerest sympathy in your work and our most heartfelt prayers for its triumphant success.

We are exceedingly grateful for your visit and extend you a cordial welcome whenever you can come, either as a body or as individuals.

W. A. Harper, President.

REPORT OF BOARD OF CHURCH EXTENSION.

Dear Brethren:

For your information, I beg to submit the following report, showing the expenditure of Church Extension Funds since the beginning of the campaign for the "Twentieth Century Thank Offering, 1899-1900."

Expense, including printing Special Programs, Postage, Interest, etc.	$ 274.03
Rocky Mount Church	3,535.89
Rocky Mount Pastor's salary, 1900-1909	2,573.28
Total	$6,109.17
Broad River Mission Pastor's salary, 1900-1908.	1,119.96
Lebanon Circuit, including Welch Memorial—Pastor's salary, 1902-1905-1909.	1,069.96
Appropriation—Mechanicsville this year	90.00
Grand total	$1,159.96
Welch Memorial, Building	300.00
Welch Memorial Pastor's salary 1910-1912.	490.00
Welch Memorial Balance due...	100.00
Total Lebanon and Welch Memorial	$1,959.96
Asheville, Lot and building .... (of this $455.34 was loaned.)	750.08
Asheville, Pastor's salary, 1905-1909. (During this time Hall rent pd by pastor.)	1,168.28
Asheville, Hall rent	340.00
Total	$2,258.36
Saint Paul's Building	306.00
St. Paul's Pastor's Salary 1905-1912	1,514.52
St. Paul's due this year	175.00
Total	$1,995.52
La Grange, Pastor's Salary, 1905-1910.	546.64
Thomasville, Building	400.00
Thomasville and Lexington, Pastor's salary	346.64
Total	$746.64
Graham, Building	150.00
Graham Pastor's salary	2,264.04
Graham Building this year conditional	50.00
Due Pastor	88.00
Total	$2,552.04
Rockingham Pastor's Salary, ...	718.28
Rockingham, Building (St John's)	159.00
Total (Requested for this year $150.00)	$877.28
Siler City Church	100.00
Siler City and Chatham Ct. Pastor's salary	603.96
Due pastor this year	80.00
Total	$783.96
Anderson Circuit, Pastor's Salary 1908-1909	413.72
Denton, Pastors salary, 1911-1912	294.25
Denton Building this year (conditional)	200.00
Total	$494.25
Reidsville Pastor's salary, 1900-1901-1904.	52.80
Reidsville Pastor's salary 1911 ..	35.00
Reidsville, on lot	354.35
Total	$442.15
Bessemer Church Bldg 1900-1901.	185.00
Littleton, Bldg. 1900-1902	170.50
Plymouth Bldg., 1900	36.00
Plymouth and Edenton pastor's salary, 1901-1906	663.44
Edenton Church	750.42
Total	$1,449.86
Albemarle Ct. 1907-1911	548.22
West Lexington, Building 1901 and 1905	230.00
Concord Building 1902	72.00
Buncombe Circuit, Pastor's salary 1908-1910	296.64
Weaverville Church 1909	250.00
East Winston Mission, Pastor's salary, 1910-1911	375.00
Gastonia, Pastor's salary 1910...	100.00
Caroleen, Pastor's salary 1910...	50.00
Caroleen Church 1905	25.00
Total	$75.00
Gunberry Church, 1900	25.00
Gastonia Cthurch, 1902	10.00
Gideon's Grove, 1902	7.50
Wadesboro Church, 1902	80.00
Liberty, Davidson Ct.	25.00
Shoals Church, 1905	75.00
Mebane Church, 1904-1905	409.90
West Greensboro Lot 1906	150.00
Wesley Chapel, 1907.	30.00
Glen Raven 1910-1912	50.00
Albermarle, Stanly Ct Bldg	130.00

Grand total, including amount due on appropriations for current year $25,408.30

—Our recent note regarding Bro. Ogburn's style of marking his books has brought a word from another, who says that in 1881 he wrote in "Hall's Problem of Human Life"— "Stolen from S.

V. Pickens." We are glad to hear from Bro. Pickens, if only this brief word. He says he is still too ill to write much.

WORDS OF APPRECIATION.

I desire to express my sincere thanks and appreciation to the members and delegates of the North Carolina Conference of Methodist Protestant Church for a gift of $7.00 presented to me at the close of the last session of the Conference held in Burlington. I cannot find words to express fully my appreciation of the gift of recognition for services rendered during the Conference. I again thank you.

Charles B. Way.
Burlington M. P. Church.

WHOLLY RESIGN.

In fancy I see looming near me,
A great, white beautiful throne,
At the foot of the throne there is kneeling
A frail form weeping alone,
As the sobs of that soul go upward,
A light on the face doth shine,
Which speaks in sweetest accents
The majestic word, resign.

The cost of the struggle was greater,
Than tongue of men can tell,
But with it came the sweet message—
"Christ doeth all things well."
Now, friends, when duty calls you,
To labor where light does not shine,
Just kneel at the feet of the Master,
And to Him your whole will resign.

Anon.

A GOOD THING TO DO.

As the glad Christmas season approaches and we think of gathering our loved ones around us and having a pleasant time socially let us remember one who is too far away from home to enjoy this privilege.

We have sent Miss Gertrude Mallett as our representative to Japan, and let us gladden her heart and cheer her loneliness by sending her a remembrance in money at this time. Will you not send a contribution however small as early as possible in order that it may reach her by Christmas. Put yourself in her place and try to think how much you would appreciate being remembered.

Please send all contributions to Miss Velna McCulloch, Treas., Greensboro, N. C.

It is foolish to pray for revelation when your Bible lies unopened on your table.—Christian Herald.

—Bro. C. H. Whitaker is the grateful owner of a new overcoat presented to him by Bro. J. H. Redding, one of his parishioners.

BURLINGTON.

Sunday school attendance last Sunday was 362, and the offering amounted to $20.59. There were 180 visitors present. The attendance was the largest we have had this year. The Baraca class had a record-breaking attendance, the number being 110, about 85 of which were visitors. This increase was a result of the Conference ministers and delegates being present.

The Conference closed Monday night. It was in many respects, a great Conference. Many vital questions were considered, including the Children's Home and a college for the M. P. Church in this state. Among the most distinguished visiting ministers were: Drs. F. T. Tagg, C. H. Hubble, F. C. Klein, C. E. Forlines and C. H. Beck, all of whom delivered splendid and impressive sermons and addresses. The address by Dr. Tagg Monday night on the subject, "Methodism and Education," was probably the best of all and was considered a masterpiece of oratory, dealing with a religious theme, and presenting the principles and origin of the Methodist Protestant church in a very convincing and able manner.

Perhaps the oldest visitor to conference was Mr. John Laws, of Hillsboro, N. C., who has held the office of Register of Deeds of Orange County for the past 68 years. Mr. Laws is 89 years old, but appears to be in good health yet.

We are glad to have our pastor, Bro. Davis, remain with us. We hope the members will co-operate with our pastor the coming year so that we may accomplish much good in advancing the church and the noble cause for which it stands.

We regret very much to lose Bro. R. M. Andrews, our S. S. superintendent, who has served our school in that capacity so well and satisfactorily the past year. We congratulate the Greensboro people on being so fortunate in securing Bro. Andrews as their pastor. We reluctantly give him up as our superintendent.

Charles B. Way.

Burlington, N. C.

FAIR GROVE, WHY NOT CIRCUIT.

The last appointment for this conference year 1912 was held third Sunday. Bro. J. H. Stowe gave us a splendid sermon from Matthew 25 which we enjoyed very much. Our people are well pleased with Bro. Sowe's past year's work, and would like to have him back with us another year if it suits.

Our. S. S. is progressing nicely; we are glad to see the S. S. improving so fast; we feel that it has been a great help to the church here at this place.

Rev. C. L. Spencer from Alabama is to preach for us next Sunday at 11 o'clock also at night. We are glad to have him back with us again.

This church has recently sent some useful things to the Orphan's Home which we feel like they will be glad to get. May we not forget these little ones that they have to have food as well as shelter.

Reporter.

BETHANY S. S.

Dear Bro. McCulloch:

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely at present. We had forty-four present last Sunday, and as it was the regular preaching day, we had a nice congregation and Bro. J. T. Price of Geneva gave us an able address on our duty to the Missionary work in the heathen land. He told us of the condition of the heathen countries and the lack of money to send preachers there to preach and teach them the plans of salvation. Bro. Price tells us that he is not begging money, but he wants to urge upon the people that it is a Christian duty to help to support the Gospel to send it to a country where there is some one dying every time the clock ticks that knows nothing of Christ and the plans of the Gospel.

After Bro. Price talked for about 40 minutes, Bro. F. C. Lester gave a short talk about our duty as he saw it toward sending the Gospel to the foreign lands and the great lack of money to send preachers there so that people might have the Gospel preached. I hope that the talks which was so attentively listened to will be carried home with each one and thought and prayed over that it may be seed sown in good ground that it may bring forth much fruit.

The writer wants to call to your attention, while it is our duty to help to support the Gospel in foreign lands, we must bear in mind that it is our duty to support our home church and its preachers. If we want to enjoy our religion we must have some one to instruct us. If we have nothing in a thing we care nothing about it.

We will be glad indeed to hear from Conference, for we are anxious to know if we are going to get Bro. Raper back for our pastor the coming year.

We had a sad accident in our community, Saturday evening, Mr. Farrow who was working at a saw mill fell on the saw and got his arm cut off at his elbow. He was carried to St. Leo's Hospital for treatment.

J. D. B.

November 25, 1912.

OUR FOREIGN MISSIONARY WORK.

Mission Property Damaged.

Evidently practically all our pastors and members did not read my statements in this paper the last two weeks in which I stated that our mission property in Japan had been damaged by a great hurricane, word of which reached me by a cable message, if I may judge by the two or three responses which were received.

Only a few dollars have been received, whereas we need a thousand. I must make this appeal to the church, it is altogether an unlooked for, extraordinary and sudden demand which finds us totally unprepared to respond, because we have no provisions for such an emergency.

If special gifts or offerings are not received, the repairs must be paid for out of the regular receipts which are now insufficient, and so the work must suffer for lack of promised support, or debt must be contracted, and the church ought not to permit this to be done.

I appeal to all our pastors to present this matter to their congregations, and give them an opportunity to respond with an offering, and send it to me immediately, please.

Now is the time for the friends of the cause to come to the aid of the Board with special contributions for this imperative need.

I hope numerous and prompt responses will be made to this urgent appeal.

The Great Exposition

"The World in Baltimore," a vast exposition of buildings, shops, temples, peoples in costume giving demonstrations of customs, worship, etc., of many lands, and missionaries lecturing on different subjects, was formally opened October 25th. Ambassador Bryce of England made the principal address, and declared the exposition open.

Our people generally should avail themselves of this unequaled opportunity to see and hear the many things of interest here.

The great pageant of Darkness and Light will set forth in song, porcession, and character the signal triumphs of the Gospel in different lands, and is one of the most impressive and inspiring representations.

Methodist Day was October 31st, and Methodists far and near were invited. Our own church was well represented on the program, and the day promised to be a great success.

For Our Own Also.

Specially do I request prayer for our missionaries and their Japanese associates and helpers. They and their great work, and the conditions in which they live and labor should be more in our thought, and at home altars, in regular church services, in Sunday school and C. E. Society meetings, prayer should be offered in their behalf.

An item in the Recorder is most encouraging, for it states the faculty and students of Westminster College, Tehuacana, Texas, lifted their united prayer to God for our missionaries, and also sent their greeting to them, and the hope that some from their number at the College may be led to consecrate their lives to the work.

Surely if our people pray earnestly for our missionaries and their work their hearts will be moved in deeper sympathy, and they will help the work more. So may it be.

Fred C. Klein, Cor. Sec.-Treas.
316 N. Charles St, Baltimore, Md.

THE PERSONALITY OF A PASTOR.

One of the modest laymen of Greater Boston, once president of the Boston Methodist Social Union, addresses the following communication to the editor:

"The office of the Christian ministry seems to be variously interpreted. Of course the layman's view differs somewhat from the ministerial, but as the benefits of preaching are largely aimed at the laity, it is not surprising that they should press their views for consideration. One of the first thoughts suggesting itself to a layman is that the minister should be a volunteer, and not a drafted man. If, as is alleged in the nation's army, one of the former is worth two of the latter, still more emphatically does the statement hold in the army of the Lord.

"The minister's call to preach, if not a loud one, should be a penetrating and convincing one. If he does his work perfunctorily, he is a weariness to the flesh, and his auditors are sufferers, and not beneficiaries, thereby. As a sequence, polished manners, comeliness of person, a mellifluous voice, a keen sense of propriety, and the smoothest and most unctuous of sermons, do not ensure even the material prosperity of a church. These things may bring, and often do, a simultation of prosperity, until the officiary finds its church affected with a sort of dry rot and in danger of collapse. The head of a large business house remarked of a certain agent in his employ that he had many stimulating suggestions to make and was attractive in many ways, 'but he never landed an order,' and so they couldn't keep him. The parallel of this will be found in many a great church, or what ought to be one.

"It therefore follows that a layman has right to estimate his pastor by the results he accomplishes. While it should not be necessary for the layman to instruct the minister in the line of his duties, a kindly suggestion from him might well be received in the spirit in which it is tendered, and not with a supercilious air of superiority, for it sometimes happens that the layman has an outlook upon life that the minister might well envy.

"The minister ought to be a man of both physical and spiritual virility. He may be denied the former, but the latter is surely attainable.

"It is a small and resourceless community that deprives the minister of the enrichment of his discourse by adequate yet not superfluous illustration; and, after all, when other sources run dry, there is still the Holy Scriptures, fertile in illustration and containing the deepest and purest well of English undefiled, from which to draw to embellish the poverty of his own language.

"It ought by this time to be accepted as an axiom that sermons, however eloquent, or however suited to fastidious tastes, cannot save a church. The factor to which, above all others, the church ought to be able to appeal, is the personality of its pastor. That personality should permeate every sermon and be emphasized in every pastoral call, always assuming that this bond and tie of a strong church is as effectively accomplished in our cities as in our smaller communities—an assumption, it is hardly necessary to add, not fully borne out by the facts.

"We are living in an advancing age whose demands must be met by pulpit and pew. But no device for permanently filling the pews can be found or invented to compare with the high character, spiritual attainments, and earnest and self abnegating life of the Christian minister. Even a large membership, a choice location, a superb edifice, modern conveniences and luxuries in abundance, are all handicapped and neutralized by a wavering, indecisive and ease-loving pulpit."—Zion's Herald.

A FORLORN OLD WOMAN

It was a bleak, snowy day; the train was late; the waiting room was dark and smoky, and the dozen women, old and young, and a few men, who sat waiting impatiently, all looked cross, low spirited, and stupid. I thought, as I looked around, that my fellow beings were a very uninteresting set.

Just then a forlorn old woman, shaking with palsy, came in with a basket of wares for sale, and went about offering them to those seated in the station. Nobody bought anything from her, and the poor old soul stood blinking at the door a minute as if reluctant to go out into the bitter storm again. She turned presently, and poked about the room, as if trying to find something, and then a lady dressed in black, who lay as if asleep on a sofa, opened her eyes, saw the woman, and instantly asked her in kind words:

"Have you lost anything, ma'am?"

"No, I'm looking for the heatin' place, to have a warm 'fore I goes out agin. My eyes is poor, and I don't seem to find the furnace nowhere."

"Here it is," and the lady led her to the steam radiator, placed a chair, and showed her how to warm hef feet.

"Well, now, that's nice!" said the old woman, spreading out her ragged mittens to dry. "Thank you dear! This is nice and comfortable. I'm most froze today, bein' lame and wabbly; and not selling much makes me kind of downhearted."

The lady smiled, went to the counter, bought a cup of coffee and some kind of food, carried it herself to the old woman, and said, as respectfully and kindly as if the poor creature had been dressed in silk and fur: "Won't you have a cup of hot coffee? It's very comfortable such a day as this."

"Do they give coffee at this depot?" cried the old woman in a tone of innocent surprise that made a smile go round the room, touching their faces like a streak of sunshine. "Well, now, this is jest lovely," she added, appreciatively, sipping away with a relish. "This does warm my very heart."

While she refreshed herself, telling her story, meanwhile, the lady looked over the poor little wares in the basket, bought some things, and cheered the soul of the old woman by paying well for them.

As I watched her doing this, I thought what a sweet countenance she had. I felt ashamed of myself that I had shaken my head when the basket was offered to me; and as I saw the look of interest, sympathy, and kindness come into the faces all around me, I wished that I had been the one to call it out. It was only a kind word and a friendly act, but somehow it brightened that dingy room wonderfully. It changed the faces of all who were present, and I think it touched all their hearts, for I saw many eyes follow the plain lady with sudden respect, and when the old woman got up to go several persons beckoned to her and bought something, as if they wished to make amends for their first negligence. The simple little charity was a good sermon to those who saw it, and I think each one went on his way better for the short time spent in the dreary station.—Exchange.

A PASSING TOUCH.

Mrs. Phillips, waking to the glory of a May morning, was ashamed of herself at the sinking heart with which she faced it. But the task had to be done. Jennie had outgrown all her last summer's dresses and must have new ones soon, for hot weather might be upon them any day; besides, putting it off only made it so much the harder. Yet even as she told herself these things, she was almost hoping that Mrs. Burgess would not be able to take care of Little Brother after all.

Mrs. Burgess, big and cheerful, put an end to that way of escape an hour later, when she ran over for the baby. "I've just been longing for a chance to run off with him," she assured his mother. "Don't be surprised if you find us both missing when you come back."

Mrs. Phillips tried to smile as she put Jennie's best hat over the carefully brushed hair. Jennie was very quiet, but her soft eyes were shining with excitement. She was just beginning to be old enough to want new dresses. Her mother, understanding the look, turned sharply away. That was what she could not bear—the buying cheap things for Jennie; that was what made shopping day a torture in anticipation, an agony in retrospect.

When they reached the city, she hurried past the windows where little girls' dresses were displayed, and turned her head resolutely when they passed the spring hats, decorated with bewildering knots and clusters of flowers. Jennie's hat would have to be trimmed with stiff bows—if only Jennie's mother had had any knack in her finger tips!—and Jennie's little new gowns would have to be the cheapest ginghams.

Setting her lips firmly she led the way to the gingham department; she went straight for the counter marked "Domestic—6½ cents a yard," and begun to look for something in blue to match Jennie's eyes. As she stood there, two beautifully-gowned women passed. One of them shivered fastidiously and said to her companion:

"Oh, do you see how any one can buy such cheap stuff?"

Mrs. Phillips' hand dropped from the counter, and the hot color surged into her face. The next moment a pleasant voice spoke beside her:

"Aren't these the prettiest things for little girl's dresses? And they wear so splendidly! I always think that if I had a little girl I'd love to make her dresses like these—pretty enough for anybody, but not too pretty to live in, you know."

Mrs. Phillips' eyes, full of pain, met a pair of sweet and friendly ones beneath a marvelous hat.

"Do you really?" she cried.

"I do, indeed," the other answered, gently. "You see—I have no little girl."

Mrs. Phillips drew a sharp breath, but the look in her eyes changed.

"Jennie," she said, "which do you want—the pink or the blue?"—Youth's Companion.

ROSETTA POPE'S SCHOOL.

"What are you doing?"

It was Rosetta's uncle who asked the question.

Rosetta looked up with a little laugh.

"I'm playing school," she said.

Uncle Leonard came near and gazed at her row of pupils, first in wonder, then with an amused smile.

"You have some very famous scholars," he observed.

A dozen or more cards were arranged on chairs before her, and each card pictured the face of a man or woman prominent in literature.

"Is Tennyson at the head or foot of the class?" he inquired, his eyes twinkling.

"Oh, at the head!" Rosetta answered. "I don't know what other people think, but I rank them first just as I like them, and then, if they don't recite well, they have to go down."

"Do they recite?" her uncle asked. "Spelling and geography?"

"Of course not! They recite from their own works—here are the lessons!" and she laid her hand on a big pile of books at her right.

"Do you admit visitors?"

"Oh, yes, sir! Mamma often comes in. That's the visitors seat, pointing to a great armchair.

So from the other side of the room Uncle Leonard watched the small teacher and her renowned scholars.

"Lord Tennyson will please recite his New Year's poem, beginning:

"'Ring out, wild bells, to the wild sky.'"

Whereupon Rosetta selected a book from the pile, and keeping her fingers on the place, recited the lines with very little hesitation.

"Well done!" praised her uncle.

"Thank you," said Rosetta, blushing.

The next card bore the face of Alexander Pope, and the teacher said:

"Mr. Pope, you may recite two lines from your 'Essay on Man'" and again Rosetta spoke for her pupil:

"'Honor and shame from no condition rise;
Act well your part, there all the honor lies.'"

Then she turned to her uncle with a smile. "I can't understand much of his," she explained; "but seeing our names are the same, I thought I'd have to put him in somewhere, and he's learned those lines so well he stays up near the head."

Uncle Leonard burst out laughing, but was checked by Rosetta's warning finger.

"Mr. Cowper, please give us the first and last verses of 'John Gilpin.'"

Rosetta began bravely enough:

"'John Gilpin was a citizen
Of credit and renown;
A——'"

Silently she puckered her forehead, and then she said in a voice supposed to be stern: "Mr. Cowper, you may go to the foot!" adding to her uncle: "I never can remember that, but I like it."

"And how often do you have this sort of thing?" asked Uncle Leonard.

"Oh, whenever I get lonesome! I guess I'd rather have you talk to me now," and with one sweep of the hand she gathered her famous pupils together and tossed them on the table.

"Tell me about Cousin Maud, please," she coaxed.

"One thing about her is that she is lonely most of the time, we live so far from neighbors. I think I'll get a set of cards like yours on my way home, and tell her about this school of yours."

"Oh, do!" cried Rosetta. "And then when she comes down here next summer we can play it together. Mamma likes it because she says it teaches me so much."

"I should say so! I shall have to coach Maude at first; she doesn't know one author from another."

"Neither did I till I learned," said Rosetta.—EMMA C. DOWD, in Young Christian Soldier.

Socialism has grown as follows in the United States: In 1888, 2,000; in 1892, 21,512; in 1896, 36,454; in 1900, 127,519; in, 1904, 436,184; in 1908, 434,645; in 1910, 640,756.

HER TURN.

A certain lady induced her husband, who was not a regular churchgoer, to accompany her to evening service. During the sermon he fell asleep, snoring at first softly and at length so noisily that the good lady was constrained to give him a sharp nudge in the hope of rousing him.

To her consternation, however, as he slowly awakened, he exclaimed in a loud tone: "Let me alone! Get up and light the fire yourself—it's your turn!"—Continent.

A BOY'S ESSAY ON CATS.

A school boy wrote an essay on cats. The chapter on different breeds supplies the following information:

"Cats that's made for little boys and girls to maul and tease is called Maltease cats. Some cats is known by their queer purrs—there are called Pursian cats. Cats with very bad tempers is called Angorrie cats. Cats with deep feelin's is called Feline cats."

Bobby: "I've been an awful good boy since I started going to Sunday school, haven't I?"

Mother: "Yes, dear, you've been very good indeed."

Bobby: "And you don't distrust me any more, do you?"

Mother: "No, dear."

Bobby: "Then why do you continue to hide the pie?"

The short and final session of the present Congress will assemble Monday, Dec. 2. Very little legislation is looked for at this session, as the country at large has changed the features of the present body considerably.

—The Sultan of Turkey has asked the King of Italy to use his good offices in bringing about more conciliatory attitude on the part of Montenegro and Servia to Turkey. The Balkins are bringing the "unspeakables" to their sense at any rate.

—Post Master General Hitchcock says that political campaign literature sent through the mail this this year has caused a deficit in postal receipts of at least $81,781,000. which would have been a profit of more than $1,000,000, but for the unlimited franking privileges of officials at Washington. "Political dope" causes the deficit, it is declared and the people must pay. During the year the Government handled 310,245,000 pieces of franked matter weighing 61,371,000 pounds.

WHY THE CHANGE?

By Rev. D. E. Millard.

During the earthly ministry of our Lord the Sacred Record informs us that great multitudes followed Him from place to place "And the common people heard him gladly." They did so, notwithstanding the powerful and bitter influence that was arraigned against him. Those who became His followers were mainly of this class. They stood for what was best in humanity. And when the Great Teacher came, whose words passed beneath the cold forms of religion and revealed its deeper principles and life, their quick untaught perceptions beheld, and their hungry and suffering hearts felt, that He was their friend, their helper, and they "heard Him gladly."

Has it not been so always in the past? Why, then, should it not be so now? It must be confessed that the attitude of the common people toward religion, in these later days, has changed. This is apparent from the few men in attendance at church services, the many vacant pews in the large city churches, and the dropping out entirely of so many country churches. Truly it is an important question for us to consider why this is so.

Have the great multitudes so changed that their religious impulses are less generous and responsive to the gospel now, than when Christ taught? Or has something else, something other than the real life and teachings of Christ come to animate religious organizations, and the nominal church. So that the opposition, when analyzed, is not so much to religion, as to that which has usurped its place, and is quite different in its spirit from the teachings of its Divine Founder. It must be admitted that in far too many churches in this "progressive" age more deference is paid to social distinction than to downright religious earnestness.

In Christ's time the multitudes were impressed with the profound sincerity, the downright honesty, and the heavenly-mindedness of Jesus Christ. They saw in Him the highest and best exhibition of the truth of the Gospel. And so the multitude heard Him gladly. Let the same spirit possess the hearts of all Christians as it does of some to-day; let it permeate the whole church; let it be breathed from every pulpit and exhaled from every life of every one who has named himself a follower of Christ, and much of the opposition, and a large share of the indifference to religion that prevails in the world, will vanish—nay, will give way to earnest faith and hearty acceptance of Christian truth. . . .with this spirit more fully possessed by the church and dwelling in the hearts of of those who hold forth the word of life, a mighty change would be wrought. Let Christ thus preach through His people and the multitude will hear Him gladly still.

THE IMPOSSIBLE MADE POSSIBLE.

Jesus said unto him, If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth. Mark 9:23. Golden Text for Sunday, December 1.

There is life in belief. There is death in unbelief. Life and belief are in some way inseparably connected. So are belief and reality. You certainly must believe that a thing, or a condition, can be before you will be instrumental in making it be. The discovery of America was an unheard of impossibility until Columbus came forward with a belief that the thing could be done. It was an impossible task till belief made it possible. The ocean today would have no cable across it unless a Field had believed that this impossible task could be done. Air ships were impossible until the Wright brothers came forward with the belief that the air was navigable. Belief ever and always blazes the way for effort and endeavor.

Now it was on this fact of human nature, and upon this psychological truth, that Jesus the Christ based His life and love and labor. His power was not only abundant, but infinite. The method of appreciation of that power was through belief. Unbelief barred the door to Him, and kept Him from a man's heart and life. There was no way of communicating with His power, that is, the divine power, to a man save by and through the channel of belief. A man is just himself and nothing more as long as he refuses to believe in the power of Christ to help him. When he believes in Christ then an avenue of approach is made from him to Christ. Belief is the channel.

In the lesson, Christ had the power in Himself to help the lunatic boy, and cast the evil spirit out, as much before there was belief on the part of the man as afterwards; but He could not convey it, until there was belief in Him.

There is sufficient power in Christ to day to wipe out every sin in the human heart, destroy every evil inclination, and abolish all evil weakness and infirmities; and Christ would do this very thing if all men everywhere would believe in Him, and in His power to do this.

"I was just born with a quick temper an d can't control it," says one. And you never will control it until you believe that Jesus Christ can and will control it for you, if you will only let Him.

We haven't the power to wipe out any of our sins, passions, evil inclinations, weaknesses, destructive spirits, but Jesus has the power to do these things for us; and He will do it if we only believe in Him. Belief is the channel through which blessings flow from the Master to us; and the reason why we do not get more power and more blessings from Him is because we haven't a stronger belief, a deeper and more abiding faith in Him.

How shall a man have belief, have faith, a saving belief, a power bringing faith? Well, the man in the lesson tells, "I believe; help thou mine unbelief." when our belief is not stronger enough, we have ever before us One who can help us, and will, if we in fear, and in what faith we have, call upon Him.

—From The Christian Sun.

BEFORE IT IS TOO LATE.

If you have a grey-haired mother
In the old home far away,
Sit down and write the letter
You put off day by day.
Don't wait until her tired steps
Reach heaven's pearly gate.
But show her that you think of her
Before it is too late.
If you've a tender message
Or a loving word to say,
Don't wait till you forget it
But whisper it today.
Who knows what bitter memories
May daunt you if you wait?
So make your loved ones happy
Before it is too late.
We live but in the present
The future is unknown;
Tomorrow is a mystery,
Today is all our own.
The chance that fortune leads to us
May vanish while we wait.
So spend your life's rich pleasure
Before it is too late.
The tender word unspoken,
The letter never sent,
The long-forgotten messages
The wealth of love unspent.
For these some hearts are breaking,
For these some loved ones wait;
To show them that you care for them
Before it is too late.

—Sidna Allen, the notorious outlaw, who has been on trial for the murder of Judge Thornton Massie at Hillsville, Va., March 14, was convicted of murder in the second degree and given 15 years in the State's prison. Immediately the prosecution announced that the prisoner would next be tried for the murder of Commonwealth's Attorney William M. Foster, and the trial was set for December 2.

ABOUT DIPHTHERIA.

What it is, How to Detect it, and What To Do for It.

Diphtheria is a dangerous communicable disease. It is more prevalent in cold weather than in summer. This is because it is highly contagious and because in winter we lock ourselves up close in air-tight houses, schoolrooms and churches, where it is more easily transmitted. Diphtheria is caused by a specific germ propagated in a human body. The disease is harbored in filth and usually transmitted through air, water, milk, food, clothing, by means of playthings, etc.

The disease usually affects the throat, but it may spread into the mouth or nose. The first indications of diphtheria are sore throat, loss of appetite, headache, feverish, hot, dry skin, soreness and swelling at the angle of the jaw, and, frequently, profuse secretions with offensive odors. A white coating of membrane in the back part of the mouth and throat is almost positive broof of diphtheria.

When children evidence some of the above symptoms, do not be misled and neglect it as ordinary "sore throat," tonsilitis, or laryngitis. Find out about it by calling in your family doctor. Failure to recognize diphtheria early ofttimes results fatally or becomes the cause of extensive epidemics. As soon as diphtheria is discovered, the health officer should be advised, in order that he may be on the alert to forestall an epidemic among others who have been exposed.

The generally recognized method of treating diphtheria is by means of antitoxin. Antitoxin is also administered in small doses as a preventive to those who have been exposed to the disease. The law requires the State Board of Health to arrange for the distribution of diphtheria antitoxin from a number of points throughout the State, where physicians can obtain it without paying the outrageous price charged a few years ago. Formerly the smallest dose cost sometimes $2 or $3. Now it can be obtained through the State Board of Health for 50 cents. This is the best price obtained from the manufacturers, though it really costs only about 10 cents to make it. It is hoped that the next Legislature will see its way clear to require the Board of Health to make a reliable antitoxin and distribute it free to all cases in the State. Such action is not only a wise business investment, but in innumerable cases, deaths, and epidemics of diphtheria would be prevented.

Precautions About Diphtheria...

The chief thing to remember is that diphtheria is highly contagious. It is wise, therefore, to treat bad cases of tonsilitis and other sore throats as suspected causes of diphtheria. You should be careful about catching the breath of the patient. The patient should be kept in a room with only such furniture as is necessary to his case and comfort. He should not be allowed to handle books or toys. Those which he handled prior to the time it was determined that he had the disease should be burned. Such disinfections as the doctor orders should be rigidly used, and only those who are caring for the patient should be permitted to enter the room.

Diphtheria poison may retain its virulence for a long time and may be carried long distances in articles which have been allowed to remain in a room in which a diphtheria person has been cared for.—(Dr. Evans.)

Flies are fond of hovering around cuspidors and feasting on tuberculosis sputum. The specks of flies contain live tubercle bacilli after they have eaten tuberculosis sputum, showing that the baccilli will pass through the digestive tract of the fly in an active infective state.

The feet cannot be kept warm unless the blood circulates freely in the extremities; and that will not be the case if the boots, shoes, or stockings are tight.

Always let the light fall upon the object viewed from over the left shoulder, if possible. It should never come from the front.

If you let the child have measles when he is young, you may save a doctor's bill later, but you may have have to pay the undertaker now.

The only night air which is injurious is last night's. Open the windows and let it out.

—James Bryce, the British ambassador at Washington, has tendered his resignation on account of his advanced age and of his desire to do literary work. He is the author of "The American Commonwealth." His successor as ambassador will be Sir Cecil Arthur Spring-Rice.

—Dr. Odin, of Paris, claims to have discovered a cure for cancer, but says there is a conspiracy of the medical profession to ignore his findings.

—Guilford county's vote for president was 3830 for Wilson, 1979 for Roosevelt, and 460 for Taft..

—Two battle ships have been sent by President Taft to protect American interests inAsiatic Turkey in the event of an uprising against foreigners. These are the Montana and Tennessee.

Be kind to the Horse.—A lady started to drive her buggy horse home. He would not go until some one took him by the bridle and led him. Then he would not go fast, and she used the whip on him. When at last she reached home, she found the animal was going blind. She then felt she had been cruel to the poor faithful beast.

In Utah there are approximately three hundred towns; and of these two hundred and nineteen have only such religious services as are supplied by the Mormons.

The Tri-State Baptist Hospital (Tennessee-Arkansas-Mississippi) at Memphis has been filled from the very beginning. It has been in use only three months and has had 335 operations.

Dr. Newton H. Marshall, in British Weekly, reporting a meeting of the Baptist Union, says: "Rev. A. C. Dixon, pastor of the Metropolitian Tabernacle, delivered the union sermon. He said he had been tempted to preach on "The Fruits of Liberal Christianity', believing that he 'could tell the British Association all about it.' But he has decided to preach from Luke 13:32: 'Fear not, little flock, for it is the Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom.' To attempt to summarize the sermon that followed would be to do it an injustice. It was good, rich talk that does not submit to analysis. It was full of epigrams, little parables, varied chips from a commentator's workshop, shrewd, homely, humorous touches, that caught the attention of the huge audience, and carried it from one religious idea to another with extraordinary felicity. The hearers laughed, and then were deeply still. They cheered, and then settled into solemnity. The address made us all feel that Dr. Dixon has a useful and wide-reaching service to render in just such simple and human words that are knit up with the Gospel of God's love."

The Federal Council.

The second quadrennial council of the Protestant churches of America; thirty-two denominations, with a membership of over 17,000,000, is to convene in Chicago, December 4-10, 1912. This Council plans large things, and is seeking for a more thorough understanding of the position of each denomination and a closer sympathy and cooperation of all the churches of Protestantism. The following stanza has been adopted as the battle cry of the Council:

"Like a mighty army moves the Church of God.
Brothers, we are traveling where the saints have trod.
We are not divided, all one body we,
One in hope and doctrine, one in charity."

We do not see how words could be chosen that are more appropriate than these. We trust the Council will accomplish all that it has undertaken in the way of breaking down the barriers between the different sects and hasten the day of delightful fellowship when there will be a united Church to fight a united foe.

Carnegie and Ex-Presidents.

Mr. Andrew Carnegie through his immense fund, set aside for benevolent, patriotic and philanthropic purposes, proposes to give ex-Presidents of the United States, and their widows during widowhood, a pension of $25,000. a year each.

Of course, as the decision is announced a storm of protest arises. Wherefore we want to remark that our capitalists who become generous certainly do have a hard time giving away their money. Every time one of them decides on a great benevolence a whole gang of croakers cry out. When Rockefeller in particular made his great gift to help fight the hook worm disease in the South we feared they would actually do violence to the Deacon.

If Mr. Carnegie wants to pension ex-Presidents and their widows why not let him do it. The aggrieved claim that the United States Government is able to pension and to take care of its own ex-presidents and their widows. The fact is, however, that the United States Government has not so far taken any steps in this direction and the ex-Presidents and their widows have to do like other folks, and get along as best they may.

Now, ex-Presidents should maintain a certain sort of dignity. They should be able to give the benefit of their talent, time, and experience to the general good of government and citizenship without being obliged to work for their daily bread. They have a knowledge of affairs and a vital touch with govermental matters that should be valuable, if employed for the common good. Besides, a man who has carried the burden of this nation for four or eight years in the White House deserves treatment and care above the average. He has earned a rest and a competence. If the Government he has served will not give him this, then let Mr. Carnegie or any other philanthropist who has the means and desires it do so. It is a pity that a man cannot give away his money in peace, without being howled at by the critics and croakers. It would be a caution to see what some of these critics would do with their money—if they had any, which they are not likely to have by the way, to share—

—From The Christian Sun.

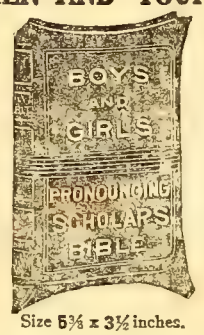
CHRISTMAS PRESENTS

HOLMAN BIBLES

FOR CHILDREN AND YOUNG SCHOLARS

For Intermediate Scholars

Every boy and girl should have a Bible. The Bible is the Word of God. Its early impressions on the youthful mind are both beneficial and enduring. It builds character and its influence is toward Christianity and Right Living. It stands for all that is Good and Noble and symbolizes the highest ideals of life.



Size 5⅜ x 3½ inches.

PICTORIAL BIBLE

With beautiful photo views of scenes in Bible lands distributed throughout the text. Also six maps of Bible lands in colors. Also with new Practical Helps to Bible Study, especially designed for instructing children in scriptural information.

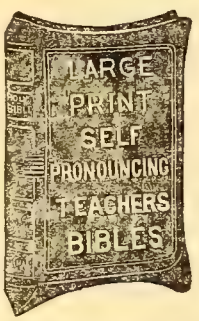
The text is self-pronouncing, by the aid of which children can learn to pronounce the difficult Scripture proper names.

No. 91. French Seal Leather, overlapping covers, round corners, gold edges, gold titles. Special $.95 Postage, 10 cents.

SPECIMEN OF TYPE

WHOSOEVER believeth that Jē'sus is the Christ is born of God: and every one that loveth him

For Teachers and Preachers



Size 8 x 5½ inches.

Holman Self-Pronouncing Large-Print Teachers' Bibles

SPECIMEN OF TYPE

the priests, the Lē'vītes, the the singers, the Nĕth'i-nīms, they that had separated then

Containing New Copyrighted Helps: A Practical Comparative Concordance. Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Four Thousand Questions and Answers. Fifteen Colored Maps.

No. 47. Egyptian Morocco, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges. Special price, $2.00 Postage, 25 cents.

RED LETTER EDITION

Same large type and Helps as described above. The words of Christ in the New Testament, Prophecies relating to Christ in the Old Testament, etc., are all printed in RED.

No. 81 RL. $2.50 Postage, 25 cents.

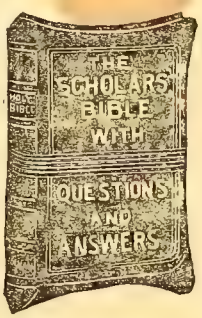
Holman Pictorial Scholars' Bible Pronouncing Text



Size 7 x 5 inches.

SPECIMEN OF TYPE

22 And the prophet came to the Is'ra-el, and said unto him, Go, str thyself, and mark, and see what tho for at the return of the year the

Beautifully printed on fine white paper from new, clear type. Containing, in addition to the Old and New Testaments, 32 Beautiful Photo Views of Scenes in Bible Lands. These views are printed on enameled paper and are made from recent photographs, which show places as they actually are today. In addition, this Bible also contains Helps to the Study of the Bible. Four Thousand Questions and Answers, Presentation Plate and Maps in colors.

No. 21. French Morocco, overlapping covers, headbands and marker, round corners, red under gold edges $1.20 Postage, 14 cents.

RED LETTER EDITION

Same Bible with Helps, etc., as above and with the Sayings of Christ in the New Testament printed in RED.

No. 21 RL. Binding same as 21. $1.45 Postage, 14 cents.

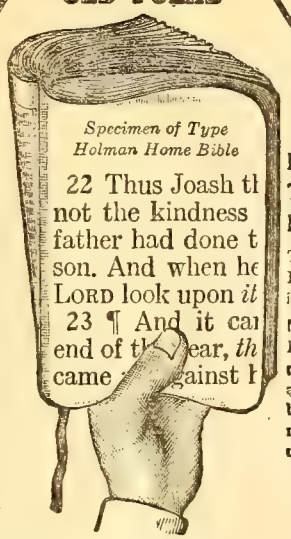
Four Best Editions of the World's Best Book

FOR OLD FOLKS

The Holman Home Bible

Printed from large, clear Pica type, with Marginal References, Family Record, and Maps. This Home Bible is new and very desirable for eevryday use in the Home, containing all the advantages of a Family Bible in a compact size that can be easily handled, with Record for births, marriages and deaths. This is the best Bible obtainable for Old Folks who need extra large clear print and a lightweight book.



Specimen of Type Holman Home Bible

22 Thus Joash tl
not the kindness
father had done t
son. And when he
LORD look upon it
23 ¶ And it can end of th year, th
came against h

FOR THE HOME

The exact size of Bible when closed is 6⅛ x 9 inches.

No. 201. Bound in Flexible French Morocco, grained lining and fly leaves, silk headbands, and purple silk marker, round corners, red under gold edges.

Publishers' price . . . $3.00
Our special price . . . $2.10
Postage, 24 cents.

INDIA PAPER EDITION

The finest Bible made; will last a lifetime.

No. 75X. Genuine Morocco, overlapping covers, leather lined, silk sewed, under gold red $4.50 Postage, 16 cents.

Each of the above Bibles is specially priced for this offer at about one-fourth less than the publisher's retail list. SEND ALL ORDERS TO

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD, GREENSBORO N. C.

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, DEC. 1.

By Charles A. Hines.

Subject—Missionary Achievements. Phil. 2:1-16 (Consecration.)

M.—A city saved .....Jonah 3:5-10
T.—Dead souls quickened...Ezek. 37:1-14
W.—Prison missions .....Acts 16:19-31
T.—Missions to kings .....Acts 9:10-16
F.—Personal work .....Acts 8:26-40
S.—I can stand by.....2 Tim. 4:9-12
Sunday, December 1.—Topic.

A Suggested Programme.

1. Song service of missionary hymns.
2. Let the society repeat, standing, the verse of Heber's hymn, "From Greenland's Icy Mountains," beginning "Waft, waft ye winds His story."
3. The Lord's Prayer in unison, the society standing.
4. Song or special music.
5. Prayer by two members of the missionary committee.
6. Scripture reading by the leader and the missionary committee, responsively.
7. Song.
8. The leader's talk.
9. General participation.
10. Three-minute talks, "Missionary achievements."
11. Testimonies by members, "Great achievements of missionaries."
12. Song; brief prayer between each stanza.
13. The pastor's five minutes.
14. Closing exercises and benediction.

Notes on the Lesson.

The Northern Baptists have started to raise three millions this year for all missionary purposes. The churches are to be asked for two millions, and individuals for one.

The Northern Prebyterians gave over two millions to Foreign Missions last year. They sent out ninety-seven new missionaries.

The North American Bible Society last year distributed 4,550 copies of the Scriptures in Southeastern Arabia. This was done in spite of the most fanatical opposition upon the part of Moslems.

There are 2,029 organized churches in China. There are 4,209 foreign mission aries and 12,116 Chinese Christian workers. The China Inland Mission sent out sixty-five new missionaries last year.

The Society for the Propagation of the Gospel supports 1,254 missionaries, about 3,000 teachers, 3,200 students in its colleges, and about 71,500 children in the mission schools in Asia and Africa.

Africa now has 4,542 missionaries, 26,574 native workers, and 1,934,372 native Christians. There are signs of encouraging progress in practically every mission on the continent. In order to reach the last native, missionaries must learn 843 languages and dialects.

"The relations between missions and money is by no means a remote one. There is a good deal of evangelistic work, missionary and otherwise, which may be done without money, but missiosary work which means going out beyond town or state or nation means that pocketbooks as well as people must be laid upon the altar of service. You can speak to your neighbor without any expenditure of money, but you can not speak to the man on the other side of the world, if some one does not pay for the expense of doing so."

"Another reason why too many people fail to give of their means to missions is their lack of faith. This lack of faith manifests itself in the feeling that "there is so much to be done, and my small offering will not be worth while." They are rich men who ought to give liberally for the spread of the gospel whom covetousness keeps from doing so. There are a far greater number, however, of those who are able to give only a little, who withold their offerings with the feeling that small gifts are not worth while."

"There is a common hindrance to missionary giving which might,by a little wise teaching be gotten rid of. This hindrance is carelessness and lack of system in his giving may have good impulses, but he is seldom a liberal giver. Often he fancies that he is, because he has no idea what he has done with his money. Recognize the claims of God's cause upon you by setting apart regularly a sum that shall be kept sacredly for that purpose."

Or it never would be found,
And some one has to grind it
Or it never would be ground.
But when it's found
And when it's ground
And when it's burnished bright,
That diamond's everlastingly
Just washing out its light."

War in the East.

It is no mock war the Balkan States are waging against Turkey. Both racial and religious hatred are involved and aroused to the depths, and the soldiers on both sides are fighting with a fierceness terrible to contemplate. The unspeakable Turk is in Europe by dint of rapine and pillage and plunder, and has maintained himself there only by virtue of the diplomacy of the Powers who are envious of each other. The Montenegrins touched off the fuse that caused the present explosion and the Balkan States have sprung at the throat of Turkey like beast upon hated and hunted prey. A missionary of the Methodist Episcopal church writing recently from Sofia gives this vivid picture which he says obtains throughout Bulgaria—

"Commerce has almost completely stopped. Out on the streets nearly four fiifths of the stores have been closed. Proprietors and clerks have been drafted into service. The tramways have ceased running because of the lack of motormen and conductors. Requisition on nearly all horses and wagons of every description has already been made. A cab is, therefore, hardly to be seen . . . . Traveling is stopped. No passenger trains are being run. They are all used for carrying troops to the front. Groceries and provisions have risen to extraordinary prices. None are coming into the city to supply its needs. Whether we will have a food famine I cannot say. The villagers are all coming into the city with their village wagons and horses and oxen and buffaloes to the barracks which are serving as recruiting stations. They themselves are to be the soldiers and their wagons, etc., are in requisition. Martial law is proclaimed and each bakery has a soldier standing guard over the flour within that has been brought into requisition. When we purchase a loaf of bread we do so at the order of the soldier."

Unconfirmed reports are that the Turks are meeting reverses on all sides, and at Adrianople, in a fierce battle recently 30,000 Turkish troops were taken prisoners. All reports are closely censured, however, and it is difficult to tell how matters go along the firing line. It will take weeks to learn definitely and authoritatively.

—From The Christian Sun.

NOVEMBER.

November is, of all the year, the queen month here. She comes dancing over peak and prairie, lake, vale, and deep tangled dale, scattering beauty and brilliancy unknown to dwellers in a more favored realm. The flutter of her many-colored gauzy robes is like the dazzle of celestial kaleidoscopes. Her artist fingers weave mantles of autumn's brightest tintings for the woods and sloping lake and river side. The whole air is resonant with the slumberous melody of falling waters which are resplendent with the glories of a million shattered rainbows as the last sun-beams of summer, tangled in meshes of spray and mist, die like ethereal dolphins in a blaze of many-tinted flame.—Henry Blount in "Our State."

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsboro.

3:30 p. m., No. 230 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

3:45 p. m., No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p.m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10:15 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR, NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,
DENTIST.
Office in Benbow Arcade, S. Elm St.,
Rooms 348 and 350,
Greensboro, N. C.
Office phone 29, Residence phone 22.

Progress of Negroes.

A recent writer in the Christian Recorder gives some interesting facts, obtained principally from the census report, about the progress of the Negro race since 1860. In these fifty-two years the race has increased in population from 4,000,000 to 10,000,000. They have property valued at $600,000,000. About 1,000,000 farms are in control of negroes and they own about 200,000 of these farms. Inadequate census figures show 343,000 negroes who own their own homes. They have 135 private high schools of their own, 30,000 teachers, 82 banks; 500 news papers and periodicals. They have 1,500 lawyers, 2,100 physicians, several thousand ministers; they have 149 wholesale houses; 9,098 retail merchants, and 1,186 manufactories, and 2,000,000 children in school.

Of course thousands are thriftless, indolent, penniless and ignorant yet; and many will continue so for time to come. But these census figures indicate a marked and commendable growth, and show that the colored citizen is getting a firm foot hold as property owner and educator in the United States.

—From The Christian Sun.

FINE COURTESIES.

Small, but important, courtesies are to bow pleasantly, to greet acquaintances cordially, to give a friendly clasp of the hand, to cultivate a memory of faces and and names in order to be able to say something to show interest in the affairs of others. A point is to put others to ease.

A prompt reply to notes of invitation is an important point. It is an obligation to answer an invitation to luncheon, dinner, tea party or house party, within twenty-four hours, because a hostess wishes to know on whom she may depend or whether it will be necessary to fill a vacancy.

An invitation to a home wedding or wedding breakfast should be answered promptly.

Many little courtesies are to be observed in conversation. Among these are to look people in the face when talking or listening, not to let the attention or mind wander, not to show impatience in listening, but try to be interested in what others are saying.

In the street there are many small courtesies observed strictly by well bred people. A well bred person never brushes past any one. If the contact is unavoidable in a crowd, one would say, "Pardon me," and a man would raise his hat while asking pardon.

Good manners are the outward sign of inward grace of heart and mind. They sweeten social intercourse and contribute to happiness beyond proportion to the effort of thoughtfulness and self-discipline which they cost.—Ex.

—Rev. W. C. Brown, of Raeford, has received a call to the pastorate of Alamance Presbyterian Church near Greensboro.

OVER 65 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
PATENTS
TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.
Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.
Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.
A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.
MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

W. F. MEDEARIS I. F. PEEBLES W. L. PEEBLES
MEDEARIS-PEEBLES FURNITURE COMPANY.
Complete House Furnishers.
STOVES AND RANGES
Cash or Credit.
109 & 111 E. Market St.
Phone 823. Greensboro, N. C.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.
Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.
206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

The Baptist Bible.

We confess that we do sot take kindly to the so-called Baptist Bible. We have an idea that many of our Baptist brethren and friends will not. If there is to be a Baptist Bible then there will likely come a Methodist Bible and a Pesbyterian Bible, and a Lutheran Bible, and an Episcopal Bible. Would we better not hold on to our own petty and personal views and beliefs, if we must, and all have the same Bible with these left out, than to carry these sectarian beliefs into our Bibles and have as many Bibles as there are beliefs? We repeat, this Baptist Bible does not sound good, and we could well wish our Baptist brethren would leave it alone. We cannot see that it will help the situation, and emphasize the matter of sectarian differences that, to say the least, do not at this period of the world need further emphasis.

Some of the features of the so-called Baptist Bible are that the word "immerse" is used wherever the word "baptize" is used in the authorized version; Jonah's "whale" is changed to a "big fish"; and the word "hell" is replaced with the words "under-world." For instance, in this version Matthew 16:18 reads "And I also say to Peter that thou art Peter and on this rock I will build my church; and the gates of the underworld shall not prevail against it." There are many other similar changes reported in the "improved edition" as it is called, or the complete Baptist Bible.

Though this Bible is reported as put on sale by the American Baptist Publication Society, and though it is claimed already that the demands for same are heavy, both by Baptist and others, yet we are inclined to the opinion that the Baptist Bible will not come into general use even among our Baptist brethren and that its influence will not be as great as the press dispatches seem to indicate. Just the good, plain old Bible is sufficient without any attempt to have as many versions thereof as there are denominations amongst us. The Baptist Bible does not sound good to us.

—From The Christian Sun.

Mantels, Grates, Tiles and Builders' Hardware.

If you intend to build a new house, or to improve an old one, don't fail to get our catalogue, showing the latest designs in mantels, grates, tiles and builder's hardware. We have designs to suit every style of architecture. It will pay you to write us.

ODELL MANTEL COMPANY,
(Odell Hardware Co., Owners.)
Greensboro, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.
This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE—CO-EDUCATIONAL AND NON-SECTARIAN.

Offers young men and young women in the Methodist Protestant Church exceptional advantages for higher college training. Courses offered leading to the degrees of A. B., Ph. B., L. I., Pe. B., and A. M. Certificate courses offered in Commerce, Music, and Art. Diplomas also granted in Music and Art.

Elon College is situated in the hill country in the Piedmont section of North Carolina. No sickness, healthful climate, pure deep well water. All the buildings heated by steam and lighted by electricity and supplied with water. A large gymnasium for men in process of erection.

Terms are very reasonable. Cost of all expenses ranges from $137 to $187 a year.

The Young Ladies' Home provides for board at cost for young ladies who wish to cheapen their living. This home is under the management of the College and the best possible care is taken of the girls.

The Boys' Boarding Club offers young men an opportunity of living at actual cost. By these boarding arrangements the cost of board and room should be reduced to about half the cost in private homes.

Any person interested should write foa Catalogue, Bulletins, and other information to

W. A. HARPER, LL. D., PRESIDENT,
Elon College, North Carolina.

HOW TO KEEP SICK.

Keep the windows closed all the time, especially when you sleep—fresh air would keep you healthy

Eat any kind of food regardless of its nutritive value—sawdust and excelsior are good "fillers."

Swallow your food without chewing it—your stomach has no teeth.

Keep the sunshine out of your home—germs don't like sunshine.

Eat irregularly—by all means keep your stomach disordered

Never take a bath—soap and water are enemies of disease.

Don't disturb the flies—you'll miss a lot of filth if you do.

What's the use of being healthy anyhow?—State Board of Health.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XIX. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1912. NUMBER 1.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD. Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.

J. F. McCulloch, Editor and Publisher.

Price.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.

Rule in Dealing with Subscribers.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.

Subscribers can remit diectly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.

In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

—Rev. J. H. Stowe came on to Conference ahead of time that he might visit his daughter, Mrs. Curry, in Graham.

—Rev. L. H. Hatley came on ahead of time to Conference, wishing to inspect a piece of land he has bought near McLeansville.

—Rev. D. A. Highfill preaches the Conference sermon to-day at 10:30. He was elected to do this a year ago and may be expected to preach a sermon worth hearing. We hope ao give it to our readers later.

—Dr. Tagg, editor of the Methodist Protestant, of Baltimore, called on us en route to Conference. We were pleased to see in his face evidence that he has regained his health. A year ago his condition was such as to excite the grave fears of his friends.

—Mrs. Dora Shaw, mother of Bros. W. H. and T. A. Hunter, of Greensboro, died last night of pneumonia, and is to be buried at Tabernacle church this afternoon. Her husband and his sister are down with the same disease. Mrs. Shaw was the last to contract it and the first to succumb.

—"I didn't know it was in me," said a man who had shown resentment at what he thought was a great injustice. How many of us really know what is in us? We do not know what we would do under new circumstances. Peter didn't know it was in him to deny Jesus, but he found to his shame that he was capable of that base thing. But Jesus knew what was in Peter and He knows what is in us. He prayed for Peter that his faith might not fail, and it is a great comfort to know that he is praying for us, that we may not utterly fail and everlastingly fall in the trying hour.

—The N. C. and Virginia Christian Conference is in session in Greensboro this week. Rev. J. W. Holt is president and Prof. Lawrence is secretary. Among those present is Dr. Staley, of Suffolk, Va. They are having interesting discussions. Especially are the night sessions well attended.

—The trial to determine whether the M. E. Church, South, through its general conference shall control Vanderbilt University is in progress this week. The effort to divorce the institution from the church is supposed to be due to a desire to receive aid from the Carnegie fund. Let us hope that the church will hold on to its own.

—The oldest daughter of Turkey's former sultan, feeling so keenly the disgrace of Turkey's defeat in the present war, built a funeral pyre and after a season of prayer burned herself to death.

—Rev. T. J. Ogburn has marked his books in a way somewhat unique. Recently we borrowed two volumes from him and took them home. Imagine our feeling when we opened to the first page and read—"Stolen from T. J. Ogburn."

—J. A. Wayland, founder of the "Appeal to Reason" (Socialist Paper) took his own life on November 10th,—"hounded to his death by the relentless dogs of capitalism," says the Appeal.

—A good lay brother has sent us an article in which he nominates a president for the Annual Conference. He says he does this without the knowledge or consent of the brother named. We feel that it would be taking an undue advantage of the nominee to publish the article without his consent, which we have not time to obtain, and doubt whether it could be obtained.

—Lawrence Miller, aged 16, a grandson of Rev. J. R. Ball, is president of the "Junior church," a young people's organization connected with the Oakley M. E. Church in Kansas City, Missouri. There are about 120 members.

REV. C. A. CECIL PRESIDENT.

—Just as we go to press word comes that Rev. C. A. Cecil has been elected president of our Annual Conference. Bro. Cecil is one of our most earnest, energetic and active ministers and we trust will do well in the new office. Let him have unanimous support in prayer and effort.

ANOTHER EXTREME TO BE AVOIDED.

Our Book of Discipline cautions preachers to beware in the matter of dress of the two extremes of fashionable foppishness and antiquated singularity. This is good advice, but it by no means covers all the ground. There are other extremes. A preacher may not try to ape the styles of a generation ago and he may not seek to be in the very latest fashion, and yet he may be censurable. He may have such an utter disregard for appearances ancient or modern or mediaeval, that he will become an object of attention and of ridicule.

When a preacher goes into the pulpit with his coat buttoned one side higher than the other, and his necktie on the side of his neck or above his collar, and his hair looking as if it had been combed by the wind and brushed by the hurricane, he need not be surprised if the attention that should have been directed to his message is diverted to his appearance.

It does not increase respect for a preacher nor add to his influence for good for people to see that he has a don't care manner. An Indiana preacher was seen driving to his appointment with one hind-wheel and one front-wheel of his buggy interchanged!

Indifference to appearances may manifest itself hurtfully in many different ways. In spelling for example. If a preacher is known to be incorrect in his orthography, it may excite doubt as to the correctness of his theology.

Preachers should have an eye to appearances. Appearances count.

Of course no one will infer that we are arguing for mere pretension. There must be reality behind the appearance.

—The M. E. Church in Graham was burned on Tuesday morning.

THE WIND.

Whichever way the wind doth blow
Some heart is glad to have it so;
And blow it east, or blow it west,
The wind that blows, that wind is best.

My little craft sails not alone;
A thousand fleets from every zone
Are out upon a thousand seas;
And what for me were favoring breeze
Might dash another, with the shock
Of doom, upon some hidden rock.

And so I do not dare to pray
For winds to waft on my way,
To stay or speed me; trusting still
That all is well, and sure that He
Who launched my bark will sail with me
Through storm and calm, and will not fail,
Whatever breezes may prevail,
To land me, every peril past,
Within His sheltering heaven at last.
Then, whatsoever wind doth blow,
My heart is glad to have it so;
And blow it east, or blow it west,
The wind that blows, that wind is best.

—Selected.

THE CHURCH AS A RELIGIOUS FORCE.

By Rev. Charles Stelzle.

Is the church losing its grip upon the life of the nation? Look at a few figures. In 1800 only 7 persons out of every 100 of the total population in this country were members of the church. In 1850 there were 15 to every 100; in 1870, 20; in 1890, 22; in 1900, 24; in 1910, 24. There seems to be a crisis on just now. The increase in the population is the United States from 1900 to 1910 was 21 per cent. The increase in the church membership from 1900 to 1910 was also 21 per cent. What will the next decade show? It is rather unsafe to prophesy. But more and more it is becoming apparent that great movements of reform and reconstruction are seeking a home and center about which they may organize and unify themselves, and there is none other like the church if the church will only take them.

There are some people who are insisting that there is to-day a conflict between religion and the church. However that may be, this much is certain—to quote Bishop Williams, of the Protestant Episcopal Church: "The church can not remake religion, it can not shrink it into the old convenient and conventional type, can not crowd it back again into the old doctrinal and ecclesiastical forms. Religion made the church in the first place, and it must remake it to-day—remake it to the natural and hospitable home of all that is best and highest in our modern life and world." These are strong words, and they come from an eminent authority. They are not by any means pessimistic, but they show the stirring of a strong man's blood in his hope for the realization of a splendid dream of what the church may become. The church of Jesus Christ was ordained of God and it will ultimately triumph. It may not in its present form, for the church has changed outwardly many times since it was first given to us. In essentials it has remained the same, but in organization and in activities it has constantly been modified to meet the demands of the age.

The church was not created by priests and ministers. So far as the human side is concerned it grew out of the naturally religious instincts of the people. The persistence of religious institutions shows that they are factors of importance in the life of the community. For many the church is the most powerful of all agents of social control. Its place among the social institutions is unique. From this stand point alone the best interests of society will be better served by strengthening the church instead of battering it down. As a matter of fact the church does its best work in the realm of idealism.

Josh Billings once said: "Before you can have an honest horse race you must have an honest human race." There seems to be much horse sense in this expression. Before it is possible to have an ideal social system we must have ideal men. It is the chief business of the church to develop such men—men with muscle and minds and morals, men who will fight for the right and a square deal. Those who believe in the general proposition that it is better to have strong men than weak, educated men instead of ignorant, good men instead of bad, might well sincerely stand back of the church in the work that it is trying to do.

Sometimes men say: "I believe in religion, but I do not believe in the church." It is impossible to have real religion without some form of organization. Not necessarily the form of organization we have in the church to-day, but some kind of organization must result from religion, for true religion is a social force. No man can be religious alone. There must be a God and a neighbor. The church is man's expression of his religious life and instincts. It is the organization which he has formed to permit him to serve best. True religion means service. It is the business of the church to save not itself but the world, for it is only as the church is willing to lose its life that it will find it again among the masses.

After all it must be confessed that the fundamental cause of distress and injustice is sin, and the church as a religious force is fighting sin; so that when a preacher denounces sin wherever he sees it—the sin of the employer as well as the sin of the employee—he is helping to improve social conditions. The church has its greatest mission in the spiritual salvaton of mankind, and this must be given the greatest emphasis. No other society is to-day doing more than the church, even in the matter of social service. Some years ago a well known preacher in New York, becoming impatient with the church, rented a large hall and later a theater, and for two years he denounced the church, seeking relationships with those who he thought were doing more than the church in the emancipation of the people. At the end of this period he returned with the state that however the church may have failed no other agency is doing more to help mankind.

HOW TO READ THE BIBLE.

"It would greatly help us," writes Professor David Smith in the British Weekly, "if, apart from details of interpretation, we had a broad conception of the Bible's nature and purposes. It is not a promiscuous repository of edification. It is the record of God's self-manifestation in the history of Israel—a revelation which dawned dimly, and broadened from age to age until it reached the noontide of the Gospel. The recognition of this simple fact is illuminating. It defines the perspective of the Bible. Recognize that the Bible is the record of a historic and progressive revelation, and all confusion will fall into order. A sense of the perspective of revelation helps us to find our way about in the Bible, to understand what its messages meant when they were first delivered, and to apply them to ourselves. It is the office of a Christian teacher to explain all this. A true ministry is educative, and it seems to me that a minister is false to his trust unless he be continually enlarging his people's conceptions of the grandeur of the revelation which is enshrined in the imperishable record of Holy Scripture, and helping them to appropriate ever more and more of its hid treasure. As for difficulty about spending time in prayer, I am not sure that it is the time we spend that matters. You remember the prayer with which the saintly Bengel was accustomed to close each day: 'Lord Jesus, it is just the same as ever between thee and me.' That was all, and it was abundantly sufficient.

"It is a true paradox that we pray most when we pray least. For the exercise of prayer is so often a returning to God, and that would be unnecessary if we continued in his fellowship. The secret of prayer is loving Jesus; and if only we know him, we must needs love him, and our every thought of him will be a prayer, an outgoing of our hearts in faith and desire."—Christian Herald.

THE WEAK SPOT IN THE CHURCH

"May I tell you something?" asks Gypsy Smith. "The weakest spot of every church it is prayer meeting. I am not a pessimist on preaching, and in my travels I have a fair chance of judging. There never was a day in the history of the world when the ministry was so loyal to Jesus Christ as to-day. There are exceptions; but I am speaking of the great mass. There never was a day when the ministers of the different denominations stood by the Cross as they are doing to-day. We are not weak in preaching; and it is cultured preaching. We are not weak there. We are not weak in church buildings. You never had such church buildings as you have to-day. You never were so rich in organizations of the church as you are to-day. There never was a day when you had such magnificent singing as you have to-day. There was never a day when the church was giving so much to missions as to-day.

"It is true that in all these things we are improving, but we are not having prayer meetings such as we had twenty years ago. You can get your communicants and church members to a social, even if it is a wet night; but where are they when it is a prayer-meeting night? Let me see your week-night prayer meeting and I will gauge the spiritual life of your church. . . . .The prayer meeting is the generating force of the church of God."—Christian Intelligencer.

A FATHER'S LOVE.

A little incident which beautifully illustrates the words of David, spoken so long ago, came under my notice recently. It so impressed and comforted me that I want to pass it on.

We were seated round the tea table in my friends pleasant home, when it seems the little daughter reached to help herself with undue haste. Her father reproved her, and it must have been very gently, for there was not any interruption in the cheerful conversation. But a lady seated by the child's side told me afterwards that Jennie's eyes filled with tears, and she slipped quietly away from the table. But I did not notice Mr. H———— excusing himself and also leaving the room.

Immediately after tea I had occasion to visit the adjoining sitting room, where I found the little one nestled in her father's strong arms, the tears still falling from the blue eyes, but looking up trustfully into the brown ones bent above hers and glistening with sympathy, while the voice, tender and manly, was saying: "There, there, darling; papa would not hurt his little pet's feeling or spoil her supper if he could help it. See, papa could not eat any more when he knew you were feeling so badly. Now, sweetheart, let us go and see if there is anything left for us. Mother will attend to us herself."

For some time they talked softly; then I heard a little ripple of laughter, and they went to finish the meal, her hands clasped in her father's.

But I had my lesson. What a sweet remembrance for that child. Thank God for our Christian fathers, and while the tears dropped down my cheek I cried silently: "Does God love me so?" And the answer came and stayed: "Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him."—The Christian Guardian.

USEFULNESS.

Sir Walter Scott's dying words to his son were: "Be a good man." That embraces much. If we would change the adjective "good" for another it would be "useful." Uefulness is the highest grace of character. Merely doing nothing wrong is not goodness. Such a trait is really pitiable. The meaning of a negative man is no man. Such a man lives through life and leaves nothing but trifles alosg his path.

Now a useful man needs not to plant a tree, put up a monument, start a charity, erect a splendid edifice to make himself useful. All these are parts of the beautiful utilities and are to be praised. But a man may be more useful to a community than in doing these things. He may say with Peter, "Silver and gold have I none, but such as I have I give thee." What may that be? Character, purity, courage, aspiration, helpfulness, kindness—those qualities of the soul that constitute true manhood, and manhood is always useful. It is a great deal better for a community to have a true man than to have a millionaire.

We are thinking of the boys drifting along the street, apparently lost to all idea that usefulness is the only test of manhood. It is never too early to begin to form that character and disposition which strive to make ones life worth living for the good it may do. To be useful is to dignify and ennoble life. Make such a resolution regnant in a person's experience and it lifts him up, makes him better than books, or preaching, or paternal authority can possibly make him. A person's influence is the finest phase of usefulness when it is in behalf of what is pure, lovely and of good report. It is such people who not only honor the country but keep it from going to ruin.—Ohio State Journal.

SCENE IN THE OKLAHOMA CONFERENCE.

It is the custom here to call the roll of ministers, and as each name is announced the pastor arises and makes his report of the work done during the year. Then the delegate is called and asked if the pastor has been faithful, and if it is the desire of the congregation that he be returned. When the name of Rev. Mr. M——was reached he arose and said that during the year he had preached sixty-six sermons, had had fifty-three conversions, baptized six, married three, buried two and collected a certain amount for the general interests, but had received no salary. The delegate then stepped into the aisle, a typical cowboy as far as dress was concerned, for he wore a suit of white corduroy, liberally sprinkled with the mud of the prairies. In his hand he nervously twisted a broad-brimmed cream-colored felt hat. His face was as clean cut as cameo and as handsome as an Apollo, but it bore the evident lines of a life of dissipation. He spoke with a slightly southern accent and an inimitable drawl, and said, "Mr. President and members of the conference, I sure do want Bro. M—— to come back. When he came to us two years ago our Sunday school was a pack of cards in the sage brush, our prayer meeting a whiskey bottle in the barn and our church a carousal in the saloon or worse. Now we have a real Sunday school, a real prayer meeting and a real church. We all's just got to have Bro M——back, we can't get along without him." On enquiry we found that Bro M——was a teacher and preacher for the people in the litle town where he lived without pay for the love of the work and the good he could do. This is but one of many cases that could be cited.—Methodist Recorder.

—Sidna Allen's trial is on this week. He broke down and cried when asked if he meant to abandon his wife and children.

AN IMPORTANT SCIENCE.

Twenty-five years ago, or thereabouts, a new science was brought into the curriculum of our Colleges. It has grown to such importance now that every respectable College maintains its Department of Pedogogy or Education. And the text books developing the scienie constitute a large and increasing library, under such headings as the Science of Teaching, The art of Teaching, Principles of Education, Principles of Teaching, Principles of School Management, Psychology of Teaching, etc., etc.

This science has wrought wonders in giving dignity to the teacher's function and act. The pedagogue has risen from being the object of ridicule to a position of leadership in his professional standing. Children can talk more learnedly and profoundly now of the laws of the mind governing teaching and its associated arts than Plato or Socrates could, and for this good result our science of Pedagogy is entitled to be praised.

There are three weaknesses however in the application of this science and in the standards it upholds and the ideals it defends. It lays entirely too much stress on method, calling old processes by new higher sounding names, and does not give ufficient promisence to the personality of the teacher. Teachers, like poets, are born, not made, and no amount of pedagogical principles or methods will make him a teacher who is not born so. This is simply saying that men are called to teach by their Creator, just as surely as men are called to merchandise or practice medicine or preach the Gospel. It is not saying that Pedagogy will not make a called teacher a better one. I am positive that it will, but Pedagogy nor any other science can make him a teacher who is not naturally endowed for that function. This the writers on Pedagogy need to recognize and emphasize.

A second fault of Pedagogy, found in its adulterated form in the Normal schools, is that correct methods in the hands of a called or naturally disposed teacher will make him a successful instructor. These schools construct their curricula in such a way that their pupils review carefully all they have gone over in the high school, while they study Pedagogy in its many branches, and do experimental teaching in the practice school, but make no advances in general knowledge or culture. This is a serious fault, and one of these days our people will realize the folly of fastening upon themselves a perpetual burden to support institutions that give their pupils only methods of work and do not add to their scholarship, and when they do realize it, as they surely will, there will be a rattling of dried bones and a newness of life in the educational world. These Normal schools need to get out of the business of education or to get into it. They need to realize that breadth of scholarship is the only thing that can make a teacher of power, that lack of method can be compensated for by experience, but lack of scholarship is a fatal defect in ay teacher. And the writers on Pedagogy need to see this and, seeing it, to insist on it.

The third fault of Pedagogy is its failure to demand spiritual training for teachers and for pupils. One of the most popular among recent treatises on this science sees no place for Christian schools at all. It sees no need for the Sunday school for the present, but when "science has fully rationalized religion" there will be no real necessity for it as an educational force, but it will become an agency for "worship and the development of the social nature" as the same writer so authoritatively states that the church has already become. These writers forget that the greatest asset of life is character and that the highest type of character is the Christian, and that without Christian schools to develop, foster, nourish to fruitage the Christian character of our youth this land would soon cease to be Christian and become the land of infidels, agnostics, deists, theists, to the eternal undermining of the national character and the permanent impoverishment of the individual soul. Let the Christian world see that Christian Education is given due recognition by the writers on Pedagogy, or let them expect the loss of the power of the church over the generations to come. W. A. Harper.

MARTIN LUTHER AND BEER.

"At the time of the Reformation in the fifteenth century," says Prof. Evert, "the curse of strong drink had already wrought great havoc among the German people. Martin Luther, who was such as outspoken man on matters pertaining to the real welfare of his people, had something to say on this question that is worthy of repetition to this day. In his commentary on the one hundred and first psalm he writes as follows: 'Every country must have its own evil spirit. Italy has hers, and France hers. Our German demon must be the wine cask, and called "drink," because his thirst cannot be quenched by immense draughts of wine and beer. He has always caused, and yet continually causes, unspeakable injuries, disgrace, murder, and all sorts of calamities to body and soul, which should deter us from following after him, but yet "drink remains a mighty idol with the Germans." In his 'Table Talk,' Luther refers to the beer question in the following words: 'Whoever first brewed beer has prepared a pest for Germany. I have prayed to God that he would destroy the whole brewing industry. I have often pronounced a curse on the brewer. All Germany could live on the barley that is spoiled and turned into a curse by the brewer.' For four hundred years the valiant Reformer's words have seemingly remained unheeded by the German people; but now at last they have become awakened thoroughly on this subject." —Alliance News.

Clara M. Cushman.

(A leaflet published by the W. F. M. S., M. E. Church.) .. ..

Mother love is God-given. Into the wigwam of the Indian, the hut of the Chinaman, the zenana of the Hindoo, the kraal of the African, the slum of the city, as well as the palace of royalty, comes the divine gift to the mother, that makes the care of the helpless little one, not a burden, but a joy and pleasure. The rare exception but proves the rule. "But," you say, "the missionaries tell usawful tails of infanticide." Alas, the the tales are too true. I know a woman who cried herself blind because her little girls were taken away from her and destroyed, and I also know that the pity and love that the Chinese mother has for her little one often drive her to submit to the awful thing. I have heard them say: "Life is so hard I wish I had died when I was a baby. It was better for my little one to die. It had been a merey to me if some one had killed me." In many cases the child is destroyed in spite of the mother's wishes and pleadings, and her husband seems to her a murderer, and I ask, how much joy and pleasure can she then have as a wife?

Ah, you happy mothers, who welcome your little girls so tenderly and joyfully, you daughters, who know that all your life you have been the pride and delight of your father's heart, little do you know the anguish with which a heathen woman prays her gods that her little one may not be a girl, or with what solicitude she takes her offerings to the temple, as day and night she prays for a son.

When her prayer is granted she is of course very happy, and she builds all her hopes on her boy. But death is relentless, and often he takes away the boy, and then she must not only bear her own loss, but the curses of the whole family,because she has let him die. It is her fault. It is her sin. "What have I done? What have I done that the gods are angry with me?" she exclaims! No one comforts, and she has no hope to cheer her heart. How can she bear it?

A crowd of curious women were examining with eager interest the articles in our Perking home, when I noted one woman with a pale, sad face, who attracted my attention because she alone was not interested. "My little sister," I said, "you seem sick and sad. Have you sorrow in your heart?"

"Ai Yah, I have big sorrow, truly. I had one small boy and he is Jeng la (thrown away)." I told her of the Father's love and how the tender Shepherd loves the little lambs and comes and takes them away from this hard world to the beautiful world above. "Your baby is not jeng la," I said. "He is safe. If you will be a Jesus woman He will take you to him, and you can be together again." She listened intently, and then exclaimed, "Is that so?" and then she added, "I never heard it before. Chinese don't say so."

God pity stricken mothers who never heard of Jesus, and may He help us to pity them so much that we will send the message He left us for them.

In a humble home in Peking, just outside the city gate a little child lay dying one day. The old mother-in-law seized it, and was rushing away with it when the mother exclaimed in agony, "My baby is not dead yet, she is not dead." "But she has only one breath left," said the old woman, "and the black cart will soon pass by, and if I do not hasten it will be left here in the room after it is dead, filling the house with demons."

So the little body was caried out to the alley to be carried away to the baby pit where no mother ever goes.

May God help Christian mothers who sing,

"There are angels hovering around," to pity heathen mothers who are afraid of their own dead because the devils hover around to snatch their souls as they leave the body.

Did you ever stop to think how a mother must feel as she sees her little girl nine or ten years of age sold as a slave or a concubine, or even taken away to be married, as she remembers the early days of her own married life?

We speak of the millions of child widows in India under ten years of age accursed and despised, stripped of the jewels so dear to their hearts, dressed in coarsest cloth, allowed only one meal a day, obliged to observe countless fasts, and suffering nameless indignities, and we pity them, and well we may. Should we not also pity the millions of mothers whose hearts ache for their little girls, and yet they are unable to do anything to relieve them?

Is it a happy thought for a mother that custom demands that every daughter must be married and go away from her to serve like a slave a mother-in-law?

Chen Nai Nai was a widow with only one son. He drank wine and smoked opium, and was a sorrow instead of a comfort to his mother. "Many a time," said she, "I went outdoors and prayed all night to the moon, saying, 'Oh, moon with your bright light, won't you shine down into my son's dark, black heart?' but the moon never answered , and so I went off to the star-god, for I heard that he was very powerful. The temple was very far away, and it was a long, hard road, but I did not mind the weary miles, for I hoped the god would hear. I never prayed for riches, I had only one prayer, it was always for my son."

May God pity heathen mothers who have bad boys, and have no one but the moon and star-gods to pray to in their distress.

We pity them in a way, but who can really enter into the depths of their experiences? Who can realize the anguish of an old Hindoo mother as sick and dying, she lies on the bank of the Ganges, bereft of all cares and physical comfort, and hears her son who sits apart from her murmuring, "Mother, why don't you die? Mother, why don't you die?"

Millions of heathern mothers are hopeless and helpless unless we pity and help them! And our pity is of no use unless we pity them enough to help them. I knew a mother who held her baby in her arms and cared for it tenderly until she saw it was dying, and then was so terrified that she screamed in fright, threw it down and ran away from it.

Afterwards when the light of the Gospel had changed her whole life and thought, she nursed another little one clear to the end, and then sweetly said: "She was Jesus' little blossom, He has come and transplanted her into the heavenly garden. He gave, He has taken His own. She is better there." There came a day when cruel Boxers gathered around and bade her deny her Lord, but He had done too much for her, and she loved Him too dearly, and so she bravely died for Him rather than prove faithless. Her daughter writes: "I felt very bad at first, but as I think it out, I thank God that He counted my mother worthy to die for him."

We may reach a few mothers of heathenism if we hasten, but most of them must die as they have lived, in the dark. Let us do the best we can for them, and many we not double our efforts to bring the girls of the land to Christ, and thus by God's blessing give to the world at last a blessed Christian motherhood?

CONFERENCE COMMITTEES 1912.

Conference Treasurer—J. R. Hutton.

Colleges—A. O. Lindley, Homer Casto, J. Ed. Moore, J. W. Dowling.

Christian Endeavor—J. E. Pritchard, H. E. Waldrop, W. A. Lamar, C. L. Gray.

Credentials—G. F. Millaway, A. L. Hunter, R. M. Pearson, J. H. Sutton.

Financial Statistics: 1st. Sub District—N. G. Bethea, J. H. Abernathy, Wm. Wiley; 2nd. Sub District —W. M. Pike, J. H. Bowman, Geo. F. Thompson; 3rd. Sub District—W. R. Lawdermilk, W. C. Lassitor, J. B. Ogburn, Geo. S. Kernodle; 4th. Sub District—T. M. Johnson, J. B. O'Bryant, D. M. Davidson; 5th. Sub District—S. W. Taylor, T. A. Williams, J. F. Bailey, S. M. Warlick; 6th. Sub District—J. E. Dosier, D. M. Loy, William Adkins; 7th. Sub District —W. D. Fogleman, S. B. Stephens, G. P. Younginer.

Ordinances—T. J. Ogburn, T. F. McCulloch, Jno. W. Floyd, Jno. A. Wooten, J. A. Turner.

Literature—R. M. Andrews. W. F. Kennett, T. A. Carter, R. E. Briggs, E. M. Ivester.

Minutes—S. M. Needham.

Ministerial Moral Character—A. G. Dixon, W. D. Reed, A. E. Powell, P. L. Walker, J. S. Pender.

Missions—J. W. Williams, C. H. Whitaker, Ed. Lindley, R. A. Gambol, D. R. Loftin.

Official Character—C. A. Cecil, J. A. Ledbetter, J. W. Hardee, S. E. Montgomery, G. W. Hunt.

Pastoral Work—Ed. Suits, J. B. Trogdon, R. W. Giles, W. A. Williams, C. R. Crew.

Pulpit Service—Thos. E. Davis, G. L. Curry, O. W. Hanner, M. P. Efland.

Sunday School—J. A. Burgess. D. R. Williams, E. G. Lowdermilk, J. C. Braswell, A. W. Hulin.

President's Report—H L. Powell, J. H. Moton, R. L. Troxler, J. E. Diviney, J. H. Siler.

Unfinished Business—D. A. Braswell, T. A. Plyer, J. W. Self, J. R. Foster, F. W. Easter.

Statistics—G. W. Holmes, C. J. Edwards, C. E. M. Raper, J. M. Millikan, J. M. Weatherly.

Temperance—W. F. Ashburn, L. H. Hatley, T. F. Newton, Isaac Holt, J. M. Cutchin.

The first named on each committee is expected to act as Chairman. It might be well, as far as possible, to prepare your report before coming to Conference. In this way business could be more rapidly carried forward.

W. E. Swain.

CHINA AND CHRISTIANITY.

Capt. Robert Dollar, of the Dollar Steamship Company, who was in China during the recent revolution, was present at a commencement luncheon at San Francisco Theological Seminary. Unlike many business men who have dealings with China, he has taken note of the work of the Christian Missionaries. In the course of a brief address he gave utterance to the following:

I bring a message of good cheer and encouragement from China, and I am thinking especially from the viewpoint of the spread of Christianity. Twelve years ago the Empress Dowager issued the edict condemning all Christians to death, and the Boxer uprising followed. But the Christian religion kept reaching out. Many of the higher ranks became Christians, though they might not make open professions, and the missionaries did not know of it. The leaven was in the lump.

These men who have kept silence are now at the head of affairs. The men who are in control of China are Christians. In Sun Yat Sen's Cabinet there were six men whom I know to be Christians. In Yuan's Cabinet there are four who have been educated in the Christian way and are Christians. This means a change so radical that we in close touch with affairs there cannot comprehend how the change has come about. This is surely a message of encouragement.

Until two years ago it was flippantly said on the coast that none but coolies were Christians; now it is known that the highest in the land confess this faith. In conversation, and without my asking, four men of Yuan's Cabinet to me confessed themselves Christians. This is ground for my message of cheer and encouragement.

What an hour for prayer and faith and effort on the part of missionaries and of the whole Church of God in behalf of China! As this great nation is moving into the light of civilization, effort should be doubled and quadrupled to impress upon it the meaning of Christianity. And this will be done not merely by the proclamation of salvation to perishing sinners, but by the presentation of full truth to the whole nation. The missionary's commission is not only to win the individual, but he is a herald of the whole truth to the whole man in all his relationships, and to the moral personality of the nation itself, to the end that there may be the kingdom of God in China, a Christianized people, a Christianized society, a Christianized national life.

—The Christian Statesman.

THE SON OF GOD.

Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. Matthew 16:16. (Golden Text for Sunday November 17.

Look at it as you will, the gospel is the story of a Man, even the Man Christ Jesus. If we knew Him we would know the gospel; if we do not know Him we cannot know the gospel.

The following incident is related: A gentleman gave his children a dissected map of the United States to put together. They puzzled over it a long time, but in vain. Finally, one of them chanced to turn a piece of the map over and discovered, on its opposite side, the picture of a man's hand. Then another piece was turned over and part of a man's face was discovered. There was a cue. Quickly all the pieces were turned over and the several parts were put togthrr. The result was a picture of George Washington on one side and a perfect map of the United States on the other. The children had easily constructed their map when they had discovered the picture of a man on the opposite side. The dissected map was an intricate and impossible puzzle until the cue was formed in the peture of a man.

The gospel story is an intricate puzzle an inexplicable mystery, until we find on the other side of it, underneath it, the Man Christ Jesus. In the inspired confession of Peter, the discovery is made of the Man.

This is the foundation and the center of the whole gospel fabric. More than this, until men admit that Jesus Christ is not only the Messiah, but the Son of the living God, there will be mystery, and doubt,and unbelief and silly disputation in the world.

Yes, there are other sons of God. But Jesus was and is the Son of God. We are sons by creation and by adoption; but He is the only begotten of the Father. He alone of all came down from above, emanated from the Father, was with the Father from the beginning, and is the One by whom and through whom all things were created.

Now, it was impossible for His disciples to realize this great spiritual fact. They understood, that their Master, their Teacher, was the Messiah, and that He would certainly bring great things to pass. But just what those great things would be they did not fully understand. They could not grasp the greatness, the immensity, the scope of the spiritual kingdom He was to establish.

This great question, and the great confession that follows, teach at least three practical truths that we would do well to remember.

1st. The gretest truths come to us as revelations. And while we by searching cannot find them out they are given, nevertheless, to those who search and trust and obey. The great fact of the Messiahship and of the nature of the kingdom to be found thereon was revealed to the disciples first. They had followed, sacrificed, obeyed. It was a gift to them, but they had striven to be ready for that gift.

2nd. We never realize at the time the fullness and the sweep and the scope of any great truth. Our minds are not broad enough to fully comprehend at once any great and mighty heavenly truth. And so for six months from the date of Christ's declaring His Messiahship He labors almost constantly with His disciples to teach them the real potency and power of the great truth He had herein announced to them His evangelistic service is now, for the most part, at an end and henceforth is He preparing the hearts of His disciples for the truth contained in the words "Thou art the Christ the Son of the living God."

3rd. Christ was more than an ordinary man, more than an extraordinary man, He was divine, the Son, the only begotten Son of the Father; or He was a fake and an imposter. There is no midway ground. He Himself declared the truth and acknowledged that He was the divine One. We must call him that; or he can be nothing to us. There is salvation for the world in the words and the belief that this truly is The Christ the Son of the living God.—The Christian Sun.

—On Nov. 17 the dispatches report a great battle on between the Turks and Bulgarians all along the Tchatalja lines. The heavy artillery duel continued throughout the day with heavy losses in killed and wounded on both sides. The war dogs have certainly been let loose and a terrible war is in progress. Censured and suppressed reports keep us at this distance from all but meager news, but enough leaks out to show beyond question that a bitter and bloody war is in progress in the near East. Nor pen nor tongue can describe the suffering that is entailed. In our prayer and devotion to the God of pity and compassion we should plead for an early termination of this conflict.

HOME PLAYS FOR THE CHILDREN

By Jenny B. Merrill, Pd. D.

Fruits and vegetables may all contribute to the home plays of children, if only a playful mother presides in the kitchen or a good-natured cook.

It is the city child's best, indeed, it may be his only opportunity to make genuine acquaintance with these nature forms with their many lovely colors. Manufactured toys are usually very richly colored and sometimes grossly painted.

Strong color is good for children. We find much of it in fruits and vegetables but nature has ways of softening and modifying reds and yellows, adding beauty by presenting tints and shades in the same fruit. Recall the varied reds in tomatoes, beets, apples, cherries, strawberries, currents and again in onions and radishes. Even to handle these beautiful colored objects without any special play gives pleasure to a young child. Daintily he may be taught to lift up to the light, turn them perhaps on their stems and listen to a short story of where they grew—on bush or tree or under ground. All is a mystery, a nature fairy tale, to a city child.

The little one may easily be led to arrange a fruit or grocery store on the table. A few wares will satisfy him at first. One must not attempt too much, for the kitchen is a busy place and play must be incidental.

If only the child can be permitted to help in removing the vegetables and fruits from the market basket, perhaps standing them in rows or placing them in other proper receptacles, the play is worth while. The young child will accept it as play. Is he not the grocer's boy or does his fancy suggest he is the farmer's boy picking the fruit from the tree? Indeed he may be the farmer himself.

Unconsciously—and the more so the better—the child will be learning forms and colors, beautiful yellows, greens and purples as well as the reds in oranges, lemons, grape, plums, apple, pears. Each name brings a picture to the memory. See the tints of green in celery, lettuce and cabbage, as well as their curling leaves and mysterious, unfolding centers! The busiest mother who really thinks will not begrudge a few precious moments to enjoy these nature playthings with her child when she cannot stop to invent plays with them.

Give the child half a chance and he will find the play. The other children may play they are mother or cook and help to wash and prepare vegetables and fruit for cooking. This is a mingling of work and play.

A mother once told me that in such kitchen plays, she allowed her children to call her "Mrs. Brown" instead of mother. This proved a very happy touch of fun and readily combined. She said it seemed to develop politeness. When one recalls how hard it is for a young child to realize its parents' names, the wisdom of the mother as a teacher is certainly commendable.

Have you ever heard of the potato-baby? It is a kitchen invention. A story is told of a German mother whose little girl was found singing a lullaby to a big potato as she sat on the cellar steps.

The mother caught the spirit of play and another day she surprised her little daughter with a dolly made of a large potato, but dressed with a cap and gown and with a painted face.

The "potato baby" is a famous kindergarten story now, but this unique dolly had its birth in the kitchen, with a wooden box for its cradle. Fairies reside in the kitchen, too. You have read of Miss Muloc's famous Brownies, but have you seen beets, onions and carrots converted into the little Brownies? Big brother will perhaps take the hint, and surprise the little ones, keeping himself out of mischief meanwhile. He has seen them in the confectioner's at holiday times, and will need only a little fancy tissue paper.

My mother did not make a potato dolly nor a Brownie, but she turned lemons into pies! What did your mother do? Ah you had forgotten the cranberry chicks and the boats of pea-pods!

Rehearse them all, and live your childhood over again in the kitchen. The kitchen is the heart room of the house.

The home began anthropologists tell us in the firespots in the woods, the primitive hearth where cooking was done and tales of adventures were told. When thought and love work together play possibilities multiply! Play is spiritual.

The best mothers preside in the kitchen to play as well as to cook and at the same time develop a wholesome respect for "Task-tick" on the kitchen shelf whose measured beat brings everyone to time when duty calls to work.—Mother's Magazine.

WYCLIFFE'S BONES

The London Tablet is generally recognized as the leading organ of the Roman Catholic Church in Great Britain, if not in the whole English speaking world, but in the issue of October 19, 1912, we find a curious departure from the accuracy which is usually supposed to characterize its columns. It appears that a number of nuns who were expelled from Nantes in France, ten years ago, because they refused to conform to the terms of the Associations Bill enacted by the French Parliament (made up of men at least born in the Roman Catholic faith), invaded England when they "left their country for their country's good." A convent has recently been built for them at Lutterworth, the home of John Wycliffe, frequently called the "Morning Star of the Reformation." He died in 1384 and was buried at Lutterworth. The writer in the at Lutterworth. The writer in the Tablet was evidently under the impression that the reformer's body has been allowed to rest in peace after the interment in this quiet parish churchyard, for after referring to the saying of the first mass in the new chapel, he says, "While Wycliffe's' relics rattled in his grave the townsfolk of Lutterworth came sight-seeing." The facts, however, are that thirty-one years after Wycliffe's death, the Council of Constance issued a decree (May 4, 1415) that his remains were to be dug up and burned——an order which was carried out by Bishop Fleming in 1428 (Encyc. Brit., 9th ed., vol. xxiv., p. 711), the ashes being afterwards thrown into the river. It is easy to understand that Roman Catholic colleges and schools do not teach much about historical episodes of this nature, but it seems a little curious that the responsible editor of so important a Papal organ as the Tablet should have allowed an error of this kind to escape his notice since the facts have been so widely known for so many centuries. It is an instance of how the rancor of Rome pursues, even after their death, those who have opposed her errors or sought to deliver the people from her tyranny.—Christian Herald.

The motorist emerged from beneath the car, and struggled for breath. His helpful friend, holding the oil-can, beamed upon him. "I've just given the cylinder a thorough oiling, Dick, old man," said the helpful friend.

"Cylinder!" said the motorist, heartily: "that wasn't the cylinder. It was my ear!"—Selected.

A man was charged with stealing $9.50 His lawyer, after a long fight, succeeded in securing his acquittal. After the acquittal the lawyer told the fellow that he ought to have some pay for the hard work. "Have you got any money at all?" inquired the lawyer.

"I've still got that $9.50," said the man.—Kansas Civ Journal.

The first and finest kind of courage is the courage to begin.

A great thought can operate in a small room.

TO THE HENDERSON CORRESPONDENT.

Dear Bro. T. T. Hicks:

I did not have the time to reply to yours of October ', 1912, in Methodist Protestant Herald, neither have I time now, to reply as I wish, but will refer you to a few passages in God's word which I hope you will read carefully and meditate thereon, as you appear to think that "everything happens according to the established laws of nature." Read Exod. chapters 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12. Joshua 6th chapter. "Fall of Jericho." Genesis 41st chapter. Daniel's case, Daniel 6:7. Hebrew children, Dan. 3:6. Paul bitten by serpent, Acts 28. Ananias and Sapphira, Acts 5:5-10. Paul and Silas, Acts 16:23-26. Manna fell. Numbers 11:9 Quails etc., Numbers 11:31. Herod smitten and eaten by worms, Acts 12. We could give many other cases, but I think these are sufficient.

Geo. E. Hunt.

MT. ZION, PINNACLE AND MT. ZION CHARGE.

Dear Herald:

On Saturday, November the 9th, our Quarterly Conference was held at this place. The usual business was transacted with harmony.

Rev. A. L. Hunter filled his regular and last appointment for this Conference year Sunday at eleven o'clock. His sermons are always good and helpful. We hope Bro. Hunter will come back for another year and trust if it is God's will the Conference will send him back; he has done good work this year.

Our S. S. is doing very well, but not what it could do. At this time there is much sickness in our midst.

With much success to the Herald and its readers.

Hattie Wall, Reporter.

MIDWAY, HAW RIVER CT.

Our meeting began the first Sunday, and closed on Wednesday folloing. Rev. G. F. Millaway was the pulpit help, and did all the preaching after Sunday, Bro. Millaway did some earnest preaching and was greatly enjoyed by all who attended the meeting, but there was a good deal of sickness that kept so many away and nearly all who attended were church members; so we did not have any converts, but the church was greatly revived and we hope much good will yet be accomplished. Hope Bro. Millaway will come again.

Bro. A. D. Shelton has been in our midst for some time and we have enjoyed his preaching. May the Lord bless him in his work wherever he may be sent.

Mrs. E. P. Butler one of our faithful S. S. workers, is in the hospital. We ask the prayers of all the Herald readers, for her speedy recovery.

Mr. R. A. Hopkins is still improving we are glad to say, hope to see him out at church soon.

Our hearts were made very sad by the death of Rev. G. S. Kernodle, who has been with us so long; he had left us and gone to Reidsville, but we love him still, and feel a great loss by his death. May the Lord comfort his bereaved wife.

Ella Apple, Reporter.

Reidsville, N. C., November 19, 1912.

FAIRVIEW, ANDERSON CT.

The last appointment for this conference year 1912, was held yesterday. Bro. Lamar gave us a most splendid sermon at 11 o'clock in the morning and again Sunday evening. Communion service was held in the A. M.; a large number partook. We were glad to see so many honoring God. Two young ladies united with the church, Misses Pearl Jones and Elgin Norris. We are glad to state that all claims for this year have been successfully met.

Miss Mary Lesley has returned to Greer to resume her duty as teacher of the Liberty Hill school.

Mr. Eugene Bowie of Vandergrift, Pa., is visiting his sister, Mrs. John C. Ellison, and also his mother-in-law. Mrs. Fannie S. Wyatt.

Sincerely,
Mary Hendrix.

November 18, 1912.

GRAHAM AND HAW RIVER. TIDINGS.

The last "Tidings" gave an account of the payment in full of all regular claims by Haw River church, but nothing was said about Graham. It would not be fair to Graham not to say that since last "Tidings" all claims have been met, and the people are rejoicing. While Graham cannot boast of a mush-room growth there are some things that certainly are to be appreciated. I think there has not been a single year when pastor did not receive all that was promised and in almost every year the pastor's salary has been raised over the previous year. With perhaps few exceptions all General Interest claims have been met. All amounts for building and supporting the church have always been raised without ever resorting to a supper, bazarr, etc. Graham church has had quite a struggle, but never has questionable commercialism been allowed to infect it. For this the people deserve praise and credit. And for this consistent effort the church is enjoying the steady increase that is not only telling now, but will doubtless be more evident in after years. The increase for the last two years has been a little more than 86 per cent. Besides raising pastor's salary etc., as above stated. The church has almost always had some improvement or church debt for which to provide. This year $150.00 will be paid on the church debt by its people and it is being planned to pay e balance on debt during next year. The Sunday school and the Ladies' Aid Society have both done splendid work during the year.

The church has been greatly favored in that it has never lost but one member by death that one was the mother of Dr. W. R. Goley who died May 10, 1912.

We still miss Dr. Goley of Graham and Bro. W. J. Crutchfield of Haw River from their respective congregations. Dr. Goley is in New York, and Bro. Crutchfield is traveling in Georgia and South Carolina. These two brethren always to be found at their respective post of duty.

On last Sunday morning at Graham Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Albright and Mrs. Henon Hughes were received into the church. Mr. Albright is a prosperous farmer near Graham. He has been a member of Rock Creek Methodist Protestant Church of Alamance charge. Sister Albright has been a member of the Burlington church. Sister Hughes is the wife of Graham post master and comes to us from the Christian church.

The people of Graham were alarmed and made sad on last night shortly after midnight, because of the fire that entirely destroyed the building of the Methodist Episcopal church South. The building was estimated at about $4,000.00 with only $1,500.00 insurance. The origin of the fire is unknown, and indeed is shrouded in mystery. Pastor, R. L. Edwards and his faithful people deserve the prayerful sympathy of us all. It is to be hoped that the way will soon be found by which the church may be rebuilt.

Geo. L. Curry.

Granville.

Conference is here and we have wound up the second year's work on this charge A busy year indeed. No gains numerically. But a revival of the genuine kind. Class books revised and some who went to heaven several years ago are not counted here now and some who ought to be in heaven if they could do better there not counted any more either.

A great year financially. More money raised than in some time, and while some want their amounts reduced all admit that in most cases they had less trouble paying up than formerly according to amounts raised. A new barn built and paid for. A new pump put in and new ferniture put into the parsonage. All these improvements are paid for. About six hundred dollars for support of orphans and the Orphanage Building. Some old debts paid that have been standing for some time and some good brethren pay the interest.

Better Sunday schools at some of the churches. Room for improvement at all. The only danger is some thinking that so much has been done that there should be a rest. But progressiveness is the watchword of the present day along all lines and I believe Granville Circuit has caught the spirit.

We appreciate very much the many acts of kindness shown us and the words of appreciation spoken. Some of these have come from the heart and have helped. Others have not so impressed us, for to say, "Yes, it was fine, it helped me too" and then go out and run the same old ruts don't lend much force to such compliments.

Useful things and those that help reduce expenses have come from such faithful Bros. as Alonzo Woodleif, Wm. Garrett Charlie Edwards, L. W. Huff, E. C. Harris, H. B. Hicks, Thos. Stewart, John Mundy, John W. Fuller and J. A. Fuller and Sister Ida Harris, Lillian Huff, Wm Sarah Huff, Sol. Satterwhite, Jewel Floyd Sarah Kuff Sol. Satterwhite, Jewel Floyd, and Mary Stone.

Time and space forbids our mentioning the article given, but they are appreciated just the same. We trust that Conference will be both pleasant and profitable. It will be a pleasure to the writer to spend a week at the home church and go over old scenes of boyhood days besides the enjoyment of mingling with the ministers and meeting so many laymen we have learned to love from the different fields.

With prayers and best wishes for a highly spiritual Conference.

Sincerely,

N. G. Bethea.

Hennderson Nov. 16, 1912.

BURLINGTON.

Our attendance was 162 at Sunday school Sunday. The offering amounted to $5.33, $2.00 of which was a special offering to the Orphan's Home at Denton. A box of various things, including flour, canned goods, apples, etc., was packed and sent to the orphans yesterday.

The statistical report from our Sunday school for conference year to be made to conference is as follows: Enrollment 400, money paid to all purposes during the year $250.00.

On last Saturday evening in the School Auditorium the Jr. Philathea Class of our school gave a play known as "The Peak Sisters." The proceeds, about $17. will be used to furnish their new class room with chairs.

We will be in the midst of Conference when this week's Herald reaches you, and we are using all our energies in preparing to make each minister and delegate feel at home and enjoy the Conference to the full extent. Our next report will give an account of the Conference in some respects.

C. B. W.

November 19, 1912.

REV. J. N. GARRETT.

In 1882, at the Conference at Shiloh, Rev. J. N. Garrett took his first ministerial work. For seventeen years he was a successful traveling minister in the Methodist Protestant Church. Owing to failing sight he was afterwards left without work, and later he was put on the superannuated list. For the last thirteen years he was a member of our quarterly Conference. Taking an active part in the Conference meetings, preaching in our churches, visiting our homes taking an active interest in church work of all kinds.

The last year or two his church zeal seemed increasing. Though blind he was active in the prayermeetings and sometimes took a lively part in the Sunday schools. But he was not to be with us always. Last May, coming home from High Point, he took his bed. During the summer his physicians told him that he could never recover. He said that he was ready, and sometimes was quite happy. August 28, he quietly passed over the river. We the members of the Conference, miss him, but we hope that he, smiling on us with eyes that are no longer dim; will welcome us to that Conference which he has already joined in that heavenly country.

W. T. Totten,
Geo. E. Hunt,
D. S. Leonard.

MRS. J. F. VICKERY DEAD.

Our hearts were made sad when the death angel came into our old home and claimed for its victim our dear mother, Mrs. Nancy Eliza Vickery. She was stricken with paralysis on the 12th of September and died on the 14th. She was mother, grand mother, and great-grand mother. The immediate family left to mourn their loss are her aged husband, Mr. J. F. Vickery, and three sons, Messrs. W. D., R. C. and D. W. Vickery, all on the Randleman Route 1, Mrs. J. E. Rush, of Liberty, Mrs. K. G. Coltrane, Randleman, Route 1, Mrs. A. W. Davis, Edgar, Mrs. E. L. Hayes, Randleman, Mrs. T. E. Marley, Pleasant Garden, Mrs. J. S. Davis, Sophia, Mrs. A. G. Toomer, Pleasant Garden. The two oldest daughters proceeded her to the glory world only a few years ago. They were Mrs. Mary Farlow, and Mrs. Sue Caudle.

Mother was 87 years and 14 days old and had lived a Christian life for over 45 years; she joined the M. P. church at Level Cross when it was first founded and lived a consistent member to the end and she was laid to rest in the cemetery there in the presence of a large concourse of friends and relatives. Funeral service conducted by her pastor, Rev. W. C. Lassiter. The pall bearers were her grand sons, Messrs. P. M. Caudle, E. L. Mayes, Paul Davis, A. B. Marley, J. H. Vickery, and Herman Davis.

Mother has gone, but we can go to her, and I trust that each one will meet her in that better land.

Her daughter,
Mrs. T. E. Marley.

THE NORTH CAROLINA COTTAGE.

By President Elderdice.

At the last General Conference the North Carolina Delegation inspected the North Carolina Cottage erected on the campus of the Westminster Theological Seminary, and occupied by Dr. C. E. Forlines, a member of the Faculty and also a member of the North Carolina Conference. Having learned that the Seminary because of insufficient and unpaid pledges had been compelled to borrow $1,500. to complete the building, they met as a delegation and unanimously voted to invite the Seminary authorities to return to the North Carolina Conference and finish the work, so that the North Carolinians would have the entire credit for the North Carolina Cottage which bears their name. This invitation was not suggested by the Seminary authorities, but originated in the head and heart of a prominent and liberal North Carolinian who was visiting the General Conference. In view of this gracious invitation and because of need of money to refund the $1,500. loan the President of the Seminary and Dr. Forlines will be at the disposal of the North Carolina brethren from December 8 to Christmas. Grateful for the generous aid already given, I respectfully submit the following financial statement:

NORTH CAROLINA COTTAGE FUND.

Charge	Paid	Due
Alamance	$ 18.30	$ 6.00
Albemarle	14.00
Asheboro	98.00	15.00
Burlington	140.41	32.09
Concord	46.66	63.45
Denton	10.05	7.10
Fairview	46.54	35.50
Flat Rock	44.60	14.00
Graham & Haw River.	22.09	14.75
Granville	3.05
Greensboro	267.68	103.00
Halifax	51.27
Haw Rive	16.31	8.15
Henderson	407.01
High Point	170.65	83.00
La Grange	10.68
Lebanon	9.05	3.00
Liberty	28.68	1.00
Littleton	22.76	2.00
Mebane	11.00	15.25
Mt. Hermon	28.40	15.00
Oak Ridge	10.28	12.35
Orange	12.60	10.35
Pinnacle	78.83	57.00
Randolph	12.44	15.95
Richland	8.25
Roanoke	35.07	25.00
Saxapahaw	7.10	12.40
Tabernacle	44.05	2.00
Thomasville	56.05	19.95
Vance	56.01	8.00
Welch Memorial	5.70	1.50
Winston	46.25	20.75
Why Not	44.00	17.00
Yadkin College	5.00	9.75
Total from charges	$1,888.79
	Total due	$530.29
From Lectures	108.66
Interest	15.76
Grand Total	$2,013.21
Total cost of building		$3,412.46
Total received		2,013.21
Balance due		$1,399.25

Even if the unpaid pledges of $530.29 should be paid sometime in the future there would yet remain to be raised $868.-96.

Westminister, Md., November 8, 1912.

KING, N. C.

King, N. C., is a thriving village of about 300 inhabitants, situated in the A & Y division of the Southern Railway, 25 miles east of Mt. Airy, N. C.

In the village is located a large furniture factory, employing about 30 to 40 hands, four large stores, one nice Baptist church, a State High School Building valued at $3,500.00, and a large attendance of scholars—over one hundrtd and forty being enrolled in all departments, about fifteen of the students being boarding students| We also have a large depot, Barber shop, repair shop, buggy shop, livery stable, etc.

The location is high, being the highest station between Mt. Airy and Greensboro.

We have a hospitable and generous people, but sorry to note only about half the population having reached the age of accountability have joined the church, of any denomination.

Any person desiring to locate in a thriving village will do well to visit King and view the situation.

K.

—Sherman was the seventh vice-president to die in office. Two presidents have died (Harrison and Taylor and three have been killed (Lincoln, Garfield and McKinley).

REV. G. S. KERNODLE FALLS ON SLEEP.

Our community was shocked and grieved to hear of the death of Rev. G. S. Kernodle, which occured at his home on Main Street Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. While his health had not been vigorous for some time, his condition did not become alarming until the first of the week, when he experienced much difficulty in breathing. A throat specialist was called in addition to local physicians who found his trouble to be congestion of the lungs. He gradually grew worse till the end, which came peacefully and apparently without a struggle.

Mr. Kernodle, who was in his 66th year, was one of the county's most substantial citizens, being largely interested in farming and real estate, He was a man of good business qualifications and accumulated considerable property. For many years he has been investing in Reidsville property, erecting several business houses besides a number of dwellings. A few months ago he removed from his home in the country to Reidsville and had settled down to enjoy the comforts of town life when the almost sudden summons came.

For twenty years he has been a local preacher of the Methodist Protestant church, giving his services without remuneration. He took the lead in the work of his church at Midway, where he was an active worker and liberal contributor. That the Methodist Protestants of Reidsville might have a church in which to worship he instructed the pastor Rev. Mr. Raper, to rely on him to see the enterprise through, and at the time of his death had put over $2,200 into the building, which will be completed by his devoted wife in accordance with his last wishes. This speaks volumes for his love for his denomination, and his liberality.

He is survived by a widow, who was Miss Sallie Whitsett, a sister of the late Dr. A. M. Whitsett. Their only child, a daughter, died at a tender age. One brother, Mr. James. S. Kernodle, of Norfolk, and three sisters, Mrs. Thomas Patterson and Mrs. Ida Cooper, of Winston-Salem, and Mrs. Harry Laws, of Yorksville, S. C., also survive.

The funeral services were conducted from Main Street Methodist church yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock by Rev. C. E. M. Raper, assisted by Rev. W. F. Womble. Mr. Raper paid a beautiful and touching tribute to his departed friend, whom he said he loved next to his own father. All hearts were touched by the pastor's feeling remarks.

The following were the active pallbearers: P. H. Williamson, J. C. Hutcherson, R. A. Carroll, Jno. D. Huffines, T. S. Wray and Dr. W. A. Johnston.

The flower-bearers were: D. L. Carroll, Arthur Dixon, Wade Apple, J. R. McCollum, J. F. Watlington, L. T. Gardner, W. A. Trotter, W. J. Irvin, J. E. Smith, I. R. Humphreys, and Wm. Cummings.

Many friends from the country attended the last sad rites.

The interment was made at Greenview cemetery.—Webster's Weekly.

THOUGHTFUL PEOPLE ARE THINKING.

Inquiries are reaching me in reference to the Board's Annuity Plan.

This plan has much merit, and is used by the foremost Foreign Mission Boards of America.

It provides a reasonable rate of interest on a fixed sum of money which you give outright to the Board.

The Board will give you a bond which stipulates the interest you will receive during life, and this income will be fixed, regular, dependable and free from taxation.

At your death the money, already the Board's, will be used directly in the foreign missionary work, your money being meanwhile invested by the Board.

This plan obviates the necessity of making a will, and will prevent any contest, expense, delay or any diverting of the money to purposes not designed by you.

Our members who have means, the proceeds of which they need for their support, are urged to seriously consider whether they should not give some definite sum to the Board of Foreign . issions on this plan.

All questions will be cheerfully answered, and printed matter suppled free.

For The Sunday School.

Every school must give attention to the missionary education of the young. The next generation in the church must believe heartily in the universality of the gospel, and must share largely in giving it to all men.

Wide-awake superintendents are using the little book "Five Missionary Minutes" costing 50 cts. It is packed with Home and Foreign missionary information for use at opening or closing of school, and need not interfere with the lesson. Send to the Book Concern for it.

Your school should have the latest missionary map in colors, on cloth, cost $3.-00. Then the missionary charts are instructive giving facts in figures and diagrams, etc.

Once More.

Pastor, teacher, now is the time to organize that foreign missionary Study Class or Reading Circle. Get your young people together once a week for eight weeks, and use one of the books describing a country in heathendom, the people, customs, religions, etc,. It will be profitable, and you will enlist your young people better in church work. Write to me about it.

The World In Baltimore.

The greatest exposition ever held in Baltimore will open October 25, and continue throughout November. October 31 will be Methodist Day with special features. In a large building especially constructed the exposition proper will be held, and there streets, shops, temples, etc., will be seen as they are abroad, and Americans in the costumes of those lands will demonstrate how the natives live, work, worship, etc.

The pagent of Darkness and Light will depict in song, processions and historic characters, great events, achievements of Chrstianity. More anon.

Fred C. Klein, Cor. Sec.

316 N. Charles St., Baltimore, Md.

CHILD LABOR.

That there is more back of the evil of child labor than the simple injustice to the child is the conclusion drawn by that grand body of men and women, experts in truth, who are studying this economic question. Dr. S. Adolphus Knope of New York declares that child labor predisposes towards tuberculosis. He says further: "Tuberculosis is a social disease, in the final analysis. It can not be eradicated until we have social justice." Complete social justice will never be had until child labor, in the strict sense of the term, is eradicated. No one, as the Indianapolis Star truthfully suggests, wants to bring up a child in complete idleness. . It should be responsible for some appointed task in the home or the state institution. The task, of course, should be within the child's powers, and it should early learn the responsibility and dignity of work. But it should not be forced into factory, sweatshop, mine or other occupations while it is weak and undeveloped. It should be adequately supervised as to moral and spiritual well-being till at least 16 years old. English authorities on the child labor question say that lawlessness is directly encouraged by child labor, and which tends to produce dislike or disability for more regular employment. The make mention of the "street trading," fact that money is earned without skill or discipline dulls the child's intellect while sharpening its wits. The work leads to nothing permanent, but in later years usually tends towards crime and lawlessness. The heads of the London police department say that many criminals are recruited from these "street traders." In fact, child labor of any kind has, in this day of industrial struggle and automatic machinery, made the child an automation; his work has ceased to be educative and has actually become demoralizing. Instead of growing into a healthy, useful person, he becomes a lawless useless person, incompetent and, in later years, unemployed. In years to come the world will wonder how it could so long have endured this blight upon the physical and moral vigor of the human race." —The Citizens' Bulletin.

HOW PROHIBITION MEANS MORE DRUNKENNESS.

The New York Evening Journal says that "prohibition means more drunkenness and those that are really and sincerely opposed to drunkenness and to excessive whiskey drinking should be the honest and open opponents of mistaken prohibition and its mistaken friends."

The statement belongs to that class of literature labeled "interesting if true."

"Prohibition means more drunkenness." That explains the desire of every distiller and every brewer to break down the prohibition defenses of Maine and Kansas and the other prohibition territory of the country.

"Prohibition means more drunkenness." That explains why some of the major league baseball parks have abolished the saloons under the grandstands. Everybody understands what a fine advertisement a drunken enthusiast is at a ball game, and the sure way to get him, in large numbers, is to prohibit ball park saloons.

"Prohibition means more drunkenness." Yes. it does; just as doctors mean more diseases, and schools means more ignorance, and food-inspection means more bad meat, and life-saving stations mean more wrecks, and sane Fourths means more lockjaw, and antitoxin means more diphtheria, and the Ten Commandments mean more wickedness.

All these restraining things mean more of the evil they are meant to restrain or cure; but they mean it in just one situation only—when they don't work!—Epworth Herald.

HELPING OTHERS.

Only those who suffer most over their own faults can be of most service in helping their fellows to overcome their faults Only as we are keenly conscious of our own sin, remembering it vividly as we cling in recognized worthlessness and helplessness to Christ as our only hope, can we be of help to others in leading them out of their faults into a lasting Christ-given victory and freedom. Yet we do not often go in this spirit at the task of helping others to overcome. If we see, or think we see, some faults in another, and we contemplate speaking about it, that fault usually looms so big just then that our own faults are quite forgotten in the exercise. And our forgetfulness is the doom of our helpfulness. It makes real love and sympathy impossible. It distorts or clouds our vision. We cannot see others' faults truly unless we are feeling our weakness at the same time. One good result from this insistence upon remembering our own weakness is that others' faults will seem so little by contrast that we shall usually decide not to mention them at all. But if on rare occasions, at God's own urgent leading, we do speak, it will be with a wealth of love and tenderness and sympathy and conscious personal inferiority and utter dependence upon Christ that will uplift and encourage and inspire. May that be always our whole and only purpose as we think or speak of the shortcomings of our fellows!—Sunday School Times.

—Floyd Allen and Claude have appealed to the Supreme Court and the governor has postponed the day of their execution to give the court opportunity to consider the appeal.

—The four gunmen charged with killing Rosenthall in New York have been found gullt. They with Lieutenant Becker will make five to suffer death for the killing of one.

HOW BASIL CROSSED OVER.

Avis is a little girl whose home is in the great city of London. Every morning she goes to school in charge of her great St. Bernard dog, Basil, who walks proudly at her side, waving his bushy tail majestically, and never deigning to glance at the little street curs, who express their opinion of his state by short barks of derision. A crowded throughfare has to be crossed each day, and Avis has taught Basil to run ahead a few steps and bark loudly at the policeman, whose duty is to stop all traffic until foot passengers are safely over.

One morning Avis awoke with a sore throat, and her mother would not allow her to go to school. But Basil, whose throat was not sore, saw no reason why he should be deprived of his usual morning walk; and at the accustomed hour he slipped quietly away. With his usual grand air he walked down the street until he came to the crossing.

The policeman stood in the middle of the road, which was packed with omnibuses, hacks, and hansoms. At the sound of his familiar bark he held up his baton, and immediately the crowded 'buses and other vehicles were drawn up solidly in line.

In response to the wave of his hand, who should step out on the crossing but Basil? He made his way deliberately across to the opposite side walk, apparently quite unaware that he was doing a most unusual thing for a dog, while the omnibus drivers, the passengers, and the dazed policeman burst into a hearty laugh as they realized how, unconsciously, the knowing dog had tricked them all.—Our Animal Friends.

BILLY AND THE DWARF.

Billy was called a bothersome boy. His brothers and sisters thought him a bother because he was always teasing them. The neighbors closed their doors when they saw him coming, for he was sure to get into mischief. The chickens all ran into the corner of the yard when he came, for he was likely to chase them; and the kittens ran and hid, too, for he was not good to them.

Billy sat one evening on a hassock. He was lonely, and he was thinking. "I guess nobody likes me," when suddenly a funny little man, about as big as his thumb, hopped upon his knee. "Do you want me to help you?" said the funny dwarf.

"Yes," said Billy, "if you will make people like me."

"I will," said he. "But you must promise to do everything I say. I will get into your coat pocket, and you must listen and obey."

Billy thought it would be very nice to have the tiny creature always with him so he promised. Then he lifted him gently into his pocket.

Just then his father called: "Billy, run into the house for my newspaper."

Billy was just on the point of saying, "Can't somebody else get it?" when the dwarf called in his sharp little voice: "Run, Billy, run on tiptoe." Then Billy ran on tiptoe, found his father's paper and brought it with a smile.

Just then Billy heard the voices of his brothers and sisters, who had been to the woods for flowers and birch. They had gone without inviting Billy, for they thought he would be in the way. Billy ran to meet them.

"I think you're real mean," he was about to say, when the dwarf whispered: "Billy, share your apples."

Now, Billy had a bagful that his uncle had given him. He had meant to eat them all himself; but when he heard that tiny voice, he skipped away to the shed got his bag of apples, and gave a big rosy one to each of his brothers and sisters They were surprised, and they gladly shared their birch and flowers with the little brother who had been so generous to them.

Early the next morning Billy remembered that the old hen had a coopful of fluffy yellow chickens As soon as he dressed he ran out to see them. He found them all running to hide under their mother's wing. One chicken lost its way, and Billy began chasing it. But the dwarf, still resting in his pocket, whispered: "Give them some breakfast, Billy."

Billy heard the little voice. Then he ran quickly and shelled an ear of corn for the mother hen. He mixed some Indian meal with water in a big yellow bowl for the chickens. Then he gathered around while he fed them, and, as he did not try to catch them, Billy knew that they were afraid of him no longer.

On his way to school that morning Billy met Sambo, a little boy in a big straw hat. Billy's hand went up to snatch the big hat and throw it over the fence, when the tiny dwarf called out: "Ask him to play ball with you."

"Sam, Sambo, will you play with my new ball at recess?" said he.

"Yes," said Sambo. "Do you mean it?"

"To be sure," said Billy with a smile.

The boys had a fine game of ball at recess and in a few days Sambo had learned that Billy was always good to him now.

As Billy walked towards home that afternoon he remembered a pond where the fishes played. He whispered to his little brother, "Let's run away to the pond," though his mother had often said: "Never go to the pond unless I am with you." The tiny friend in his pocket said: "Go ask your mother."

Billy's mother was sitting on the porch, and the boys, politely raising their caps asked her: "Will you please go with us to the pond?" Mother was pleased to see the children so courteous, and she gladly left her sewing to go with them.

One night Billy sat again on the big stone at the bottom of the steps. He was saying to himself: "Most everybody likes me, I guess."

The dwarf whispered from his pocket: "Shall I stay with you, Billy?"

"Yes, said Billy, "I will not let you go."

Billy grew up tall, and handsome, and best of all, he grew to like every one, and every one liked him.—Elizabeth Stoll, in Kindergarten Review.

A FRONTIER HERO.

I think it was about the summer of 1901 or '02 that I had the pleasure of visiting in an excellent German home near Osage City, Oklahoma. As we entered the house a large black Newfoundland dog followed in. His beauty caught my eye, and I made some remark about him; and that led to this story, told by the German lady. I shall not attempt to imitate her speech, though I assure you that her fine German accent and her saintly old face, as she related the incident, added not a little to its fascinating charm:

"In the early days of the settlement of Kansas," said the good old matron, "we settled in the southern part of the state. We owned a bigger and stronger dog then than the one you just saw go out of the house. We had only one child then, Charlie. He was a little over two. Our work team was a yoke of oxen, one of them inclined to be 'ugly.' Well, that dog—Bruno was his name—had taken up with the baby from the very first time he ever saw it—Bruno was just about a year old when Charlie was born—and as soon as the baby was able to crawl, and later to run about, Bruno was always with him. I don't believe he ever let that child go out of his sight when he was out of doors. Well, one day, when father was working away from home, I went out at noon to water the oxen. Charlie had followed me out into the yard, though I did not know it. He had on a red dress, which I guess drew the attention of the ox, and with a snort the animal charged. My first impression was that he was running at me, but the instant I fixed my eyes upon him I knew better, and, turning quickly in the direction of his terrible eyes, I saw Charlie. When he reached the end of the picket rope it snapped like twine. I was so frightened that to this day I do not know what I did—it always seems to me as I try to recall that awful moment, that I was trying to run to my child, but could not move. As usual, Bruno was near the child. He, too, saw what had happened and what was about to happen. With the noble instinct of his breed (he was a cross between a mastiff and Newfoundland) he sprang in front of the unsuspecting child. I can see him today, his great muscles standing out in knots upon his shoulders, his powerful crouching limbs tense for the on-coming struggle, his white teeth shining, and his flaming, fearless eyes fixed upon the infuriated, charging beast. Before the maddened ox had reached him, with one mighty bound Bruno met him, and, seizing him by the nose, he crouched to the ground and held him fast until I had run and caught my child up in my arms and run into the house. I was so weak with fright that I could not stand, but sank down upon the floor and cried for sheer joy.

"When father came home that night, of course that was the first thing I had to tell him. He had always thought lots of Bruno, and was always very fond of the baby, but I think he had never before thought so much of Bruno or loved his baby so fondly as he did that night as he listened to my story. And when I had finished he took Charlie in his arms, and kissed him half a dozen times; and then he went to the door and opened it and called big Bruno in, and sat down on the floor beside him, and put his arms around his neck and patted him on the big brave head, and for half an hour talked to him and tried to make him understand that he appreciated what he had done." O. B. Whitaker, in Our Dumb Animals.

THE FOOLISH RABBIT.

Once upon a time a rabbit was asleep under a palm tree.

All at once he woke up and thought: "What if the world should break up! What then would become of me?"

At that moment some monkeys dropped a cocoanut. It fell down on the ground just back of the rabbit.

Hearing the noise, the rabbit said to himself: "The earth is all breaking up."

And he jumped up and ran as fast as he could, without even looking back to see what made the noise.

Another rabbit saw him running and called after him: "What are you running so fast for?"

"Don't ask me," he cried.

But the other rabbit ran after him, begging to know what was the matter.

Then the first rabbit said: "Don't you know? The earth is all breaking up!"

And on he ran; and the second rabbit ran with him.

The next rabbit they met ran with them when he heard that the earth was all breaking up.

One rabbit after another joined them, until there were hundreds of rabbits running as fast as they could go.

They passed a deer, calling out to him that the earth was all breaking up. The deer ran with them.

The deer called to a fox to come along, because the earth was all breaking up.

On and on they ran and an elephant joined them.

At last a lion saw the animals running and heard their cry that the earth was breaking up.

He thought there must be some mistake, so he ran to the foot of a hill in front of them and roared three times.

This stopped them; for they knew the voice of the king of beasts, and they feared him.

"Why are you running so fast?" asked the lion.

"O King Lion," they answered him, "the earth is all breaking up!

"Who saw it breaking up?" asked the lion.

"I didn't," said the elephant. "Ask the fox. He told me about it.

"I didn't, said the fox.

"The rabbits told me about it," said the deer.

One after another of the rabbits said: "I did not see it, but another rabbit told me about it."

At last the lion came to the rabbit who had first said the earth was breaking up.

"Is it true that the earth is all breaking up?" the lion asked the foolish, timid rabbit.

"Yes, O lion, it is," said the rabbit. "I was asleep under a palm tree. I woke up and thought: 'What would become of me if the earth should all break up?' At that very moment I heard the sound of the earth breaking up and I ran away."

"Then," said the lion, "you and I will go back to the place where the earth began to break up and see what is the matter."

So the lion put the little rabbit on his back, and away they went like the wind. The other animals waited at the foot of the hill.

The rabbit told the lion when they were near the place where he slept, and the lion saw just where the rabbit had been sleeping. He saw, too, the cocoanut that had fallen to the ground near by. Then the lion said to the rabbit: "It must have been the sound of the cocoanut falling to the ground that you heard, you foolish rabbit."

And the lion ran back to the other animals and told them all about it. If it had not been for a wise king of beasts, they might be running still.—Ellen C. Babbitt, in St. Nicholas.

WHAT THE SPIDER TOLD.

"I was spinning a web on a rose vine," said the spider, "and the little girl was sewing patchwork on her doorstep. Her thread knotted and her needle broke and her eyes were full of tears. 'Can't do it!' she cried; 'I can't! I can't!' Then the mother came and told her to look at me. Every time I spun a nice thread, and tried to fasten it to a branch, the wind blew and tore it away. This happened several times, but at last I made one that did not break, and fastened it and spun other threads to join it. Then the mother smiled.

"'What a patient spider!' she said.

"The little girl smiled, too, and took up her work. And when the sun went down there was a beautiful web in the rose vine and a square of beautiful patchwork on the doorstep."—The Young Evangelist.

MRS. CHAS. E. PATTON writes from Ko CHAU:

Because of the revolution I have been in Ko Chau less than five of the nine months since last Mission meeting.

The houses in this district have been packed full of refugees, for the most part women, who terror-stricken by the depredations of robber bands, had fled from their native villages to Ko Chau for safety. Each evening, as night approached and fears grew, they came to us in numbers. They had nothing to do, and after they had eaten their morning rice, would come in big parties to visit me and see the new church building. I tried to make each visit so interesting that they would be glad to come again. One woman has been diligently studying under the most stupid of my women students, and earnestly seeking to enter the church. She is a widow with some property, and of the better class, just such a woman as I had longed to win, and yet she has been brought through the efforts of the humblest of the students—a woman who, I had begun to fear, was only fitted to work among the most ignorant. This is doubly gratifying in that it reveals the fact that the Gospel has really taken root in some of the women's hearts and is beginning naturally to produce its own fruitage.

SPECIAL INVITATION MEETINGS.

In some churches there is a gulf fixed between the Christian Endeavor society and the Sunday school. Of course, Endeavors may be both scholars and teachers, but there is little official coming and going between the two institutions.

The gulf may be bridged in part if the society will build the bridge. One night it may send an invitation to an organized class in Sunday school and prepare a special programme for the meeting, in which members of the class have a share. If there are several classes, invite one at a time.

Different sections of the school may be invited in the same way, a special programme being carefully prepared to meet their needs. On the evening when scholars of Junior age are invited, the work of the Junior society should be explained; and if there is no Junior society in the church, this is the time to organize one

Even the Brotherhood should be invited to attend a meeting, and a royal welcome should be given to the members. Many men would become Endeavorers if they understood the real aim of the society. Cannot we make it winsome?

Again, not only may the various classes and sections of the Sundoy school be invited to atend the meetings of the society, they may also be invited to attend socials. Take them one by one. This is far better than a blanket invitation to a big sociol.

Little Plans That Mean Much.

Perhaps the plan that has worked the longest and the best in many Junior societies is a roll of the members tacked on the side of the room, and every Sunday a member is present a "P" is put after his name with a blue pencil. If he is really, truly sick a red "S" is put after his name If he has not been absent for three months I give him a little present costing about five or ten cents; and as I have forty-five members, it is astonishing how many presents I have to get.

Another thing that is a great help to me is the black-board pictures. Someone draws them for me on the blackboard every week, and the children are very eager for them, and some of the ideas they express about the pictures and what they think they mean are very, very original.

In The Birthplace of Endeavor.

Portland, Me., union has just celebrated its twenty-fifth birthday, and the anniversary was fitting held in Williston Congregational Church, where the first society was formed. Of course there was a supper, followed by roll-call of societies. Dr. Jess Hill gave the newofficers a stirring charge to be true- hearted and loyal as in the past.

Woodfords society had a supper and conference just after the recent election of officers for the year. The chairman of each committee was presented with a note-book containing some clippings relating to the work of his committee. Then committee meetings were held and work for the next month was planned. At the following meeting every committee reported.

Look After Your Reports.

Officers of Sunday schools and Christian endeavor Societies should see that full reports of the school and church are sent to conference. By no means do not overlook this—It is important.

C. E. Topic, Nov. 24.

"The Christian Virtues—Gratitude"—Psalms 147: 1-20 (Thanksgiving Day meeting).

For Daily Reading.

Mon. Nov. 18.—Abel's thanksgiving. Gen. 4: 3-8.

Tues., Nov. 19.—First national thanksgiving Exod. 15: 1-18.

Wed., Nov. 20.—God's thanksgiving call.

Thurs., Nov.—A Christian thanksgiving. Acts 4:23-31.

Fri., Nov. 22.—A theme for thanksgiving. Col. 1: 12-19.

Sat., Nov. 23.—Heaven's thanksgiving. Rev. 5: 8-14.

Some Practical Illustrations.

1. "The birds sing joyously as soon as they wake up in the morning; so let us fill with praise the first minute of our opening day."

2 'As the singer's song grew out of hard practice, so does gratitude, which is the song of the heart. Train yourself to thanksgiving."

3. "Gratitude is a virtue most defied and yet most deserted; it is the ornament of rhetoric and the libel practical life."

4. "Zealous soul without meekness, is like a ship in a storm, in danger of wrecks. A meek soul without zeal, is like a ship in a calm, that moves not as it should."

5. The thankful spirit relieves the heart of its load of care and anxiety. Though the sun may today seem to be obscured by very dark clouds, it will be of little notice to you if you pause a moment and think how good God has been to you.

Thoughts in Brief.

Let our aim tonight be to find the good things, not the sad things. Let our ideal be the bee that flies all through fields where there are noxious weeds, noticing only the sweet and bringing in only honey.

But it is spiritual blessings that we see God's hand most plainly. How often has he provided the armor which enabled you to get the victory over the world without and within? How blind we are, that we should look for his providence only in joy and earthly comfort.

"This is the Thanksgiving season. The Psalmist says, 'It is a good thing to give thanks unto Jehovah.' If we have never tried it—the spirit of gratitude never being strong enough to prompt us—let us do so this year on the strengh of one's word who never found great delight in "counting his blessings" and praising God."

"Not by word only, but we are to "show forth God's loving kindness in the morning and his faithfulness every night. It is not exactly the same as "reciprocating" God's loving kindness. For that were impossible. We are to be"relays" which take up and pass on to others; we are to show forth and sound forth our thanksgiving."

Dr. Holmes compared the thankful heart to a magnet, sweeping throggh a dish of sand with which iron fillings had been mixed, and finding every one of them, The unthankful heart is like a finger swept through the sand, and finding no bit of iron. A grateful spirit always finds cause for gratitude.

Locke, the philosopher, compared the ungrateful to the sea, which is all the time receiving the refreshing showers of heaven and turning them to salt.

It is well to be a careful giver, but it is also well, and sometimes harder, to be a grateful receiver.

A lady, who had just helped a blind man over a street crossing, said to her little boy, "I'm glad I am not blind." "So am I," said the boy. "I will tell God to-night when I say my prayers."

Dr. Cowan tells about a little boy in a hospital, from whose arm a piece of bone had been removed. Before going home he called the kind surgeon and laid his hand on his shoulder. Said the grateful boy, "My mamma will never hear the last about you." If we are grateful to Christ, our friends will never hear the last about Him.

Queen Victoria was greatly moved by seeing the wounded soldiers brought back from South Africa, and asked one poor fellow, terribly wounded, if she could do anything for him. The soldier answered, "Nothing your majesty, unless you would thank my nurse for her kindness to me." The soldier's gratitude led him to forget himself, in the desire to bring pleasure and honor to the one who had helped him.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

N. B.—The following schedule figures are published only as information and are not guaranteed:

12:20 a. m., No. 29 daily, Birmingham special. Through Pullman sleeping and observation car, New York to Birmingham. Dining-car service.

12:32 a. m., No. 32 daily, the Southern's Southeastern Limited Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville and Augusta to New York. Also handles Pullman sleeping car from Raleigh and Greensboro to Washington, D. C., this car ready for occupancy at Greensboro, 10:00 p. m. Dining car service.

12:45 a. m., No. 112 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro, Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh. Open at 9:15.

2:10 a. m., No. 30 daily, Birmingham special, Pullman sleeping and observation car for New York. Day coach to Washington. Dining car service.

2:25 a. m., No. 31 daily. The Southern's Southeastern Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, New York to Jacksonville and Augusta. Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Greensboro and Raleigh. Dining car service.

3:45 a. m., No. 45, daily, local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7:10 a. m., No. 8 daily, local for Richmond connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7:20 a. m., No. 37, daily, New York and Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman Drawing-room sleeping cars, and club and observation cars New York to New Orleans. Pullman sleeping cars New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman Chair car Greensboro to Montgomery. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m., No. 108, daily, for Durham, Raleigh and local points. Handles Pullman Sleeping Car from Washington to Raleigh.

7:35 a. m., No. 11 daily, local to Atlanta. Sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m., No. 150 daily, except Sunday, for Ramseur.

8:15 a. m., No. 237 daily, for Winston-Salem, and daily except Sunday, for N. Wilkesboro.

9:30 a. m., No. 44 daily, for Washington and points North.

9:40 a. m., No. 144 daily, for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles Atlanta-Raleigh sleeping car.

12:30 p. m., No. 21 daily, for Asheville and local points, handles coaches and parlor car through to Asheville.

12:50 p. m., No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12:55 p. m., No. 7 daily, local for Charlotte and points South.

1:40 p. m., No. 36 daily, U. S. fast mail for Washington, New York and points North. Handles Pullman Sleeping Cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman Sleeping Car, Memphis to Richmond. Day coaches to Washington. Dining car service.

2:20 p. m., No. 207 daily, except Sunday, for Winston-Salem, making connection for North Wilkesboro.

2:30 p. m., No. 151 daily, except Sunday, for Madison.

3:20 p. m., No. 22 daily, for Durham, Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles parlor car to Goldsb[illegible]

3:30 [illegible] 230 daily, except Sunday, for R[illegible]

3:45 [illegible] No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4:55 p. m., No. 131 daily, for Mt. Airy.

6:10 p. m., No. 35 daily, U. S. fast mail for Atlanta and points South. Pullman sleeping cars to New Orleans and Birmingham and Pullman sleeping car Richmond to Asheville, dining car service.

6:35 p. m., No. 235 daily, for Winston-Salem.

7:20 p.m., No. 43 daily for Atlanta. Pullman sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10:13 p. m., No. 38 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited. Pullman sleeping cars, and club and observation cars to New York. Dining car service. Solid Pullman train.

1:20 p. m., No. 233 daily, for Winston-Salem.

10:31 p. m., No. 12 daily, local for Richmond. Handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman,
V-P. and Gen. Mgr., Washington, D. C.
S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M.
Washington, D. C.
H. F. Cary, G. P. A.,
Washington, D. C.
R. L. Vernon, D. P. A.,
Charlotte, N. C.
W. H. McClamery, P. & T. A.
Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Mcseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF
STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro. N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. C. W. Banner

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE,
EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,
DENTIST.
Office in Benbow Arcade, S. Elm St.,
Rooms 348 and 350,
Greensboro, N. C.
Office phone 29, Residence phone 22.

The head of a certain family had followed his blessing, as usual, with grumbling about the food on the table. His little girl asked him, "Papa, did God hear what you said when you asked the blessing?" "Certainly," he replied, willing to interest his daughter. "And did He hear what you said about the bacon and the coffee?" "Ye-e-es," the father answered,not quite so willingly. "Then, father, which did God believe?"

DENTON MISSION.

Dear Brother McCulloch:

Our 4th quarterly conference convened at Pleasant Grove on Saturday before the 2nd Sunday in November; preaching at 11 A. M., quarterly conference 2 P. M.. We had a very small turn out. Both churches represented. A good spirit prevailed among those that were present. The usual business was transacted. Finances badly behind. I fear they will not all come up. The pastor's salary for 1913 was fixed at $400.00. We had some bad drawbacks that have hindered our work this year. I hope they will not be repeated another year. I see no good reason why our work at Denton should not become self-supporting in one or two more years. We hope the Denton school can be revived and made a success. The people there want us to redeem it and we can redeem it if we will. May the Lord bless the coming conference. We thank all those who have contributed to the Denton church. We hope to have a list of all their names printed in the M. P. Herald soon.

Fraternally,
D. A. Braswell.

THE PECAN.

Orchard trees are ordinarily transplanted from the nursery to their permanent location during January or February. The soil should first be put in good condition by thorough cultivation and, if necessary, steps should be taken to insure proper drainage.

The usual distance for planting differs in localities. In the deep alluvial lands of Louisiana and the Mississippi Valley, where it is expected that the trees will attain greater size than when grown in the lighter soils of the more eastern States, pecans are now being set at distance varying from 50 to 75 feet. Some planters, having in mind the idea that 100 feet will be the most suitable distance when the trees reach maturity, are planting at 50 feet, with the intention of removing the alternate trees as soon as crowding begins, leaving them eventually 100 feet each way.

In Georgia, a distance of 46 feet and 8 inches each way (20 trees to the acre) was adopted for some years, but as the orchards so set approached maturity it is becoming evident that considerably greater space would have been better. The planters now agree that 60 feet apart (12 trees to the acre) is not too great a distance.

Little Mary wrote a composition on "The Cow." It was brief: "The cow is a very useful animal." Her mother requested her to read it to the minister, which she did, amending it thus to suit the occasion. "The cow is the most helpful animal except religion."—Working Woman's Journal.

—Governor Terrell, of Georgia, is dead.

—According to governmental reports the use of tobacco and liquor in our country is increasing. This is terrible to realize, and great is the guilt of those who labor to induce people to use these articles, and we cannot believe those guiltless who help to supply the demand.

W. F. MEDEARIS I. F. PEEBLES W. L. PEEBLES
MEDEARIS-PEEBLES FURNITURE COMPANY.
Complete House Furnishers.
STOVES AND RANGES
Cash or Credit.
109 & 111 E. Market St.
Phone 823. Greensboro, N. C.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.
Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.
206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

A GREAT CITY'S WATER SUPPLY.

Yesterday afternoon I paid a visit to Pittsburgh's filtration plant, where they water from the Alleghany is freed from mud and bacteria and made fit for the city to drink. These filter beds are each an acre in size, and there are fifty of them. They are all built underground, covered with earth and sod supported by concrete arches, to prevent freezing. On going inside it seems like entering the Catacombs or some great cave. The beds are made of gravel covered with sand to a total depth of about six feet. They are flooded with water about six feet deep, which soaks through the sand and gravel into terra cotta piping underneath, leaving the mud behind. They say that the mud does not penetrate more than six inches into the sand. After about a month's service the filth clogs up, when the water is run off, the mud and the top sand scraped off, which is separated by thorough washing from the mud, and is thus reclaimed. The regulation of water flow is largely automatic, but there is labor necessary in keeping the filters in proper condition.—From a private letter by Leon McCulloch.

Prize Number Six.

For the greatest number of hidden plants found in the following and sent in before December 1st:

1. As he sang "My love lies bleeding" the hedge-hog hopped on to the foxtail, and the lion's foot stole the fox-glove.

2. The madder she got, the more the hen bit her until I mentioned good King Henry. Then Mother Carey figured and Eli only a mile away screamed "I'll whahoo."

3. Water me, long Tom, allow me cut grass and forget me not again while money or honesty or innocence or everlasting adder's tongues and worthy squires hold forth.

4. In Ivy County, Elder Hardback carries a hare's foot and a goat's beard to charm away false mermaids and water nymphs.

5. An ape, a chimpanzee, and a dragon headed for the St. Peters, wreathed in smiles, and flowers and myrtle branches so as to appear prim.

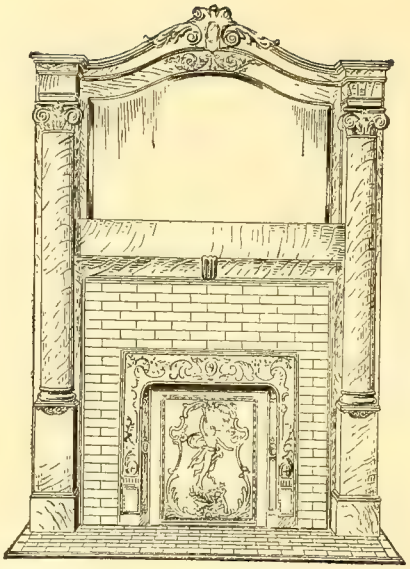
—George Newton, of Raleigh, went to an undertaking establishment to select a coffin for his wife. A pile of coffins fell on him and broke both legs besides dislocating several ribs. One leg was amputated. He is over sixty years old.

—Turkey continues to suffer defeat. Monastir, the second city of importance, has fallen before the Servians who captured three pashas.

Victoria was

Mike: "An' what are ye diggin' out that hole for, Pat?"

Pat: "Arah! an' it's not the hole I'm diggin' out! I'm diggin' the dirt and lavin' the hole!"



Mantels, Grates, Tiles and Builders' Hardware.

If you intend to build a new house, or to improve an old one, don't fail to get our catalogue, showing the latest designs in mantels, grates, tiles and builder's hardware. We have designs to suit every style of architecture. It will pay you to write us.

ODELL MANTEL COMPANY,
(Odell Hardware Co., Owners.)
Greensboro, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.
This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

ELON COLLEGE—CO-EDUCATIONAL AND NON-SECTARIAN.

Offers young men and young women in the Methodist Protestant Church exceptional advantages for higher college training. Courses offered leading to the degrees of A. B., Ph. B., L. I., Pe. B., and A. M. Certificate courses offered in Commerce, Music, and Art. Diplomas also granted in Music and Art.

Elon College is situated in the hill country in the Piedmont section of North Carolina. No sickness, healthful climate, pure deep well water. All the buildings heated by steam and lighted by electricity and supplied with water. A large gymnasium for men in process of erection.

Terms are very reasonable. Cost of all expenses ranges from $137 to $187 a year.

The Young Ladies' Home provides for board at cost for young ladies who wish to cheapen their living. This home is under the management of the College and the best possible care is taken of the girls.

The Boys' Boarding Club offers young men an opportunity of living at actual cost. By these boarding arrangements the cost of board and room should be reduced to about half the cost in private homes.

Any person interested should write foa Catalogue, Bulletins, and other information to

W. A. HARPER, LL. D., PRESIDENT,
Elon College, North Carolina.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XX. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1913. NUMBER 2.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCULLOCH, Editor and Publisher.
PRICE.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
RULE IN DEALING WITH SUBSCRIBERS.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

A Saloonless Nation by 1920!

CONFERENCE NOTES.

—Wasn't the weather just perfect!

—President Cecil and Secretary Bethea were re-elected on the first ballot.

—Next Conference is to begin on Wednesday, Nov. 18, 1914.

—Rev. W. E. Swain and W. W. Hunter of Greensboro were elected stationing committe, President Cecil being an advisory member.

—Rev. W. C. Kennett admitted that he is no longer one of the boys. He was born in 1835. We regret that we did not arrive in time to hear him preach the Conference sermon. He never faills to be interesting.

—Rev. G. W. Holmes preached the ordination sermon on Sunday morning after which Revs. C. W. Bates, L. W. Gerringer and W. A. Ledford were ordained.

—The visit of the Conference to the Children's Home on Friday was an event of especial interest to all. Supt. Garrett made an address, the children sang and recited , and a number of the visiting brethren responded to the call for short talks.

—Highly favorable testimonials as to the value of the Ministers' Summer Conference were given by Revs. T. M. Johnson, L. W. Gerringer, J. H. Stowe, N. G. Bethea, T. J. Ogburn, G. W. Holmes, C. W. Bates, S. W. Taylor, W. C. Lassiter, W. C. Kennett, D. A. Braswell, and C. A. Cecil.

—Asheville and Winston both invited the next Conference. The choice was somewhat difficult to make, as the inducements were so strong at both places, but the earnest appeals of Bro. Bates and others prevailed and Asheville got the majority and then a unanimous vote. We are already looking forward to a great time in Asheville next November.

—Dr. Klein came and spoke for foreign missions in his usual eloquent manner. He looks to pastors to give to the people missionary information without which they cannot be much interested in mission work. Our mission board has to provide not only for evangelistic but also for educational work in Japan. They have a school for the blind with 33 pupils. They have a night school in Yokohama with 298 scholars and a college in Nagoya with 400 students.. The receipts this year are $8,000 ahead of last year, but are not yet adequate to meet the demands of the work. A Presbyterian brother the past year left $10,000 to be divided equally between our church and the Presbyterian for foreign missionary work.

—Dr. Brown spoke Friday morning on the work of the Board of Ministerial Education. The time has come when trained ministers are demanded everywhere. The people want ministers that know more than they not only of religion, but of other subjects. There is no more important work known to men than the work of the minister of the Gospel. It demands the best preparation as well as the most earnest devotion. The work of the ministry should be put before the young men of the church. The Board now has thirty men in training but would like twice as many. He asked that we pray for all men in the ministry, for our Board of Ministerial Education and its Secretary, and that we try to raise the sum asked for the support of this work.

—Dr. Beck followed Dr. Brown, speaking for Home Missions. The Board has had a ten per cent. increase this year. North Carolina stands third in the list of contributing conferences. He made the statement that 75 per cent. of the population of this country have no adequate conception of the religion of Christ. Startling! More men are demanded for the home field, and it sometimes requires as much heroism to serve in this country as in heathen lands.

—One of the interesting features of the Conference was the address by Dr. C. E. Wilbur on our mission work in Japan and China. He recently visited our mission fields and was able to speak from personal knowledge. He spoke in approval of the work in both countries. He had words of special praise for the work of Miss Hodges in Japan and Mr. Heininger in China.

We were glad to have Dr. Wilbur repeat his address in Greensboro on Sunday morning.

—We were favored in having Rev. Lyman E. Davis, D. D., President of the General Conference and chairman of our Commission on Church Union, with us. He gave us helpful information and by his conciliatory spirit helped to bring about harmonious action. The vote for the report of the special committee on church union was 55 for and 23 against. We do not believe that those who voted against are really very much alarmed over the outlook. See elsewhere the resolutions adopted.

THE UNION QUESTION.

No other subject occupied so much time as this. The committee brought in its report early Saturday morning. The discussion began immediately and continued into the afternoon session.

The committee reported the following resolutions:

1. That we declare ourselves in favor of union with the Church of the United Brethren in Christ in accordance with the conditions stated in the resolutions following.

2. That we join in the call for a special session of the General Conference to which the Basis of Union shall be referred.

3. That we instruct our delegates to favor any basis of union that does not require the surrender of anything vital in doctrine or polity on the part of either church and that will secure unanimity of action on the part of both churches.

4. That the basis of union agreed upon by the General Conferrences of the two churches be handed down by our General Conference to the Annual Conferences of our church for ratification

When the vote was taken, this paper was adopted by a vote of 55 to 23.

By proceeding in the deliberate manner proposed which we understand to be required by the Constitution of the M. P. Church, we can better determine what duty to the Kingdom requires of us. and can have time to make our people know better the United Brethren and what a union with them would mean.

REPORT OF STATIONING COMMITTEE.

WHERE THE PREACHERS GO.

Albemarle—J. H. Abernethy.
Alamance—J. A. Ledbetter.
Anderson—W. A. Lamar.
Asheboro—C. L. Whitaker.

(Continued on page 4.)

THE FINISHED "LORD'S PRAYER"

About fifty years ago I preached in the chapel of Clifton Springs Sanitarium, magnifying Christ as the only way to the Father. Immediately after the service a woman said to me, "I have daily communion with my Heavenly Father without any mention or even thought of Jesus Christ." I made no reply, thinking that the woman might be off her balance, mentally.

I had not at that time become familiar with Unitarian literature, which I find is full of the same ignoring of Jesus Christ. They all claim that they use the Lord's Prayer, which is "a perfect formula of acceptable worship." At the close of a course of sermons on that prayer, James Freeman Clarke calls special attention to the fact that "there is, in the prayer, not even a hint of the need of a mediator, or of an atonement. Hence perfect access to God may be had without these."

In reply to this, I would say that probably ninety per cent. of adult Christians, in repeating the Lord's Prayer, think of the Father as

"The triune God of holiness, Whose glory fills the sky," and, in this way, are trusting in Christ as their Savior and Lord. But I do not think that this is rendering full obedience to Christ's command, uttered on the day before His death, "Ask in My name."

Now the question arises, Why did He not incorporate His name in the Prayer we are considering? Our reply is, that this Prayer was given in answer to the request of His disciples, at the very opening of His ministry, long before His Deity was revealed by His resurrection and ascension. So that His name, added to the Prayer, at this time, would have been only a stumbling block to every one of His disciples.

His progressive revelation of truth, in accordance with the ability of His hearers to receive it, is estimated in these words, in His last address before His crucifixion, "I have many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now." But with His resurrection only three days ahead, He thought that they could endure this addition to the prayer He had taught them, without a disastrous eclipse of their faith. He thought, also, that they would have sense enough to make this important addition, since it is requisite for all prayer.

But good men all along down the ages have failed to do this, because they have not noted the progress of doctrine in the four Gospels, in which the supreme Divinity of Christ is gradually revealed. This is seen, if any one will read the Sermon on the Mount, and then immediately read the fourteenth, fifteenth, and sixteenth chapters of John's Gospel. Then, if the reader is not convinced, let him study that series of Bampton Lectures on "The Progress of Doctrine in the New Testament," by Barnard, which is like an arc light set in the midst of the Gospel.

To those who object that this makes the Lord Jesus an imperfect teacher respecting prayer, we would say that the same objection lies against Him as the teacher of the Gospel as a whole system, for, as we have seen, He left many of His precepts unspoken, because of the apostles' inability to receive them, intimating that they would be uttered by him from on high, through the Holy Spirit, during the apostolic age. The very first act of His apostles after Christ's Ascension is recorded in Luke 24:52, "and they worshiped him."

Bishop Westcott, the most scholarly and sympathetic exegete of John's writings, notes two sources of theological error, which arise in all times, "the error which finds expression in various forms of polytheism, and the error which treats that which is preparatory, in revelation, as final" (note on John 17:3). This is his comment on the words, "This is life eternal, that they may know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." Here the preparatory truth is that knowing Jesus Christ as essential to eternal life, thus putting Him on a level with God, is a truth introductory to the final revelation of His Deity, by the resurrection and ascension. Thus believed His disciples after the Day of Pentecost. This very error, referred to by Westcott, was in the mind of those who had this text (John 17:3) written on the pulpit wall of a Liberalistic church only a mile from Boston, the center of Unitarianism.

To willfully omit the name of Jesus Christ in our approach to God is to dishonor Him. "He that honoreth not the Son honoreth not the Father." Hence the woman who boasted of communion with God, without any thought of His Son, was mistaken, for He distinctly said, "No man cometh unto the Father but by me," and she was guilty of dishonoring both these Divine Persons.

The addition of the name of Christ to the Lord's Prayer enhances its value infinitely. It lays a wonderful foundation for faith in the thought that humanity is on the throne of the universe, that the God-Man has a human heart joined to an almighty hand, which will lift all overcoming believers in Him to a seat by His side, as He overcame and sits by His Father's side.

This finished prayer, taken from the Revision, with the change of "which" to "who" (made by the American Standard), with the addition of the completing words, is as follows: "Our Father who art in heaven, hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done, as in heaven, so on earth. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debts, as we also have forgiven our debtors. And bring us not into temptation, but deliver us from the evil one. In the name of Jesus Christ. Amen."

I would have this prayer printed in every evangelical creed, catechism, prayer book, and ritual. I would also have it placed on the pulpit wall of every church, thus affording a means of uniformity in union services, and taking a long step towards that unity for which Christ prayed—"That they all may be one . . . that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."—Dr. Daniel Steele, in Zion's Herald.

PRACTICAL WORTH OF OUR CHRISTIAN HOPES

"We have been so busy attending to the things that ought to be done, we have had no time to feed the springs that keep alive those mighty hopes which make us Christian men."

"The risks of a tyrannous practical mood are great. When things get into the saddle and override ideas and ideals and all good feeling, when the multiplication of loaves and fishes becomes the only problem of the world, we know the results to be vicious. To be wholly practical is to grub for edible roots and see no flowers upon the earth, no stars overhead."

These sentences, so nearly identical in their message to modern life, come respectively from the published writings of a preacher and a scientist. The first is contained in a sermon by Rev. Charles E. Jefferson; the second is quoted from a book entitled "Introduction to Science," by the Regius professor of natural history in Aberdeen University, J. Arthur Thomson. They are placed beside each other here in order to show how closely the preacher and the scientist agree when it comes to the interpretation of the true values of life.

No person who knows the world today could deny for a moment the seriousness of the problem which Dr. Jefferson and Professor Thomson have here recognized and stated. We are in the tyrannical grasp of the practical mood. The modern world demands that things shall be done swiftly and effectively. We must "have the goods." The boy beginning to learn the details of business yields to the pressure of the practical demand that he "make good." The school must yield immediate results that are available to make an acre of land yield more bushels of corn. The church is under constraint as she is challenged on the point of institutional efficiency. Even the workers in the ideal realm of the fine arts are stopped at the toll houses and tax booths that a commercial age has set up at every turn and gate, and asked to show their licenses and display useful products before they can pass on. Things are, indeed, in the saddle.

There is a certain advantage in all this. The idealists have a tendency to cast off all moorings and idly sail the sea of dreams. It is a steadying influence upon them when an urgent generation bids them furnish practical results as credentials for membership in the body of those who promote human welfare. There is hard work to be done before the golden age shall come, and the ability to take a firm grip on constructive enterprises is required of every factor in the solution of our modern problems.

The peril is, however, that there shall be so persistent a demand for the immediate yield of practical returns that the true work of ideal forces will be overlooked when sometimes they fail at once to accomplish results. The tyranny of "things in the saddle" is more disastrous than the reign of an unchallenged idealism. For back of every institution lies an ideal, and conduct is determined by the impelling vision that determines the deed. And so, in an age that has been trained to seek for causes, and to go behind events in the heroic effort to discover general laws, we must constantly be brought back to a realization of the worth of ideals.

We are thinking now especially of those lasting Christian hopes and durable visions that have called into being countless helpful agencies by the action of which the life of man has been enriched since Jesus taught in Galilee. Sometimes in the midst of a temporary setback we raise the question whether we have "made an inch of progress since the crucifixion." The spectacle in the Balkans compels us to pause in the midst of any boastful mood as to the permanence of our Christian conquest. But we know when we think the matter through that the Christian ideal has been reached, and that it need have no fear when it is asked to furnish its warrants.

The truth is, our grubbing generation needs to see the stars. Without this vision life remains on the dead level of a dreary routine where good work cannot be done very long because the inspirations to it are withdrawn. For this is the service that the ideal renders in practical life, it creates new motives and furnishes the permanent supports which are needed by those who must struggle with the commonplace. And therefore the Christian vision is of primary and permanent value in the accomplishment of the tasks which are demanded by the age in which we live. The output of daily product will surely cease when the energy is withdrawn from the factory; and the ideals and hopes are the energy that drive to successful work the busy hands of men.

Therefore the work of the church and the message of the preacher are bound to be permanent in the life of the community. Sometimes we raise the question whether there is any longer need of the prophet who shall disturb the contentment of a generation which is satisfied with its stock dividends. But this very satisfaction is the proof that the prophet still is needed to add vision and hope to the dull contentment of his time. We must renew our sense of fthe fact that as Christian preachers and disciples we are engaged in handling those eternal needs of the human soul which will remain unsatisfied even when we shall be using airships in our postal service and talking across the ocean without wires. A matter of forty or eighty miles an hour in the speed with which we can pass from place to place will make no essential contribution to the problem of satisfying the hungers and thirsts of the human soul. For these there must be other satisfactions, and the Christian faith is the source from which they are to be drawn.

The time has come for every Chriistian worker to go over his credentials and see how true it is that he holds the certificates of permanent value. The bookkeeping is done in different terms, that is all. He cannot declare two per cent. quarterly with unfailing regularity; he does better than that, but the returns are not in dollars and cents. The dividend periods shift; sometimes they are long deferred, so far as immediate declarations are concerned. That does not disturb the Christian worker, for he knows that his values are stable. Active disciples of Christ are handling the things that endure, and therefore they work in hope. To have given a new vision of God and truth to men, to have sent a soul ont on a quest for character that shall last forever, to have put comfort and courage into a heart suffering from defeat—this is to have done work in the world more valuable and enduring than to have thrown a monolith dam across a mighty river. The energies of the spirit are eternal, and we work with them in confidence and joy.—O. S. Davis in Zion's Herald.

OUR HOME MISSIONARY WORK.

Miss Alice Conway of the W. H. M. S. sends the following paper prepared for the December program of the Woman's Home Missionary Society by Mrs. Margaret Orear, the aged mother of our loving missionary in the mountains of Kentucky, Mrs. M. O. Everett. Mrs. Orear spent several months assisting in the work, conducting a Sabbath school class of forty children.

Dear Friends and Friends of Jesus

It is a great pleasure and privilege to speak to those engaged in holy work.

It would be a great delight to meet you face to face, to clasp hands and join in fervent prayer.

But as that cannot be we can but be thankful for the ministry of pen and press.

So in behalf of our mountain work and people I come to greet you, dear sisters of the Woman's Board of Home Missions, whom having not seen I love.

Our interests in this great and holy project of soul-winning are as one. Our prayers ascend in unison to our Father's ear. Our counsels and deliberations are all for the best ways of accomplishing God's great designs in the saving of the mountaineers.

You know there is a mighty population scattered all over these highlands, up hill and down dale. Some are in villages, most are scattered. The smoke of their cottage fires rises through the trees in every direction.

On the Sabbath if there is Sunday school, preaching or even singing, the dear people come flocking in to meet and to hear the word of God.

O what an appetite, what a hungering and thirsting for these things, and how little they receive. Our hearts often ache for them when we perceive their unsatisfied longings and we ask, Why are we so favored and have so much of the bread of life, and they so little? We cry out to all who are so well supplied, Send, O send, the bread of life to these dear waiting souls.

They are not a rough race, though their homes, many of them, and work and surroundings are so.

You would be surprised and pleased at the gentle ways and sentiments of most of our sisters there, the touch of real refinement in their expressions, the cordial hospitality one meets and true courtesy.

I love the mountain people and so would you; a great recruiting of God's ransomed host is to come from here.

A grand church and school building has been planned, built and partly furnished, but there are still more needs: more seats, teachers' salaries, industrial necessities and the like.

Shall we not all take a hand in this glorious work? Shall we not all crowd forward with our contributions for it?

Well, sisters, I really meant this as a Christmas greeting and to say kind and encouraging things to you. Instead of that it is an appeal to the tenderest emotions of your hearts to help in this goood work.

God bless you all, every one. Ever your friend, Margaret C. Orear.

(Begun on page 1.)

Asheville—C. W. Bates.
Buncombe—L. H. Hatley.
Burlington—George L. Curry.
Caldwewll—W. P. Martin.
Charlotte—D. A. Braswell.
Cleveland—W. C. Lassiter.
Concord—Edward Suits.
Davidson—J. W. Hulin.
Denton—George L. Reynolds.
Fallston—J. H. Moton.
Fairview—J. R. Hutton.
Flat Rock—W. F. Kennett.
Forsyth—A. O. Lindley.
Gaston—H. W. Braswell.
Granville—N. G. Bethea.
Graham and Haw River—O. B. Williams.
Greensboro—R. M. Andrews.
Greenville—D. A. Highfill.
Guilford—S. M. Needham.
Halifax—J. E. Pritchard.
Haw River—W. F. Ashburn.
Henderson—J. D. Williams.
High Point—A. G. Dixon.
La Grange—W. H. Neese.
Lebanon—D. M. Loy.
Lincoln—J. D. Morris.
Littleton—C. J. Edwards.
Mebane—W. E. Swain.
Mecklenburg—H. E. Waldrop.
Mocksville—J. W. Self.
Mt. Hermon—C. H. Whitaker.
Mt. Pleasant—Robt. Troxler.
Oak Ridge—L. W. Gerringer.
Orange—R. C. Stubbins.
Pageland—J. W. Quick.
Pensacola—Homer Casto.
Piedmont—A. D. Shelton.
Pinnacle and Mt. Zion—A. L. Hunter.
Randleman—J. B. O'Briant.
Randolph—W. M. Pike.
Reidsville—E. G. Lowdermilk.
Richland—J. H. Bowman.
Roanoke—Thos. E. Davis.
Rockingham—J. F. Allred.
Saxapahaw—George W. Holmes.
Shelby—C. E. M. Raper.
Siler City—W. A. Ledford.
Stanly—W. D. Reed.
St. Paul—G. F. Millaway.
Spring Church—T. F. McCulloch.
Tabernacle—T. M. Johnson.
Thomasville—T. A. Williams.
Uwharrie—Joel B. Trogdon.
Vance—J. A. Burgess.
West Forsyth—G. H. Austin.
Why Not—J. H. Stowe.
Winston—S. W. Taylor.
Welch Memorial—D. R. Williams.
Yadkin College—H. L. Powell.
Yarborough—W. R. Lowdermilk.

—Rev. E. G. Lowderwilk and wife went early to have more time to visit his sister, Mrs. Smith.

—Rev. W. F. Kennett was called to his home in Stokesdale on Thursday to conduct the funeral of Mrs Avery Jones.

—Dr. Harris Glascock "brought down the house" a time or two by her paper on Foreign Missionary Night.

—The Conference instructed the secretary to write a letter of sympathy to Rev. W. D. Fogleman who is lying ill in St. Leo Hospital, Greensboro.

—Bro. Pritchard, the young pastor of Halifax Ct., reported that his people subscribe for 70 copies of the church papers. He also reported all claims of the Conference paid in full. Recently he wrote that his aim was to see a paper in every family and every cent of every assessment paid. He lacked but little of accomplishing both results. Both the Methodist Protestant and the*Methodist Protestant Herald* are taken and read on Halifex Circuit.

—Rev. W. R. Lowdermilk was at Conference much improved in health. He says his physician some time ago wanted him to refrain from all talking and carry a tablet around with him like a dumb man to express his communications.

—Mrs. W. S. Jobe and Miss Emma Jobe of Greensboro were among the visitors at Conference.

—Two of Asheville's good cooks were at Conference and were asked to stand up as an inducement for the Coonference to go to Asheville next time.

—Elon College and Oak Ridge offer free tuition to ministers and ministers' children of our church and Oak Ridge in addition makes a discount of $50 in the bill for board.

—Prof. T. C. Amick in behalf of Elon College invited the next Summer Conference to meet at Elon.

—Bro. S. R. Harris and Prof. M. H. Holt, though not members of the Conference, made speeches when the union question was under consideration.

—Our Conference never seems complete without the presence of Dr. Tagg. This year he was able to be present from the beginning until Sunday and help us in the consideration of the union question as well as in other ways.

—Dr. F. R. Harris presided on Children's Home night. He did not favor a collection, but yielded to the earnest urging of Mayor Tate of High Point and received a substantial offering for the Home.

—Mrs. Dixon has gotten the Sunday school hack for the Home. The other equipment needed will doubtless be acquired in time.

—Rev. C. L. Whitaker was delayed in reaching Conference by an illness from which he has not yet fully recovered.

—It was our good fortune in company with Bros. Ray, Alexander, and W. H. Neese, to be assigned to the home of Bro. W. P. Pickett. Bro. Pickett missed his watch while we were there, but that made no difference in the treatment we received.

—Rev. W. F. Kennett left Conference Monday noon somewhat unwell. We hope his illness will not prove serious.

—High Point pulpits on Sunday were generally filled by our ministers.

—Mr Reiner, our Baltimore Book Concern agent, delighted the Conference with his solos, as well as showing himself to be a capable business man.

—Mrs. Wyatt, of South Carolina, was one of the visitors at Conference.

—Mrs. Hauser, of Shoals, was a visitor in High Point in time of Conference.

—Bro. J. D. Williams was unwell at Conference much of the time.

HERALD SUBSCRIPTION RECEIPTS AT CONFERENCE.

One Dollar Each. J. J. Andrew, N. F. Morgan, W. T. Collins, J. A. Walker, Cyrus Helms, Mrs. H. S. Fleming, R. R. Satterwhite, L. M. Harris, W. M. Martin, Mrs. S. Powell, Rev. G. E. Hunt, T. J. Clinton, S. C. Carter, Rev. L. H. Hatley, Mrs. J. D. Knight, D. F. Yonts, C. F. Hawkins, R. C. Riggan, Mrs. R. W. Parrish, A. R. Hunter, C. G. Hunter, J. S. Speas, G. W. Riley, Mrs. J. M. Lloyd, J. A. Tussey, J. B. Kennedy, F. M. Porter, Miss Mary Wills, Mrs. W. J. Boyd, A. E. Tate, B. W. Childers, Mrs. Lou Lee Browning, Mrs. E. B. King, J. P. Massey, J. H. Moore, Mrs. Rosa Chambless, A. W. Moore, E. S. Pearson, Mamie L. Whitby, J. B. Clements, C. C. Camp, Ethel Crew, Mrs. G. A. Iles, Jno. W. Dixon, S. A. Alexander, D. B. Johnson, J. A. Powell, Henry Pair, Laura V. Pepper, G. F. Furr, Mrs. Marshal Hatley, Miss Rosa Douglas, A. L. Foust, Miss Augusta Combs, Levi Watson, J. F. Whitaker, G. N. Butner, A. N. Roberson,, W. P. Wood, Miss Ina Dillon, C. S. Cook, C. O. Garmon, Mattie Belk, J. F. Hamilton, O. D. Cross, Mrs. C. V. Hauser, B. G. Fesperman, W. M. Julian, T. B. Richards, Jesse Willis, T. P. Deal, C. A. Philips, E. M. Ivester, Mrs. J. W. Austin, J. F. Spencer, W. N. Bean, Mrs. S. S. Glenn, J. L. Self, J. H. Snootherly, R. T. Pickens, J M. Morgan, Harriet Blackwelder, Mrs. L. F. Brown, W. H. Scarboro, L. H. Sides, W. W. Bean Mrs. H. A. Hymen, Rev. C. M. Compher, Mrs. J. W. Leggett, Mrs. Alice Whitehead, Henry Bean, Loyd Cagle, S. S. Cox, Mrs. Annie Stewart, R. H. Hight, Mrs. Annie Grissom, E. T. Ball, Miss Etta Hight, R. A. Harris, T. H. Hicks.

Fifty Cents Each. J. N. Phifer, Margaret Phelps, Addie Davenport, R. C. Smith, W. H. Biggerstaff, C. W. Adkins, D. E. Hilton, J. W. Barrett, Mrs. Irene Moss, A.

M. Little, I. F. Russell, Alvis Upton.

Five Dollars. J. E. Burroughs.

Two Dollars Each. J. R. Cummings, W. N. Thornton, W. A. Moore M. N. Morgan.

Leo Snider, 25 cts.

Mrs. Sarah D. Harris, $1.25.

If any name has been omitted, please report to the publisher at once.

WHAT GENDER ARE YOU?

Dan Crawford, author of "Thinking Black," who has been a missionary in Africa for twenty-two years and who is now lecturing in the United States, says that he translated the Bible into the Bantu language, which has nineteen genders. Don Marquis, commenting in the New York Evening Sun on this statement, thinks that astonishment at this "language having nineteen genders" will vanish upon reflection. "Everyone," he says, "admits that there are three genders in English—masculine, feminine and neuter. And everyone has felt the need of more genders to indicate shades of personality which actually exist, but for which there exists no direct medium of expression. There is a Minor Poet type, for instance, which you would scarcely call masculine. Neither is it feminine; nor yet neuter, in the same sense that a tree [illegible]ter. There is a certain Mil[illegible]itan[illegible]e type, which you would scarcely call feminine; neither is it masculine. Varieties, almost endless in number, will inevitably occur to serious students of our modern civilization."

"Love," said Nietzsche, " is beyond good and evil;" which amounts to very much the same as the Bible's version that "love is the fulfilling of the law." The idea is that all our moral codes, our rules of conduct and canons of righteousness are imperfect, feeble efforts to do what can only be accomplished by a primitive instinct.

One has gained a great deal when he has grasped this truth. For the right sort of folks the sense of "ought" cannot be gainsaid; and to live in daily conflict with one's feeling of duty is intolerable. But when we attempt to get our thoughts, words and deeds lined up by rule to agree with our moral convictions, we find the task hopeless. We are always breaking down. Human nature is always tripping us.

It is a relief then to find the remedy in this very human nature itself, in its most primeval instinct, love.

This world, and the heaven above it, is for lovers. Let us love nobly, wholly, loyally, gladly, and we have all the ten commandments, moral precepts and religious ceremonies in solution in our hearts.

For such a love there is no law.—Frank Crane.

Oh! not in the churchyard do we lay our dead,
Nor yet in the depths of the sea,
But only the body whence the soul hath fled,
Only the mere form which we see.
Why think we so much of the burying-place,
As though it were there that they are?
Between them and us there is really no space;
We never must think them afar.
No, not far away in the cold and alone,
Or at rest far down in the deep,
But here in the home which together we've known,
Yes, here in the room where we sleep;
Here at the table around which we all sit,
Or before the chimney-place-glare,
In the dusk when the lamp at evening is lit,
Or there in the favorite chair.
For spirit from spirit there's nothing can part,
E'en Death, let him do what he will.
Be strong then, be calm, of good courage, sad heart.
Our dear dead are here with us still.
Yes, here with us now, but a glad day there is,
When, through Him who rose from the dead,
The body made glorious like unto His,
To spirit again shall be wed.

—Reginald H. Howe.

It is a fine thing in life to have found one's ruling passion; to be striving daily to an ideal; to be working with the assurance that your work is the work God planned for you. Not to go just dreaming through life, but being of service to others. A shepherd has many cares. It is not all sitting on the hillside listlessly watching the sheep feed; their daily nurture and daily health must be thought of; and there are ever fresh pastures to be sought. And there come wild storms, when every nerve has to be strained and every effort made to save the sheep. And there are times when the shepherd has to go out to seek for the wanderers, some far away, some fearfully bruised, but each grievously needing the strong but tender care of the shepherd. A shepherd's life is not all ease—he is often brought nigh to tears.

But in spite of tempest and blackness and trembling come seasons of calm and sunshine. And then it is evident that the searching and the striving, the prayer and the labor, have not been in vain. In my quiet moments the one thing that forces itself upon me is the permanent quality of our work. Not merely to rear the temple of God, but to reveal the God of the temple. To be privileged to live to express to men what God is like; to show by word, by action, by a full life that God is righteous, but, above all, that He is Gracious, and infinitely Kind; these things are more than worth while, whatever the cost may have been.—A Congo Missionary.

Be strong!
It matters not how deep intrenched the wrong,
How hard the battle goes, the day how long,
Faint not, fight on; tomorrow comes the song.

—M. D. Babcock.

"Be self forgot in serving others' need,
Thou faith in God through love for man shalt keep—
Dwell deep, my soul, dwell deep!"

The question that appeals to us as leaders is, How shall we give the children the best that is in us; how help to develop the best that is in them? Many there are who are not satisfied with Solomon's maxim or their own haphazard ideas. No one can teach children who is not anchored to faith, and one who is strong in faith and love has cause for rejoicing, for this love is so precious and so far-reaching that those who love little children need not seek a wider field of usefulness.—Selected.

In a literary club in an Ohio city, where China was the subject of the winffter's study, the men were frequently astonished at their wives' superior knowledge of that country, even of the politics. When they asked for an explanation the women replied that they had studied China in their missionary meetings. The women who do not get this kind of return from missionary meetings are the women who put nothing into them. Such knowledge comes as a return, not gratuitously.—Sel.

Are you "Growing in Grace" these swiftly fleeting years? That does not mean are you growing in church society, nor even, necessarily, in church activity. And it may not mean in visions and revelations. But are your sympathies broader? Are you more sorry for earth's Christless ones than ever you were before? Are you doing more for them? Are you giving more money, in proportion to your income, than ever before? Are you living more for God and less for self? Are you more kind and patient? Do you pray more? And, beneath all, do you live more upon the Word of God? For we "grow in grace" as we grow "in the knowledge of Jesus Christ."—Selected.

POPULAR TALKS ON LAW.

By W. K. Towers, A. B., J. D., of Mich.

THE DOCTOR'S RESPONSIBILITIES.

Not long ago a Georgia court was called upon to adjudicate a difficulty between practitioner and patient and it seems worth while to report the case substantially in the words of the court itself. This was a contest, says the court, between two members of the gentler sex. Plaintiff was a practitioner of the science or art of osteopathy, and the defendant either needed, or thought she did (which is the same thing), the services of the plaintiff. Several visits were made, at $3.10 per visit; the ten cents being added for street car fare, and the whole bill amounted to $27.90. Defendant claims that the bill includes charges for a number of social calls, and that the services rendered by the doctor gave her no relief and were so unsatisfactory that she was forced to resort to a physician of the allopathic school, who administered pills and mixtures in the good, old-fashioned way. On the issues of fact the plaintiff outswore the defendant, or at least the jury in the justice's court thought so, and the judge of the superior court refused to interfere. It would never do to hold that a doctor is entitled to recover only where he cures the patient. . . So far as we are concerned the doctors may continue to bury their mistakes and recover for their services as always. If we were dealing with lawyers the rule might be different, but sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof. . . It appears from the record that the trial waxed warm, and during the testimony of the defendant the plaintiff became excited and exclaimed, "Liar! liar! liar!" and while the defendant's counsel was endeavoring to persuade the jury to accept his client's theory of the case the plaintiff did at intervals "yell out in court that the defendant was a liar and had lied." It is complained that this conduct of plaintiff prejudiced the jury against the defendant, and that the verdict ought to be set aside because the magistrate failed to punish the plaintiff for contempt. The court answers: "Doubtless the conduct of the plaintiff overawed the chivalrous young justice and embarrassed him quite as much as it did the defendant, and we are not disposed to criticise too harshly his exhibition of judicial timidity. At any rate, the failure of the magistrate to punish the contumelious plaintiff must be allowed to rest upon his judicial conscience. If we had any means of knowing that the plaintiff's conduct terrorized the jury and coerced the verdict in her favor, we would in the interest of a fair and impartial trial direct another hearing. But the jury doubtless felt secure under the protection of the bailiff and the sacred precincts of the court room, and if they had returned a verdict adverse to the plaintiff, there was, no doubt, some rear door through which they might have dispersed, and thus have escaped violence at the hands of a litigant outraged at the injustice which had been meted out to her. Viewing the matter from this safe distance, we are inclined to think that the unseemly conduct of the plaintiff would more likely have prejudiced her own cause than it did the defendant's." Judgment for plaintiff is affirmed.

Thus we note that the rule is laid down in law that a physician does not guarantee to cure a patient by simply undertaking the case, and his compensation is not dependent upon a cure, unless that is specifically agreed in advance.

Generally speaking the duty of the average practitioner towards his patient is to use the ordinary skill and care possessed and practised by members of the profession in general in similar locations. No extraordinary skill or learning is expected of a physician in law, beyond that possessed by the ordinarily skillful practitioner. The physician is supposed to keep abreast of his times, be ordinarily skillful and careful in diagnosis and capable of prescribing and administering the recognized remedies and treatments. If the physician does this he has fulfilled his duty to his patient and is entitled to compensation therefor and is not responsible for any injuries that may occur.

One who claims to be a specialist is expected to possess special skill within his field and if he fails to exercise special skill in the treatment of a patient he is responsible to the patient for resulting injury. As a general practitioner is supposed to be possessed of ordinary skill and required to exercise the usual care he is liable to his patients in damages in a court of law if injuries occur to the patient because of his failure to do so.

In the first place a physician may arbitrarily refuse to take any case. He is under no legal obligation to serve any person if he does not so desire. He cannot be legally compelled to accept a case with or without pay. But if he does accept a case he is responsible to the patient for his acts whether he is acting for pay or gratuitously.

Given a proper opportunity for a complete examination and diagnosis the physician, once he accepts the case, is bound to use usual skill and care in the diagnosis. Following the diagnosis the physician is expected to follow the method of treatment usual in his profession. If he does that with usual skill and care he has fulfilled his duties, is not responsible to the patient for results, nor liable for want of success. The law seems to expect the physician to follow the usual course of treatment and to deviate therefrom at his own risk.

In many cases the courts hold physicians to a rather strict accounting for their acts. Something of the attiutde of the courts may be determined from a recent case in which a woman sued a surgeon for negligence in performing an operation. While performing the operation the surgeon used and inserted in the opening made in the patient a large gauze sponge, which he failed to remove after completing the operation, although it was 14 inches square. Plaintiff charged that the surgeon continued to treat her for six months thereafter, during which time he permitted the sponge to remain imbedded in her, and that by reason thereof she suffered intense pain, was severely injured internally and was compelled to suffer a second operation at the hands of another surgeon for the purpose of relieving her condition, which operation resulted in finding and removing the sponge. The surgeon undertook to excuse himself because, in the performance of the operation, it was necessary in careful and skilled surgery to secure the assistance of certain nurses, internes, and associate surgeons in and about the hospital, and that included among them was one Miss Kelly, the head nurse, to whom he intrusted the duty of counting the sponges before putting them in the body and upon removing them from the body, and that he relied upon the accuracy of her [illegible] that if there was any error in [illegible] not responsible. The trial resulted in a verdict for $5,000, and the surgeon appealed. The Supreme Court of Ohio held that defendant was responsible for the proper removal of the sponge.

A physician who treats a patient is entitled to compensation, unless there was a distinct understanding that he was to perform the services free of charge. If a distinct amount of compensation was agreed upon, that is the amount to be paid. More frequently no rate of payment is set in advance, in which case the physician is entitled to a reasonable sum in payment for his services.

Just what is a reasonable sum is sometimes difficult to determine. If the patient refuses to accept the doctor's own estimate of the worth of his services, and forces the doctor to sue him for the amount, it becomes the duty of the jury to determine this reasonable sum. To aid the jury to determine what is a reasonable sum evidence is presented of ordinary charges by physicians in general. A physician of great eminence and of unusual skill is entitled to extra payment accordingly. The courts of the different states are in hopeless conflict as to whether the financial condition of the patient should vary the charge of the services rendered him. But the mere fact that a doctor charges a rich man more than a poor man does not prove that he has overcharged the rich man. It may well be that his services are reasonably worth what he charged the rich man and that he has simply undercharged the poor man out of the consideration and generosity that is common among good physicians.

(Copyright, 1913, by Walter K. Towers)

"PAPPIE AND MAMMIE AND SONNIE"

I'm going to write you a life-story in twenty-five sentences.

It was an English family, and their simple boast was that the grandfather in his humble Britain home had often entertained John Wesley. In this humble English home of America the mother called the father "Pappie," and he called her "Mammie," and there was a touch of the fragrance of primrose, of music and love that could not die, in the very intonation of the words as they used them with each other. He was just a common coal miner.

They carried "Pappie" home one afternoon from the mines. His face was white, even through the coal dirt, white with death's touch.

"Pappie" knew that he must die. He called "Mammie" to his side.

"Oh 'Mammie,' I can't die and leave you and 'Sonnie' so! I just can't!" He wept then. And "Mammie," brave little mother that she was, whose eyes were heavy with anguish and a lonely night's vigil, came over to him again, and laid her hand on his white, fevered face.

"Be brave, 'Pappie.' Just say a little prayer, and it will be all right, for you've been a true husband, a kind father, and a good man. Say a little prayer." Then "Pappie" loked up at her with a wonderlight in his eyes.

"Mammie"—and there was a caress in his voice which must have made the angels weep with sympathy—"Mammie, look in my pit pants pocket. I didn't give you quite all of my wages. I fooled you. I was planning a surprise for you; saved out a little each week; wanted to take you to town soon and get the new shoes and the hat that you wanted."

"Mammie" through her tears clumsily searched the pit pants pocket, and found fourteen dollars which he, sacrificing in his own simple wants, had saved as a love surprise for her, out of his meager miner's wages.

"Pappie" folded his hands as "Mammie" had told him; folded them as simply as a child, while "Mammie's" tears wet them; breathed his little prayer, and dropped quietly into his last sleep. And now "Sonnie" comes into the story.

The next Sunday "Sonnie" came to the church of which his "Pappie" had been a faithful member for years. He took "Pappie's" seat; and "Pappie's envelope was in his hand, just where father had quit paying; "Pappie's" hymn-book was in his hand; he knelt just as "Pappie" was accustomed to kneel in prayer; he listened as "Pappie" had always listened, with eager face. After the service he said to the minister, simply and quietly; "I have come to take 'Pappie's' place."

And this is the story of a simple, faithful coal-miner's life and love. Still the cynics tell us that religion and romance are dead in the world.—W. L. Stidger, in Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

The more of gold a man has, the more of God he needs. Temptations grow fiercer, and he needs grace to meet them. Obligations multiply and he needs grace to discharge them. Problems increase, and he needs grace for their solution.—Christian World.

WHAT WILL MAKE YOU GLAD?

When the years have slipped by and memory runs back over the path you have trod, you will be glad that you stopped to speak to every friend you met, and left them all with a warmer feeling in their hearts because you did so.

You will be glad that you were happy when doing the small everyday things of life; that you served the best you could in life's lowly round.

You will be glad that men have said all along your way: "I know that I can trust him. He is as true as steel."

You will be glad that there have been some rainy days in your life. If there were no storms, the fountains would dry up, the sky would be filled with poisonous vapors, and life would cease.

You will be glad that you stopped long enough every day to read carefully and with a prayer in your heart some part of God's message to those He loves.

You will be glad that you shut your eyes tight against the evil things men said about one another, and tried the best you could to stay the words winged with poison.

You will be glad that you brought smiles to men, and not sorrow.

You will be glad that you have met with a hearty handshake all the hard things which have come to you, never dodging out of them, but turning them all to the best possible account.—The Presbyterian.

PRIVILEGES

We talk a great deal about our duties. Some people even talk as if the reading of the Bible or the daily prayer were a duty. This is surely making the Christian life unnecessarily hard. What if we decided to call these things not duties but privileges? A child that loves its father will never think that it is his duty to have a talk with that father in the evening. Rather he will be impatient for father to come home, and will run to meet him, glad of the chance to hold his hand and talk with him about all that has happened.

Again, we can think of our church relations as giving us not duties but privileges. Christ never urged His disciples to go to church. He set them the example, it is true, but He did not feel the necessity of urging them to follow it, knowing well that as they felt their need of Him they would gladly make every sacrifice to be able to assemble and talk over what He had done for them.

It is a man's duty to provide for his family, but is it not his privilege as well? It may be a girl's duty to help the younger brothers and sisters, but would not most girls consider it a privilege to have younger brothers and sisters to help? Although the more we think over the matter the clearer it will be to us that a duty is merely a privilege turned wrong side out. —Forward.

OUR FOREIGN MISSIONARY WORK

Are We Going to Do It?

The raising of $50,000 for the Board of Foreign Missions during this fiscal year, which will end May 1, 1914, will depend entirely on the pastors and members of the Methodist Protestant Church. Alert, aggressive leadership is greatly prized to-day, and the pastor who pays little or no attention to the assessments is standing in his own light, for every church is gratified when its claims are paid, and don't forget, this assessment is a claim.

There are many members who could send us a generous gift for Foreign Missions, and others who could give our Board a good sum to the Annuity Fund, and receive interest during life.

F. C. Klein, Cor. Sec.-Treas.
316 N. Charles St., Baltimore, Md.

CHILDREN'S HOME.

Report of Superintendent.

Mt. Pleasant S. S., Mt. Pleasant Ct . $1.25
Mt. Lebanon S. S., Randleman Ct. .. 1.20
Rehoboth S. S., Granville Ct., ... 10.23
Denton S. S. 1.60
Charlotte S. S. Richland Ct. ..... .60
Miss Wilson, Dabney Church 2.00
Flat Rock Ch., Vance Circuit 3.95
New Hope Ch., Vance Circuit 5.60
J. W. Dowling, Gillburg Station 5.00

Lebanon Church, Spring Ct.	3.50
W. M. Byerly	3.00
Caroleen S. S.,	2.00
Concord Church	2.35
Mill Grove S. S.	2.30
Porter S. S.	2.70
Mrs. J. D. Newell	1.00
St. Paul S. S., Greensboro	1.20
Pinnacle and Mt. Zion	22.18
Infant Class, Fairview Ch., Anderson	4.25
Anderson Ct.	5.00
Yarboro Ct.	5.75
J. F. Spencer	1.00
Pleasant Grove, Lebanon Ct.,	5.01
N. W. Ogburn	1.00
Mr.and Mrs. J. C. Davis	2.00
A Friend	.25
Mrs. Dr. R. U. Zimmerman	5.00
J. L. Cashatt	1.00
Mrs. M. H. Holt	1.00
Miss Mary Bennett	.50
Ladies' Aid Society, Rocky Mt.	20.00
Total	$123.42

Gibsonville: Mrs. Sallie Huff and son, one Bbl. flour.

Charleston, S. C.: Mrs. B. Conklin, 6 pair pillow cases.

Covington, Tenn.: Miss(?) Sue Jarrell, two pictures framed.

Henderson: S. R. Harris, L. R. Gooch, H. S. Fleming, and P. S. Ellis, Bbl. apples.

High Point: J. L. Cashatt, one load of shucks, sweet potatoes and popcorn; Mr. Mitchell, turnips.

If you could have heard the expressions from members of the Annual Conference and visitors to the Children's Home within the last few days, you would say. "Surely God is in the work caring for homeless children."

H. A. Garrett, Supt.

Nov. 24, 1913.

FROM OUR PASTORS

RICHLAND CT.

We have found it desirable to make a change in the plan of the pastor's appointments. The following will be the plan until the first quarterly conference:

1st Sunday, Charlotte.

2nd Sunday, Cedar Falls, morning and night.

3rd Sunday, Giles Chapel at 11 o'clock; Browers Chapel at 3 o'clock.

4th Sunday, Franklinsville, morning and night.

We hope for good congregations at all points and a good year's work by all our people. J. H. Bowman, Pastor.

Liberty, N. C., Nov. 26.

—Bro. R. T. Pickens, of Jesup, Ga., was in High Point during Conference.

—Bro. Self and Bro. D. R. Williams were too unwell to attend Conference.

FROM LOCAL REPORTERS

WELCH MEMORIAL.

Conference is over and the ministers are all going away; some to their same places and some to new fields, to take up their new year's work for the Master. We pray the Lord to go with them and may they at all times be led by the Holy Spirit. May this be the most prosperous year in the history of the N. C. Methodist Protestant Conference.

We welcome our pastor, Bro. D. R. Williame, and family back. He has been a faithful shepherd among us for two years and has done a great work. He and his family have many, many friends here who will rejoice to know they are to remain among us another year. May we as members of the church stand by him and all work together for the advancement of the Kingdom, that more may be done this year than ever before, for there is a great harvest. We were glad to have Bro. Millaway preach for us last Sunday at eleven o'clock and Bro. Hutton at 7:30 p. m. Both gave us good deep uplifting sermons. We feel sure all who heard them were made stronger. We hope they will come again. Also glad to have Bros. Austin, Bates, T. A. Williams, and family and several others whose names I do not know who were here attending Conference, worship with us last Sunday. We assure you all you were welcome, and may you all come again.

Love to the Herald.

(Mrs.) J. W. Mitchell, Reporter.

High Point, Nov. 25.

FAIRVIEW, ANDERSON CT.

The Ladies" Aid Society of Fairview Church was entertained by Miss Sue Wyatt at her home on Saturday p. m., Nov. 15. A very interesting meeting was held and we were glad to have a number of visitors with us. After the meeting adjourned we enjoyed a delightful social hour during which a salad and sweet course was served. Six new members joined our Society.

The word has just been received that we were fortunate enough to get Bro. Lamar back on this charge for another year.

Mrs. Augustus Ellison is still confined to her bed though skilled physicians are attending her. We wish for her a speedy recovery.

Miss Garlington of Anderson organized on last Tuesday a rural improvement league in our community with Misses Lura Pickens president, Sue Wyatt, vice president, and Essie Henderson, secretary and treasurer.

With best wishes to the Herald,

Mary Hendrix.

Brothers.

On Tuesday, Nov. 18, our hearts were saddened by the death of Miss Mabel Brothers, daughter of Robt. Brothers, aged 20 years and some months. She was a member of Macedonia Baptist church, also a member of Pleasant Union Methodist Protestant Sunday school. She was faithful at Sunday school as a member of her class, interesting, as a girl sweet, quiet, kind and helpful. She was much loved by her family and will be greatly missed by them, especially by her dear sister. We sympathize with the parents and the dear children who will feel so keenly the loss of their oldest sister. But let them look up to the home above where Mabel has gone, and ever strive to so live that they may meet her there.

She was a member of Pleasant Garden High School, which school presented a beautiful floral design for her casket. She was borne to Pleasant Union Cemetery after a short talk by her S. S. Supt., W. A. Bowman, and laid to rest beside her little brother who had preceded her some years ago, there to await the glad resurrection morn. Her S. S. Teacher, M. L. B.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas it hath pleased God, our Heavenly Father, to take from our midst one of our number, Mabel Brothers, we the members of Pleasant Union Philathea Class do form these resolutions of respect.

Resolved 1. That in the death of Miss Mabel Brothers our class and S. S. have lost a faithful and interested member.

2. That while we mourn her loss, we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well, praying the Lord that her example may prove a help to us, and her early death a warning to us all to be ready, for in such an hour as we think not the Son of Man cometh.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the parents of the deceased, a copy spread on our minutes, also a copy be sent to our church paper. (Signed)

The Pleasant Union Philathea Class.

Smith.

Martha M. Smith was born into the earthly life March 26, 1853, and entered the heavenly life Oct. 13, 1913.

She was the youngest daughter of the late Rev. C. McKendree Smith, of the M. P. Church, S. C. Conference.

In July, 1877, she was married to Mr. John D. Smith, of the M. E. Church, Richland Co., S. C. He with their five children, three sons and two daughters, and five grandchildren survive her.

Her mother, Mrs. C. McK. Smith, now in her 85th year, and three brothers and one sister also survive her.

Reared in a Christian home, with its influences about her, she early in life united with the M. P. Church at Fairview, Anderson Co., S. C. To it and to her vows taken then she remained true and loyal to the end.

In all the relations of life—as daughter, sister, wife, mother, neighbor and friend, she was loving and true.

Cheerful and helpful always, pure-minded, high-souled and large-hearted, she had many friends; and those who knew her best loved her most.

But it was in her home that her life shone brightest and where she will be missed most. "Her children rise up and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her."

A most beautiful and impressive funeral service was held at the home on the 15th conducted by Rev. A. N. Brunson, of the M.E. Church, Spartanburg. The body was laid to rest in Oakwood Cemetery, Spartanburg, S. C.

All her life she loved to sing. One of the songs she loved to sing in the months preceding her passing was "The Glory Gates," and we feel sure those gates were opened for her entrance into the City where "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away."

"Faithful toiler, thy work well done;
Beautiful soul into glory gone;
Beautiful life with its crown now won,
God giveth thee rest.
Rest from all sorrow and watching and fears,
Rest from all possible sighing and tears,
Rest through God's endless wonderful years
At home with the Blessed."

S. J. K.

UNIVERSAL BIBLE SUNDAY.

The idea of a universal Bible Sunday is that on one and the same day throughout the whole Christian world the Holy Scriptures shall be the subject of special consideration, not only in the churches and Sunday schools and wherever people congregate, but in the press, and that each recurring anniversary shall be the occasion for reviewing the position of the Bible in the world, the progress of its circulation and translation into the various languages, and its relation to all conditions of national and individual life. In such an annual review the discoveries which are every year throwing some new light on the records of Holy Writ can be laid before the people, so that the Word of God may be more deeply studied as its truth is more clearly attested to the intelligence of mankind.

The observance of a Bible Sunday has already made substantial progress in various parts of the world. It has been observed for some years sporadically in Great Britain, the United States, Canada, Australasia, South Africa and in the mission churches of North Africa. It has been established in places in China, while in Korea it is celebrated on a national scale, and was last year made the occasion of general thanksgiving to commemorate the completion of the Bible in the Korean language. In parts of India it has become an important annual event, and in a number of cases the Hindoos and Mohammedans join the Christians in paying honor to the Bible and its teachings.

These observances have taken place at various times of year, and what is now wanted is to co-ordinate them into a common date, so that Christians everywhere may be one in this as they are one in the celebration of Christmas. The churches of New York have for some years had a Bible Day on the first Sunday in December. In a cycle of seven years this would fall four times on the Sunday before Christmas, on which the Episcopal Church of the United States, and the Anglican Church throughout the British Empire, specially refer to the Holy Scriptures. Such a conjunction with an already widely recognized anniversary seems to make this an appropriate time for the annual review of the Bible, and this date does not conflict with any generally established anniversary of other bodies of Christians.

The third Sunday before Christmas falls this year on the 7th of December. Let us therefore join on that date in exalting the Word of God.—Contributed.

A REAL RESPONSE

A little girl was playing with her doll while her mother was writing. After a while she called the child and took her on her lap. The little one said:

"I am so glad; I wanted to love you so much, mamma."

"Did you, darling?" and she clasped her tenderly. "I am so glad my daughter loves me so; but were you lonely while I wrote?"

"Yes, mamma; but I got tired of loving Dolly."

"And why?"

"Oh, because she never loves me back."

"And that is why you love me?"

"That is one why, mamma; but not the first one or the best."

"And what is the first one and best?"

"Why, mamma, don't you guess?" and the blue eyes were very bright and earnest. "Its because you loved me when I was too little to love back."

While we were yet sinners, Christ died for us, and we love God because He first loved us. It is the love of God for us that awakens and feeds our love for Him. —Lutheran Observer.

TEN GREATEST INVENTIONS OF OUR TIME.

ELECTRIC FURNACE.

The electric furnace, through the generation of a heat so intense as to simulate some of the primal forces of nature has produced for the first time many absolutely or commercially new products. It can make artificial diamonds and other gems; it is at the present the only means for commercially producing carborundum (the hardest of all manufactured substances), calcium carbide (the source of a valuable illuminant and a nitrogenous fertilizer), and artificial graphite, which is finding extensive use in the arts; and it has converted aluminum from a merely precious to very useful metal and reduced its price from more than $12 a pound to less than 25 cents. It is responsible for all methods of fixing nitrogen, which, in view of the approaching exhaustion of the natural supply of Chili nitrate, obviates a possible nitrogen famine, and alone makes this agency of inestimable service to mankind.

The electric is radically transforming the steel industry. It produces steel of crucible quality with almost open hearth economy, and for the first time since 1740 the expensive and intricate crucible process finds a competitor. In providing rails and heavy-service steel of crucible characteristics in texture and in toughness at slight increase of cost over the comparatively impure and the unreliable older products a revolution of astounding proportions is going on before our very eyes. The Cowles brothers, Hall and Acheson, in America, Heroult and Moissan in France, Borchers in Gerare the most notable figures in this development.—William I. Wyman in Scientific American.

—Baptist New Mexican: "It is a great day in the experience of a preacher when he learns that the best way to combat error is to preach the truth. Some preachers seem to start out with the idea that you can beat the devil out of people and beat religion into them. But that isn't the way. Christianity is born in the heart through the influence of the Spirit in response to the appeal of the truth. 'Ye shall know the truth, and the truth will make you free.' 'I am the truth." There are many errors and wrongs in the world, but we combat them most successfully by holding up the opposite truth and right."

THE EVOLUTION OF A THANKSGIVING.

"Shall I stop at the market and order a turkey on my way downtown?" Mr. Hardin inquired, his hand on the door knob.

"No, you don't need to order any turkey," Mrs. Hardin spoke shortly.

"Why, Thursday is Thanksgiving!" Mr. Hardin reminded her.

"I can't help it if it is!"

Mr. Hardin stared at his wife, bewildered. Suddenly it came to him with a sense of strangeness that she was sitting with folded hands—and it was only two days before Thanksgiving! Every year before that had been a day of bustling activity and the house had been full of spicy odors. He sniffed the air—there was not the ghost of a Thanksgiviing smell!

"Why, Clara, you aren't sick, are you?" he inquired solicitoously.

"No, I'm not sick. But I'm not going to cook any Thanksgiving dinner with nobody here to eat it. I don't feel like being thankful or eating Thanksgiving dinners, either, with the children all gone."

Mr. Hardin looked troubled. The house seemed very empty to him, too, since Florence and Edna and Harry had gone to the distant city. He opened the door softly and went out—he could not think of any thing to say.

Mrs. Hardin rocked on drearily, picturing the children passing a homesick Thanksgiving Day among strangers. Presently her gloomy thoughts were interrupted by the postman's ring. It was the day for a letter from the children, and she hastened to the door. Such a big, fat letter as it was! She expected a homesick wail, but it was cheerful. Mrs. Hardin paused over one paragraph:

"Mrs. Mason has invited us to her home to spend Thanksgiving. She is the dearest little woman. Isn't it perfectly lovely of her to remember that we are away from home? Edna says she is going to pray a little prayer of special thanksgiving for the folks who are good to people who are a long way from home when Thanksgiving comes."

Just at that point, before Mrs. Hardin's mental vision there came the face of the girl who had waited on her at the glove counter the day before. She remembered just as she reached the counter overhearing one of the other clerks ask her if she was going home for Thanksgiving. The girl had shaken her head, saying nothing. It was then that the look that was now haunting Mrs. Hardin had come into her face. Quick contrition overtook Mrs. Hardin. "Some one is being good to my children, and I am not doing a thing for other mothers' homesick boys and girls," her thoughts accused her.

A moment later her resolution had been formed. "That girl at the glove counter is going to have a home Thanksgiving—and I'll have her tell me of some others, too." She hastened to the telephone and calling Mr. Hardin up told him to stop at the market on his way home and order two big turkeys.

When the greatly puzzled man opened the door at lunch time he was greeted with all the delicious Thanksgiving odors that he had missed in the morning. He stepped out to the kitchen and his face lighted up at sight of the familiar preparations. The universe seemed settling into its accustomed ways once more.

Right after lunch Mrs. Hardin took time to run down to the store. "I'm going to ask a favor of you," she said to the girl at the glove counter. "My boy and girls can't come home for Thanksgiving, and I just can't bear the thought of eating our Thanksgiving dinner alone. I happened to hear you say you didn't expect to go home and I wondered if I couldn't borrow you. We can pretend that we belong to each other for that day. Please do take pity on us and come."

The surprised girl only stared at first. She knew well who Mrs. Hardin was, but that only made the proposition seem all the more extraordinary. It took quite a few minutes to convince her that it was real. "I want a whole tableful of young folks," Mrs. Hardin added. "Please, can't you tell me of some other girls who would be adopted for one day?"

The girl's face lighted up. Already she had been won to devotion for the bright-faced little lady. "It's easy to find them," she declared. "There are four girls I know real well, and not one of them can go home. We were all dreading Thanksgiving Day."

Then Mrs. Hardin had a thought that was little less than an inspiration. "I wonder if you wouldn't all come in the morning and help me get the dinner on the table," she said hesitatingly. "I've always had the girls to help me, and I shall miss them so."

"Will we?" A look of pleasure leaped into the girl's face. "If you only knew how good it will seem to get into a kitchen once more."

When Mr. Hardin came home to dinner that evening he remarked, "There are four young fellows over at the office who are looking glum because they can't go home. Would you mind if I asked them over here?"

The answer came prormptly, "Of course I don't. Call them up to-night and ask them."

So this is how it came about that there was a jolly Thanksgiving gathering at the Hardin home, instead of the day being the dreary one to which twelve people had looked forward. And the day left to each one of the twelve a heart full of thanksgiving.—Deaconess Advocate.

THE DOLL FROM THE ASH BOX.

A doll had come by mail as a birthday greeting for the small girl. The box in which she had traveled had given way, and when the doll reached its destination, it was a battered wreck.

"Don't show it to Muriel," said the small girl's mother. "It will only make her feet bad. Throw it out in the ash box in the alley." And there it lay when Lizzie Ann found it.

She was not very large—Lizzie Ann—not much larger than Muriel, who must be shielded from the sight of anything unpleasant. Lizzie Ann, with her basket on her arm and her plaid shawl over her head, was familiar with more disagreeable things than a broken doll—among them, poverty, hunger, harsh words, even blows. She had been sent out to pick the pieces of coal still capable of igniting from the ash boxes along the alley, and the basket on her arm was half filled, when she came across the broken doll.

She lifted it tenderly from its hard bed. The eyes had fallen back into the head, and two cavernous holes stared up at her. One cheek was crushed. The arms and legs were all broken. Only the golden curls remained uninjured. But Lizzie Ann, cuddling the battered thing in her arms, looked down on it as tenderly as a mother might look on a sleeping child.

Eleanor Greason, crossing the alley on her way home, caught sight of a pathetic little figure, and stopped short. Lizzie Ann had set down her basket, partly filled with half-burned coal. She was walking back and forth with the forlorn doll in her arms, crooning a lullaby. On her thin, freckled little face was a look of such tender happiness that she hardly looked like the Lizzie Ann who had fought her way up to her tenth year of life, and had plenty of fight left in her for future emergencies. She was a transformed creature, and, with all her freckles and all her angles, for the minute Lizzie Ann was worth looking at.

She caught sight of Eleanor at the end of the alley, and stopped, half defiant, half afraid.

"I didn't steal nuttin'!" she called, shrilly. "They throwed her out, they did!" Her arms closed aboout her treasure. Appeal looked out of her eyes, coupled with a regret Eleanor couuld not fail to recognize, that she had not, upon the moment of discovery taken flight.

Eleanor could not speak quickly enough, so impatient was she to be reassuring. "It's all right! You can have her, I'm sure."

Lizzie Ann drew nearer, and looked her gratitude. "Say, ain't she a swell doll?" she asked breathlessly. "She's a little banged up, but look at her hair!" She touched the golden wonder with reverent fingers. "I'm going to call her Violet Lillian!" she said. "She deserves a pretty name.'"

When Eleanor reached home she went at once to the garret. In an old trunk were put away her dolls. She laid them in a row, and looked them over thoughtfully. The face of Lizzie Ann rose before her, with its look of transfiguring tenderness.

"I didn't know they cared so. I didn't suppose they could care so." She looked severely at the row of dolls spread out before her. "It's too much happiness to keep locked up in a trunk in the garret. I'm going to see these dolls get where they are needed. But the nicest one of the lot"—her voice grew suddenly decided—"the very prettiest one of all is for Lizzie Ann." —Selected.

ONE SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS.

The following is the class roll of a Sunday school class which met in Giles' Chapel, Randolph county, during the year 1876. This class was taught by Mr. A. J. Luck. All the members are still living and all are connected in Sunday school work themselves or have children that are actively engaged in the work.

A. J. Luck, R. D. 3, High Point.
K. L. Winningham, Asheboro.
M. L. Winningham, R. D. 2, Randleman.
J. A. Neighbors, R. D. 2, Randleman.
J. C. Allred, R. D. 2, Randleman.
S. T. Laughlin, R. D. 2, Randleman.
W. H. Bonkemeyer, R. D. 2, Randleman.
Julius J. Luck, Fort Sumpter, S. C.
W. C. Davis, High Point, N. C.
M. L. Davis, High Point.
R. W. Giles, Worthvillle.
Joe L. Giles, Worthville.
R. L. Allred, 532 Douglas St., Greensboro.
C. M. Giles, R. D. 3, High Point.

THE PREPARED TEACHER.

There is room for much profitable reflection in the following suggestion made by a successful teacher.

First comes special preparation. By this I mean what the teacher is already doing—getting the best light possible on the special lesson material to be studied on the following Sunday. It is true of this part of the Sunday-school teacher's ideal, as indeed it is true of all of them, that the fact that he has so little time to put into preparation for his work makes it the more necessary that he use that scant time to the best advantage. Let him get in touch with the best helps; let him work at the passage assigned with his own good sense and prayerful desire; coming thus to meet his class each Sunday with the best preparation obtainable in the time at his disposal.

This is a very elementary part of the Sunday school worker's preparation, yet he needs to watch himself lest it deteriorate, and he come with a mind confused and a spiritual sense clouded through inadequate study in advance. It is well for one who has little time for preparation to make that preparation as definite as possible, setting apart a special time each week for preparation of the lesson, and guarding that time jealously. You cannot be a true spiritual guide unless you have a good conscience; and that you cannot have unless your specific preparation has been honest and as thorough as you can make it.

We may asume that this item of special preparation is an element in the ideal of every good Sunday-school teacher. But many go no further. I would urge the importance of the second element, general preparation.

Along with the special study for the Sunday to come, should always go, even for the busiest of men and women, some general Bible study, independent of immediate demands. He is a poor Sunday-school teacher, always unfit, who "lives from hand to mouth." Henry Ward Beecher advised preachers to put a large part of their time reserved for sermon preparation into study and reading bearing no special relation to sermons and services immediately at hand. The same rule holds good for Sunday school teachers. If you have but an hour a week to give to self-training for Sunday-school teaching, it will pay you to cut your preparation for the Sunday just ahead to half the time, and put the other half into independent, constructive, general study of the Bible. Thus you will slowly but surely gain a background for all your Bible study and teaching, a reserve stock of knowledge, well-organized, upon which you will draw with increasing confidence and success. Go through some good Bible history, or a historical geography of Palestine.

C. H. Hubbell.

BIBLE SUNDAY OR TUBERCULOSIS SUNDAY?

Press despatches report that the Association for the Study of Tuberculosis are approaching the churches, the schools, the labor organizations, the President and State Governors, etc., asking that on Sunday, Dec. 7th, they will devote themselves to a discussion of tuberculosis.

If this Sunday is to be taken up with the consideration of tuberculosis, why should we not devote another Sunday to cancer, another to diphtheria, another to typhoid fever, and so on for fifty-one Sundays, and then complete the cycle of the year by consecrating the fifty-second as Insanity Sunday?

We understand the Sabbath to have been instituted as a day of devotion to God, as well as a day of release from human toil; and this year, for the first time, the churches of the United States and Canada are beginning to set apart this third Sunday before Christmas (Dec. 7th) as a day on which to call special attention to the Bible as the inspired word of God and I call the literature of the tuberculosis people to witness that if the Word of God were really the guide of the home that disease would cease to exist.

Wherefore let the anti-tuberculoiss association cease to persuade the ministers of the Christian religion to degrade this day in such manner, but rather let them join in exalting that word. which, if faithfully followed, will do away with all diseases. Yours truly,

Christopher West.

Nov. 12, 1913.

"ONLY A COBBLER."

There is a story told about William Carey well worth repeating.

It is said that long after he had attained to fame and eminence in India, being professor of Oriental languages in the college of Fort William, honored with letters and medals from royal hands, and able to write F. L. S., F. G. S., F. A. S., and other symbols of distinction after his name, he was invited to dine with a select company at the Governor-General's.

On this occasion, one of the guests, with more than questionable taste, asked an aide de camp present, in a whisper loud enough to be heard by the professor, whether Dr. Carey had not been a shoemaker.

"No, sir," immediately answered the doctor, "only a cobbler!"

Whether he was proud of it, we cannot say; that he had no need to be ashamed of it, we are sure. He had outlived the day when Edinburgh reviewers tried to heap contempt on "consecrated cobblers," and he had established his right to be enrolled among the aristocracy of learning and philanthropy.—From "Modern Heroes of the Mission Field," by the Right Rev. W. Packenham Walsh, D. D.

THE STORY OF SIMEON STEPANOFF

At the recent European Baptist Congress held in Stockholm, there was no more impressive figure, from the physical point of view, than the Russian delegate from the "white city of Moscow," Pastor Stepanoff. A veritable giant among men—tall, broad, massive, stalwart, with an enormous head and bushy beard—he looks the typical Russian. Yet, withal, he is the gentlest and most childlike of men. Possessed of strong convictions, and ready to fight or die for them, his big heart is brim-ful of love, and read to embrace as brethren all who love the common Lord.

Speaking as the Russian representative of the National Baptist Union, he greatly interested the assembly, especially when he told that he was one of those who, before the Tzar's edict giving religious liberty, had worshipped God and witnessed for Him in the depths of the forests, beset by spies and soldiers. Our hearts were stirred as he told how, in spite of the repressive measures, the work had prospered, and tiny lights were kindled in the darkness—which now, under more favorable circumstances, flashed out in a line of beauty across the whole country.

We have been favored with the goodly fellowship of our burly brother on more than one occasion in St. Petersburg, and with some notes of his Christian life, which may not be without interest to the readers of these pages.

Mr. Sepanoff began life as a poor man; he had but a few roubles as capital, but he possessed keen business instincts. He commenced by dealing in a small way in grain, and developed such skill in meeting the market requirements that, ere long, he was able to build a mill of his own, and increased prosperity crowned his efforts. He was known as an expert in the business, and bankers were willing to let him have any amount of money to carry out his transactions.

He became comparatively wealthy, but meanwhile he had been preaching the Gospel as opportunity occurred, and that with such acceptance that friends urged him to give up business and devote himself entirely to the ministry of the Word. In his own soul he felt that he ought to do this, but the love for business, for which he seemed to have a genius, and the desire to make money, prevailed against the higher aspirations. His mother, an earnest Christian woman, and his like-minded wife, kept urging him to separate himself unto the Gospel, and he promised eventually that he would do so by-and-by.

At length his mother died, and some time afterward our friend dreamed that she appeared and reproached him for not keeping his promise. He now said he would certainly give up the business, but next day a large order came to hand, and again he postponed the matter. Another night he again saw, in a dream, his mother, who seemed distinctly to say to him: "Simon, Simon, when are you going to keep your promise?" He now definitely resolved that he would make the great renunciation, but once more circumstances proved too strong for him. A very profitable business transaction was put before him; several other gentlemen undertook to share in the financing, having absolute confidence in his business capacity; and as it would mean a profit of some £30,000, he decided to deal with this matter and then retire. That night his mills took fire, and now he was compelled to leave the business, as it practically left him. He felt that he had been disobedient to the heavenly vision, but that the Lord had now mercifully constrained him to enter the path of full consecration; and from that time onwards he has rejoiced to devote all his time to the preaching of the Gospel which he loves, much blessing having crowned his labors.

Those who have felt Brother Stepanoff's strong, warm, hand-grip may have noticed that the hand is minus a finger, and is otherwise marred. We were interested in hearing the explanation of this. One day, his wife said to him: "Simon, I have had a bad dream about you, and you must not go to the mill today, else you will injure your hand." He laughed at her, and said it was nonsense, but she persisted in her entreaty. She said she had dreamed that he came to her, holding a large bunch of red roses in his hand, and that meant blood, and he would surely have an accident, and lose his hand. She was so much in earnest about it, that at last, to please her, he promised that he would not go to the mill that day.

In the course of the day an urgent message came to him that two gentlemen had come on important business and wished to see him at once at the mill. Naturally he went off at once, and saw his friends; but, while speaking to them, something went wrong with part of the machinery: he went to help to put matters right, when somehow his hand was caught in the wheel, and he was taken home to his good wife with his finger amputated, and her dream thus painfully fulfilled.

Recently Mr. Stepanoff, in his desire to spread the Gospel among his fellow-countrymen, has adopted the novel plan of reaching them by gramophone. He has spoken some clear Gospel messages into the gramophone, and the records are being eagerly bought and circulated. In some places the clergy have been alarmed and have called in the aid of the secular power to prohibit the sale of these Gospel records, but meanwhile they are fulfilling their mission, and according to the witness of opponents, this new style of preaching is heard and makes an impression wherever gramophone records are to be found; for instance, in tea-rooms, beer-houses, inns and private houses.

Our brother has a difficult task to hold the Evangelical fort in "Holy Moscow," but the Lord is with him, and blessing is being enjoyed. It was to him a great inspiration to attend the Congress, and meet so many like-minded brethren from all parts of Europe, albeit there were not many of the addresses which he could follow, so limited being the use of his own language We could see, however, that Baroness Yasnovsky frequently gave him the gist of a speech, and so added to his delight —which indeed seemed generaly full; for the "joy of the Lord" is his, and the word most frequently on his lips, and which generally served for answer to all remarks made to him in an unknown tongue, was "Hallelujah!"—London Christian.

TOLSTOY'S MESSAGE TO THE CZAR, THE KAISER AND THE KING OF ENGLAND.

This message was a secret one sent before his death by Count Tolstoy, the eccentric Russian writer:

"This is a revelation of events of a universal character, which must shortly come to pass. Their spiritual outlines are now before my eyes. I see floating upon the surface of the sea of human fate the huge silhouette of a nude woman. She is—with her beauty, her poise, her smile, her jewels—a super-Venus. Nations rush madlly after her, each of them eager to attract her especially. But she, like an eternal courtesan, flirts with them all. In her hair-ornament of diamonds and rubies is engraved her name: 'Commerciallism.' As alluring and bewitching as she seems, much destruction and agony follow in her wake. Her her voice of metallic character like gold, and her look of greed are so much poison to the nations who fall victim to her charms. And behold, she has three gigantic arms with three torches of universal corruption in her hand. The first torch represents the flame of war that the beautiful courtesan carries from city to city and country to country. Patriotism answers with flashes of honest flame, but the end is the roar of guns and musketry. The second torch bears the flame of bigotry and hypocrisy. It lights the lamps only in temples and on the altars of sacred institutions. It car-

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

Greensboro, N. C.

N. B.—Following schedule figures published only as information and are not guaranteed.

1.00 A. M.—No. 29 daily, Birmingham Special, through Pullman sleeping and observation cars New York to Birmingham and Richmond to Birmingham. During car service.

12.48 A. M.—No. 32 daily, Southern's Limited, Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville, Augusta and Aikin to New York. Dining car service.

12.55 a. m.—No. 112 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh open at 9.15 p. m.

4.10 a. m.—No. 36 daily, Birmingham Special, Pullman sleeping and observation cars from Birmingham and Asheville to New York and Birmingham to Richmond. Dining car service.

2.25 a. m.—No. 31, the Southern's Southeastern Limited, Pullman sleeping cars from New York to Asheville. Day coaches. Dining car service.

3.45 a. m.—No. 45 daily local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7.10 a m.—No. 8, daily local for Richmond, connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7.20 a. m.—No. 37 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited Pullman drawing room, sleeping cars and club and observation cars New York to new Orleans. Pullman sleeping car New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman chair car Greensboro to Montgomery, solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m.—No. 108 daily local Greensboro to Goldsboro.

7.35 a. m.—No. 11, daily local through to Atlanta, sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m.—No. 154 daily except Sunday for Ramseur.

8.15 a. m.—No. 237 daily for Winston-Salem and North Wilkesboro. Pullman sleeping car Raleigh to Winston-Salem.

9.30 a. m.—No. 44 daily for Washington and points North.

9.40 a. m.—No. 144 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro; handles Atlanta Raleigh sleeping car.

12.30 p. m.—No. 21 daily for Asheville, Waynesville and local points; handles coaches and chair car through to Asheville and Waynesville.

12.50 p. m.—No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12 30 p. m.—No 21 daily for Asheville,

12.55 p. m.—No. 7 daily for Charlotte and points south.

1.40 p. m.—No. 36 daily U. S. Fast Mail for Washington, New York and points north; handles Pullman sleeping cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman sleeping car Asheville to Richmond Pullman chair car Greenville, S. C., to Washington. Day coaches. Dining car service.

2.20 p. m.—No. 207 daily for Winston-Salem, and daily execept Sunday for North Wilkesboro.

2.30 p. m.—No. 151 daily except Sunday for

3:30 p. m.—No. 230 daily except Sunday for Madison.

Ramseur.

2.30 p. m.—No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4.20 p. m.—No. 22 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles chair car to Goldsboro.

6.10 p m.—No. 35 daily U. S. Fast Mail for

4.55 p. m.—No. 131 daily for Mt. Airy.

Atlanta and points south Pullman sleeping cars New York to New Orleans and Birmingham and sleeping car Richmond to Asheville which car can be occupied until 7 a. m. Pullman chair car Washington to Greenville, S. C. Day coaches. Dining car service.

6.35 p. m.—No. 235 daily for Winston-Salem.

7.30 p. m.—No. 43 daily for Atlanta Sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10.13 p. m.—No. 38 daily New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited Pullman sleeping cars New Orleans, Macon, Asheville and Charlotte to New York and Pullman chair car Montgomery to Greensboro. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

10.20 p. m.—No. 233 daily for Winston-Salem.

10.31 p. m.—No. 12 daily local for Richmond; handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman, Vice-President and General Manager, Washington, D. C.; S. H. Hardwick, P T. M., Washington, D. C.; H. F. Cary, G. P. A., Washington, D. C.; R. H. DeButts, D. P. A., Charlotte, N. C.; O. F. York, P. & A., Greensboro, N C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF STOMACH AND INTESTINES.

121 South Elm St.,

Greensboro, N. C.

Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Dr. J. E. Wyche.

DENTIST.

Office in Benbow Arcade, S. Elm St.,

Rooms 211-213,

FISCHER BUILDING.

Greensboro, N. C.

Dr. C. W. Banner.

W. Market St., Opposite Court House, Second Floor.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR, NOSE AND THROAT.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.

Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.

206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

ries the seed of falsity and fanaticism. It kindles the minds that are still in cradles and follows them to their graves. The third torch is that of the law, that dangerous foundation of all authentic traditions, which first does its fatal work in the family, then sweeps through the larger worlds of literature, art and statesmanship.

"The great conflagration will start about 1912, set by the torch of the first Europe. It will develop into a destructive calamity in 1913. In that year I see all Europe in flames and bleeding. I hear the lamentations of huge battlefields. But about the year 1915 a strange figure from the North—a new Napoleon—enters the stage of the bloody drama. He is a man of little military training, a writer, or a journalist, but in his grip most of Europe will remain until 1925. The end of the great calamity will mark a new political era in the Old World. There will be left no empires and kingdoms, but the world will form a federation of the United States of Nations. There will remain only four great giants—the Anglo-Saxons, the Latins, the Slavs and the Mongolians.

"After the year 1925 I see a change in religious sentiments. The second torch of the courtesan has brought about the fall of the church. The ethical idea has almost vanished. Humanity is without the moral feeling. But then a great reformer arises. He will clear the world of the relics of monotheism and lay the cornerstone of the temple of pantheism. God, soul, spirit, and immortality will be molten in a new furnace, and I see the peaceful beginning of a new era. The man determined to this mission is a Mongolian-Slav. He is now walking the earth—a man of active affairs. He himself does not now realize the mission assigned to him by a superior power.

"And behold the flame of the third torch, which has already begun to destroy our family relations, our standards of art and morals. The relation between man and woman is accepted as a prosaic relation of the sexes. Art has become realistic degeneracy. Political and religious disturbances have shaken the spiritual foundations of all nations. Only small spots here and there remained untouched by these three destructive flames. The anti-national wars of Europe, the class war of America and the race wars in Asia have strangled progress for half a century. But then in the middle of this century I see a hero of literature and art arising from the ranks of the Latins, and purging the world of the tedious stuff of the obvious. It is the light of the symbolism that shall outshine the light of the torch of commercialism. In place of the polygamy and monogamy of today, there will come a relation of the sexes based fundamentally upon poetic conceptions of life—poetogamy.

"And I see the nations growing wiser, and realizing that the alluring woman of their destinies is after all nothing but an illusion.

"There will be a time when the world will have no use for armies, hypocritical religions and degenerate art. Life is evolution and evolution is development from the simpler to the more complicated forms of mind and body.

"I see the passing show of the world drama in its present form, how it fades like the glow of evening upon the mountains. One motion of the hand of Commercialism and a new history begins."

(A reader sends us the foregoing, and asks what we think of it. It is interesting reading, but we attach no importance to it as a prophecy. Tolstoy, while a man of genius, was also at times a man of unsound mind.—Editor.)

THE SMALLEST CHURCH.

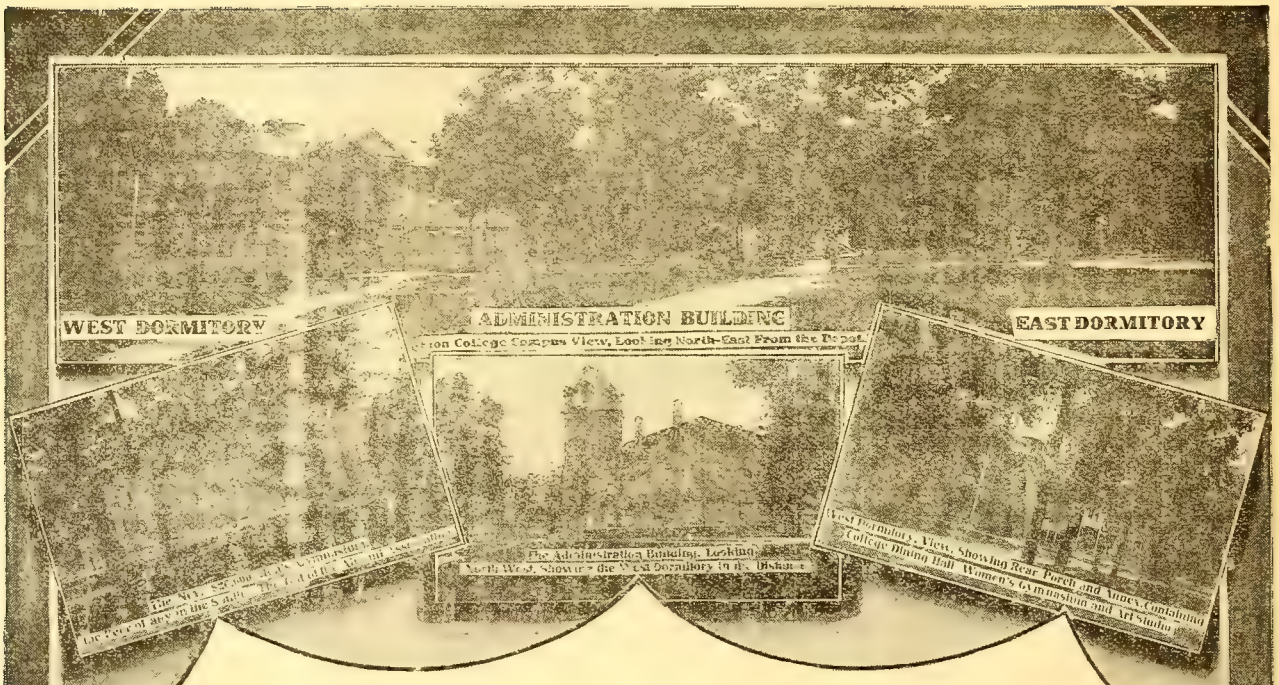
Mexico, which can boast of some wonderfully fine churches, also claims the smallest church in the world. It is situated at Penon, near the city of Mexico, and has a "seating capacity" of about ten, although there are no seats.—Cement World.

—Rev. W. D. Fogleman is under a new treatment for diabetes and has improved a little.

—Don't forget the orphans and the Children's Home this Thanksgiving season.

—Rev. C. W. Bates and wife came on to Greensboro after Conference.

—A brother wanted to be introduced to Peter Slewfoot at Conference and another wanted to meet Mr. Bug Hater.



Elon College

For Both Men and Women

Elon College, North Carolina

For a quarter century Elon College has rendered the best families of the South a paragon service in providing young men and young women with the best mental, moral and physical training under positive Christian influences, tho entirely free from sectarianism.

Karl Lehman, of Boston, testifies that "of all the Colleges I have visited as International Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor during six years, the spirit of Elon College appeals to me as most genuinelu Christian." Elon College is situated in the delightful hill country, a section unsurpassed for beauty, with a climate far-famed for its healthfulness. There is no medical fee, for there is no necessity for it. Its campus, comprising twenty-five acres of native oak and hickory, shrubbery, winding walks and driveways, is one of the most beautiful in the South and, with its two unsurpassed gymnasia, provides abundant opportunity for recreation and relaxation.

The splendid equipment of Elon College was only made possible through liberal endowment. It maintains seven elegant new buildings, especially designed and appointed for college work. These are furnished with every known convenience; steam heat, electric lights, running water, baths and sewerage. The College plant is conservatively valued at $300,000.00.

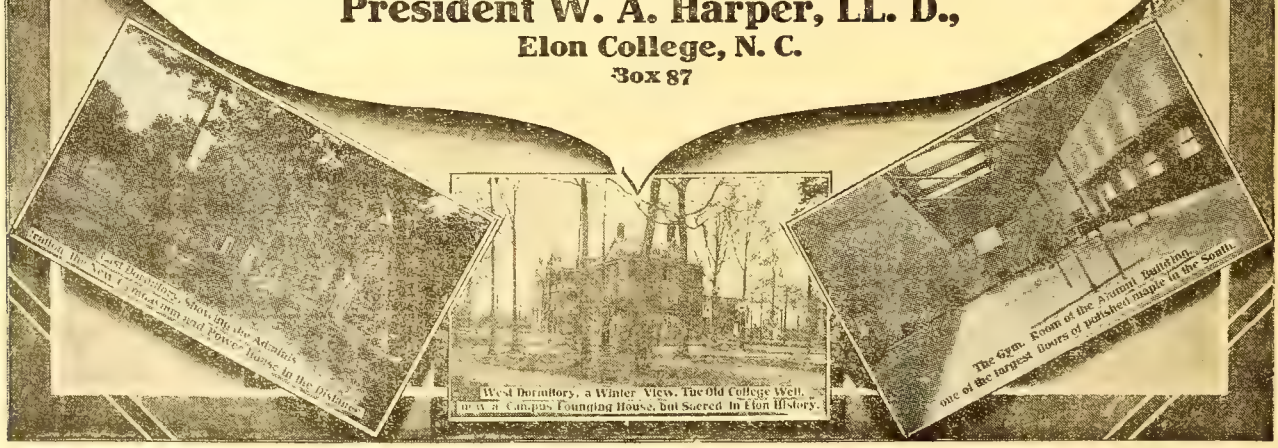
Elon College is distinctly a high-grade institution, though its charges are moderate. Its graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of all the great universities without examination. Its literary and scientific courses are arranged in various departments which lead to the degrees of Master of Arts, Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Philosophy, Bachelor of Pedagogy, and a three-years' course leading to the degree of Licentiate of Instruction, designed especially for teachers. This institution affords special opportunities for training in Piano, Voice, Expression, Fine Arts, Normal Training, Physical Culture and Commercial Practice.

The Faculty consists of twenty-one specialists; men and women selected not only for their superior teaching ability, but also for their exemplary character and manners.

The student body numbers nearly four hundred and comes from thirteen states.

The lowest Rates in the South, only $131 to $191 per College session of ten months. Fall Term always opens the first Wednesday in September. For full descriptive catalogue and view-book, address

President W. A. Harper, LL. D.,
Elon College, N. C.
Box 87



We want the name of every young man who is ambitious to and we want to hear from ev ery business man who wishes that he knew BUSINESS LAW.

BE A LAWYER

Write today and let us tell you how we have made lawyers out of hundreds of young men just like you, and equipped business men with a legal training that has been of immense benefit to them. This School, founded 23 years ago, has graduates who have passed bar examinations in every state in the U. S. Courses endorsed by Bench, Bar, and Business men.

STUDY LAW AT HOME

Learn about (1) our Complete College Law Course which fits for practice, and (2) our Complete, Practical, Business Law Course for Business Men. Find out about the low cost, and see how easily you can obtain a thorough knowledge of the Law while continuing your present work. Easy Terms!

Send today for handsome catalog and list of successful graduates all over the U. S. who grasped their opportunity by once answering an ad. like this!

THE SPRAGUE CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL OF LAW
401 American Building, Detroit, Mich.

"Here is Your Answer;" in WEBSTER'S NEW INTERNATIONAL

-THE MERRIAM WEBSTER

Even as you read this publication you likely question the meaning of some new word. A friend asks: "What makes mortar harden?" You seek the location of Loch Katrine or the pronunciation of jujutsu. What is white coal? This NEW CREATION answers all kinds of questions in Language, History, Biography, Fiction, Foreign Words, Trades, Arts and Sciences, with final authority.

400,000 Words and Phrases Defined.
6000 Illustrations.
Cost $400,000.
2700 Pages.

The only dictionary with the new divided page,— characterized as "A Stroke of Genius."

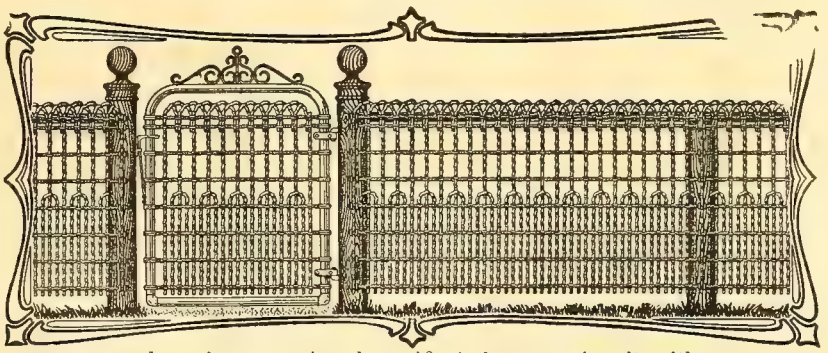
Write for specimen pages, illustrations, etc.

Mention this publication and receive FREE a set of pocket maps.

G. & C. MERRIAM CO.,
Springfield, Mass.

"GET IT AT ODELL'S"

PROTECT YOUR BURIAL PLOT



from trespassers and at the same time beautify it by enclosing it with
CYCLONE ORNAMENTAL METAL FENCE.
ODELL HARDWARE CO., GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.

This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W. M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

Jones.

Mrs. Martha Jones fell asleep on the evening of Nov. 15, being 85 years, 5 months and 24 days old. She was the mother of seven children and 23 grandchildren and some great-grandchildren.

Good bye, little children; I am going home. Long through thy weary crowd I have roamed. A river ark on the ocean brim, long I have been tossed like the foam. But now, good children, I am going home. Good bye to the flattering and frowning face of this old world, to crowded churches and streets; to frozen hearts and hastening feet; to those who go and those who come. Good bye, good children, I am going to the one I love so well who has crossed over yonder river alone to a secret spot he calls his own.

In a secret spot in the grave yard I lie, waiting the great Judgment Day.

Good bye to the loved ones at home.

Written by Her Daughter-in-law.

THE SCRIPTURE TEXT CALENDAR.

THOUGHTS FOR DAILY MEDITATION

HERE is a calendar for which you have been looking a long time. It will surely please you, for in it we have combined many helpful and instructive features. It contains a different Bible picture and design each month, giving you a new calendar every time the sheet is turned, the Sunday School Lesson references each Sunday and a Scripture promise to cheer one along in daily Christian walk.

This calendar makes an ideal Christmas or birthday gift and is something every one will appreciate and make constant use of. Printed on finest quality glazed paper, size ten and a half by fifteen and a half inches, mailed to your home for 25 cents.

Orders may be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald.

THE PUBLISHERS.

A Saloonless Nation by 1920!

Lindley.

Robert Lee, son of R. W. and Annie M. Lindley, was born Aug. 30, 1908, and died Nov. 21, 1913. Lee was a bright, sweet little boy loved by all. He was sick only a few days, with scacrlet fever. He was very patient and sweet. The day before he died he pointed upward and said, "What is that?" When told by his mother that she didn't see anything, he said, "Well, I do." And just a few minutes before his soul took its flight, looking upward, he pointed with both little hands and said words and appeared to call some one, but they could not understand what he said. Dear sweet little boy, he must have seen Heaven then. O the boundless goodness and love of God! So many times just as our loved ones depart they seem to see right into Heaven, and 'tis such a comfort to those so sadly bereft.

All that a loving father and mother and kind friends could do was done, but God said, Come, and dear little Lee left all sorrow and care behind and went smiling into the arms of the Father. Never a sorrow, never a care, but joy unspeakable forevermore. As our pastor was away attending Conference the funeral service was very impressively conducted at Center church jointly by Bros. Newlin, Braxton, Zachary, and Lindley. They sang very softly and sweetly his favorite song, "Where He leads me I will follow," after which kind friends laid him gently to rest, covering the little mound with beautiful flowers. 'Twas a scene so sad. Many a tear was shed, for the little life apparently all aglow with hope and promise so suddenly cut off. A precious flower budded on earth to bloom in Heaven.

Lee dearly loved to go to Sunday school and took great pride in his little cards, talking of what the pictures represented and getting up the lesson on them. He enjoyed very much the songs of the Sunday school, and at night before he lay down to rest, he would kneel down by his little bed and say his prayers. Dear father and mother, while he can never pray again for you here, in Heaven he is watching and waiting for you.

Sweet little darling, light of the home,
Looking for some one, beckoning, Come!
Bright as a sunbeam, pure as the dew,
Anxiously looking, Papa and ama, for you."

Think not, dear parents, of the little mound, but rather let your imagination picture dear little Lee all glorious and bright as he enters the pearly gates and walks the golden streets. Up very near the throne we imagine we see him, for "in heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in Heaven."

Lee loved all things beautiful. How happy he must be in the glorious mansions of paradise surrounded by all the beauties of Heaven. He loved music here. In our imagination we see him join the heavenly choir, and "the music of Heaven is sweeter in measure and purer in every strain than any on earth we can sing."

Heaven so grand and beautiful that in our imagination we cannot even conceive of it, is his home forevermore. Dear mother, the child you feel you have lost is the one you can never lose, for he is safe and happy now, rejoicing in the infinite love of God, the Father. Surrounded also by many relatives gone before, who were there ready to welcome Lee home. Weep not, dear sorrowing parents. God's will is best. God's will be done, and though our hearts are sad, we should humbly bow and sometime we will understand.

His aunt. Inez E. Foust.

The Commonwealth: "Conversion is not character. It is the source of Christian character as an acorn is the source of an oak; but the two should be distinguished. Conversion comes in a day; in fact, it comes in a moment. Up to a certain point of time a man is not converted and then he makes the all determining surrender and choice and he becomes a child of God in Christ. He is converted. But character cannot come in a moment's time nor in a day. It is never the product of one experience. Character is not a creation. It is an achievement. God alone gives the new birth, but it takes God and man working together to make character. It is the product of testing, of discipline, of knowledge, of obedience and endurance. The element of time enters always into the making

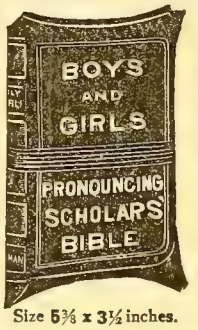
CHRISTMAS PRESENTS

HOLMAN BIBLES

FOR CHILDREN AND YOUNG SCHOLARS

For Intermediate Scholars

Every boy and girl should have a Bible. The Bible is the Word of God. Its early impressions on the youthful mind are both beneficial and enduring. It builds character and its influence is toward Christianity and Right Living. It stands for all that is Good and Noble and symbolizes the highest ideals of life.



Size 5⅜ x 3½ inches.

No. 91. French Seal Leather, overlapping covers, round corners, gold edges, gold titles. Special Postage, 10 cents. $.95

SPECIMEN OF TYPE

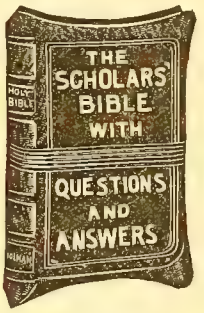
WHOSOEVER believeth that Jē'sus is the Christ is born of God: and every one that loveth him

PICTORIAL BIBLE

With beautiful photo views of scenes in Bible lands distributed throughout the text. Also six maps of Bible lands in colors. Also with new Practical Helps to Bible Study, especially designed for instructing children in scriptural information.

The text is self-pronouncing, by the aid of which children can learn to pronounce the difficult Scripture proper names.

For Teachers and Preachers



Holman Pictorial Scholars' Bible Pronouncing Text

Size 7 x 5 inches.

SPECIMEN OF TYPE

22 And the prophet came to the Is'ra-el, and said unto him, Go, str thyself, and mark, and see what tho for at the return of the year the

Beautifully printed on fine white paper from new, clear type. Containing, in addition to the Old and New Testaments, 32 Beautiful Photo Views of Scenes in Bible Lands. These views are printed on enameled paper and are made from recent photographs, which show places as they actually are today. In addition, this Bible also contains Helps to the Study of the Bible. Four Thousand Questions and Answers, Presentation Plate and Maps in colors.

No. 21. French Morocco, overlapping covers, headbands and marker, round corners, red under gold edges. $1.20

Postage, 14 cents.

RED LETTER EDITION

Same Bible with Helps, etc., as above and with the Sayings of Christ in the New Testament printed in RED.

No. 21 RL. Binding same as 21. $1.45

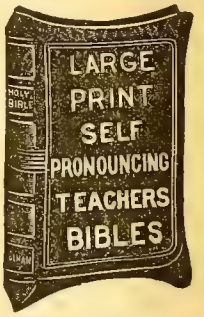
Postage, 14 cents.

Four Best Editions of the World's Best Book

Holman Self-Pronouncing Large-Print Teachers' Bibles



Size 8 x 5½ inches.

SPECIMEN OF TYPE

the priests, the Lē'vītes, the the singers, the Nĕth'i-nīms, they that had separated then

Containing New Copyrighted Helps: A Practical Comparative Concordance. Illustrated Bible Dictionary, Four Thousand Questions and Answers, Fifteen Colored Maps.

No. 47. Egyptian Morocco, overlapping covers, round corners, red under gold edges. Special price, $2.00 Postage, 25 cents.

RED LETTER EDITION

Same large type and Helps as described above. The words of Christ in the New Testament, Prophecies relating to Christ in the Old Testament, etc., are all printed in RED.

No. 81 RL. $2.50 Postage, 25 cents.

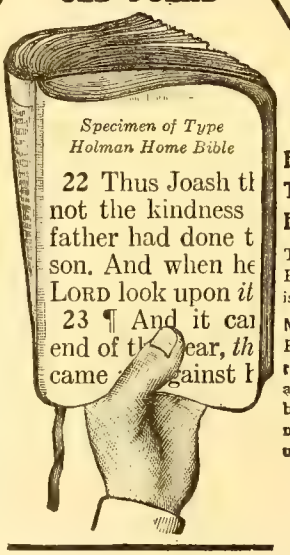
INDIA PAPER EDITION

The finest Bible made; will last a lifetime.

No. 75X. Genuine Morocco, overlapping covers, leather lined, silk sewed, under gold red $4.50

Postage, 16 cents.

FOR OLD FOLKS



Specimen of Type Holman Home Bible

22 Thus Joash th
not the kindness
father had done t
son. And when he
LORD look upon it
23 ¶ And it ca
end of th year, th
came gainst h

The Holman Home Bible

Printed from large, clear Pica type, with Marginal References, Family Record, and Maps. This Home Bible is new and very desirable for eevryday use in the Home, containing all the advantages of a Family Bible in a compact size that can be easily handled, with Record for births, marriages and deaths. This is the best Bible obtainable for Old Folks who need extra large clear print and a lightweight book.

FOR THE HOME

The exact size of Bible when closed is 6½ x 9 inches.

No. 201. Bound in Flexible French Morocco, grained lining and fly leaves, silk headbands, and purple silk marker, round corners, red under gold edges.

Publishers' price . . . $3.00
Our special price , . . $2.10
Postage, 24 cents.

Each of the above Bibles is specially priced for this offer at about one-fourth less than the publisher's retail list. SEND ALL ORDERS TO

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD , GREENSBORO, N. C.

some decent girl who knows how to make a home for him; and—he will live in the world, not in the clouds. So there, you have my answer. No; you have the reason, too."

"Will you allow me to hear the boy?"

"No, sir."

"But I have heard him. I heard him last Sunday at church."

The other man jumped up and began pacing the floor. 'You love the boy? Yes, yes, I know. I had a child once, just for a little while—just a baby when he died; but he could hold out his little arms to me, and he would laugh, laugh, oh, it was sweeter than any violin! I loved him—I can't talk to you about how I loved him; but—do not dare tell me that I do not understand how you feel about your son! Then there are two questions for you to answer. What shall make the most for your son's happiness —?"

"Not only that," said Simon, "what shall be the best for his soul, also?"

The other man did not raise his shoulders in the expected shrug of contempt; instead, he gravely inclined his head. "You are right," said he, "what shall make the best for his soul also; for else it will not be happiness, only intoxication—and every kind of intoxication passes! But again I tell you that if your son who ought to be a singer, makes himself or you make him into something else, he will miss his highest happiness.

"And I tell you something else. There is another question for you to consider: Have you the right to take that boy's voice from the world? You are a good man; everybody will tell you so. I do not deny it—I am distinctly not a good man. I don't have any fun when I sit up for an hour with my conscience—I am often ashamed of myself; but I have never in all my wasted and unprincipled life done such a wicked thing as you, you good man, propose, when you would deprive the world of——'

"Of a sweet voice? What does that count?"

"It counts more than you can possibly know. What is the thing which the world, old and sad and weary, tired of its hideous wrangle and struggle and grinding toil, what does it need, what does it crave most?"

"Rest," said Simon.

"No," said he, "no, you mistake, we are not so tired as that; what the world craves, what the world needs, is joy! Joy is the real persuader to goodness. Pure joy is the loveliest thing there is: it is the garment of love itself. And the little joys, the moments of happiness, they are fleeting, but they are eternal. The heart that can respond to them is forever young. We need joy, most of all peoples. We need to be civilized enough to enjoy without too much analysis. And it is Art which gives pure joy, impersonal, absolute. Of all the arts, also, does not music own the most penetrating joy? Do you dare to deprive the world of the joy which your son can bring it?"

He stopped; and his face changed. The shop being empty, almost unconsciously Donald had begun to sing. The voice hushed both men. It was such a voice as cannot be forgotten, not so much in its quality, although its limpid sweetness was not more wonderful than its delicious ease of utterance and its range—as in its thrilling tenderness. He sang a Christmas hymn which he was to sing on the morrow.

"Still through the cloven skies they come,
With peaceful wings unfurled:
And still their heavenly music floats
O'er all the weary world;
Above its sad and lonely plains
They bend on hovering wings,
And ever o'er its Babel sounds
The blessed angels sing."

The artist's eyes filled with tears. He looked at the father, who turned abruptly and went to a window, staring out on the darkening street.

At last Simon came back. He was very pale. He laid a hand on the other's shoulder and it was a hand which trembled. "I cannot do it," he said; "you knew I couldn't do it."

"God made that voice," said the artist. "He made it like an angel's to do an angel's work. Tell him it is my Christmas gift to him."

"Go in," said Simon, frowning, "take him; but it is not you that have overcome me. It was his own voice."

And when the artist had passed through the door, he sank into a chair and covered his face. But the glorious voice took up the song again:

"Oh, ye beneath life's crushing load
Whose forms are bending low,
Who toil along the climbing way
With painful steps and slow;
Look now, for glad and joyful hours
Come swiftly on the wing;
Oh, rest beside the weary road
And hear the angels sing."

—Octave Thanet in The Churchman.

HIGHEST TAX PAID.

"I believe that the liquor traffic is in reality the highest tax that is being paid by the common people of today and that it is the heaviest drain on their resources. If this is a fact, it is your duty to legislate in the interests of those people, and not in the interests of the men who are in the business for a profit or a money consideration."—Message of Governor Vessey to the Legislature of South Dakota.

AFTER CONVENTION—WHAT?

Convention season is at its hight. And this has been a great summer for conventions. They are spectacular things, interesting to observe, and full of suggestion. They are worth while. But it may not be out of place to repeat the hint that when autumn comes and all these convention-goers are back to their daily and weekly tasks, there rests on them a grave responsibility to make the expense and the effort and the excitement of convention-time count for big and adequate results.

Just one word will make sure that the instruction and inspiration of the convention will last throughout the year—the word is Christ. If any convention is a success it is because He is there: if any delegate puts in a year of valuable work it will be because he has taken Christ with him back to his task. Let us remember that power for work does not rest in numbers. One shall chase a thousand and two put ten thousand to fligt. One consecrated soul who sees Christ all the year round may accomplish more for the kingdom than a thousand delegates who assemble in enthusiastic convention.

After the wind, the earthquake; after the earthquake, the fire; after the fire, the sill, small voice. Take Jesus back with you from the convention; talk with him moment by moment through the months to follow; get him to lead and teach and strengthen you at the daily tasks—and the convention will not have been held in vain—Christian Herald.

A traveler tells of a Christmas custom in Sweden. Every farmer has erected in the middle of the door-yard a pole to the top of which is bound a full sheaf of grain. Not a peasant will sit down with his children to a Christmas dinner indoors, till he has raised aloft a Christmas dinner for the little birds that live outside.—Church Chimes.

—Baptist Standard, Texas: "A jury in an Illinois court awarded $50,000 to six small children, to be paid by two saloon-keepers who were charged with selling liquor to their father, rendering him incapable of supporting the children. This jury has set a good example for others. Wherever saloon-keepers are held financially responsible for the harm done by their business, they will quit it."

PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENTS.

Mebane, ... January 2 to 3.
Orange, ... January 4 to 5.
Graham and Haw River, January 10 to 11.
Burlington, ... January 11, at night.
Fairview, ... January 12 to 13.
Tabernacle, ... January 14 to 15.
Greensboro, St. Paul, ... January 18.
Guilford, ... January 20 to 21.
Flat Rock, ... January 23 to 24.
Oak Ridge, ... January 25 to 26.
Lebanon ..... February 1.
Piedmont, ... February 6 to 8.

Brethren, blend some of your appointments, if possible. Publish my plan for your field in the Herald. State where I am to be met to enter your field. Let me wind up nearest the next field to be visited. These requests are reasonable and compliance with them will be a great help to me. Please grant them. C. A. Cecil.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

Thomasville.

On the night of Dec. 17th I met with the people of this church, and held the first quarterly conference. The conference was very well attended and most of the officials were interested and the business was transacted very pleasantly.

There appeared to a visitor just a little bit of the spirit of discord, and the only way to eliminate such a condition is to pray for such a spirit to be removed, and that the Christ spirit may take the place. I trust this will vanish as the days go by.

Bro. Williams and his family are very kindly received, and the people have been pounding them with some of the good things of earth, while he breaks the bread of life to them.

This church tries to pay pastor weekly and they are going to pay all assessments in full besides diminishing their church debt considerably. This charge is doing well. My claim overpaid.

High Point.

On Wednesday night, Dec. 17th, I met the officials and the pastor and held the quarterly conference. Not a full attendance of the officials present; but those present were interested and transacted the business largely to suit themselves. The pastor read a good report, and if the things suggested in it are carried out in full we may expect even a better report than heretofore at our next Conference.

The work is starting off nicely as to Sunday school and church attendance.

This church uses the budget plan to raise their finances, according to my judgment the best plan in practice.

My claim not paid, but vouched for in January.

Through the kindness of Bros. J. E. Cecil and B. E. Kennedy we were permitted to eat turkey for Thanksgiving. They are members of Pleasant Grove Church, Lebanon Circuit.

Why Not Ct.

The pastor of this charge, Rev. J. H. Stowe, met me at Seagrove Dec. 19th and conveyed me to the parsonage at Why Not, near Fair Grove church where the first quarterly conference was to meet on Saturday at 11 a. m.

I preached at 11 a. m. to rather a small congregation for that community, as I thought. The quarterly conference was called to order at 1:30. All churches represented but one (Lovejoy). The conference was interesting and I trust helpful to those present. I can't see how a member who is a Christian, elected by the members of the church to attend to the business of the local church to which he belongs and the other churches on the charge can afford not to attend the quarterly conference. I would be pleased if some layman who is guilty will either write to me or to the Herald explaining the matter.

Fixing pastor's salary caused some discussion; finally salary was made six hundred dollars, and it was urged that the salary be paid monthly or quarterly and the conference recommended the budget plan for all churches on the circuit.

One church has paid one-fourth of pastor's salary to date. I believe all the churches paid some on pastor's salary. Bro. Stowe is popular, and his people enjoy his good sermons.

At 11 a. m. Sunday I preached to the Pleasant Hill people, and 3 p. m. I met the pastor at New Zion and preached to a good congregation. Monday at 11 a. m. we were at New Hope; a small attendance. At 3 p. m. I preached at Flag Springs. I spent Sat. night with Bro. M. A. Cagle; his son took me to Pleasant Hill. Took dinner with Bro. H. Bean, and his son, J. W. Bean, took me to New Zion. Spent Sunday night with Bro. M. J. Presnell, and took dinner on Monday with Bro. W. M. Coble. All of these brethren have my thanks. Claim met at all churches but one, and that will be forthcoming in a few days.

Asheboro.

Sheriff Ross met me at Flag Springs in a new auto, and in just a few minutes we were in Asheboro. I spent the night with Sheriff. At seven o'clock the church bell called and we met to hold the first quarterly conference. Several of the officials were present and the usual business was transacted in a very pleasant manner, and all seemed to be of the same mind as to the matters that came before the conference.

Salary fixed at $750.

This church always pays every cent of every assessment. Bro. Whitaker has a good field and a splendid people to serve. and this people have a good preacher, and Mrs. Whitaker is one of the best of church workers in our Conference that I know, and this means much to the preacher and to the people he serves. Claim not paid, but vouched for in a few days. I am to preach later in the year according to promise; but I want to say I do not believe Bro. Whitaker and his people are like many of our charges and a few of our preachers (I am afraid) in beliving that all the president needs to do is to preach. In my judgment this is the secondary part of the office.

He is to advise and superintend in matters pertaining to the business side of the church and stimulate the membership to greater activity. I would like to do more of this kind of work.

Randleman.

I visited this field on the 26th and 27th of Dec., preached in all the churches; at Randleman and New Salem the attendance was not large. I suppose on account of the mud at New Salem and no light at Randleman. Worthville and Bethany, attendance good. Services interesting. Bro. Spurgeon Caudle met me at Randleman and took me to New Salem. After service I took dinner with the pastor and wife. At 3:30 we met at Mt. Lebanon to hold the first quarterly conference; not a full attendance; but the conference was interesting and the reports indicated progress. Pastor's salary raised $50. The pastor stated in his report that a parsonage had been bought near the depot at Randleman for $1600, and he was raising money to make the first payment by the middle of Jan., 1914, and had on hand in cash and subscription over three hundred dollars and had done this in ten or twelve days, and he is confident he can raise the first payment in due time, and it is to be hoped that his people will all rally to his assistance and give such assistance as they are able, and many as I passed around spoke encouragingly. Randleman has long needed a parsonage and now is the time to make sure of it while they have a pastor who is willing to do all he can to help the Circuit to have a house for the preacher.

I spent Saturday night with Bro. R. W. Lineberry pleasantly. Took dinner at Worthville with Bro. A. G. Myrick Sunday, and ate from a four-story revolving table, and I counted 25 different articles to eat on the three upper stories, and what the pastor and wife, R. W.

Lineberry and I did for the rations was a plenty.

Took supper with Bro. Barker Sunday night at Randleman. Went to Naomi M. E. Church and heard Bro. Chrissenbery preach. Spent until four o'clock a. m. at the Tavern. Left Randleman for High Point at 5:30.

Bro. O'Briant and wife are esteemed very highly by the people on their field of labor. Claim paid. Truly,

C. A. Cecil.

FROM OUR PASTORS

THE POSTAL CARD

W. F. KENNETT, EDITOR

This is Christmas eve and all the world is akin. Gladness and joy fill many a heart. Of course there are many hearts that are sad, because there is sin in the world—and a long train of the consequences of sin mars the happiness of many a home. The birthday of the world's Redeemer will be celebrated in various ways. The devout will look up to God with thankful hearts for the wonderful manifestation of His great love. Others will revel in wine and strong drink, and spend the day in carousing. The Editor of the Postal Card and his family have great cause for thankfulness; for while the mistress of the parsonage has not been well for some weeks, yet we trust she is somewhat improved. One of the many causes for thankfulness is the continued kindness of the people of Flat Rock circuit which has abounded towards us for so many years. The approach of Christmas has brought to us many evidences of this continued kindness. The list should read as follows: Mrs. Simpson, pigs' brains; Mrs. Branson, potatoes and canned peaches; Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Angel, sweet and Irish pototoes, fresh meat including sausage; Mr. and Mrs. Wirt Harrison, sausage, scrapple and pressed meat; Mrs. C. W. Vance, ribs, chine, sausage, pickle and cake; Mr. Caruthers, pumpkin; Mr. and Mrs. Gordon, butter, potatoes, turnips, pumpkin, ribs, chine, and sausage; Mr. and Mrs. N. T. Pegram, butter, lard, ribs, chine, sausage, haslet, potatoes and pumpkin; Mrs. B. W. Johnson, ribs, chine, sausage and scrapple; Mrs. H. G. Moore, fat hen and eggs; Mrs. Elma Parish, sausage, scrapple, ribs and kraut; Mrs. Ogburn, ribs, chine, sausage, and hominy; Mrs. Dwiggins, eggs; Mrs. M. W. Gant, cake and cake plate.

Under the license of an editor we tender sincere thanks and wish everybody a happy Christmas and a good New Year.

Stokesdale, N. C., Dec. 24, 1913.

Mt. Hermon Circuit.

The first quarterly conference will convene at Mt. Hermon church Sat., Jan. 3rd, 1914 at 1:30 p. m.

It is important.

C. H. Whitaker, Pastor.

Halifax Ct.

On our return to the parsonage last week we found that the good people of Bethesda had been to the parsonage in our absence and had given us a real good pounding. As there might be some objection to my giving the names of the donors and of the articles I will simply say the gift was very greatly appreciated by the pastor and his wife. We have also been remembered substantially by Mrs. S. M. Lewis of Union church for which she has our thanks.

The pastor was not able physically to meet his appointment at Bethesda and Fingwood last Sunday, but is out again now.

J. E. Pritchard.

Graham and Haw River.

President's appointments:

First quarterly conference in Graham church on Sat. p. m. at 3 o'clock, Jan. 10th. President Cecil will preside. The president will preach at Glen Raven Sat. night, Jan. 10th at 7:30; at Haw River Sunday a. m., 11 o'clock, Jan. 11th; at Graham Sunday 3 p. m., Jan 11th.

O. B. Williams.

Notice.

The first quarterly conference for Granville Circuit will be at Rehoboth on Saturday before the first Sunday in January at 11 a. m. No preaching, but the business of the circuit, as the distance and bad roads these short days will not permit. Lunch immediately after the business session.

N. G. Bethea.

Greensville Ct.

On Dec. 13, I arrived at Lawrenceville, Va., on my way to the charge assigned me by the last Annual Conference. Bro. A. W. Moore met me at station and conveyed me twelve miles to his home, and next day (Sunday) I began to fill the appointments made for me by Bro. Moore. I preached at all the churches, held the first quarterly conference on Sat., Dec. 20th, a harmonious session; all churches represented but one. Salary fixed at $435. I was on the work eight days, preached eight times and held one prayer meeting besides holding the quarterly conference. I expect to return and fill all the appointments in January as made by the quarterly meeting as follows: Philadelphia, first Sunday, 11 a. m.; Hobb's Chapel, 2d Sunday, 3 p. m.; Matthews Chapel, 3rd Sunday, 11 a. m.; Wesley Chapel, 3rd Sunday, 3 p. m.; Ebenezer, 4th Sunday, 11 a. m.

I met with a kind reception all around the circuit, and am expecting a pleasant year serving this people so far as the treatment I will receive from them is concerned, but any one can guess how hard my lot will be this year trying to

DENTON HIGH SCHOOL.

SPRING TERM OPENS DECEMBER 29, 1913.

DENTON is situated in the Piedmont hills of Davidson County, twenty miles south from Thomasville on the Carolina and Yadkin River Railway. This railroad connects us with the Southern at High Point on the north and with the Southbound at High Rock on the south. We have four daily passenger trains which make the school easy of access from all points.

OUR COURSE OF STUDY prepares for any college, also for our State University. A business college course has been added and will be taught free of charge as to tuition during Spring Term. Our Music Department is in the hands of a thoroughly competent teacher. A Bible course is added and daily recitations given. All students receive personal attention and everything is done that is necessary for their comfort and advancement. A Teacher's Training Class will be organized in the Spring for the benefit of those who intend to teach.

FREE TUITION to ministerial students and children of ministers of the North Carolina Conference. We board students in good private homes as cheaply as any school. Indigent young men can rent rooms and board themselves at actual cost. The school uses water from deep drilled wells with pumps. Pure air, pure water, plenty of work; if these do not give health to the student, he will never have it.

THIS IS A METHODIST PROTESTANT SCHOOL, though entirely free from sectarianism and patronized by all denominations.

For further information, address at Denton, N. C., GEO. L. REYNOLDS, A. B., Prin.

serve a charge of five apointments 190 miles from home and can come home only every fifth Sunday.

Any one wishing to write me can address me at Triplet, Brunswick Co., Va., until further notice.

D. A. Highfill, Pastor.

La Grange Circuit.

The members of La Grange circuit who have not been otherwise informed will please note that I will fill the regular appointments on this work, beginning with the first Sunday in January.

I have made two business trips to the town of La Grange in search of a residence. After considerable walking over the town and faithful inquiry I finally found a brother who will have a house ready for us in a short while.

On my first visit to La Grange I was advised to be vaccinated, since it was reported that smallpox was then in town. Consequently, in order to relieve me of the danger to which I might have been, or might be, exposed, I received the "scratch." On this the tenth day I am experiencing, I think, every pain and ache laid down in the vaccination program. I shall not attempt to write more while in this physical and mental mixup, further than to say that my heart is in the La Grange work. My hope and prayer is that I may have the prayers and the hearty co-operation of every member and friend on the work.

With best wishes for all, I am

Yours to serve, Will H. Neese.

Elon College, 12-21-1913.

FROM LOCAL REPORTERS

New Hope Church, Monroe.

On the 12th of December the Revs. Mr. Stacy and Mr. Haywood opened a revival at this place. At first the interest was very small, or at least seemed so; and from a human standpoint there did not seem to be much prospect for an old-time revival. But, praise God, through the prayers and efforts of the preachers and people God sent the old-time power.

The Lord came in convicting power and sinners wept and fell in the altar and prayed through to God. Praise God! He gave us our desires. Twelve conversions and ten accessions to the church.

We thank God for the faithfulness of Bros. Haywood and Stacy in proclaiming the word. Era Belk.

Another Report.

This is to say that a protracted meeting of nine days' continuance was held at New Hope church under the management of O. D. Stacy and A. B. Haywood; closed Sunday night, 21st, with fine results. 25 conversions and 10 accessions to the church and the church revived very much. "The power came down our souls to greet and glory crowned the mercy-seat."

O. D. S.

Rockingham.

Our pastor, Bro. J. F. Allred, came and preached for us at Peedee church the 1st Sunday in December and it was a helpful sermon to all. We believe that the Lord directed in sending Bro. Allred here and we like him fine. He has already shown by his actions and work that he is much interested in the work here on Rockingham Ct. He has visited many homes, read and held prayer and talked religion to them till he has got hold on them. By this he has made many friends to himself. He has a little book that he carries with him and he is giving the church credit for everything that they do. We have done much that we have never gotten any credit for, but the Lord is taking care of that now.

Now as we have no reporter at St. John's church I will write a few lines for that church, as I go down there nearly every Sunday. I have been down there since Bro. Allred preached for them and I was told that he had spent nearly a week there in visiting, reading and holding prayer with them, and I find that he has started up a midweek prayer-meeting. I also find that he has made many friends down there. He was there and helped your writer do some repair work on the windows. I am so glad that we have got a man who has the work at heart and is doing all he can for us.

Our first quarterly conference will be held at Peedee church on Sat. night before the first Sunday in January, 1914. Hope all the churches will be represented.

With best wishes to the Herald and its readers I close. W. T. Collins.

Bethany, Randleman Circuit.

Our S. S. had a Christmas tree on Christmas eve. The children gave a very nice program. Bro. O'Briant and wife were with us to enjoy the exercises. A Christmas offering was taken for the Children's Home.

Mr. D. T. Gaster has been elected S. S. Supt. for the following year. Miss Bessie Hayes re-elected secretary. One of our teachers, Miss Laura Julian, is sick with typhoid fever. We hope she will soon be well so she can come back to her class.

Bro. C. A. Cecil was with us yesterday afternoon. He certainly preached a good sermon. We were glad to have him. Hope he will come back again.

"We are all glad" to have Bro. O'Briant and his good wife with us for another year, and may we take Bro. Cecil's text to heart. We are laborers together with God. Let us do more at Bethany this year than ever before. Best wishes to the Herald and its many readers.

A Member.

Friendship, Haw River Ct.

Our regular appointment was filled last Sunday by our pastor. He preached a good sermon. The congregation was very good. We are going to continue our Sunday school during the winter. We hope to have a better one this year than ever before.

We were glad to have Mr. E. O. Pritchette, who is a student of Western Maryland College, with us Sunday. He will preach for us next Sunday morning at eleven. We hope to have a large congregation. Blanche Weatherly, Rep.

Deer mr. editur:

i have bin a akin fur some time to tel what is a gwine on in our church, but you know old brother slu-fut come out in the papur a few months ago and said a good deal about preechers a writin to the papur about what the folks was a givin em. Well, it got our preecher all bothered up so he didn't no what to do about it. He axed me if i thot old brother slu-fut wood jump on him ef he was to rite a peice for the papur about the good things the folks was a fetchin to him. You see some preechers what haint never bin to collage dont like to buck up agin a man whats edicated. So our preecher said nothin. i woodn't say nothin now but fur the fac that old Sandy Klaws has bin a comin to our preecher's house right along all thru the year. Seems like hit dont make no difference to him whether hits Crismus or not. Ov course hit dont make no difference to old Sandy whether the preecher rites anything fur the papur or not but the preecher felt bad cause he was a gittin so much and nothin bein said about it. Why, all along thru the spring an summer old Sandy brot beeries, cow cumbers, beats, and things like that and then in the fall he brot turnips and cabbige and the like.. A little later when the weather got cool he brought saw sig, back bones (and meet on em too) and liver pud and spair ribs and etc. what ever that is. Not long ago one member had a chicken shet up a fattenin fur Crismus an one night along about mid

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XX. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1914. NUMBER 11.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCULLOCH, Editor and Publisher.
PRICE.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
RULE IN DEALING WITH SUBSCRIBERS.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

"THE UNFRIENDLY NEIGHBOR."

This title of our last Sunday school lesson appears to us without justification. Where does the unfriendly neighbor appear in the lesson? We do not see him. Jesus supposes a case, that you go to a friend at the unseasonable hour of midnight with the important and urgent object of borrowing bread for a friend that has arrived unexpectedly. Jesus asks a question which we understand to be substantially this: Would your friend refuse to lend you for such a purpose even under such conditions? The answer expected is, No, to be sure he would not. To make this answer the more evident Jesus adds, Even if he did not rise and give you because of friendship, he would do so because of your importunate asking. He would certainly grant your request.

The point of the parable we take to be that God will certainly answer prayer,—not that we are to be very importunate in praying.

We de not claim originality for this view of the passage,—only that it seems to us the correct view.

SINKING OF THE MONROE.

Men who go down in great ships and try their fortunes on the sea have dangers to encounter that land-dwellers do not appreciate. Many a ship has gone to pieces or been sunk in the depths of the sea, and men never know when they enter a ship for a voyage that the ship will reach its destination. Men thought that they had overcome the perlls most to be feared when they constructed the Titanic, but it sank on its first voyage.

In addition to the danger from storms and from hidden rocks and from floating mountains of ice there is the danger of collision between ships. This caused the sinking of Steamer Monroe of the Old Dominion Line on Thursday night of last week in a fog off the coast of Virginia. We made the trip from Norfolk to New York in this steamer some time ago. It was filled with passengers, so many that we could not obtain a state room. It was a handsome vessel and we had no fear of the fate that really came to it finally. It collided with Steamer Nantucket and sank in ten minutes. More than forty people lost their lives, though more than that number were saved. One man, Thomas Harrington, of Connecticut, swam with his wife's hair in his mouth in an effort to save her with himself. His wife died soon after being taken into a boat and he was almost exhausted. The responsibility for the collision is being investigated. Each captain seems disposed to blame the other.

Bro. Swaringen of the Senior Class in the Seminary is filling the appointments of the Congregational church at Blue Ridge.

—Miss Lillian Highfill, daughter of Rev. D. A. Highfill, was married yesterday in this city to Mr. J. E. Welburn, of High Point. The marriage took place at the home of Mr. V. L. Atkins on Lucy St., Rev. G. F. Millaway officiating.

—People who make a practice of exposing the errors and shortcomings of their fellowmen seem not to realize that their own records, if gone over in the same spirit, would disclose some very grievous failures and positive transgressions.

—Mr. Earl Harris, of Henderson, gave an organ recital or sacred concert with the help of the choir in Grace Church last Sunday night which brought out an unusually large attendance. Earl has musical talent of such high order that it seems nature intended him for a musician, but we understand that he thinks of being a doctor. We wonder if his music wouldn't soothe and help the world more than his pills and powders.

—Mr. Charles Ireland sent Christmas greetings to the ministers of Greensboro concluding with this cheering expression of appreciation: "At this season when one counts up the blessings for which he should be grateful, there is none other for which I more devoutly thank God than for a true, loyal, consecrated ministry of my city, and I wish hereby to acknowledge my gratitude and to wish for you the season's greeting of good cheer for the present, and a better and happier New Year than you have ever had before."

—A South Carolina paper has the following report of a sermon by Rev. J. W. Quick, of the Methodist Protestant Church.

"What have they seen in thy house?" 2 Kings 20:15.

Napoleon was once asked, "What is the greatest want of the French nation?" He hesitated a moment and then said with greatest emphasis, "The greatest want of the French nation is mothers." If you will ask me the greatest need of America I wish in my reply that I might speak with the power of a Napoleon and that my words might live as long, for I would say, "The greatest need of the American nation today is homes," not palatial buildings, of necessity, but homes where Christ is honored, where God is loved and where the Bible is studied. If you will tell me what is in your house by your own choice I will tell you the story of your home life and will be able to tell you whether yours is a home in which there is harmony and peace or confusion and despair. Let me read the names in your guest book; allow me to read the titles of the books of your library in which you have special delight; permit me to examine your magazines which you read most, allow me to listen to your conversation when you do not know that you are being overheard, make it possible for me to visit with you your friends in whom you have particular delight, do this and I will write a true story of what you have been, of what you are and of what you will be but for the grace of God, even though I may not know you personally at all. In other words whatever may be seen in your home determines what your home is. "Great God, give us homes."

Mr. Editor: I wish to say to Bro. T. T. Hicks that the reward which he offers in the Herald of Jan. 29 is not at all equal to the magical power of the nom de plume, Peter Slewfoot. In my opinion if Bro. Hicks desires Peter to change his nom de plume, he will have to offer a more valuable reward. J. A. Burgess.

IS IT?

Is preaching the Gospel the supreme duty of the preacher?

During the larger part of my life I would unhesitatingly have answered this question in the affirmative.

But some things have occurred lately and statements have benn made, both publicly and privately, that have caused me to think more on this subject than I ever had done before, with the result that I now answer it in the negative, and say unhesitatingly that preaching is not the supreme or first duty of the preacher. That it is his principal work and should never be made secondary to any other work is freely admitted. And woe to the preacher who would allow some other business to take first place in his life. But this is quite different from saying that the preacher's first or supreme duty is to preach. From the very nature of the case we would expect the preacher's principal work to be different from the work of other men. But his first duty we would expect to be similar to the first or supreme duty of every other person.

And as I see it the supreme duty of every person is to stand by, cleave to, and support the right as "God gives to see the right," not in doctrine only, but in everything. A failure to distinguish between the supreme duty and the principal work, or a disposition to magnify the work above the duty, has done much to keep some preachers out of the ministry of the Methodist Protestant Church and to get some out who were already in.

A very able preacher of the M. E. Church, South, said to me on different occasions some years ago: "You Methodist Protestants are right; your principles of church government are right, and I am in the M. E. Church, South, only because I am more certain of having a place to preach." Another preacher who about this same time was fixing to leave the M. P. Church for the M. E., South, said, "While I admit that the principles of the M. P. Church are right I don't know that it makes any difference whether a man believes the system he is working under is the best or not so he preaches and does good." Other cases might be given of preachers who have been and who have not been in the M. P. Church, who acknowledge that she is right, but who in order to get a place to preach fail to give or withdraw their support from the right as God has given them to see the right. Those men may be true to their call to preach, but I claim that no man is justified in withdrawing or withholding his support from the M. P. Church—even for the sake of preaching, as long as he believes her principles are right. But if he becomes satisfied that they are wrong, then let him depart in peace. If one is justified in turning his back on what he believes to be right and giving his support to the opposite, just because by so doing he can get to preach, why might we all not go back to the Roman Catholic Church, if she will give us a place to preach? But you say some of her doctrines are wrong. But is it any more wrong in the individual to support what he believes to be wrong in doctrine than in polity? I think not. But let me say in closing that I believe all the men referred to directly or indirectly in this article are true at heart, but I believe they have looked at things from a wrong point of view. May the Lord enable us all to see the right and may we be men enough to stand by the right, uphold the right, if we never get to preach another sermon.

Old Student.

THE VOICE OF GOD.

Life's course stretches itself out before me. On it I see the world of sin and selfishness. The home land call is heard, and the heathen's cry echoes over the briny deep. Empty pews and vacant pulpits are seen. What shall I do? God calls me all the day, and His Spirit disturbs my dreams at night. I must say "yes" to the voice—I have, and now I am happy.—From a personal note of a college student.

God still calls men, and this young man's case is only a sample of his type. The Master's work must be done. Have you heard the call to service? What is your answer?

C. B. Riddle.

SUPREME MISSION, HIGHEST DUTY

The supreme mission of the church is clearly determined in the Word, and the bounden duty of every member to help carry out that mission is also therein forcefully set forth.

The church can only give expression to its purposes, demonstrate its saving principles, and develop its enterprises by what its members believe and practice, by what they give and do to prosecute its activities.

They are the guardians of its honor, the custodians of its oracles, the exponents of its truths, the promoters of its beneficent work; and unfaithfulness on their part, of necessity, discredits the church, impoverishes peoples God commissioned it to bless, and invites the divine displeasure, with lessened joy, spiritual power and growth.

The mission of the church is indicated in God's first command to Abram; Gen. 12:1,2—"Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house, unto a land that I will show thee; and thou shalt be a blessing."

The message of the angels emphasized the church's mission, Luke 2:10—"Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people," to be made known to them through the work of the church.

The prayer Christ taught elucidated the church's mission, Matt. 6:10—"Thy Kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven."

Christ's first command after His resurrection demonstrated the church's mission, John 20:21—"As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you," for His disciples today are to preach Him as the world's sole hope, as His first disciples did.

Christ's last deliverance is the culmination, Matt. 28:19—"Go ye therefore and teach –make disciples of—all nations." We must go or help send.

Fred C. Klein.

TO PARENTS.

What Are You Doing for Your Sunday School?

The Sunday school is one of the greatest factors in a rural community, or, in fact, in any community. What are you doing for it? Almost any up-to-date man will tell you that he believes in the Sunday school; that it is doing a great work etc.; that he would not have it done away with for anything. But what is his life to it? If it is so useful, what is he doing to make it successful? If it is good for his child's life, is it not good for his own? The father who stays at home all day Sunday, lagging about in his dirty clothes and takes no interest in this great factor for the community's good, need not be surprised if his boys do not have the highest purposes and ideals in life. He, as far as his ability goes and his life touches, is to that extent responsible for the success or failure of this great cause. Parents, what is your life to it? That of a critic or a helper? A hinderer or a worker? Parents, encourage your children to go to Sunday school by going yourself. Your going not only encourages the children, but the superintendent and teachers and shows the interest you have in your children and your community and your respect for yourself. Tell the children on Sunday morning that you will go to Sunday school with them that day, and see if that little child is not more interested in its lesson. For teachers can very soon tell from the lesson what the child's parents are doing. And, mother, please don't refuse to give the little one the penny it asks for to take to Sunday school, for God loves a cheerful giver. Once a little girl in my class looked up at me with tears in her eyes because her mother didn't give her any money to bring to Sunday school. And, mothers, suppose those little eyes should be closed in death before the next Sunday comes: O how your heart would ache to see those little dimpled hands folded, and the money you would give if you could only have those little bright eyes reopened and the little dimpled hand to grasp that money. Parents, remember to pray for your Sunday school and your superintendent and teachers. (A Sunday school teacher on the Piedmont work.)

DISAPPEARANCE OF THE MARY CELESTE.

Many a good ship has sailed away over the sea and disappeared forever. Sometimes an account of the accident or misfortune is obtained but usually the grave and solemn sea holds the secret locked securely away from all who would learn of it. A story of this nature concerning the brig Mary Celeste whose captain and crew mysteriously disappeared more than forty years ago and were never seen or heard of afterward is often told by old seamen, especially when some fresh sea mystery recalls it to their minds.

The brig Mary Celeste sailed out of the harbor at New York bound for Genoa with a cargo of petroleum and alcohol. She was commanded by Capt. Benjamin Briggs of Massachusetts, with Albert Richardson, of Stockton, Me., as first mate. In addition to the officers and crew the Mary Celeste carried the wife and little daughter of Captain Briggs.

As they sailed out of New York harbor the whole ship's company was blithe and happy, for the brig was in first-class condition, staunch and tight, well manned and well equipped in all respects; yet no one of her company was destined ever to be seen by their old friends again, dead or alive, for not a trace of a single one of them has been found in the 40 years that have elapsed since they sailed away.

The brig sailed Nov. 7, 1872, and on Dec. 4, she was found off the Azores drifting aimlessly about in a light breeze, her head sails set and the remainder of her canvas down. Not a soul was on board and nothing was found to indicate what had become of her crew when the brig Dei Gratia, from New York, found her.

After making a careful examination of the Mary Celeste, Captain Moorhouse of the Dei Gratia put a prize crew on board her and sent her to Gibraltar, where she arrived a few days later and was turned over to the admiralty court. The owners of the brig refused to pay the heavy salvage demanded for her and let the salvors take her. The officers' effects were collected and sent to their old homes in America.

The mate's log and other belongings of his were turned over to his father at Stockton. The last passage written in the log was regarded as significant. It was: "Fanny, my dear wife." Nobody knew whether the mate wrote those words to express his affection for his wife while thinking of her and their home or whether he wrote them in a moment of panic and despair when the crew were about to quit the ship under stress of some awful calamity. This last entry was made on the 24th of November, and when the brig was found 10 days later one might have thought from all appearances that she had not been deserted more than a few minutes.

The men from the Dei Gratia who boarded the Mary Celeste found her stern boat gone and the davits broken but there was nothing to show that the crew had taken more than a small quantity of canned goods from the lockers. Everything was shipshape; her running rigging was all properly made fast and the slack neatly coiled away in good order. The companion ways were open; half-turned music was found on the rack of the little organ in the cabin while a child's toys lay scattered about the floor.

In the captain's room his gold watch was found hanging at the head of the bed and the impress of a child's head was found on the pillow in the room of his wife. In the cook's galley the kettles were found on the stove and meat was found on the table. Clothing and even money belonging to the men had not been disturbed. Everything seemed to indicate that the crew had quitted the vessel in dire haste.

Many and varied theories and stories to account for her crew's mysterious disappearance have been brought out in the 40 years since the brig sailed. Everything possible from mutiny to piracy has been suggested. In 1877 a story got started to the effect that Mate Richardson had been found hiding in the West Indies and that he and other members of the crew had murdered the captain to get the great sum of money which the vessel was carrying. The story gained but little credence however because it was well known that the Mary Celeste carried no money.

Some 20 years later another yarn was told; according to this account a sailor who had been the mate of the Dei Gratia had confessed on his deathbed that when he boarded the Mary Celeste he found all hands except Capt. Briggs, his wife and the cook, had died of smallpox, and that he, the confessor, had thrown the survivors into the sea, appropriated $8,000 which Mate Richardson had been carrying to set himself up in business in Africa, and returned to the Dei Gratia with the report that the vessel had been found completely abandoned. When this story drifted into Maine it was discounted as a pure myth.

The only true, rational explanation of the mystery is the supposition that the officers and crew became alarmed at the rumbling of the cargo and fearing that the vessel was about to be blown up by the gases accumulated from the petroleum and alcohol got out as quickly as they could. This story is strengthened by the well-known fact that cargoes of oil when closely confined do generate considerable gas, especially when the vessel is pitched and tossed about in rough seas.

This gas gives rise to a peculiar and terrifying rumbling sound below decks. The log of the Mary Celeste speaks repeatedly of the noises under decks and expresses fear on the part of the men that she may explode. It is strange however, if this theory is correct, that the men should have failed to think of the expedient of opening the hatches and allowing the gases to escape. It is thought that when the boat carrying the people from the Mary Celeste tried to make a landing on the Azores the heavy surf capsized her, though as a matter of fact there is no record of the finding of any bodies or the boat.—The Pathfinder.

HIS LESSON LEARNED.

A darkey had been tried and found guilty of murder, and was sentenced to be hanged. The time set for the execution had arrived, and the condemned negro was led to the scaffold.

"Rastus," said the sheriff, "have you anything to say before the sentence of the law is carried into execution?"

"No, boss," replied the prisoner, "I ain't no spechifier, but I suttenly believes dis am gwine to be a lesson to me."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

—Government surveyors have recently checked up some of the lines reputed to have been run by George Washington, and have found them good.

Washington, of course, used a simple compass, and his line could not be expected to check absolutely with that obtained by the government surveyors who have retraced his survey, using high-power transits and all the refined and accurate methods which modern instruments allow. Nevertheless, the line was run so carefully in the first place that but little variation has been found in it.

—Telephones are used for dispatching trains on some railroads, increasing both safety and facility in handling trains.

—There are 36,500,000 young trees in the government's forest nurseries.

THE POWER OF A BIBLE VERSE.

A certain barber who is an earnest Christian was annoyed frequently by profanity and coarse language about his shop. It was comparatively easy to send the small boys and loafers about their business, but he had regular patrons who were not so easy to handle. It is a sort of tradition that a barber shop, being a locality that ladies never have occasion to frequent, is a place where loose language is perfectly permissible. This barber is a reasonable man, and has no wish to interfere violently with any one's personal liberty, and being, moreover, a poor man who must live by preserving the good will of the public, he cast about anxiously for a polite protest which could not be criticised.

He finally hit upon one, and the writer, stepping into his shop one afternoon and taking his place in one of the chairs, found himself face to face with that useful warning—neatly and very legibly soaped across the upper half of the mirror—from Ecclesiastes: "Be not rash with thy mouth, and let not thine heart be hasty to utter anything before God, for God is in heaven and thou upon earth; therefore, let thy words be few."

There was something in the circumstances and surroundings that gave the words unusual force. The solemn utterance of the old preacher, framed in that prosaic modern setting, moved the reader's heart, first to a sort of awe, and then to a serious consideration of their profound meaning. It was a verse which he had often read before without special thought, and although he had not offended in quite the way the barber had in mind when he printed the verse across the mirror, he felt very unpleasantly conscious that the words nevertheless came sharply through certain other gaps in his armor.

"Has it made any difference in the shop?" he asked the barber. "A very decided difference," was the answer. "Has any one treated it lightly or sarcastically?" "Not a man. Several fellows have looked at it rather dashed, and a good many have spoken to me about it, but every one has been respectful. I put it up mostly to save my own ears and the ears of respectable customers, but I'm finding out that it's going to do a good deal more and better things than I planned it for."

We might make much more use and more effective use of the Bible than most of us do. It is so common nowadays to employ Biblical phrases and passages for purely literary ends, or even for frivolous humorous effects that our respect for the Biblical phraseology is in danger of growing blunted, but the worst of us has an innate reverence for its sacred utterances, and the example of the Christian barber might be followed with profit by all of us. We expect to see and hear the Bible when we attend church, but the junctures where it really counts most, after all, are those at which it helps solve the difficulties of everyday life. "All Scripture . . . ." Paul wrote to Timothy " is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction." How often have we tested this assurance in our own persons?—Prof. Roy Temple House in Zion's Herald.

LIQUID BREAD.

The late Mr. W. S. Caine, M. P., said: "I remember once seeing over a public-house door in Liverpool, 'Good ale is liquid bread.'

"I went into the house, and said, 'Get me a quart of liquid bread.'

"The landlord said, 'Ah, first-rate sign, isn't it?'

" 'Yes,' said I, ' if it is true.'

" 'Oh, it's true enough—my beer is all right.'

" 'Well, give me a bottle to take home.' He gave me a bottle of this liquid bread. I took it to Dr. Samuelson, an analytical chemist, and I said to him, 'I want you to tell me how much bread there is in this bottle.' He smelled it and said, 'It's beer.'

" 'No, no,' I said, 'it's liquid bread.'

" 'Well,' he said, "if you come again in a week, I'll tell you about it.' He charged me three guineas. In a week's time I went to know all about the liquid bread. The first thing about it was that there was ninety-three per cent. of water.

" 'It's liquid, anyhow,' I said; 'we'll pass that: Now, let's go on to the bread.'

" 'Alcohol, five per cent.'

" 'What's alcohol?' I asked.

" 'There's the dictionary; you can hunt it up yourself.' I hunted it up, and found alcohol described as a powerful narcotic poison.'

" 'Well, I thought, 'this is the queerest description of bread I ever read in my life.' Then he gave me a number of small percentages of curious things, which he had put carefully down on each corner of a piece of white paper, and which amounted to about a quarter of a thimbleful of dirty looking powder. That was the bread—two per cent. 'And there would not be so much as that,' said Dr. Samuelson, 'if it were Bass' or Allsopp's. This is bad beer.'

" 'So the better the beer the less bread there is in it?'

" 'Certainly. It is the business of the brewer to get the bread out of it, not to put bread into it.' This is the simple scientific truth with regard to beer, and the case is stronger with regard to wine and spirits. There is practically no nourishment in them at all."—National Advocate.

THE VENTURED ARROW WHICH WENT HOME.

Under God, Governor Patterson's chance to become a Christian came through a man who, in his own modest words, "writes a good many letters." That man is John Langdon Weber, a quiet, soft-spoken South Carolinian who is pastor now of the Madison Avenue Methodist Church in Memphis. Mr. Weber has a favorite pastoral method: he watches the papers and listens to the gossip of men in his town for news of any great sorrow or great joy which has befallen any fellow citizen of his. Especially does he note cases where the sins of men have found them out and brought them to humiliation. And into every such opening in the worldly armor of reserve that men wear Dr. Weber skilfully seizes the opportunity to thrust straightway his gentle sword of gospel appeal. "The Lord has blessed you greatly; will you honor Him?" or, "You have fallen into great trouble; will you not turn to Christ for succor?"

So it was that when the papers of Tennessee were telling broadcast how Ex-Governor Patterson, in Nashville, had been connected with an episode of sensational disgrace, others jeered, but Dr. Weber wrote a letter. Something after this manner its persuasion ran:

"Dear Governor Patterson: I have never met you, but I sorrow greatly for your humiliation through sin. Yet may not your day of shame become your day of blessing through your turning to the Lord Jesus Christ for salvation? Perhaps you will resent this; you have a right to. But I can't help writing."

And the ex-governor sent back word:

"Resent it? Never! You are the first minister who ever spoke to me about my soul. Come and see me."—Continent.

—Mrs. Wade had "no imagination," as her husband expressed it. At the supper table he mentioned that he had read in a newspaper that a passenger on a transatlantic steamer had fallen overboard in mid-ocean, and had never been seen again. "Was he drowned?" asked Mrs. Wade. "Oh, no; of course not," said Mr. Wade. "But he sprained his ankle, I believe."—Christian Register.

—The semi-annual meeting of the Board of Young People's Work was held in Pittsburgh on December 9th.

WHEN TROT SAVED HER MISTRESS

We all know about that Mary whose pet lamb "followed her to school one day." But this story—a true one, the New York Tribune says—is about another Mary, who had not a lamb but dog, which, instead of following her, took her to school and brought her safely home again at night. That he was a dog of rare sagacity the story shows.

Mary lived on the Colorado plains, and went two miles to school every day over the prairie, where there was no road nor path, nor even a bush or tree to guide her. Mary was about eight years old, and she had a shaggy shepherd dog named Trot, who came with her every day and waited until school was over. Then he would caper and bark as they started off together for home.

"Mary," said the teacher one day, "why do you bring your dog to school?"

"Oh," said Mary, "I do not bring Trot; he brings me. I could not find the way alone."

"How did Trot learn to find the way?" asked the teacher, "and does he never get tired of waiting and go home without you?"

"The first time we came," replied Mary, "father came with us. When he reached the school I gave Trot a piece of meat, and when we reached home I gave him some more. No one ever feeds him but me. The first two or three days we had to tie him. If he should go home without me father would bring him right back, and that night he would have no potatoes for his supper. But we have no trouble. He likes school as well as I do; he even wants to come Saturday. Mother was afraid to trust us at first, but I coaxed, so she said we might try it."

One day about twelve o'clock the wind clouds began to gather. Children who have never seen a western wind storm can hardly imagine what it is like. In Colorado it does not rain at all during the winter, so the sand is very dry and light. The wind lifts it up from the ground and whirls it around as if it were raining sand. It chokes and blinds you. Sometimes the wind is strong enough to take the houses and barns with it. Indeed, the people often build the houses only one story high, so that the wind may be less likely to blow them down.

On this day the teacher saw the clouds gathering. She closed the school and sent the children home, thinking they would reach shelter before the storm broke.

But it came sooner than she had expected. The wind howled; the sky grew dark, and the sand whirled. The teacher thought of poor little Mary alone on the prairie. How would she survive the fright even if she were not lost? As soon as the wind subsided she got her horse and rode to Mary's home. The little girl met her at the door.

"Do you not think," said Mary's mother, "that dogs know as much as some people? Mary and Trot were about half way home when the wind commenced to blow. There is an old dugout some distance to the right of the way they take home. Trot took hold of Mary's dress and led her, for the sand blew so in her eyes she could not see where she was going. They cuddled down in the dugout together until the storm was over."

HOW DONALD EARNED MONEY.

The boys on Mercer street were very anxious to earn money. Harry Sims' mother had told the boys about a family she knew where the mother was very ill, her husband dead and her oldest boy a cripple. Mrs. Sims wanted to get the boy a pair of crutches, and she asked the boys she knew to help her. Donald Kent was one of them.

"Now earn the money," she said to the boys. "Don't ask your fathers for it."

Donald listened to her. He looked at his sturdy little legs, and wondered how he would feel if he had to go about on crutches. Then he went home looking very sober.

"What troubles my boy?" asked his mother when he came into the room where she was sewing.

Then Donald told her about little Dick Swan, the lame boy, and how he wanted to earn money to help him. "But I am so little, mother," he said; "I can't earn money." His big eyes filled with tears. "And I'm so sorry for Dick, too," he added.

"I know a way," his mother said, quickly; "but I'm afraid my boy will find it too hard."

"Oh, no; just try me," Donald said, eagerly.

"It is this," said Mrs. Kent. "If you will not cry and be so cross every morning when Sarah dresses you, I'll pay you for it."

Donald's bright face fell. He had always been naughty when he was dressed. Nothing seemed to break him of the old habit. How could he promise to be good?

"I'll try," he said, at last. And he did. Two days he stamped his foot and cried, so that he lost money, but all the other days he could put his nickels in his bank ready to give Mrs. Sims. And when at last he handed her a shining dollar, how happy he felt!

"Ye I'm big now," said Donald proudly, "and I'm through with being a cry baby. I shan't cry any more, even if Sarah pulls my hair awfully."

That is the way Donald earned his money. But I think he would have been bigger and more manly still—don't you?—if he had been a good boy without being paid for it. —Central Presbyterian.

—Real wealth is not in mines but in manhood.

PETER'S LITTLE TALENT.

"No use," sighed Peter, "I can't think of one single thing to do that will bring me any money to put into the missionary box. Miss Porter talked to us about using our talents, but I haven't got any talent unless it is for going fishing."

Suddenly Peter struck his hands together. "My!" he exclaimed, "I never thought of that. I believe I'll try."

So he went to the barn and got his fishing tackle, which wasn't very elaborate. Peter knew the mountain brooks the best of all the village boys, and that day he fished more carefully than he ever did before, because of the big purpose in his heart. He even went to the deep hole, where the foaming brook covers over the cliff, and there he caught his largest trout. "He weighs half a pound, if he weighs an ounce," cried Peter. He kept on fishing and caught many more.

Twenty fine trout, all nicely laid on cool leaves, Peter brought back to the village. "But now the hardest part of my job is to come," he said. "Guess I'll try Mrs. Purington first."

"O, you delightful boy!" exclaimed Mrs. Purington, when Peter opened his basket. "Just what I want for my city boarders."

So Peter went home with his bare feet spat-spat-spatting on the sidewalk, his heart thump-thump-thumping under his jacket, and something that crack-crackled in his hand.

And the next Sunday when the missionary box was passed Peter put the dollar bill, all folded tightly, into it. Miss Porter looked surprised, and then she let her hands rest on Peter's shoulders and said, "Well done, Peter."—Around the World.

I have one preacher that I love better than any other on earth; it is my little tame robin, who preaches to me daily. I put his crumbs upon my window sill, especially at night. He hops onto the window sill when he wants his supply, and takes as much as he desires for his need. From thence he always hops to a little tree near by, and lifts his voice to God and sings his carol of praise and gratitude, tucks his little head under his wing, and goes fast to sleep, and leaves to-morrow to look after itself. He is the best preacher that I have on earth.—Martin Luther.

SAM JONES'S LAST SERMON

(Republished by request.)

We have selected as the text for this occasion these words from the twenty-ninth chapter of Proverbs and the first verse:

"He that being often reproved and hardeneth his neck shall suddenly be destroyed and that without remedy."

The bare announcement of this text is enough to bring every one of us to our feet with this question: "Unto whom does God speak in those fearful words? Unto whom does God address himself in that fearful language?" There are in this audience hundreds of people who ought to remain standing and announce another fact, and that is, "Surely God means me, for I have been often warned, I have often been reproved and have often haard His Word. Surely He means me." "He that being often reproved and hardeneth his neck shall suddenly be destroyed and that without remedy." I announce strictly a fact when I say there have been more sudden deaths in the last twelve months of this world's history than any other year since the evening and the morning of the first day of this world's life. More men in the last twelve months have suddenly gone into the presense of God than in any twelve months in all the World's history. You hardly pick up a leading daily paper in the United States that there is not from fifty to 5,000 persons that have been swept away suddenly and have come into the presence of God. By earthquake, by fire, by tidal waves, by accidents on railroads, by storms at sea, by apoplexy, by paralysis, by heart failure; day by day the register has gone up; and, mark my words, just as God gives the warning to men so is that proportion of sudden death multiplied in all the earth. More men have hardened their hearts and more men have been swept into the presence of God, and as you hear me tonight I shall recall illustrations of these fearful facts that lie back in my brain and which have been gathered from all parts of the country.

I want to say to you that I have preached to thousands and tens of thousands of people who have been swept suddenly and awfully into the presence of God soon after my voice died out in their ears. I was preaching at that memorable meeting at Nashville, Tenn., some years ago. On the second Tuesday night Captain Ryan, a man who owned all the steamboats along the river, came forward and asked to be prayed for. Shortly one of the pastors walked up to my side and said, "Mr. Jones, that man, Captain Ryan, is the most wicked man in this city and a very great sinner." That night Captain Ryan was converted, and he walked up to me after the service and said, "I want you to come to my house and I want you to see my wife and children." I answered, "I cannot come before a certain date." He said, "I will come for you on that day." On the morning of the day arranged he was at the service, and after that service we got into a buggy and rode up to his splendid home. When we got out of the buggy he introduced me to the mayor of the city and three of the captains of boats which he himself, owned; also to lawyers and other influential men of Nashville.

Presently Mr. Ryan's wife walked in and I was introduced to her, and after a few moments of conversation, she said, "Now, gentlemen, dinner is ready." As we crossed the hall into the large dining room the captain took my arm. "Mr. Jones," he said, "not one of these four men is religious and I want the last one of them brought to Christ." He put me at the head of the table. The mayor of the city sat directly on my right and at his side was one of the captains. Immediately on the left side were the other two captains—four great big, stalwart men. I addressed my conversation to those four men, pressing Christianity and the question of religion on them with all the force I could, incidentally mentioning the fact that within twelve months there would be sudden deaths among those sitting at that table.

After the meal was over we parted and not one of those four men was a Christian or came to the meetings. I had not been away from Nashville three months until the steamboat captain who sat next the mayor on my right side walked up to his home one day and when his feet struck the front porch of his home he fell with a heavy thud and was dead when his wife and children reached him. Not three months more had passed when the man who sat on my left, just as he stepped on to his boat and as the boat started to move off, fell on his face and never spoke another word. Not two months more had passed when Captain Ryan sent me a paper from Nashville in which I noticed that the steamboat captain who sat second to my left went suddenly into the presence of God. A few days later I saw where the mayor of the city had been out hunting and when loading his gun the gun went off, putting the whole load of shot into his head. He fell forward and never breathed another breath; and before I had been away from that town twelve months those four stalwart men had all been suddenly called into the presence of God.

"He that being often reproved and hardeneth his neck shall suddenly be destroyed and that without remedy."

I was preaching at Gainesville, Miss., some three or four years ago. There were only a few days left in the meeting and I said to the men who were helping: "Let us all get down to work." Next morning pastor Brown came in and said that he had passed two saloonkeepers on the street that morning as he was coming down and had asked them to close their saloons and come down and hear Sam Jones. They said, "Does Sam Jones think that we can close up our business and go down town to hear a man like him talk?" I mentioned this incident in the meeting and said that two saloon-keepers of that town had cursed on the street and said they could not close up their places of business to hear the Word of God. I said, "I have seen doors closed with black crepe tied on the door knob; they had better look out."

The morning I left Gainseville one of the saloonkeepers who had said this came down town in the early morning to open his saloon, and just as he unlocked the door and pushed it open he fell in the doorway and lay there dead when the first policeman came around on his beat that morning. Dead before his wife and children could say "Good-bye!" Mr. Brown sent me a marked copy of the paper a few days later which said that the other saloon-keeper went up to his home and fell on the floor as he was going in and was dead when his wife got to him. There was black crepe on the doors of those two saloons, and, mark my words, there are men in this town that are cursing this meeting and cursing, on the street, who will be suddenly struck down. I am not a prophet nor the son of a prophet, but you will have deaths in this town that will startle it before the last of this very month. Mark that! God hath said it. There are people in this town that are turning against God and despising His mercy, some of them in the last sixty days of their lives, and every time you turn your back on God and walk off from His mercy you are refusing the greatest offer that a man can ever have.

"He that being often reproved and hardeneth his neck shall suddenly be destroyed and that without remedy."

Years ago a corps of civil engineers came to a little town in a valley in Pennsylvania and went into the mountains and examined the dam which controlled the waters of the stream which flowed down into the valley. They came back to the valley and said to the people of the town, "That dam is unsafe. The people in the valley are in consequent danger." The people said to them, "You can't scare us." That fall the men came back to the valley and examined the dam again and said to the people in the valley, "We warn you people again, you are in danger every hour." They laughed at them again and said, "Scare us if you can." The men went up again in the spring and warned the people again, but the people said, "That is a chance. We have been hearing that so many times. Scare us if you can."

It was not fifteen days later, that a boy with his horse on the dead run came down into the valley shouting, "Run for your lives! The dam has gone and the water is coming!" The people only laughed at him; but he did not wait to hear their laughter; he went on down the valley still shouting the warning. In a very few minutes the dirty piling water came and in less than thirty minutes after the water struck the town Johnstown was in ruins with more than 3,700 of those who had been in the town in the presence of God. You have been reproved many a time yourself, and frightened many a time yourself and you sit out there and say, "Scare me if you can." "Get me by frightening me if you can," but on God's judgment day you will run and call for the rocks and mountains to hide from God's just fire, you little soul. God gets closest to the man who is closest to his own soul and is in need of Christ. God help you to pray about this, "I am not to be frightened into Christianity."

"He that being often reproved and hardeneth his neck shall suddenly be destroyed and that without remedy."

It is an awful thing to die, anyway, but to die without a moment to pray, without a moment to counsel the wife, without a moment to talk to the children; but to be stricken down suddenly.

I don't know when I shall die or where I may go down, whether in a railroad wreck, in storm at sea, and I might even go down on a wagon or I might drop dead with heart failure; I don't know how I shall die, but I know I prefer to die easily. I know I deserve to die suddenly but I don't know when or where I shall die. I may be taken with a stroke of paralysis and would have to be hurried to the train and from the depot up to the old home where I can live for years into the room where I have sat and talked hours at nights with my wife and children. I would suffer and linger there for days talking to them about the responsibilities that would rest upon them when I was gone, about right living, and, when the last day would come and the last night would come, and the doctor had packed up his stuff and gone; wife and children would stand around my couch and I would bid them live good lives; at the last moment I would turn to my wife and speak the last words of my heart to her and bid her be faithful to the end; I would kiss them all good night and go home as happy as any school boy ever went home from school; but to die suddenly and without preparation, without a word of counsel to the wife, without a word of comfort to the children, without a moment to utter anything to this world. "Cut him down, why cumbereth he the ground?" God help me to go home easily.

"Suddenly destroyed and that without remedy." How we look to remedies here. Millions of dollars are spent in patent medicines, doctoring and all that sort of thing, and it shows how men dread death and how they lean upon remedies and how they look to remedies to heal and remedies to effect the cure; but "without remedy." The saddest hour that I ever saw was after more than ten weeks of suffering and hard work when my wife was very sick. That night the doctor came to me and said, "I now break to you the saddest news that ever fell on human ears. Your wife cannot live." I looked at the doctor and said: "Doctor, do you mean it?" He said, "The symptoms now say that remedies are useless." I went into the upper chamber of my home and turned my face toward God and said, "O Lord Jesus Christ, who raised Lazarus from the dead when he had been buried four days, and said, 'Come forth, Lazarus,' and he stepped forth and drew the napkin from his jaws and the grave clothes off of him and walked home with his sisters; keep the words that you spoke that day and spare my wife." She lives today, cured by that only remedy of God.

The day will come to you, father, mother, man and woman, when your doctor will pack up his medicines and go, and when every instrumentality shall leave; mark my words, and you will turn your eyes toward humans and human instruments and they will say, "There is no remedy," and then is the time when that man or woman shall turn his eyes from human remedy to God and God shall sit upon his throne and say, "No remedy." There is no remedy in either human or instrumental power and there is no remedy in Heaven for that poor fellow. "He that being often reproved and hardeneth his neck shall suddenly be destroyed and that without remedy."

I want every man of you here to settle this question tonight, either surrender your life right here tonight or deliberately make up your mind to run on to ruin.

You are daring God to his face to execute His word on you. If you feel that there is more important business than we have here you may go, but I tell you what I want to do. I want to take the hands of you mothers, I want to take the hands of you fathers, I want you to stay and let the other people do what they will. I want all the sinners here tonight to say, "God help me, I will be a Christian from this time on." I want you to come up here and say, "Here is my hand and I endorse every word you have said tonight," and I like the man with courage to do what his convictions tell him to do. Come on now and give me your hand and let us pray with you.

(We printed this sermon March 28, 1907, soon after the sudden death of Mr. Jones. —Editor.)

WHAT IS CARNEGIE NOTED FOR?.

Answers from papers submitted by pupils in a recent New York regents' examination in elementary United States history:

He invented: wireless telegraphy, carriages, reaper, sleeping car, steam laundry, Atlantic cable, bicycle, medicine, railroad, wagons, typewriter, printing press, screwdriver, steam propeller, electric light, threshing machine, wheel-rake, harrow, airship, electric car, levees along Mississippi river.

He was: a general in the Spanish,American war, a British spy, Secretary of War, governor, an orator, president of the Northern Pacific R. R., first man to sail to China with ship and crew.

He found that steam had power, discovered an anesthetic, started for Europe to get help for the South, became wealthy by manufacturing glue, urged Congress to annex Hawaii, and wrote a book.

He is: the best after-dinner speaker in America, phylonisphith, a phynopsis, a thanatopsis, the head of the weather bureau, an auto speeder, a steel magnet, the head of the steel trust, and trains wild animals.—The History Teacher's Magazine.

WANTED TO GET IT RIGHT.

A traveling salesman died suddenly and was taken to his home in the west. His relatives telephoned the nearest florist, some miles distant, to make a wreath; the ribbon should be extra wide, with the inscription "Rest in Peace" on both sides, and, if there is room, "We shall meet in Heaven."

The florist was away, and his new assistant handled the job. It was a startling floral piece which turned up at the funeral. The ribbon was extra wide and bore this inscription:

"Rest in Peace on Both Sides, and If There Is Room We Shall Meet in Heaven."

PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENTS.

Piedmont, ... February 6 to 8.
Yadkin College .....February 14-16.
Davidson Ct. .....Feb. 21-23.
Denton ..... Feb. 22 at night.
Uwharrie Ct. .....Feb. 24-26.
Randolph Ct., ...Feb. 26, 27.
Mt. Pleasant Ct., ...March 1.
Liberty church, ...March 1, at night.
Liberty Grove, ...March 2, 11 a. m.
Siler City Ct., ...March 2-4.
Alamance Ct., ...March 5-6.
Mt. Hermon Ct., ...March 7-8.
Winston Sta., ...March 15, 11 a. m.
Maple Springs, Forsyth Ct., Mar. 15, 3pm.
East Winston, ...March 15, at night.
Pinnacle & Mt. Zion, ...March 24-25.

Brethren, blend some of your appointments, if possible. Publish my plan for your field in the Herald. State where I am to be met to enter your field. Let me wind up nearest the next field to be visited. These requests are reasonable and compliance with them will be a great help to me. Please grant them. C. A. Cecil.

Please note the above request.

I have tried to give the Sundays to those who had the week day appointments last year as far as I could.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

OAK RIDGE CT.

Bro. L. W. Gerringer met me at Flat Rock and we drove to Bro. J. F. Linville's and spent the night.

Sunday at 11 o'clock I preached in the M. E. Church and there was a large congregation and the service was good. Our church will be rebuilt at this place. We stopped to see Prof. M. H. Holt who was confined to his room on account of grippe; he was improving, and we hope he will soon be out again.

The pastor and I took dinner with Bro. Mooney as we were on our way to Piney Grove, our next appointment at 3 o'clock. Here we met a splendid congregation; the larger part of them were comparatively young people, and it appeared to the writer there was a splendid opportunity to build up a large membership. Bro. W. R. Lowdermilk and family attended services at P. G. We drove to Kernersville and I took supper with an old acquaintance of mine, Mr. D. H. Bodenhammer. At 7:30 we met for service in our church in Kernersville and had a full house, and good attention was given to the message, if the preacher was somewhat worn and tired from having preached three times on that day. I spent the night with Bro. J. M. Guyer where I always enjoy my stay so much.

Was pleased to have Bros. Lowdermilk and Porter in our services at Kernersville. Our next appointment on Monday at 11 a. m., was at Ai, where we met a small attendance. I suppose three reasons could be given as follows: a small memebrship, it was Monday, and lack of interest. I believe the last is the prevailing reason in all communities. We took dinner with Bro. W. S. Beason, then we drove to Bro. M. H. Pegg's for supper. At 7:30 we met our last appointment on the charge at Sandy Ridge. Attendance good and an interesting service. Spent the night with J. R. Teague. My trip to Flat Rock and OakRidge was very pleasant. Bro. Gerringer brought me to High Point. Both pastors and people seem pleased with their relations and I trust a good year will follow. Claim overpaid.

LEBANON CT.

I spent Feb. 1st on this field preaching at 11 a. m. to the Lebanon people. Owing to various kinds of sickness there was not a full house. Those present seemed to enjoy the service. This church is moving along nicely; since I made my visit last year they have completed the church nicely and have a nice place for worship. There is some indebtedness on this church, but the membership is planning and working to reduce the debt from year to year and it will not be long until the debt is paid in full. The membership and the former pastor deserve credit for the noble work done for the last few years.

We took dinner with Uncle Wesley Hedgcock and found Granny H. much better than she has been for some time. She is a mother to all our preachers, and friendly to everybody. Bro. Edward Montgomery drove me to Pleasant Grove for the 3 o'clock service. Bro. Loy drove his pony which had been sick for a few days, and he was merciful and regarded his beast, and only took himself. There was a good attendance and a very helpful service apparently to all. Here we have a new church and several good substantial members who go to their church when able whether they like the man that's going to preach or not, and this is as it should be. Love the church so well that we will not permit the enemy to turn us aside on the account of some little misunderstanding, or because we do not see things alike. The membership here are well able to pay off their indebtedness and the sooner it's done the more prosperous and helpful the church will be to the community and the church at home and abroad; this is true not only on this field but throughout the district. This is an ideal field as to church buildings and people to preach to and territory; churches only five miles apart and thousands of people in the bounds of these two churches, it gives the pastor large opportunities for usefuness. Bro. Loy is well received; but, as every other pastor, he has work before him. Let us go and do it.

This field eleven years ago adopted the budget plan and have used it since that time; and all these years the entire amount has been paid except at one church; for some reason they failed to pay quite out one time.

I hope at no distant day to see this plan prevail in our Conference. My claim paid.

I am pleased to see so many splendid reports from the various fields both from the reporters and pastors as to the good things that are being done. Let other pastors and reporters send in some reports from the fields that have not been in the habit of reporting. Bro. Pastor, you are due this to your people and to yourself and to the paper of our Conference.

Did you see what Bro. Waldrop and his people have done? All the general interests collected and ready to send in before January is gone.

Do not forget the 4 per cent. for Superannuates on Pastor's Salary for 1914.

Truly, C. A. Cecil.

AS TO CONFERENCE JOURNALS.

In my former notice I overlooked the fact that the Conference had directed that proceeds of sales should be sent to the publisher, Rev. Geo. L. Curry, Burlington, N. C. Let that be done. But the main point was that the Journals should be sold and not given away. The object of taking the collections for the Journal Fund has been to accumulate a fund great enough to pay for a year's issue, which fund is to be kept up by selling the Journals. If we give them away, we will be back where we were—without any fund. C. A. Cecil.

—The N. C. Club at Westminster held its regular meeting on Jan. 21st.

—To our correspondents: Please do not sew or pin your sheets together. Just number your pages, and we'll put them in the right order.

—Wilmington, N. C., has undertaken to conduct the canvass (for missions) in March, and the churches of the city have united for this purpose. It is hoped that this will prove to be a demonstration of what can be accomplished by united and simultaneous effort.—Men and Missions.

—Moriah people (near Greensboro) are going ahead with their church building and will soon be ready to have a corner-stone-laying ceremony.

FROM OUR PASTORS

Oak Ridge Ct.

President Cecil was with us Sunday and Monday, Jan. 25-26. He preached at all of the churches on Oak Ridge Circuit. Personally I was very glad to have Bro. Cecil with us; and I am sure all the churches were helped by his visit. Judging from the expression from various church members I am sure Bro. Cecil's sermons were enjoyed and appreciated. I hope that along with the sermons we may remember and put into action some of his suggestions as to our church work.

I am glad to see indications of increased interest in our work here. All five of the churches have decided to continue the S. S.'s thru the winter. It will be a good day for our churches as well as for our S. S.'s when we learn that there is no such thing as "winter quarters" for a Sunday school.

Last Wednesday night a week ago we started our midweek meeting again at the Kernersville church. Since Bro. Lowdermilk has been unable to look after this meeting it was discontinued. We are glad to have this meeting again. I fear we underestimate the value of a prayer meeting during the week. The first Wednesday night we had—must I tell it?—eight present. Last night there were about twenty-five present. The Sunday school also is improving. Bro. Lowdermilk has a class of men. We are hoping and expecting good things from this class as well as from the whole school.

All who read the papers have heard of our misfortune at Oak Ridge. We are hoping to rebuild as soon as possible. And if the sympathy of any friend should happen to take the form of money, please send it right on to the pastor and he will see that it reaches the proper hands. Until we can rebuild our preaching services will be held in the M. E. church. The pastor of the M. E. church and some of the members kindly invited us to worship in their house until we can rebuild. We thank them sincerely for this. The S. S. will be continued. This will be held in the Graded School Building.

All pastors who read this will please begin to think about and plan to attend the Summer Conference. Yours in service,

Linley W. Gerringer.

Kernersville, Jan. 29.

Thomasville.

Rev. A. D. Shelton and Miss Maud Nance were happily married Jan. 31st at Thomasville M. P. Parsonage by the writer. We wish for them a long and prosperous life. T. A. Williams.

Albemarle

We moved from La Grange sometime since and are now living in the parsonage in Creswell. I have preached at four of the churches; namely, Creswell, Woodley's Chapel, Mt. Elma, and Mt. Hermon, and will go to Rehoboth and Edenton soon.

When we moved into the parsonage one day, that night a number of men, women and children of our church and some from the Episcopal and Baptist churches came over and brought a fine pounding of many useful articles.

On the past Saturday our first quarterly conference met at Woodley's Chapel. It was an unfavorable day, so the attendance was small, but we had a pleasant and profitable conference. The regular business was attended to, and plans arranged for the work. The debt for painting the parsonage or a part of it inside was divided between the churches. There is some more inside painting to be done later.

There is a debt of $200 on the parsonage for building material etc. It was decided to try to pay this debt this year. Conference asked the pastor to collect this and Mr. William Wiley started the list with $35. If any one would like to help they may send to me; but don't do so unless you want to, we are not begging you, but if any want to help pay the debt it would be appreciated.

The Ladies' Aid Society in Creswell will be re-organized this week. Last week our young people here organized a missionary society. The work on this charge is going on nicely.

J. H. Abernethy.

Yadkin College Ct.

Our president, Rev. C. A. Cecil, will be on this charge Feb. 14-16. He will preach at the churches as follows:

Friendship, Sat., 14, 2:30 p. m.
Yadkin College, Sat. night, at 7 o'clock.
Shiloh, Sunday, 11 a. m.
W. Lexington, at night, 7 o'clock.
Bethesda, Monday, 11 a. m.

President will reach Lexington on No. 11, Saturday a. m., at 8:32. Pastor will meet you and we will start from here. If you expect mail, have it directed in care of pastor. Mail comes to our door twice a day. H. L. Powell.

Our first quarterly conference was held at Shiloh Jan. 17th. A fine turnout of official members. Some new steps and financial plans. Friendship has reported about one-third of pastor's salary to date and other churches are doing finely. There seems to be more than usual interest. We are now planning our revival work. With the continued cooperation of this good people we may expect God to do great things for us. In the Master's service,

H. L. Powell.

Henderson.

Yesterday was a good day with our church in Henderson. We observed "Go to Church Sunday" and the services were well attended by the members and visitors. After the celebration of the Lord's Supper the doors of the church were opened and sixteen members were received into the church—fifteen by certificate and one on profession of faith. These are all good people and will, no doubt, prove a very great blessing to our church here. Our next effort is to get one or more of our church papers into every Methodist Protestant home in Henderson before the first of March. I am happy in my work and the prospect is bright for a successful year in the Lord's work. Our Spring Valley church is thoroughly alive and doing good work for the Master. Brother L. M. Harris, the faithful and efficient superintendent, informs me that the school was never so good as at present. J. D. Williams.

Asheville.

A small army of men are at work on the church now—masons, plumbers, carpenters, tinners and electricians. All the work that is being done seems to be of the highest character, and the materials used are of the best. The contractors seeme to be taking peculiar pride in doing a good job. Just as soon as the brick veneer work is advanced far enough to get an idea of its character, we expect to have a half-tone plate made of the building, and have it published in the Herald.. So you may be on the lookout for it. I think you will be delighted with the appearance of the building.

We had a good day yesterday. Three additions to the Sunday school enrollment. The offering of the Sunday school, amounting to $2.75, has been sent to the Children's Home. Three new members were received into the church. We are expecting several more to unite with us shortly.

We desire to acknowledge with thanks a check for $5.00 received from Col. S. V. Pickens for the Andrew Pickens memorial window that we propose putting into the church auditorium. We are expecting that a number of the windows will be taken as memorials to various individuals. An endless chain of letters for the purpose of helping us seat the church has been started. It is expected that each person receiving a letter will write five more letters, and also send five cents or more to the endless chain treasurer. If you want

Continued on page 12.

REV. W. D. FOGLEMAN'S BOOKS

Now Offered for Sale at Bargain Prices.

(These prices, being very low, do not include transportation charges. Sets of books would perhaps be transported most cheaply by freight, if heavy. If ordered by mail, estimate the postage and add to the price here named. Send all orders to Mrs. W. D. Fogleman, Mebane, N. C. We have seen many of these books and noted that they were remarkably well cared for, many of them being scarcely distinguishable from new books in a bookstore. In the case of old, worn books of which there are very few, the price is marked very low.—The Editor.)

The first column of prices are the prices of the books bought new so far as we could ascertain; the second column, the prices at which the books are now offered.

If you do not need any of these books now, keep the list in view of your future needs, as all may not be sold at once.

Pulpit Commentary, 52 vols. $	———	$40.00
Theological Institutes, Watson's,	——	2.50
Expositors' Bible, 25 vols. ..	——	12.50
Biblical Museum, 8 vols.	——	4.00
Clarke' Commentary 6 vols ..	——	5.00
Sermon Bible, 12 vols. (paper)	——	3.00
Winston's Encyclopedia, 8vols.	48.00	24.00
Biog. Sketches Pioneers of Methodism, by Summers	——	1.00
Wit and Humor of the Parson, by Rev. F. J. Mallett, ...	1.00	.60
Divine Credentials of the Bible, by T. H. Lewis, D. D., ...	1.25	.75
Curiosities of the Bible, by Rev. J. H. Vincent	2.00	1.00
Natural Law in the Spiritual World, by Drummond, ...	.75	.50
Life Work and Sermons of Moody, ...	1.50	.75
Cyclopedia of Illustrations for Public Speakers, by Robert Scott and Wm. Stiles, ...	5.00	3.00
Hist. of Meth. Ref., Drinkhouse, 2 vols.,.....		2.00
Hart's Com. & Rhet.		.50
Abbott's Hist. Christianity		.50
Ralston's Els. Divinity	1.75	1.25
Hitchcock's Anal. of Bible		3.00
History of the Devil, De Foe (old)		1.00
Broadus on Prep. & Deliv. Sermons..		1.25
Hopkins Law of Love	1.75	1.25
Baptism with the Holy Spirit, by Torrey, ...	.50	.25
Bible Dictionary, Smith and Peloubet		1.00
Comstock's Philosophy, ...		.25
Cause and Cure of Infidelity, by David Nelson	.60	.40
Talks on the King's Children, by Sylvanus Stall, ...	1.00.	.50
Perren's Outlines of Sermons	1.50	.75
How to Preach with Power, by Young, ...	1.00	.50
Revival Kindlings, Knapp, ..	1.00	.50
Critical and Explanatory Commentary Scranton, 2 vols., ...		2.00
Cyc. of Religious Knowledge, by Sanford, ...		1.00
Blackburn's Hist. of Chr. Ch.		1.00
Buck's Theol. Dict.	1.50	1.00
Binney's Theol. Compend, ..	.60	.50
Seed basket for Ministers, S. S. Teachers, and C. E.'s		.25

Any of the following by Banks at 50 c. each:

On the Trail of Moses.
David and His Friends.
Christ and His Friends. ,
John and His Friends.
The Sinner and His Friends.
The Fisherman and His Friends.
Sermon Stories for Boys and Girls.
Hero Tales from Sacred Story.
Poetry and Morals.
Paul and His Friends.
Windows of Sermons.
The Saloon Keeper's Ledger.
A Year's Prayer Meeting Talks.

BOOKS WANTED.

I want to buy the first year's Conference Course. Anybody having the books for sale write me at Easley, S. C.

W. A. Lamar.

SIAMESE BOYS AND GIRLS

A Siamese boy learns to walk and to smoke cigarettes at the age of two years. Soon afterwards he learns to swim, and at the age of seven or eight he can paddle a small boat, and is able to take care of himself out on the river. At first I used to feel alarmed at seeing five or six children in a little boat, loaded down to the water's edge, all laughing and shouting in high glee, for I was afraid they would upset and be drowned, but I soon learned that they thought there was no better fun than to tip the boat over and send all who were in it headforemost into the water. As for being drowned, there was no more danger of that than if they had been so many ducks.

When a Siamese boy is eighteen years old he usually becomes a priest, or rather a "nain," as the young priests are called who are old enough to take full orders. Sometimes they enter the priesthood earlier than this, sometimes later; but every boy who has any ambition to rise above the lowest rank must remain at least a short time in one of the temples. When he enters the priesthood his head is shaved and he wears a yellow robe, and every morning goes about the city begging rice for himself and the older priests. He is taught to read and write, and to repeat the long prayers, of which he does not understand a word; but his friends think it is a high honor to be a priest, and when his father and mother happen to meet him they worship as they do their idol. Usually he does not remain in the temple more than three months, and after that time has expired he helps his parents or goes to work in some way to make his living.

With the girls it is different. If a man has three children, two of whom are boys, and you should ask him about his family, he would say he had two children and a girl. From this you will understand that they don't think much of the girls in this country.

During the first eight or ten years of her life a Siamese girl grows up with her brother, and lives very much as boys do. Afterwards she has usually a hard life. If she is bright and graceful, and her parents are poor, they will probably sell her to the owner of a theatre, to be trained as an actress; or if they are people of higher rank they will present her to the king, and she will be confined in the palace among the king's wives until she is grown up. Here she will be as safe as anywhere else, but she must be the servant of the women of the harem, and her life is far from happy. It is impossible to explain to the Siamese children what we mean by the words "home" and "family." They have no word in their language to express either idea.

I know a young prince who was asked by an American lady how many brothers and sisters he had, and he said he did not know. She inquired if he had fifty, and he replied that he supposed so, but really could not tell. The late king had nearly ninety sons and daughters, and many of the nobles have families almost as large. Often the wives live in different places, in order to keep peace with the family, and the children grow up as strangers to one another. Thus, you see, many of the blessings which are so familiar to boys and girls at home that they forget to be thankful for them, are altogether unknown to the children of Siam.—The Missionary Messenger.

—Miss Clyde Sullivan, of Georgia, grew 5,354 pounds of tomatoes on a tenth of an acre, surpassing by 1,374 pounds the highest record made by any girl in the North or West. Other Southeastern girls did remarkably well, notably Miss Lizzie Kelley, of South Carolina, with a record of 4,375 pounds on a tenth of an acre.—President Harrison of S. Ry.

—The northernmost national forest in the Chugach in Alaska; the southernmost is the Luquillo in Porto Rico.

WEST DORMITORY
ADMINISTRATION BUILDING
Elon College Campus View, Looking North-East From the Depot.
EAST DORMITORY
The Administration Building, Looking North West, Showing the West Dormitory in the Distance.

Elon College

For Both Men and Women

Elon College, North Carolina

For a quarter century Elon College has rendered the best families of the South a paragon service in providing young men and young women with the best mental, moral and physical training under positive Christian influences, tho entirely free from sectarianism.

Karl Lehman, of Boston, testifies that "of all the Colleges I have visited as International Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor during six years, the spirit of Elon College appeals to me as most genuinelu Christian." Elon College is situated in the delightful hill country, a section unsurpassed for beauty, with a climate far-famed for its healthfulness. There is no medical fee, for there is no necessity for it. Its campus, comprising twenty-five acres of native oak and hickory, shrubbery, winding walks and driveways, is one of the most beautiful in the South and, with its two unsurpassed gymnasia, provides abundant opportunity for recreation and relaxation.

The splendid equipment of Elon College was only made possible through liberal endowment. It maintains seven elegant new buildings, especially designed and appointed for college work. These are furnished with every known convenience; steam heat, electric lights, running water, baths and sewerage. The College plant is conservatively valued at $300,000.00.

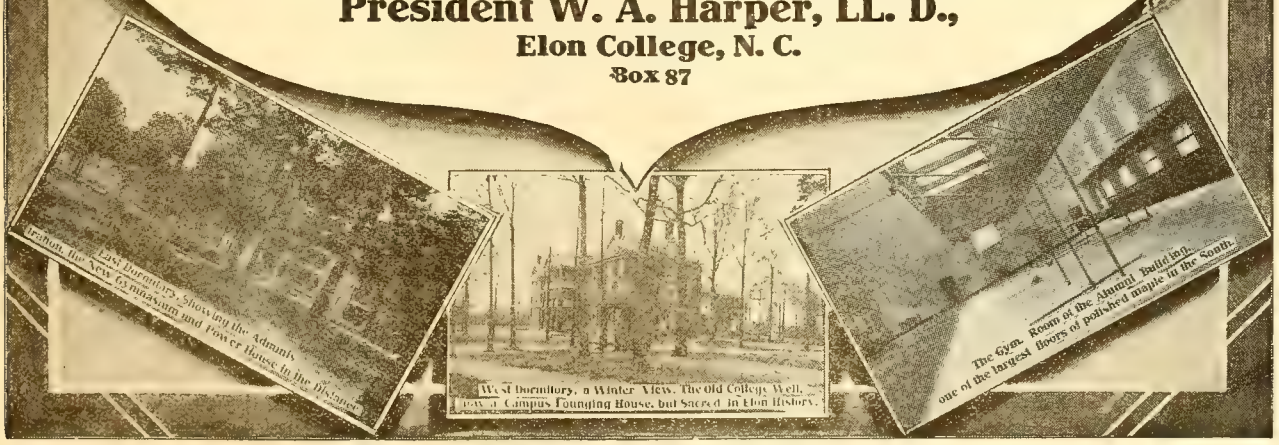
Elon College is distinctly a high-grade institution, though its charges are moderate. Its graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of all the great universities without examination. Its literary and scientific courses are arranged in various departments which lead to the degrees of Master of Arts, Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Philosophy, Bachelor of Pedagogy, and a three-years' course leading to the degree of Licentiate of Instruction, designed especially for teachers. This institution affords special opportunities for training in Piano, Voice, Expression, Fine Arts, Normal Training, Physical Culture and Commercial Practice.

The Faculty consists of twenty-one specialists; men and women selected not only for their superior teaching ability, but also for their exemplary character and manners.

The student body numbers nearly four hundred and comes from thirteen states.

The lowest Rates in the South, only $131 to $191 per College session of ten months. Fall Term always opens the first Wednesday in September. For full descriptive catalogue and view-book, address

President W. A. Harper, LL. D.,
Elon College, N. C.
Box 87



West Dormitory, a Winter View. The Old College Well.
The Gym. Room in the Alumni Building, one of the largest floors of polished maple in the South.

Begun on page nine.

to help, send your name and five cents or more to Mrs. Pearl Havner, 44 Hillside St., Asheville, N. C., and she will tell you what else to do.

The preacher's chicken story seems to have struck a responsive chord in the laity. As a result of it, he had a letter last week from a lady in Kansas City, which put him in touch with a young man in one of the Sanitariums here. He had been here a month without my knowing it. I am sure there are many more members of our denomination here who might be helped if the ministers and laymen of their conferences were sufficiently interested to write to the pastor of this church. Won't you do it? C. W. B.

ASHEVILLE CHURCH BUILDING FUND

Mr. T. A. Hunter	$25.00
Mr. J. R. Hardin	7.50
Mrs. C. L. Whitaker	5.00
Rev. C. A. Cecil	5.00
Dr. J. A. Sinclair	5.00
Dr. F. L. Hunt	5.00
Mr. J. H. Cathey	2.50
Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Garrett	2.00
Mr. J. M. Whittemore	1.00
Weaverville M. P. Church	1.00
Mr. C. C. Renfre	.50
Mr. Claude Robinson	.50

This looks better, but I still miss your name. Won't you send in your offering so I can put your name in the list? It won't be complete until you do.

C. W. Bates, Pastor.

BURLINGTON TIDINGS.

We were delighted to have President Cecil with us on the night of Jan. 11. As usual, his visit was very pleasant and very beneficial. He preached an excellent sermon to a large and attentive congregation after which he gave some timely advice. Thank you, Bro. Cecil, and come again. One feature of our Sunday school work worthy of note is that our Superintendent is appointing some member of the school for each Sunday to conduct the opening service. This brings a very healthful variety into the school and makes the work more attractive. Miss Ila Stafford conducted the school on last Sunday. Both the Foreign Missionary Society and the Ladies' Aid Society at their respective meetings planned for some special work. I t is believed more will be heard of them in the near future. On last Sunday the regular monthly communion service was observed. It was indeed pleasant for us to gather around the Lord's Table in sweet communion. To say the least it was a sweet service. After the communion service as is our usual custom the doors of the church were opened and seven candidates were received into full membership. It is hoped that others will be received on next first Sunday.

Our correspondent, Bro. C. B. Way, who is now in Greensboro, is very much missed. He was not only faithful as a correspondent, but Charlie worked anywhere.

Geo. L. Curry.

P. S.—I want to say amen to what Bro. T. T. H. said in last week's Herald about the deformed nom de plume. I may myself some day write over such a crippled nom de plume, but—well, to say the least, if a writer has a good thing to say I think it is neither immodest nor a sin for him to let the world know what good person said it.

G. L. C.

FROM OUR REPORTERS.

CANAAN, UWHARRIE CT.

On Jan. 2, death visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Ward and took their youngest child, aged 17 months and 6 days. Little Fred was a bright, lovely child and will be so greatly missed in the home. But do not weep, dear parents, the dear one is safe in the arms of Jesus. No tears are shed up there.

On Jan. 16, Mrs. Margaret Cody, a highly respected lady of near Cid, passed away in her 88th year. She was a good woman. She told her friends and children that she was ready and willing to go. She leaves several children and grandchildren and great-grandchildren and a large circle of friends, but we will not mourn as those who have no hope.

We were all very glad to have Bro. Trogdon returned to us. The three years he has been with us he has endeared himself to all. Hope all of the Herald readers will pray for us of Canaan that we may have a closer walk with God, do more for His cause and have a more prosperous year than we have had in the past. Also pray that our pastor may have his health restored and he may live long to labor in the Vineyard of the Lord. Wishing all the readers a prosperous and happy year, I remain sincerely, M. J. Ward.

FAIRVIEW, ANDERSON CT.

We are glad to have W. A. Lamar and family live in our community this year. We have been deprived of the social meetings of our pastor's family for the last four years, for they have lived 45 miles from this work. We cannot express our appreciation in words in getting W. A. Lamar for another year. We are glad Mrs. Lamar can be with us in the Ladies' Aid Society.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely. We feel encouraged with the attendance of last Sunday.

The health of the community is not very good at this writing.

Mrs. Augusta Ellison is very ill at present. One of the oldest members of our church, Mrs. Elizabeth Smith, fell and broke her arm the 23d of Jan.

Ethel F.

Easley, S. C., Jan. 27.

FAIRMOUNT, RICHLAND CT.

We had a fine day Sunday. There were 50 present and 27 absent. Collection, $1.01. Our Sunday school is progressing nicely. Our new pastor, Rev. J. H. Bowman, was with us the fourth Sunday at 11 a. m. and preached a splendid sermon. We are all glad to have him with us. He is liked by every one. Our work here is still going forward. We are indeed proud of our little secretary, Mr. Elmer Slack. I think he is doing just fine. I am glad to say that we can have Bro. Bowman with us twice a month instead of once a month. We ask all you Herald readers to pray for us that we may do a good year's work this year.

Josie Jones, Reporter.

Feb. 3.

PINEY GROVE, SILER CITY CT.

Last Sunday was our regular preaching day, but our pastor was absent, visiting relatives in the western part of the state. The pulpit was filled by Rev. W. C. Kennett, a former pastor. He used for his subject "Riches," and although he is almost 79 years old he preached a most forceful sermon. Some of the old members said it was the best sermon they ever heard him preach.

We took up a collection last Sunday for the orphans at High Point, which amounted to $1.15 or more.

Our S. S. is progressing nicely. Present last Sabbath, 49. We hope it will increase as spring opens up.

We are expecting to have an Easter-service. Fleta Kivett, Reporter.

MT. PLEASANT, PIEDMONT CT.

The Lord dealt very kindly with us in sending Rev. A. D. Shelton to this work. The harvest is great and the laborers are few. On the 4th Sunday his subject was Loss of Opportunity. He made us feel that we art not living up to our privileges and opportunities.

The Sunday school work on a part of the charge has gone into winter quarters, but, like the groundhog, I suppose when the warm days of spring come they will start up again.

I must not forget to tell you that our pastor, Bro. Shelton, strayed off to Thomasville last Saturday morning, without our knowledge or consent, and had Bro. Williams marry him. There seems to be a little romance in the affair. It seems that he had been paying his respects to Miss Maud Nance of near Denton who is teaching in the bounds of his work; so last Saturday a. m. they boarded an automobile, went to Thomasville and were made one. Miss Nance is an accomplished teacher and a young lady of high Christian character, and possessed of all the attainments that will aid him through his ministerial career. We wish them a smooth journey over the sea of life.

Bro. J. E. Frazier, one of the pioneer members of Spring Hill church, died Jan. 24th and was buried at Spring Hill on the 25th. He was a good man, class leader of his church for a number of years.

Mr. C. W. Sowers and Miss Janie Beck were married by J. R. Stone, Esq., on Feb. 1st at his office.

Miss Sallie Sharp, of Mt. Pleasant, spent Saturday night and Sunday with Miss Girthy Stone.

Rev. A. D. Shelton made a pastoral call on J. R. Stone and family last Monday and Tuesday. Trusting that this will be the best year in the history of the M. P. Church for the garnering of many precious souls and upbuilding of His Kingdom,

Yours in Christ, J. R. Stone.

P. S.—Bro. Cecil, our beloved president, will be on the Piedmont charge from the 8th to the 10th; will preach at Mt. Pleasant 2d Sunday at 11 a. m. and at Canaan in the afternoon. J. R. S.

Mt. Pleasant, Uwharrie Ct.

Our S. S. attendance for the winter months has been about 35. Bro. Lee A. Briles is Supt. Bro. Trogdon preached a good sermon yesterday. I am glad to know that Bro. Trogdon's health has improved.

We do not know what 1914 will bring to us. It behoves us to be ready for the summons to go hence.

Bro. Wm. Thayer was taken from us not long ago and is much missed. He was a good neighbor and a friend to the poor. G. F. Cashatt.

Union Chapel, Mocksville Ct.

Our pastor, J. W. Self, was sent to us for another year and has preached the 2d time since Conference. His first sermon was on Union and was extra good. I heard the expression made that he shot one of his big guns. His second was on Christ, the True Friend, and was also good.

I am sorry to state that our S. S. has gone into winter quarters. I hope it will soon open up again. It seems so bad not to have Sunday school. There is prayer meeting nearly every Sunday evening. As there is no Sunday school Bro. Self took a collection at his last service for the Orphans' Home. We have a Christian Endeavor Society. It too is about to go into winter quarters. The president has missed two meetings. I hope she will do better next time. One of our girls, Miss Hattie Gaither, was married to Mr. Walter Rickard Dec. 27. Rev. Mr. Shore officiated. Bro. Self missed the job by not being at home. And another one of our girls and one of our boys, Miss Annie Holton to Mr. Ernest Frost. These were married in Nov.

We had a little corn club among the children. Eight of the boys and girls took 100 grains of corn each and made $2.36 for the Orphans' Home. It was sent to Mrs. Dixon on the Sunday School Hack. I think this a good plan to get up money. Some of these children were very small and didn't make very much. If more of the boys and girls would try this plan it would help so much.

Two of our members have died since there has been any report from here: Mr. Thos. Boger and Mrs. Sallie Hunter. Bro. Self conducted the funerals, assisted by Bro. Willie Walker, of the M. E. Church.

S. I. G., Reporter.

Pleasant Grove Items.

Sunday school met at 2 p. m. Feb. 1st with Supt., W. S. Cecil, all teachers and 74 scholars present.

Children's Home collection taken; amt., $1.23. School closed for preaching and our beloved president, Rev. C. A. Cecil, being with Bro. Loy on his annual visit, preached an able sermon on the layman's duties to the church. Would to God that all church members could have heard it, for they would have been better Christians and better church members.

Walter Burton.

—Dr. J. R. Gordon, of Guilford, has arranged to help the State Board of Health secure full registration of all births and deaths in the State. His work will be largely educative. He will meet with the doctors, undertakers, local registrars, midwives and others concerned with the new law and explain to them not only the working of the law, but the tremendous possibilities for good that will follow its thorough enforcement, in order that they may carry the same information among their patients and others.

—A Jewish synagogue is proposed for Hebrews living in High Point.

—The Baraca Class of Grace church has a class photograph taken with the members standing in front of the church.

—Mr. Floyd Coble has prepared a remedy for croup and pneumonia which he thinks possesses unusual merit. It is in the form of a liquid and strikes in more readily than some other remedies.

—A new house with four lightning rods between Greensboro and McLeansville suggests the thought that the owner has probably been victimized by a lightning rod agent and been made to pay for more than thought he was bargaining for.

VANCE'S THANKSGIVING OFFERING FOR CHILDREN'S HOME

Mr. J. M. Millikan, Dear Brother:

Enclosed you will find checks to the amount of $46.54, which amount is to be placed on the list of last year's Thanksgiving Offerings for the Orphanage. I was not at home during Thanksgiving and so could not hold the service which you requested, but since getting back to my field we have taken a collection at each church to take the place of this service. Following is the list from Vance Circuit: Harris Chapel, $6.40; Flat Rock, $6.36; Gillburg, $8.53; New Hope, $25.25. Total for the field, $46.54. Fraternally, J. A. Burgess.

I wish to call the above letter to the attention of other pastors who failed to take a Thanksgiving offering last year and request that they do so now.

Sincerely, J. M. Millikan,
Chairman Board of Trustees.

Dr. J. E. Wyche.
DENTIST.
Office in Fisher Building, North Elm St,
Rooms 211-213,
Greensboro, N. C.

Dr. C. W. Banner.
W. Market St., Opposite Court House,
Second Floor.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.
Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.
206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

Chas. W. Moseley. M. D.
PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF
STOMACH AND INTESTINES.
121 South Elm St.,
Greensboro, N. C.
Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

MINISTERIAL EDUCATION.

How to Obtain Aid.

"What steps are necessary to be taken in order to receive aid from the Board of Ministerial Education?" is asked so often that we feel justified in answering the question through our church papers.

1. The person seeking aid must be recommended by his quarterly conference to the annual conference on blanks furnished by the Board. This is the initial step and must not be overlooked.

2. Armed with an application properly filled out and endorsed, the applicant presents himself for matriculation at one of our denominational schools. At the time of his matriculation he hands his application for aid to the President of the College or Seminary. If he pass the examination that will be given him at a subsequent time, his application will be filed with the Secretary and Treasurer of the Board, who submits it to the Board for final action.

3. All money for beneficiaries is paid through the officers of the schools. At the time the money is paid the beneficiary signs a note obligating himself to pay ten per cent of whatever salary he may receive each year after he enters upon the active work of the ministry, until the amount borrowed shall have been repaid. No interest is charged on these amounts, except in cases where beneficiaries leave the denomination, or fail to enter upon the work of the gospel ministry.

Why Aid in the Work?

No department of our general church work ought to appeal so strongly to our people as this of Ministerial Education, for the very success and perpetuity of the church depend upon our educated, Spirit-filled ministry. Every other department of church activity—Foreign Missions, Home Missions, Colleges, Seminary, all depend upon the Board of Ministerial Education to a greater or less degree to furnish men with which to carry on their operations. The best men we have in the work to-day, and this is not said to the disparagement of any man who did not have the opportunity f acquiring an education, were educated by our Board. We have given between four and five hundred well equipped men to the work of the ministry in the Methodist Protestant Church. Such a work ought not to be embarrassed for a lack of funds. It is so worthy that men ought to clamor for an opportunity to contribute to it.

A Simple Request.

So far as we know, except in rare instances, the church has never had a chance to make one contribution to our cause aside from every other interest, and we feel that the time has come when it ought to be given that opportunity. So the Board asks that each pastor in the denomination place this matter before his people in the next few weeks, and give them an opportunity to make a contribution worthy of the cause. And when you do this, brother pastor, please do not hold the money until your annual conference meets, but send it immediately to the Secretary and Treasurer at the address given below. No investment promises such great returns to the church. With the money contributed men are educated and trained to do church work and sent out in every direction to bless mankind. Could there be any better work than this? We think not.

George R. Brown, Secy. & Treas.
Westminster, Md.

DIED.

Dora Briggs Powell.

Dora Briggs Powell departed this life Jan. 9, 1914, aged 37 years, 5 months, and 28 days. Husband, eight children, parents, five sisters, and two brothers are left to mourn their loss. She was married to Willie Andrew Powell December 26, 1894, and they lived happily together till she was called to her heavenly home.

She gave her life to Christ and the church at the age of 16 and united with Union Chapel Methodist Protestant church to which she remained a devoted member till the Master she served so faithfully called her to her reward.

It was the privilege of the writer to know this good woman in her home as well as at church and she was a sweet-spirited Christian; always in her place at church and faithful to her duties at home as is shown by the love that her husband and children manifest for her. She delighted to have her pastor come and read the Bible and pray with her. During her sickness of a little over six months she never complained of her lot but often gave assurance of her willingness to go when the Lord should call. She said to me one day, "I did not send for you to come to pray and sing for me because I am not right with God, but because I love to hear it and it comforts me." She expressed her regret at leaving her loved ones, especially her little ones, but she knew that God does that which is best. There never seemed to be a shadow of doubt as to the way being clear to her. What a power over the last enemy—and it all came as a result of trusting it all to Jesus when the enemy was not in sight. This devoted wife, faithful mother, loving sister, obedient daughter, kind neighbor, for there was none kinder to the sick than she, and heir of the Kingdom is gone apparently, but her influence, her life, will continue to live in greater power, for "the path of the just is as the shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

We pray that you dear ones may look forward with joy to the glad reunion over on the other shore, and that God will comfort you in this sad hour with the thought that your dear one is now where God wipes away all tears and that by being true to this same Jesus you too may be with your loved one in the sweet by and by. Her body sleeps in the cemetery at Union Chapel awaiting the glad resurrection morn.

N. G. Bethea.

Elizabeth Fentriss Coble.

Mrs. Elizabeth Fentriss Coble, the wife of P. R. Coble, was born June 23, 1839, and died January 26, 1914.

She is survived by her husband, three daughters, Mrs. J. R. Hutton, Mrs. R. C. Cox, Mrs. H. E. Knight, two sisters, Mesdames M. S. King, J. H. Coble, one brother, Dr. R. F. Fentriss, and ten grandchildren.

She was converted in early life and joined Tabernacle M. P. Church, of which she remained a member until 21 years ago when she joined Grace Church, Greensboro, of which church she remained a faithful member until death.

For more than a decade Mrs. Coble had been in poor health. Much of this time she was confined to her room. But during these long years she patiently bore her suffering and maintained a cheerfulness that was indeed beautiful. Although deprived of the privilege of attending the services of her church most of the time of her sickness she never lost interest in its welfare nor ceased to love her pastors.

Possibly but few of us who knew Mrs. Coble only during her illness are quite able to appreciate her deep consecration to the cause of her Master and her great power in prayer. I was told by a lady who had known her for more than a score of years that she always had family prayers when well enough and would lead in prayer in the community prayer services, and that she was most gifted in prayer.

Nature had fitted her to shine brightest in her home, where true worth is alone revealed. Her power to love her own seemed to be her greatest gift and she reaped the reward of this devotion in a service by her loved ones that was beautifully unselfish. She received every attention their love prompted them to give which only increased through the gathering years of her affliction. It doubtless must have cheered her last conscious moment to behold their unwearied devotion.

But her service of love may well be called state-wide. She was a benefactress in no small degree. I have been reliably informed that not less than two hundred students at the Normal College came under her influence and were helped by her life. Many of these were enabled by the assistance she gave them to attend the college, which possibly they could not have done otherwise. All who roomed in her home were treated as her own daughters, were advised, admonished and encouraged in their work as though she were their mother. And there was doubtless sorrow in many a home in our state when the news of her death was heard.

A good woman, who served God in a simple, unostentatious way, has gone to her reward. But the things which she loved have been vitalized by her life, the truths for which she stood have been made precious to those who loved her, by her deeds. She is missed in her home, but she lives in the hearts of the home folks. Death only set her hampered spirit free and loosed her faltering tongue. Not only is she at rest, but now can she serve the Savior whom she loved with an unhindered devotion.

Grace Church has lost a faithful member, the husband a faithful wife, the children a devoted mother, and the community a Christian woman.

R. M. Andrews.

CHILDREN'S HOME.

REPOTR OF SUPERITENDENT.

Rehoboth S. S., Granville Ct., ...$5.50
Woman's Home Miss. Soc., Henderson 9.15
Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Finch, Granville, 5.00
Albemarle S. S., Stanly Ct. 4.20
Burlington S. S. 3.08
Miss Anna Hunt, Granville Ct. 5.00
Rev. Joel Trogdon, Uwharrie Ct. 1.00
J. S. Kinley, Uwharrie Ct. 1.00
C. Tarkington, Albemarle Ct. 11.50
W. J. Teague, Asheboro 3.00
Brown Summit S. S. 1.20
Maple Springs S. S. Forsyth Ct. 2.34
Total $51.97

Don't think interest in the Home is waning if you don't see a report in every issue of the Herald. Since my last report the Treasurer of the Woman's Home Missionary Society, Henderson, N. C., informed me that her society had decided to support a child in the Home. A good sum of the money is already in hand. Our people at Henderson always set good examples. Who will be next to follow? There are the members of Grace Church, Greensboro, who have always been liberal in supporting the Children's Home. They saw the need of developing the musical talent, so last week they sent us an organ which made us all happy.

There is a faithful little band of Jr. C. Endeavorers in Asheville, N. C., who have the right spirit. They are building a church, yet they do not forget the Children's Home. They sent us a half dozen good towels.

Come see what we are doing and what we need.

The health is good and the future is brighter than ever for the Home.

Yours for the children, H. A. Garrett.
Feb. 2, 1914.

MY MOTHER'S BOY.

By Victor P. Hammer.

You may think human love, like sweetness of the roses,
Is borne away and lost, as nectar on the air;
But mother-love is power of heart that interposes
And binds her own and dear ones to her everywhere.

You shall no longer think your wayward boy is straying
Still farther from his home and mother's tender care;
Because tonight, as years ago, I hear you praying,
And I shall go in answer to that holy prayer.

You shall no longer hope to know your boy's condition,
Nor pass away your days and nights in dreads and fears;
For I'm aroused, awake, and feel a deep contrition
Impelling me to go and dry my mother's tears.

You shall no longer pray for God to light each mountain;
Disrobe the plains; unfold the waters of the deep;
For I'm not lost; I'm found; I now walk paths more certain,
Like mother told me when she rocked her boy to sleep.

You shall no longer say my mother's boy is sleeping
Beneath some fortress or beleaguered citadel;
Nor shall the heart of her whose love his soul is keeping
Wait long before he's back with her again to dwell.

You must, I know, be growing older, for your image
Reflects the strains of many passing years and sad;—
To you, in riper years, I turn to do you homage
For lessons taught to me when I was but a lad.

And you, whose laden years have been o'erflown with sorrow,
And troubling griefs and fears have burrowed in your brow,
Before the golden sunlight fades away tomorrow,
Shall see your boy again, for home he's coming now.

Nor will I ever pierce your heart again with sadness,
Nor waste the counsels you would have me keep and love:
I'll do your bidding, mother, like a child, in gladness,
And know that I am on the way to Home above.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 31.

We stand in awe when we view the achievements of scientists, and we marvel when we read of the power of radium. There is something thrilling in the fact that men harness the forces of the mountain stream to their wheels and grind the corn, and saw their giant trees, and turn their lathes. There is something majestic in the iron monster that speeds us across the continent, and it seems as if we are viewing something superhuman as some great ship steams into the harbor, having crossed the ocean in six or five days. We do not understand the mystery, but we can appreciate the electric current that wings our messages of greeting and brings the world to our door, and lights our city, and propels our cars. We stand gazing into the heavens, spellbound, as some man soars across the houses and rivers and forests, as if gifted with an eagle's wings. And we call these wonder-signs "power."

But greater than all is the power of God. That energetic propelling force of love, let loose on earth, harnessed to the hearts of men and women, and doing things, working miracles, changing chaos into order, planting trees of healing in the desert places of man's path, and opening springs of refreshment in the barren spots of man's existence. Doing things, accomplishing great tasks, like the hidden power of the mountain streams, like the power of steam, line the current of electricity. This wonderful power of God is a lifting power. It not alone lifts ideas and ideals and world to a higher plane of thought and conduct, but through its hundred and one agencies it lifts the stone of the field and the wood of the forest, and lo! we have a hospital for earth's ills and a house of refuge for earth's weary and schools and colleges for the dispelling of ignorance and the advancement of learning.—Sel.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

Greensboro, N. C.

N. B.—Following schedule figures published only as information and are not guaranteed.

1.00 A. M.—No. 29 daily, Birmingham Special through Pullman sleeping and observation cars New York to Birmingham and Richmond to Birmingham. Dining car service.

12.48 A. M. No. 32 daily, Southern's Limited, Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville, Augusta [illegible] to New York. Dining car service.

12.55 a. m.—No. 112 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh open at 9.15 p. m.

2.10 a. m.—No. 30 daily, Birmingham special Pullman sleeping and observation cars from Birmingham and Asheville to New York and Birmingham to Richmond. Dining car service.

2.25 a. m.—No. 31, the Southern's Southeastern Limited, Pullman sleeping cars from New York to Asheville. Day coaches. Dining car service.

3.45 a. m.—No. 45 daily local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7.10 a m.—No. 8, daily local for Richmond, connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7.20 a. m.—No. 37 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited Pullman drawing room, sleeping cars and club and observation cars New York to new Orleans. Pullman sleeping car New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman chair car Greensboro to Montgomery, solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m.—No. 108 daily local Greensboro to Goldsboro.

7.35 a. m.—No. 11, daily local through to Atlanta, sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m.—No. 154 daily except Sunday for Ramseur.

8.15 a. m.—No. 237 daily for Winston-Salem and North Wilkesboro. Pullman sleeping car Raleigh to Winston-Salem.

9.30 a. m.—No. 44 daily for Washington and points North.

9.40 a. m.—No. 144 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro; handles Atlanta Raleigh sleeping car.

12.30 p. m.—No. 21 daily for Asheville, Waynesville and local points; handles coaches and chair car through to Asheville and Waynesville.

12.50 p. m.—No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12 30 p. m.—No 21 daily for Asheville,

12.55 p. m.—No. 7 daily for Charlotte and points south.

1.40 p. m.—No. 36 daily U. S. Fast Mail for Washington, New York and points north; handles Pullman sleeping cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman sleeping car Asheville to Richmond Pullman chair car Greenville, S. C., to Washington. Day coaches. Dining car service.

2.20 p. m.—No. 207 daily for Winston-Salem, and daily execept Sunday for North Wilkesboro.

2.30 p. m.—No. 151 daily except Sunday for

3:30 p. m.—No. 230 daily except Sunday for Madison.
Ramseur.

2.30 p. m.—No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4.20 p. m.—No. 22 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles chair car to Goldsboro.

6.10 p m.—No. 35 daily U. S. Fast Mail for

4.55 p. m.—No. 131 daily for Mt. Airy.

Atlanta and points scuth Pullman sleeping cars New York to New Orleans and Birmingham and sleeping car Richmond to Asheville which car can be occupied until 7 a. m. Pullman chair car Washington to Greenville, S. C. Day coaches. Dining car service.

6.35 p. m.—No. 235 daily for Winston-salem.

7.30 p. m.—No. 43 daily for Atlanta Sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10.13 p. m.—No. 38 daily New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited Pullman sleeping cars New Orleans, Macon, Asheville and Charlotte to New York and Pullman chair car Montgomery to Greensboro. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

10.20 p. m.—No. 233 daily for Winston-Salem.

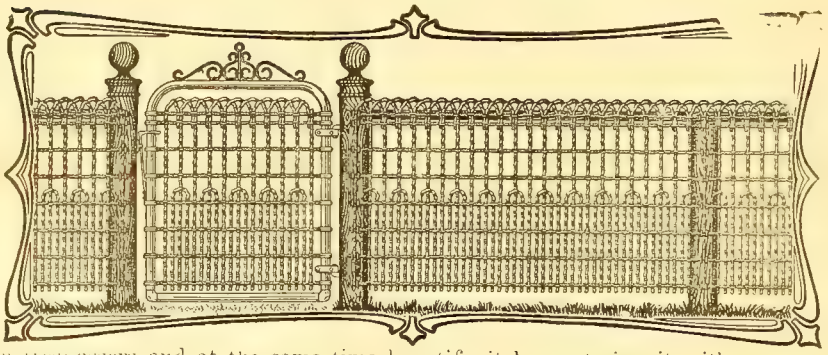
10.31 p. m.—No. 12 daily local for Richmond; handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman, Vice-President and General Manager, Washington, D. C.; S. H. Hardwick, P. T. M., Washington, D. C.; H. F. Cary, G. P. A., Washington, D. C.; R. H. DeButts, D. P. A., Charlotte, N. C.; O. F. York, P. & A., Greensboro, N. C.

—Jerry Moore, of South Carolina, grew 228.75 bushels of corn on a single acre in 1910. This directed attention to the great advantages of the Southeastern States as a corn-growing locality. Now comes Walker Lee Dunson, of Alabama, with a record of 232.7 bushels on a single acre, setting a new mark for the members of the Boys' Corn Clubs throughout the United States. The superiority of the Southeast for corn production is demonstrated not only by Walker Dunson's remarkable record but also by the fact that the yields obtained by the prize-winning boys in each of the states of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, and Tennessee exceeded the highest yield obtained by any boy in a Northern or Western state.—President Harrison of the Southern Railway Company.

"GET IT AT ODELL'S"

PROTECT YOUR BURIAL PLOT



from trespassers and at the same time beautify it by enclosing it with

CYCLONE ORNAMENTAL METAL FENCE.

ODELL HARDWARE CO., GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank. This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

MALARIA IN THE EAST.

Dr. von Ezdorf, the Government expert who has been making the rounds of some of our eastern Carolina cities, continues reporting that he finds from ten to fifteen per cent. of the people he examines infected with malaria. The facts of the case are that if the doctor finds the malarial parasite in the blood of that number of people, there are doubtless even a still greater number carrying the infection, as in many instances the parasites, although present, cannot be found.

All this malaria could be eradicated if people who have ever had malaria would take 20 grains of quinine a day for two days each week for six weeks. By so doing all malaria would be wiped out and next summer and fall the mosquitoes rould bite as much as they cared to, but they could spread no malaria.—State Board of Health.

CITY OF INCAS DISCOVERED.

The recently discovered city of Machu Picchu, the cradle of the ancient empire of the Incas on the top of the Andes in Peru, is expected to prove the most important ruin discovered in South America in four hundred years, with the possible exception of Cuzco. The discovery was made by Professor Hiram Bingham of Yale, director of an expedition into Peru, who came upon the ruins by accident. The importance of the discovery was not realized until excavations were in progress. The history of Peru has three distinct periods, the pre-Inca, reaching back to the earliest legends; that of the rule of the Incas; and that from the Spanish conquest until now. The period prior to the Incas was one of high education, of material thrift, of beautiful art, of large cities and a golden civilization. The city uncovered may have belonged to this civilization, or it may have been the beginning of that of the Incas. The founder of the empire, Manco Capac, with his wife Mama Ocello, claiming to be children of the Sun, started out to teach the simple tribes. He took with him a golden wedge and said that wherever he should throw it down and it should sink in the earth, he should lay the foundation of his capital. In the plain of Cuzco his wedge sank out of sight. Professor Bingham thinks that the city was built high in the mountains and hard to approach as a city of refuge from enemies.—Christian Herald.

this is a new name. Why is there a Charlotte Circuit in our Conference? There is a servant of God, full of the Spirit and consecrated to the work of the Master, and he heard the Macedonian call. He went forth in faith to preach the gospel wherever opportunity offered, and if there was no place prepared he made one. Who can read this report of Rev. D. A. Braswell without thanking God for giving us this man. He is the kind of which the Methodist Protestant Church was founded and built. He is the kind that does not have to leave his church to find a place to preach. He has made places even for others.

There are other builders in the Conference of whom I would love to speak. He that only serves to fill a place that has been prepared by another and does not make it larger and better has the smaller mission or fails. He should go forth into the highways and build. R. T. P.

Jesup, Ga.

INGRATITUDE.

Of all the dark spots on depraved human nature, of all the vile acts of man toward man, none throws such a freezing chill, over the whole body, and drives back the purple current on the aching heart like base and damning ingratitude. I think of the past and have lived to see much of this base and damning ingratitude. I have seen the old father and mother used for servants and I have actually known of instances when the old wornout father, with one foot in the grave and the sands of time fast crumbling beneath the other, treated worse than many slaves. I have heard children speak of their mothers in tones of meaning that they would be glad they were dead, and some have said to me, I wish I were dead, and really meant it.

I have seen this same ingratitude show and assert itself in other things.

Think of the old ministers in many instances pushed off on a pittance. Old horses traded to traveling traders.

You have the idea. Forgetting the sacrifice, toil, denial, and self-sacrifice; to bring about the present happy surroundings. Indifference continued, coldness persevered in, favors forgotten, friendships unrequited, by those who have been the willing recipients of our esteem and bounty: bring a palsying horror over the soul, that thickens the blood in the veins, making the whole head sick, and the whole heart faint.

Pour upon a man of fine feeling, a noble, generous soul, the combined diseases flesh is heir to; let death snatch his loved ones from him, strip him of all his earthly goods; let him be assailed by keen adversity and pinching want; let prison gates confine his body to the lonely cell, let the poisoned arrows of malice and revenge be hurled, and pierce him with wounds—these, all these are a panacea to his bleeding heart compared with the deadly pangs inflicted by base ingratitude.

O Lord! whence came this king of passion's fiends? It must be the offspring of him who was [illegible] the fallest angel in the high heavens, and first sowed the seeds of dark rebellion there. Yes, it was he that dared to lift his rebel arms against his benefactor, the great Jehovah; and was hurled with lightning vengeance from his lofty height to the lowest hell. He was the first that disturbed the harmony of God and angels, the Apollyon of the human race, the morning star of pandemonium. Foul blot on blackness. And why is he permitted to belch out his burning lava on frail mortals? Is it to teach man humility? Wean him from this world of sin and woe, and turn his immortal soul toward that haven of enduring peace and enrapturing happiness where the ungrateful and barely wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest?

Transporting thought! Most sovereign balm for the scorpion stings of scathing, blighting ingratitude. My God! what will be the eternal reproaches and pangs of the ungrateful if they repent not? O, may we, one and all, keep our skirts clean; if they are not, let us hasten to make restitution and amend our ways. Fraternally,

C. E. M. Raper.

CHURCH STATISTICS AND CIRCUIT CLASS BOOKS.

By Rev. Bartholomew Lightfoot.

This scribe, at last Conference, was changed from one circuit about 300 miles to another, and soon after arriving here, some of the leading brethren began to enquire of me how much salary I was going to expect. I told them as there were more than 500 members on the circuit I thought they could pay at least $500, for I thought it must be a very poor circuit that could not average at least $1 per member. My statement as to the number of members was called in question, and, to satisfy myself, just as soon as I could find the Circuit Class Book I counted the names of the living, dead, dropped and removed. I found that I lacked 83 of having as many as were reported to last Conference. And when I counted the actual living members, I lacked 145 of having as many as the pastor reported to Conference last year, and yet he reported a net increase of more than a dozen. And now what must I do? Suppose I should have no increase nor decrease during this year, yet I shall be honestly bound to report to next Conference a net decrease of 145, when such decrease did not take place under my administration at all. It makes it appear that the circuit is going down under my administration, when in fact the going down was under some other pastor preceding me, but I must bear the disgrace of it, for I intend to make as truthful report as I know how. If I could discover such discrepancies, my need of such discrepancies. I say, there is no of a pastor's duty to keep things straight, and the way to keep things straight is to revise the class books every year. I have followed some very popular pastors who had been pastor of that work for years and who aspired to the presidency of the Conference and who reported to Conference that the class books had been revised during the year, and yet the Circuit Class Book proved to the contrary and the members of the circuit said they had not been revised for years. Some of our Circuit Class Books are a disgrace to us as a church. They are a reflection on the intelligence and education of some of our pastors. These things ought not to be. Brethren, let's do better. This is all I have to say now.

JESUS RECONCILES.

Once a man went to a wicked town to preach. He was told the people would not allow it. The man went. He was not admitted to any building, but spoke from a box on the street corner. When he began to preach the people began to hiss at him and the police took him by the arm and asked him to stop. The man of God asked that he might remain a few more minutes. He was granted the request and began to sing, "O how I love Jesus, because He first loved me." The people became reconciled, the policeman let the minister go, and a great service followed. The name of Jesus has a wonderful effect.

C. B. Riddle.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE WOMAN'S FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Dear Sisters:

Our year of opportunity is fast drawing to a close and we are far from reaching our aim set at the Branch meeting. I said year of opportunity, and it has been that to each one of us. Never before has the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society faced such a promising situation as now. Upon the North Carolina Branch rests a part of the responsibility for meeting our obligation. Are you doing your part? Ask yourself the question.

Mrs. J. F.McCulloch,
President N. C. Branch.

POPULAR TALKS ON LAW.

By Walter K. Towers, A. B., J. D., of Mich.

WHEN AN ANIMAL DOES DAMAGE.

By W. K. Towers, A. B., J. D., of Mich.

In Kansas City there is a place of amusement called the "Hippodrome." A part of its attractions is a wild animal show, the cages containing lions and other animals. Some time ago Miss Cushman, by name, went to an afternoon performance as a guest of one of her friends who was one of the exhibitors and trainers of the animal show. At the instance of her friend she was admitted by the doorkeeper without purchasing a ticket. After the show had closed Miss Cushman loitered about waiting for her friend to appear. She came near the bars of the arena and a lioness, either attracted by the red hat which Miss Cushman wore, or because of its natural viciousness, reached through the bars and seized the young lady by the head. She was seriously injured before she was extricated. She brought suit against the proprietors.

The court held in the first place that though she had not purchased a ticket she was not a trespasser, but was legally and properly on the premises and so was owed the same degree of care and protection as any other visitor. It was further held that while it is not unlawful for a person to keep wild animals, though they may be such as are by nature fierce and dangerous, it is their duty to keep them in such manner as to absolutely prevent injury to others. As they had failed to do this they were responsible for the results and Miss Cushman recovered damages to the extent of $3,000.

In a similar case a small boy attended a combination moving-picture show and museum where a monkey was running at large without restraint. The boy, having seen others feed the monkey, began to give it peanuts. The monkey dropped one of the peanuts and the boy stooped to pick it up. This seemed to enrage the monkey which attacked the boy, biting him on the leg. For the injury he sued. The court held that the monkey is an animal naturally wild and vicious, and that the keeper of such an animal must prevent its injuring another at his peril. As the boy was not directly responsible for the attack he was entitled to recover damages.

These cases illustrate the general rule of law that one who keeps an animal that is wild by nature does so at his peril and for all resulting damage must be held responsible. These are the responsibilities which one assumes by keeping what is commonly known as a "wild" animal.

In the case of domestic animals the rule is somewhat different. One who keeps an animal which has been domesticated and cannot be classed as necessarily vicious by nature is not necessarily liable for all damages. One who keeps a domestic animal which is not naturally inclined to commit mischief, while he must use all reasonable means to prevent ts doing any damage, is not legally responsible should it chance to commit unforeseeable damage at a place where it had a right to be. But if it be demonstrated that the animal was in fact vicious and further that the owner knew of that fact, or should have known it, then he will be responsible for the injury. Thus in the case of domestic animals the owner's responsibility depends upon his knowledge of the animal's vicious traits.

The increasing of the liability of the owner because of his knowledge of his animal's viciousness is a rule of law that is found in the Scriptures. In Exodus 21: 28, 29, it is written: "If an ox gore a man or woman, that they die; then the ox shall surely be stoned, and the flesh shall not be eaten; but the owner of the ox shall be quit. But if the ox were wont to push with his horn in the past, and it hath been testified to his owner, and he hath not kept him in, but that he hath killed a man or a woman; the ox shall be stoned, and his owner shall also be put to death."

The reason for casting this special responsibility upon the keeper of vicious animals is stated by the courts as follows: "The reason of the rule is to enable strangers to pursue their objects with security from vicious animals. The public are entitled to act upon the presumption that all dangerous animals are properly confined and people are therefore exonerated from any special caution against such beasts, except when, without right, persons go upon the land of the owner of such animals and within the place where the latter may be lawfully kept."

This general rule applicable to domestic animals is applicable to dogs, though some courts have hesitated to classify them as strictly domestic animals. Some judges have insisted that a dog is essentially vicious by nature and so special responsibility is imposed by statute. But, generally speaking, one is only responsible for injuries committed by his dog if he knew the dog to be vicious or if he allowed the dog to be where he was not allowed by law. One who has no reason to believe that his dog or his cow or his horse is vicious and who handles it in the usual and proper manner is not responsible should some injury result from a trait of the animal that could not have been foreseen.

But if one knows that his dog or his horse or his cow is ferocious and likely to attack people an absolute responsibility is imposed upon him by law. If the animal does damage to another he may be held in damages to the injured party. Even tho' the vicious animal be kept on the owner's premises and the person injured be a trespasser, the owner may be liable if the person trespassed in the daytime, and was not warned away or otherwise protected by reasonable means.

If a person is required by the laws of his state to keep his domestic animals enclosed on his property and they break away onto the property of another, the owner is responsible for the damage they may do even though he had no knowledge of any mischievous or vicious propensities.

(Copyright, 1913, by Walter K. Towers.)

CHINESE PASTOR SERVES WITHOUT SALARY.

Pastor Gia Yu Ming, minister of Ichowfu Presbyterian church, Shantung, China, is an intensely spiritual preacher and a faithful pastor of his 450 parishioners. In 1912, finding that some of his people were threatening to refuse to pay his salary because he preached in such a way as to rouse their consciences from formalism, Pastor Gia, after much prayer threw himself and all his worldly cares on the Lord. With the consent of the Presbytery of Shankiang he was released from his pastorate, but permitted, on invitation of the session, to continue as pulpit supply of the church. He is receiving no salary, but is trusting God to give him from time to time such free-will offerings as are necessary for his support. These have come in slowly; sometimes the consecrated man has suffered privation, yet he still is faithful and cheerful, believing that the Lord will care for him. Already the results on the people are marked. With the continuance of Spirit-filled preaching the session is consecrated and wide awake, many of the church members are living a life of daily dependence on God that was before an unknown thing to them, and the Lord is adding to the church month by month.—The Continent.

—The Biltmore forest school, established in 1898 and therefore the oldest forest school in America, has been discontinued. Dr. C. A. Schenck, its director, has returned to his home in Germany.

—In trying to find uses for blight-killed chestnut it has been found that it cannot be utilized for crating stone; quarry owners say that chestnut wood leaves an indelible stain on the marble or granite.

—Railroads caused nearly half the forest fires in Colorado and Wyoming last year, and almost one-sixth were set by lightning. In California lightning started more than half, with railroads a comparatively insignificant cause.

"A BEAUTIFUL FATHER."

"Tell your mother you have been very good boys to-day," said a school-teacher to two little new scholars.

"Oh," replied Tommy, "we haven't any mother."

"Who takes care of you?" she asked.

"Father does; we've got a beautiful father, you ought to see him."

"Who takes care of you when he is at work?"

"He takes all the care before he goes off in the morning, and after he comes back at night. He's a house painter, but there isn't any work this summer, so he's doin' laborin'. He leaves us a warm breakfast when he goes off and we have bread and milk for dinner, and a good supper when he comes home. Then he tells us stories, and plays on the fife, and cuts out beautiful things for us with his jack-knife."

Before long the teacher did see the home of that father. The room was a poor one, graced with cheap pictures, autumn leaves and other little trifles that cost nothing. The father, who was at the time preparing the evening meal for his motherless boys, was at first glance only a rough, begrimed laborer; but before the stranger had been in the place ten minutes the room became a palace, and the man a magician.

His children had no idea they were so poor, nor were they so, with such a hero as this to fight their battles for them. This man, whose grateful spirit lightened up the life of his children, was preaching to all about him more effectually than was many a minister. He was a man of patience and submission to God's will, showing how to make home happy under the most unfavorable circumstances. He was rearing his boys to be high-minded citizens, to put their shoulders to the burdens rather than become burdens to society in the days that are coming. He was, as his children had said, "a beautiful father," in the highest sense of the word.—California Voice.

WHAT A HELPLESS SWEDE DID.

Several years ago I heard Mr. Nathan, at that time a missionary in Morocco, preach a sermon in St. Louis on "The Hidden Minister." In illustrating his subject he told of a young Swede who was converted in one of Mr. Moody's meetings in Chicago. After his conversion the Swede came to Mr. Moody wanting to know what he could do for Jesus. Mr. Moody looked the young man over; for he was awkward and illiterate. Finally Mr. Moody said:

"How would you like to be a sandwich?"

"Anything, anything for Jesus," said the young man, not knowing what it meant. It was arranged that he should report the next day for duty.

The young man came at the appointed hour, and they placed two boards, strapped together on his shoulders. On one board was printed John 3:16 in full; on the other was printed a notice of the meeting then being held.

"Now," said Mr. Moody, "you must walk up and down these streets for Jesus and advertise the meeting;" and the Swede went off smiling, happy that he could do something for One who saved him.

As he walked down Clark street—the boys throw stones and mud at the board—a traveling man saw him and stopped to read the sign and watch the happy Swede. The result was the traveling man attended the meeting that night and was converted.

This traveling man had a splendid voice, and after his conversion he made it a rule to sing in the missions of the cities which he visited in his travels. One night he was in the Bowery Mission in New York singing the gospel. Presently he saw a young Jew come in and take a seat in the audience. Attracted by the singing he entered the hall, not knowing the character of the meeting. When he heard them singing about Jesus, the Jew became restless, for he had been taught to hate that name. The traveling man was watching him, and when finally the Jew started toward the door he was there to meet him. He led him into an adjoining room, and spoke to him personally about Jesus as his Messiah and Saviour. The result was that the Jew ultimately accepted Christ and found salvation.

In closing, Mr. Nathan said, "The young Swede lies in an unknown grave in Chicago; the traveling man, too, has gone to his reward; but I am that Jew, and am now a missionary in Africa, winning souls for Jesus. When we all stand before Him to receive our rewards according to our service, shall I receive all the reward for the souls won in Africa? How about the travelinging man who led me to accept Christ? How about the Swede who did what he could for Jesus? Will he not receive his full reward because of his faithfulness?—Reformed Church Record.

The London Times says that a railway will soon be built in Nigeria, from a point on the west coast to the Udi coal fields, and connecting at Kaduna with the existing system. It will be 550 miles in length.

Our God is abundantly able and willing. Isn't it comforting to have such a God?—Catherine Mabie.

SACRIFICE.

Is sacrifice so hard a thing?
We give a useless seed
To God's kind care, and—lo!—we reap
A harvest for our need.

We give a scanty draught to one
Who faints beside the way;
There flows a fountain for our thirst
Some weary, woesome day.

Ah, sacrifice is but the door
To dwellings of delight;
And selfishness the subtle key
That locks our joy from sight.

WHY HE CHOSE HER.

Kanjunda was a chief in Bihe, West Central Africa. Like all African chiefs, he was a polygamist, and had a large assortment of wives. He was converted under the preaching of a Congregational missionary, and in order to live a consistent Christian life he could have but one wife, so he must make a selection of one and put the rest away. His selection not being the most prepossessing woman in the lot, he was asked why he had made such a choice. He replied, "Oh, on the whole, I thought she was the most docile of the bunch."

EMPHASIS LAID ON EDUCATION.

The school is the conspicuous institution in Japan. One may visit the imperial universities, where one is told that some of the departments rank with similar departments of the universities of Europe and America, and one marvels. But one marvels more on going to the small islands of the Inland Sea, or to the villages in the rice-fields, or to the cold Hokkaido, and finding schools, schools, schools everywhere. Education is compulsory for all children up to a certain age, and when that age is reached the sons and daughters of Japan need no compulsion. I am informed that only about one-third of those who graduate from the grammar-schools and wish to go further can be accommodated in the high-schools, and only a small proportion of those who graduate from the high-schools can be accommodated in the universities, and this in spite of the heroic efforts of the Japanese government.—Missionary Review.

A CONTRAST.

Buddha says: "Birth is suffering. Decay is suffering. Illness is suffering. The presence of the objects we have is suffering. Only complete cessation of desire for life, and everything in life, is cessation of suffering."

Jesus says: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."—Sel.

PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENTS.

Davidson Ct. .....Feb. 21-23.
Denton ..... Feb. 22 at night.
Uwharrie Ct. .....Feb. 24-26.
Randolph Ct., ...Feb. 27, 28.
Mt. Pleasant Ct., ...March 1.
Liberty church, ...March 1, at night.
Liberty Grove, ...March 2, 11 a. m.
Siler City Ct., ...March 2-4.
Alamance Ct., ...March 5-6.
Mt. Hermon Ct., ...March 7-8.
Saxapahaw ..... March 9-10.
Winston Sta., ...March 15, 11 a. m.
Maple Springs, Forsyth Ct., Mar. 15, 3pm.
East Winston, ...March 15, at night.
Mocksville, ... March 16-18.
West Forsyth .....March 19-21.
Forsyth ..... March 22-23.
Pinnacle & Mt. Zion, ...March 24-25.

Brethren, blend some of your appointments, if possible. Publish my plan for your field in the Herald. State where I am to be met to enter your field. Let me wind up nearest the next field to be visited. These requests are reasonable and compliance with them will be a great help to me. Please grant them. C. A. Cecil.

Please note the above request.

I have tried to give the Sundays to those who had the week day appointments last year as far as I could.

On account of bad weather I called off my appointment for Yadkin College Circuit, hoping to announce an appointment later when the weather will be more pleasant and the roads better and the people will be more likely to go to church.

I am pleased to see that the Journals are all out and I trust all sold and the money being sent to the Publisher, and that he will be able to report through the Herald the amount in his hands for the Journal fund.

I regret to find our statistical tables so far from being correct, and I am not placing the blame on any one individual, for perhaps many are at fault; but I believe we soon can have them correct if all will take a little more pains in making out the different reports. And, too, I believe pastors having to read their report in open conference will assist in correcting some errors heretofore made. I do not know what the committee to get out blanks for pastor's official report are going to ask, but I do know that a pastor ought to be able to answer any question in reason that may be asked by the committee or by the Conference. Now is the time to begin to take notes preparatory to making said report.

I notice the apportionment for general interests for Siler City Circuit does not appear in the list for 1914; the pastor will have to go by the apportionment in last year's list.

I am glad to learn that most of the pastors that have been sick are better and are able to take up their work again.

I hope the weather will be so I will not have to call in any more appointments.

Pastors and the people may expect according to the plan of appointments.

C. A. Cecil.

Feb. 17, 1914.

CONFERENCE JOURNALS AVAILABLE.

Rev. S. W. Taylor, Winston, has 7 copies.
Rev. J. D. Williams, Henderson, about 25.
Rev. C. L. Whitaker, Asheboro, 2 copies.

FROM OUR PASTORS

ASHEVILLE.

The groundhog certainly must have seen his shadow the other day; anyway, work on the church has been practically at a standstill since the last report. The masons put a little more of the concrete sill in place, and did a little work on the brick veneer; but otherwise there was nothing done. We are hoping that the weather will moderate this week so that all preparations for the laying of the corner stone may be completed in time for the exercises this Sunday afternoon. We are expecting a number of the members of the surrounding churches to be present with us, and wish that the entire membership of the church in North Carolina might be with us. Won't you be with us in spirit, even tho' you cannot be in body, and pray for us that the power of God may rest upon us? It means larger things for us, this corner stone laying, larger things than we have thought or dreamed of, and you may have a part in it with us. I do not believe we have yet fully realized what part the church in Asheville ought to play—and in the providence of God—is to play in the development of the denomination not only in this state but throughout the entire borders of the church. For we have not yet realized that Asheville is unique among all the cities of the South, and that our church here must have tremendous effect upon the whole church.

The Baraca and Philathea classes of the church were given a reception at the parsonage last Friday night. In spite of the extremely disagreeable weather, some thirty young folks come, and seemed to enjoy themselves greatly.

The report is pretty good this week, and we thank all the friends who have contributed to make it so. You have never given more wisely or to better purpose. May there be many like you!

ASHEVILLE CHURCH BUILDING FUND

Dr. J. R. Reitzel	$25.00
Miss Jessie Williams	5.00
Weaverville Church	4.00
Mr. W. P. Smith	2.50
Mr. G. B. Taylor	2.50
Mrs. G. B. Taylor	2.50
Mr. W. A. Ward	1.00
Mr. J. K. Pool	1.00
Mr. C. E. Henderson	.50
A Friend	.50

C. W. Bates.

MOCKSVILLE CIRCUIT.

Our president, Rev. C. A. Cecil, will be on this charge March 16-18. He will preach at the churches as follows:

Elbaville, Mar. 16, 11 a. m.
Dulins March 16, 3 p. m.
Bethel, March 16, 7:30 p. m.
Union Chapel, March 17, 10:30 a. m.
Union Grove, March 17, 7:30 p. m.
Byerly's hapel, March 18, 11 a. m.

The president will leave Winston-Salem March 16 at 5 a. m. Pastor will meet you at Advance. You will leave Mocksville charge from Mocksville on March 18, at 2:18 p. m. for Winston-Salem. Direct your mail to Mocksville, N. C. Yours truly,

J. W. Self.

ALAMANCE CIRCUIT.

President's appointments:

Sapling Ridge, Thurss, Mar. 5, 11 a. m.
Center, March 5, 3 p. m.
Bethel, Friday, Mar. 6, 11 a. m.
Rock Creek, Mar. 6, 3 p. m.

J. A. Ledbetter.

PIEDMONT CT.

Our president was on this work from the 6th to the 8th. Personally it was an inspiration and a pleasure to be with him and hear his plain, practical, uplifting sermons; and so far as I can learn, all the people were pleased and benefited by his visit: come again, Bro. Cecil.

The work seems to be moving along very well in this part of the Vineyard; but yet there is so much to be done that we feel like praying the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers into His harvest. The congregations hold up well at some of the churches; but not so good at the others, anyway not what they ought to be. Some people are very easily scared away from church on account of a little cold weather; but they expect the preachers to drive fifteen or twenty miles over the bad roads, and through the cold, and they sit at home and bake their shins by the fire, while he preaches to empty benches. This ought not to be, and God hasten the day when every professed follower of His will be alive to their duty. We are planning our revival work as fast as possible. May this year be the time when we will witness the greatest ingathering of souls ever known. The brethren at Mt. Carmel are moving along with the church, and we hope to have it up in the near future.

They are still carrying on their Sunday school at Bro. Faw's house, which shows a great interest.

May God bless the brethren in their work. A. D. Shelton.

West Forsyth Circuit.

President's appointments:
Harmony Grove, Mar. 19, 11 a. m.
Baltimore, March 20, 11 a. m.
Stony Knoll, March 20, 3 p. m.
Pleasant Hill, March 21, 11 a. m.

President will be met at Clemmons on the 18th. G. H. Austin, P. C.

Birthday Dinner.

On Tuesday, Feb. 3, a delightful birthday dinner was given to Mrs. C. T. Hauser at her home at Shoals in Surry Co. The dinner was in honor of her 56th birthday and was a complete surprise to Sister Hauser. Before she knew what was happening the road was full of carriages, buggies and wagons, all heading for her home. Her oldest son, who lives a few miles up the river from his mother, had preceded the crowd to the home, and to break the shock on his mother, made some pretense to get her to the front door just in time to see the crowd coming up the road. "You can't fool me any longer," she said to her son, "I know what it means now." In a few minutes the house and yard were full of relatives, neighbors, and friends, all delighted to do honor to this good woman. By count there were 150 persons present. A long table was built in the yard on the south side of the house. On this was spread the good dinner that the neighbors and friends had so generously provided. We ate and chatted and chatted and ate till all felt we never would want anything more, and still the supply was not exhausted. However, we were not trying to eat it all; it was so tempting and the supply so generous that we found difficulty in stopping. In the afternoon the young people sang and played games while the older people gathered in small groups and talked. Soon the time came for us to go home and we all left feeling that all had spent a glad day. And no one, we are sure, enjoyed the day more than Sister Hauser. It was a home-coming day for the family. All that are living were present—nine sons and a daughter. The husband, Mr. Thos. Hauser, and two sons are dead. To have her children all with her again, of course, delighted the heart of this fond mother. She was also deeply touched and made very glad by the tokens of love and esteem so generously shown her by a host of neighbors and friends. Sister Hauser is a member of the Shoals Methodist Protestant Church and attended the High Point Conference. May she have many more happy birthdays.

S. W. Taylor.

Winston-Salem, 2-16-14.

To our many inquiring friends will say that our daughter who was operated upon for appendicitis at St. Leo's Hospital, in Greensboro is getting along nicely, and has returned to her home. W. D. Reed.

FROM OUR REPORTERS.

Moriah, Tabernacle Ct.

An interesting event of last Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock was the laying of the corner stone of our new church. Bro. W. C. Kennett preached for us, or rather gave us an interesting history of founding of "Old Moriah" as far back as he knew. Mr. J. Norman Wills made a talk about Moriah and some of its noted characters while he was Supt. of the Sunday school. Both of these talks were enjoyed. We were also glad to have Bros. Hutton and Andrews and our editor, Rev. J. F. McCulloch. We hope it will be our pleasure to have these and all other visitors with us again when we get our new church finished.

As weather has been very bad for last few days the men could not work on our church. "But we must be happy together whatever the weather." The framing is all up and part of weather boarding, and it has an appearance of church that looks good to us.

As Bro. Johnson is going to be away this coming Sunday, Bro. J. P. Lanning has gladly promised to preach for us at 11 o'clock, the usual preaching hour. I hope we will show our appreciation of Bro. Lanning's favor in one way by our presence. We would like for him to be present during our Sunday school hour also.

It was the pleasure of a few friends and relatives to be present at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Aldred Feb. 11th at 3:30 p. m., when their daughter Viola was united in marriage to Mr. Robert Forsythe. Mr. and Mrs. Forsythe are the recipients of many nice presents. They have our best wishes for a happy and prosperous journey through life. With much love to readers of Herald, Lillie Sharpe, Rep.

Feb. 17, 1914.

Reidsville.

We are striving to do something for the upbuilding of God's kingdom at this place. Our pastor, Bro. E. G. Lowdermilk, has been preaching some very helpful sermons for us since he has been with us. I do wish more would come out and hear the good messages he has for them.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely under the direction of our new Supt., Bro. A. J. Dixon, who makes a good one, and I feel sure our school will increase when spring opens. Let us all work to get new scholars. We have Bible readings every Wednesday night. We study our Sunday school lesson and read the references on it and this is so interesting and helpful to us all that attend. Let more come out and enjoy these good things with us. Our Ladies' Aid Society held its regular meeting on the 2nd of this month. We have paid off a debt of $24.75 on carpet and raised $55 and paid on the parsonage and had a little more done on the parsonage also. Let us all become more interested and strive to make this the best year's work. Mrs. D. L. C., Reporter.

Gibsonville.

Our S. S. is doing finely considering the weather. We use the cross and crown system which helps our attendance some, I think. We have a good Supt. and also good teachers; D. M. Davidson, Supt., mayor of the town, book-keeper at Minneola Mills, a very busy man, and with all that business on his mind, last week he had a pleasant find in the person of D. M. Davidson, Jr.

We have preaching first and third Sundays at eleven and at night. Rev. J. R. Hutton, our pastor, as usual preached an excellent sermon Sunday morning; no service at night on account of the severe weather.

There has been talk of remodeling the church here; hope the talk will turn to reality, for it is needed. Gibsonville is a coming town; a hosiery mill about complete, the real estate company is buying lots, building dwellings and selling at reasonable prices. With best wishes to the Herald and its readers I will close. Reporter.

Grace Church, La Grange Ct.

Our pastor, W. H. Neese, was taken sick Jan. 23rd. Feb. 6, Mrs. Neese, also, was taken sick. The doctor advised us to put them in a hospital; so on Feb. 10th we took them to the hospital in Kinston, N. C. Both have typhoid fever. Last report states that they were doing as well as can be expected. Join us in prayer for their speedy recovery, if it be our Father's will.

Nannie E. Sutton, Rep.

Feb. 14, 1914.

IN MEMORIAM.

Edna Walser.

On Jan. 23, 1914, little Edna, eleven-months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Artis Walser, was removed by death. She was a sweet, gentle child, loved by all. She is now safe in the arms of Jesus. Some day we will meet little Edna where all is bright.

On the following day she was laid to rest at Shiloh. Her funeral was preached by Rev. H. L. Powell.

A Friend.

Jane Albright.

Jane Albright was born June 5, 1825, the daughter of Andrew Albright and his wife, Sallie Shoffner; was married Feb. 13, 1845, to Jeremiah Sharpe.

To this union were born five children, of whom three daughters and son survive, one daughter having died in infancy.

Her husband preceded her to the spirit world a little over three years, she having passed away December 8, 1913, aged 88 years, 6 months and 3 days.

The old family Bible furnishes us the dates and facts above, but had a much more important influence on her life. The sacred truths made early and lasting impressions on mind and heart.

She remembered her Creator in the days of her youth, having been converted in her girlhood, and united with the church at Mt. Hermon, so long ago that the date is unknown. A relative, himself over eighty years old, says she was a member as long ago as he has any knowledge of the matter. That she was married at twenty and was a member previous to that time.

She was almost certainly a member of the church over seventy years. Having put her hand to the plow she did not look back, but pressed onward and upward.

Hers was not a life of loud profession, but rather a light that shined steadily.

She and her husband walked and worked together for sixty-five years, while she faithfully performed the duties of a wife. "She looked well to the ways of her household, rising while it was yet night," to give them food that they might go unhindered to their toil. And now, "Her children rise up and call her blessed," for, like Abraham, she "commanded them to keep the way of the Lord."

In the neighborhood, "the law of kindness was in her tongue," and helpfulness her rule and practice, so that now words of love and appreciation abound.

It was her habit to attend the services of the sanctuary, going regularly as long as she was able, and when the infirmities of age forbade regular attendance, she still went when she could. Even during the last year of her life, when almost half a score of years beyond the extreme limit set by the Psalmist, she was present several times.

She was a good neighbor, a good mother, a good church member, because she early gave her heart to the Savior and followed Him to the end.

C. H. Whitaker, Pastor.

Sallie Walker Nicholson Jobe.

Sallie Walker Nicholson Jobe was born Nov. 3, 1836. Professed faith in Christ in October, 1852, and joined Mount Hermon Methodist Protestant Church. Was married to Jonathan Franklin Jobe, June 17, 1855. Transferred her membership from Mt. Hermon to Hebron M. P. Church in 1868.

She was the mother of eleven children. Seven of these, her husband, 41 grandchildren, 28 great-grandchildren, one sister and five brothers survive her. Patient, sympathetic, gentle and helpful, disregarding her own personal comfort she gave her foremost thoughts to the help and comfort of others. Solomon wrote a brief obituary of her when he said in Prov. 31: 27-29, "She looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness. Her children rise up and call her blessed, her husband also, and he praiseth her. Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all."

Not only will she be missed by her children and grandchildren, but by all relatives and friends. We all loved Aunt Sallie, we will miss her so much when we go there and find her chair vacant, her place at the table vacant, and then we miss her pleasant face and greeting and advice. But do we not all know she is better off? We know Heaven has gained what we've all lost.

Just another tie binding us to Heaven. We all hope to meet her and all our loved ones there.

We are so thankful, if she had to go, that she didn't have to suffer so long. She was stricken with pneumonia on Wednesday and died on Sat., Jan. 31, 1914. We do truly sympathize with the bereaved husband and children. May her Lord give them strength to bear this trouble. May their lives be like hers.

Don't weep for Aunt Sallie: prepare to meet her in the great beyond.

Hebron has lost another of its truest members, but we hope all of her descendants may be as true as she to church and God. The funeral was conducted at the home by Rev. W. E. Swain, as her husband has been sick for quite awhile and was not able to go to the church; then she was buried at Hebron. A large crowd attended. The floral tribute was very beautiful.

Aunt Sallie has gone from us, and our hearts are saddened by this, but may we all be one family up yonder.

"Sleep, well beloved; sleep on and take thy rest.
We loved thee well, but Jesus loved thee best."

Her Nieces, Cora Nicholson and Fannie Nelson.

A granddaughter, Miss Lelia McAdams, pays the following beautiful tribute at the close of an obituary substantially the same as the foregoing:

Faithful Grandmother, thy work well done,
Beautiful soul into glory gone;
Beautiful life with her crown now won,
God giveth her rest.
Rest from all sorrow and watching and fears,
Rest from all possible sighing and tears,
Rest through God's endless ages of years,
Rest over yonder with her loved ones.

Evelina Hinshaw.

Evelina Hinshaw, another one of Mt. Lebanon's oldest members, passed away at the age of 77 years, 9 months and 10 days. She was a highly respected lady and had professed faith in Christ early in life and joined Mt. Lebanon Church where her membership remained until death. Being afflicted she did not often get out to church. Her hearing was bad and of course she did not get out of the services what she did earlier in life. She leaves three brothers and two sisters who will miss her much. Mt. Lebanon church feels that they have lost a good member. Feb. 3, with quite a large crowd of people, consisting of relatives and friends witnessing, we laid her body to rest in Bethany burying ground, to await the summons from on high.

J. B. O'Briant.

J. June Siler.

J. June Siler, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Haywood Siler, died Feb. 4, 1914, aged 20 years, 7 months and 20 days. He professed faith in Christ at the age of twelve.

After finishing at free school he entered the High School at Siler City, and went from there to Denton, N. C. The following year he went to the Atlanta Dental College to prepare himself for the profession of his choice, returning home April 30, 1913. On May 8 he went to Gulf, N. C., where he practiced dentistry very successfully. He came home Thanksgiving to spend a while with his parents. While he was at home his health gave way; a physician being summoned pronounced his disease diabetes in a bad form. From that day until his death he gradually grew weaker. All that medical skill could do was done, Doctors Foust and Shepherd, of Liberty, being his physicians. On Sunday before his death (Wednesday night) the doctors told him he could not possibly live. It did not excite him in the least. While he desired so much to live it seems that God has something far better for him than this world can give. While it is hard to lose our dear ones, after a time of anxiety and preparation, but the grief is much heavier when they are taken, as June has been taken, in the very bloom of manhood.

May the comfort God alone can give to the bereaved family be theirs. A Friend.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE CHILDREN'S HOME.

The following is a list of the contributions to the Children's Home.

The Young Ladies' Aid Society of the M. P. Temple, Fairmont, W. Va., $75 to furnish a room; Tabernacle church, $75 to furnish a room; Rev. C. A. Cecil, $5; Moton Glenn, Falston, $5; H. A. Moffitt, High Point, $5; Christ M. P. Church, Baltimore, Md., $10; John A. Wright, Delmore, Del., $5.00.

I would like to say that there are still four rooms that haven't been furnished, and I would like to ask if there are not four individuals or four churches that will send us $75 each to furnish these rooms. You remember that each room has a name plate placed upon it specifying that a certain church or a certain class as the case may be has furnished the room. I hope that this may appeal to the good people throughout our denomination and that we may receive applications to furnish these rooms at once, for we very much need the money to pay for the furnishings of the rooms. I would like to add that we now have twenty-five children in the Home and that everything is moving along smoothly and nicely out there, and if the good people will only continue to rally to the support of the Home it can be made a wonderful success.

With many thanks to all for their many donations that have been sent us, I remain, Very sincerely, J. R. Reitzel,
Sec. and Treasurer.

"All cannot charge or lead the van.
All can be brave and true;
And where the Captain's standard waves,
There's work for all to do;
And work from which thou may'st not flee,
Which must be done and done by thee."

TEN GREATEST MODERN INVENTIONS.

MOVING PICTURES.—HOW A NEW ART WAS CREATED.

The moving picture has transformed the amusements of the multitude and promises a future so enormous that only its present swift development can give faintest indication of. Offering the first serious check the theater's popularity has suffered since Shakespeare's time, its ramifications are b coming more varied and extended. As a factor in education, science, trade, and in recording current history, it has seen its beginning only, and in its application to amusement in its higher form we already have a promise of a large and brilliant future.

Thousands of theaters are devoted to the "movies" in this country, in which eighty million dollars are invested, producing an annual revenue fast approaching three hundred million dollars. The whole world is levied upon to "stage" the play, history and travel visualized, and the obscure processes of nature explained and analyzed.

The "kinetoscope" of Edison "was the first commercial appliance to show pictures in natural movement," although he owed much to the Eastman film and prior investigations. As with the automobile and aeroplane, great credit must be given to the French promoters for first showing its possibilities on a marked scale.—William I. Wyman in Scientific American.

SEEKING THE LOST.

A student of human nature, visiting a prison one day found his greatest interest in trying to read the faces of the men behind the bars. One of these faces, the story runs, affected him strangely, so gentle was it, so sensitive, so delicate.

"Friend," he said, "you have no look of a criminal. Why, may I ask, are you here?"

"I am here awaiting trial," was the answer. "I am unjustly accused."

"You have the appearance of an artist," said the visitor. This was true, for the man's coat was of velvet, his hair was long and his fingers were bedaubed with paint

"I am an artist," he replied. "I was taken from my studio while at work. Do you not see my pallette and brushes?" He pointed to where they lay in a corner.

"Is there no small service I could do for you?" asked the stranger.

The artist's eyes filled with tears. "I would to God," he said, "that I had but a piece of canvas."

The visitor knew that it would be impossible to bring anything from outside for a prisoner, but he saw on the floor of the hall a soiled and wrinkled napkin, dropped from a tray. "Take this," he said, smoothing it out and pushing it through the bars. "Paint me a picture upon it."

Every day while the artist awaited his trial the stranger came to see how his picture grew. The napkin was nailed upon the wall, and every day the artist prayed, as he painted, "Lord God, help me to paint a picture of Thee that shall win men to Thee."

And every day the touch of the brush brought out more clearly against the dull wall of that cell the radiant face of Christ in a picture so beautiful that afterward it was hung high in a cathedral to draw the reverent gaze of thousands. Yet before it was touched by the transforming genius of the artist, it was only a soiled and wrinkled napkin, tossed aside into a dusty corner.

The story is a prison parable. There are lives, soiled and wrinkled and dusty, tossed aside, outcasts from the world, waiting only to be lifted by some friendly hand into the presence of the Master Artist to be transformed by Him into his own glorified likeness.

Pray for the vision and the passion, then will come the peace and the power.—The Missionary Survey.

A perfect man! A perfect woman! Who has not had longings after perfection? What longings the name of some favorite character in history or fiction awakens within us. We unconsciously are moulding ourselves into the image that will not disappear. We see the beckoning of its hands. Its call is ever ringing in our ears. We shut our eyes and yet we see the form. What a struggle there is ever to "go on unto perfection!" What a glorious model we have in Jesus Christ, the Son of God, "unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ."—Selected.

When the best is there already—why, there is no need for anyone to make it. Making the best of things implies a lack, and a determination to meet it and make it abound instead. It implies courage and cheerfulness and growth and a freedom and largeness of character developing out of brave living. "Making the best of it" is a big thought—so big that many of us never truly glimpse it. But it is there, ready and waiting, for any life that will try its magic powers.—Selected.

There is nothing that makes men rich and strong but that which they carry inside of them. Wealth is of the heart, not of the hand.—John Milton.

BURLINGTON.

Last Sunday was an unfavorable day for Sunday school and church attendance. Consequently there were only 96 in attendance at Sunday school and not much larger number at the church service.

Bro. Curry, our pastor, has been preaching a series of special sermons to the young men of our congregation at the Sunday night services, which have been highly enjoyed and very beneficial, not only to the young men, but to all who have heard them. Our pastor is proving himself to be a good pastor, both in the pulpit and out of the pulpit.

The members of our choir are meeting every Friday night for practice. Bro. G. L. Amick is their leader and rs. G. L. Curry is organist.

Early last Friday morning while standing near the fire-place little Clara, the nine-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Crutchfield, caught afire and was seriously and probably fatally burned. She is in a critical condition, but at this writing there is hope for her recovery. Little Clara is a member of our Sunday school and was always a faithful attendant. Several prayers were offered in the Sunday school and church services for her recovery. Every thing that human hands and medical skill can do is being done looking to her recovery. The entire church and Sunday school is in sympathy with the parents in this very critical time in their lives.

There is a movement on foot to publish a directory of our church in the near future. The purpose of the promoters of this project is to have published, in book form, a complete directory of the church and Sunday school, which will contain a list of all [illegible] of the church and Sunday school [illegible] name and address of every member of the church, and any other matter of importance pertaining to our church and Sunday school work. Such a publication would be of special interest and benefit to our people, and we trust the plans for its publication will materialize.

The writer, who has been located in Greensboro for the past two months, is back in Burlington, and will endeavor to furnish a report for the Herald from this church each week. C. B. Way, Reporter.

Feb. 17, 1914.

CHARLOTTE.

Our S. S. is moving on very nicely, but am sorry to say I haven't been able to be there the past two Sundays. I was prevented last Sunday by the death of my grandmother, Mrs. C. F. Helms, six miles south of Monroe. She was 81 years, 9 months and 21 days old. She had not been well for six months; was very low for three months. She suffered a great deal, but was very patient. She was a member of the M. P. Church. She leaves a husband and four children, thirty-four granchildren. She was a sweet old lady and one whom all seemed to love. She was old and could hardly get about, yet she was always full of life, and will be missed by us all. But she died happy and in good hope of a better home not made with hands. We hope to see her again some day in the great beyond. Pray for us that we may ever keep our hearts and minds centered upon God and things above.

We regret very much that Mr. Silas Garmon has left us. We miss him so much at Sunday school. I miss little Johnnie and Grace so much in my class; they were always there unless sickness prevailed. But may God go with them wherever they go cause. Mattie Belk.

DENTON STATION.

We just haven't taken time to tell what has taken place on this charge. Our church was made stronger yesterday when Rev. G. . Reynolds and wife, also Rev. John W. Hulin and wife, united with us, bringing their letters. They were heartily received. Lord, teach us that we may so live as members that they will never regret that they pitched their tents in our midst. And still here is room.

Our school is progressing nicely; 35 grown students in attendance, about 30 in the primary and intermediate department; 7 young men in book-keeping class.

Short-hand and typewriting will be added and taught next term. Begin thinking, brethren; let's educate at home. It is far cheaper. Northern institutions heartily endorse Prof. Reynold's theory of teaching.

Our special meeting is expected to start on Monday night after the 4th Sunday in March, the 23rd. Rev. G. F. Millaway is expected as pulpit help. Let us remember that while he is noted as a good revivalist his coming will be in vain to us individually unless we do our full duty. Christ's teaching profited only those that accepted his teaching. So let us step up in line on a high plane of Christian living.

Our S. S. officers feel that they are not tired of their office; they still announce from Sunday to Sunday that there will be school next Sunday. To those that happen to fail you can remember the next Sunday at 10 o'clock and be sure to be on time is our motto. Yesterday was a good day for us; we had two good sermons by our pastor. Reporter.

Feb. 16.

CANAAN, PIEDMONT CT.

We are glad to say that our Sunday school has not gone into winter quarters. We are having good attendance. Our enrollment, Sunday, was 98 present and 46 absent. Most of the Sunday schools around here have stopped, but we thought best to go on with the good work. We are also having a good prayer meeting every Wednesday night. We are glad that the people around Canaan are not too tired and sleepy to attend prayer meeting service.

We were pleased to have Bro. C. A. Cecil preach to us Sat. night. His sermon certainly was enjoyed by all, and am sure if we practice the thoughts he made so plain to us, it would help us all to be better men and women.

Miss Julia Reese spent Saturday night and Sunday with Mrs. Burton Clodfelter, Mrs. A. D. Shelton, and Miss Nancy Spoolman spent Sunday with the writer.

Our pastor filled his appointment Sunday evening at the usual hour; his sermon was splendid. There will be preaching the second Sunday in next month at three o'clock. Everybody come and join us in our good work. Clara Reece, Reporter.

(From Another Canaanite.)

I saw in the Herald such a good sermon, I have given in to a neighbor, hoping it will do him a lot of good. I take the Christian Herald and the Protestant Herald, both of them full of help to me, and I let others read them for a help to them; they are so full of Christian help I want everybody to read them. I often see a sermon I would not miss for anything.

Remember us in your prayers.

HICKORY GROVE, SILER CITY CT.

Our new pastor, Rev. W. A. Ledford, filled his second appointment at Hickory Grove the 2d Sunday in February, and it was a helpful sermon to all. He has shown by his actions and work that he is much interested in the work here on Siler City Ct. The congregation was very good.

Since our last report our Sabbath school has made very good progress. In fact, the best we have had for some time. Average attendance, 48. Our school will continue during the winter. We are planning to have a better one this year than ever before.

Prayer meeting every second and fourth Sunday, and we are glad to see so many young people interested in the work. It is encouraging for the older ones when the young people take an active part in the work. I think this is one of the best ways for the church to keep progressing.

Miss Clatie Daffron came home from Rural Hall where she has been visiting her sister; we were glad to see her in our Sunday school again. She is one of our best

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XX. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, APRIL 2, 1914. NUMBER 19.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCULLOCH, Editor and Publisher.
PRICE.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
RULE IN DEALING WITH SUBSCRIBERS.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

—We publish this week the form of blank for Pastor's Report to the Annual Conference. See page ten. Also the program of the Summer Conference on the same page. These are matters of special interest to all pastors.

—We understand that the committee to prepare blanks for financial and statistical reports to the Annual Conference contemplate a plan of reporting which will make compiling and tabulating the reports by committees at Conference unnecessary. That is certainly an end to be desired, as this work has taken quite a number of men from the Conference sessions for days. Besides, errors are almost certain to creep in in copying a large number of figures. The Conference should have a committee to see that all reports are handed in, made out in due form, legibly written in ink, and these original reports of pastors can then be used by the printer in setting the tables for the Journal. If the form is correctly planned, it will fit the pages of the Journal, and the result will be fewer errors and a speedier issue of the Journals. The totals should be given in a separate table, as this year. The committee to add the columns should have the aid of an adding machine, which would save time, mental effort, and complaints of incorrectness afterward.

—The long contest between the trustees of Vanderbilt University and the General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, for the control of that institution has been decided by the Supreme Court of Tennessee in favor of the board of trustees. It is to fill vacancies in its own body. To an outsider this decision seems unjust to the church.

TALKS WITH OUR READERS.

I do not agree with "A Minister's Answer" to the question, "Is it hard to live a Christian life?" If his answer is correct then I doubt my Christianity. I have not found it easy, and I write to ask your opinion. Is the life of a Christian easy? What is Christianity? Is it not helping our fellow man to a higher plane of life; doing something to help man spiritually, following Christ? No one will or can follow Him unless he is a Christian, and I deem it no easy task to follow Him. There is a great pleasure, comfort, and consolation, even in this life, in following Him, but is it easy? Did Christ himself while in this sinful world find it an easy task to help fallen man? Did He find it easy when the enemy was continually after Him to destroy his teachings and works? When the tempter took him upon the pinnacle to tempt Him, did He find it easy to resist? Did He find it easy when He was before Pilate and Herod? Was it easy for Him when He was in the garden of Gethsemane, praying, "If it be possible, let this cup pass from me." I admit there is very great pleasure in resisting these temptations, and that God's word teaches us that we, like Christ, can get the power of resistance as He did by praying to the Father, but is it easy? In my early life I chose farming for my occupation, and I really enjoy farm life. I love to plow and hoe, as I do nearly every day of my life, yet I can't say that it is an easy life. Still I can't see for my life how any one can say that I am not a farmer because I don't find it easy. I am inclined to believe the reverse to the minister's answer is nearer correct. What do you think about it? E. C. Harris.

March 30th.

(We think the minister's answer good in that it emphasizes the difference between being a Christian and not being one; between having divine help in the moral life and not having it. But it is also true (and this the minister's answer seems to ignore) that the Christian has conflicts just because he is a Christian; he takes up and carries burdens just because he is a Christian. Still many of the troubles that we "Christian people" have arise from the fact that we are only half-hearted Christians or have for the time being ceased to avail ourselves of divine helps through faith and earnest prayer. The life of the whole-hearted Christian is a life of holy joy, but it is not a life of ease of any other kind than ease of conscience. But that is the best kind of ease, and Christ declared that his yoke is easy and his burden light. My experience in the Christian life has been much like that of Bro. Harris, but I am not prepared to say that most of my "hardships" might not have been avoided by a closer walk with God. It is easy to keep warm in a warm atmosphere, but very difficult to keep warm in a very cold atmosphere.—Editor.)

Dear Editor:

Enclosed you will find a letter which was supposed to be written by Christ. I ask you to publish it in the M. P. Herald, and if it costs anything, let me know.

I think you will understand the reason why I want it published. Yours sincerely, (We withhold name.)

(This letter was sent to us for publication several years ago. I declined to publish it then, and I must decline now for the same reason: I would consider it a reflection on our Lord Jesus Christ to attribute to Him a production so utterly unworthy of Him, and one that tends to promote superstition rather than true religion. Christ said, "No man lighteth a lamp and putteth it in a cellar or under a bushel, but on the stand, that they which enter in may see the light." But according to the account accompanying this letter, which claims to be of great value to whoever reads it, heeds it and causes it to be published, after the letter was written it was hidden away in the ground under a stone where it remained an indefinite time until finally discovered by a little child, and then it was treated with the greatest neglect for a thousand years, notwithstanding the threats which the letter contains against those who refuse to aid in its publication.

The letter was probably written by some irreverent joker and has been taken seriously by people of a superstitious turn. Our judgment is that it is mere rubbish, and that the sooner it is lost to the world the better.—Editor.)

—Bro. Raper writes: "108 at Caroleen Sunday school last Sunday. Our special meeting begins 4th Sunday in April."

THE CHURCH PAPER AS A MEANS TO GENERAL INTELLIGENCE.

There are a few great fields which comprehend very nearly all human interest and activity. They are the agricultural, the economical, the social, the literary, the political, and moral and spiritual, or the religious. There are very few things of value to the human race which do not come within the bounds of one or another of these fields. A person who has a fair knowledge of these fields may be said to possess general intelligence. This, I think, makes clear the meaning of our subject, "The Church Paper as a Means to General Intelligenne." We are to study the relation of the church paper to agricultural, economical, literary, political, and moral and spritual, or religious intelligence. In this study it will help us to substitute religious literature for the church paper. Now the question is, what is the relation of religious literature to man's agricultural, economical, social, literary, political, and moral and spiritual, or religious life?

It has twi very important relations. Its first relation is that of the principal part of a whole to that whole. When this has been taken away the whole ceases to be a whole. It is the relation of the head to the body. When the head has been taken away you cannot say of what remains that it is the body. It is only a part of the body. It is the relation of perception or memory or imagination or thought to intellect. The intellect is the sum of these. Take away either of these and what remains is not the intellect. It is only a part of the intellect. It is the relation of intellect or emotion or will to mind. The mind is the sum of those. Take away either of these and what remains is not the mind. General intelligence covers all the great fields of human interest and thought and activity. One of these is the religious. Cut this out of your store of knowledge and what remains cannot be called general intelligence.

Religious intelligence is obtained in the same way that we get agricultural, economical, social, literary, and political intelligence. There are certain newspapers and periodicals and books which are supposed to contain information on all these subjects. If a man wants agricultural information he must read regularly the best farm journals, and the different farm bulletins as they are issued from time to time. He must come in contact with the best and most progressive farmers and study their methods and get their ideas. If it is business intelligence he wants he must gather it from the best business publications, the best business men, and the field of experience. If it is social intelligence he wants he must search the best literature written on this subject, and he must study, so far as is possible, at first hand all the different phases of this field. If it is literary intelligence he wants he must go to the world's master literary productions, and make the best magazines his companions. If it is intelligence concerning the daily conduct of men, the great political questions, and world movements he wants he must go to the great daily newspapers. In these he will learn of all the thefts, the robberies, the divorces, the murders, the questions of government, the doings of the nations, the launching of battleships, the raising of armies, the declarations of war, and the horrors of the battlefield. If it is religious intelligence he wants he must go to the field of religious literature, and through this to the field of religious experience. There is no other way to get this knowledge. Just as it is the function of farm journals and bulletins, of the different business publications, of socialistic literature, of the daily newspapers, and the great magazines to convey to their readers full information concerning their fields, that they may act intelligently upon all the great problems which arise in these fields so it is the function of religious literature to furnish its student with information of all the good and all the evil in the human heart, of its hunger and thirst, of its most exalted emotions, of its crushing disappointments, of its most sublime aspirations, of its greatest danger, of its only hope, and of all that God has said and is saying to the human race, that he may know his full duty to his Creator, to himself, and to his fellowman, and act intelligently in each of these directions. In this field it is not only the privilege of the student to think the thoughts of the strongest and best and purest and holiest of men, but also the greatest thoughts of his Creator. Of course, when we say this we mean to include the whole field of religious literature, all that man has written and is now writing out of his own experience, and all that God has moved him to write and is now moving him to write. This is a vast field, and when we look over it the church paper is lost to view. Nevertheless it has its work to do. It fills a need which can be met in no other way. Man's religious life has needs which cannot be supplied by religious books, or commentaries on the Bible, or spoken or written sermons, or even the Bible itself. They were never intended to be supplied by these. The Christian needs the help which comes through a knowledge of the victorious experience of his contemporary miles away. He needs that strengthening of his own faith which comes through a knowledge of the triumphant faith of others in the midst of circumstances and in the face of difficulties a hundredfold more discouraging than his own. He needs that intensifying of his love for Christ which comes only through a knowledge of the more intense love of others less favored than himself. He needs that enrichment and enlargement of his own Christian life which comes only thru a world vision of the needs and the triumphs of the Kingdom of God of which he is a part. This is possible only thru a clear vision of the needs and successes of his own church. He must get the vision of his own church needs and successes through his own church paper. I know of no other way. The Bible can't give it. The pulpit can't give it. There is just one solution, and that is your church paper. Then your church paper covers a large part of the most important field of human interest, for there can be nothing of so much importance to man as his duty to his Creator and to himself and to his fellowman. The church paper undertakes not only to give him information as to the nature of this duty, but also how best to discharge it. Now we do not hesitate to charge the man who refuses to read the farm journals, or the business publications, or the world's master literary productions, or the daily newspapers with a lack of general intelligence. Is it possible to say less of the person who neglects one of the principal mediums of knowledge in the highest field of human life? It is not. It matters not what degree of intelligence he possesses along other lines if he is not intelligent religiously he is ignorant where least of all he can afford to be. To fail to read the church paper is to not fully cultivate the field which yields the richest and most far-reaching returns. It cultures both the heart and the head. But religious literature has a much more important relation to general intelligence than the one which we have already pointed out. Its relation is vital. It does more than simply to complete the whole. It produces. Its relation is the same as that of fertile soil to a fine crop. It is the relation of a good heart to a good mind. A heart full of avarice and hatred and falsehood and impurity is not conducive to a good mind. It is exactly the opposite. A bad heart of necessity means a bad mind. A man's heart is the controlling power of his life. It determines the use to which he will put his mental powers. It decides whether he shall dissipate them or direct them along constructive lines. In this way the value of the mind is determined by the goodness or the badness of the heart. If the heart is bad the mental powers are wasted, and the mind is worse than worthless, for it becomes a power under the direction of a corrupt heart to effect evil. If the heart is good the mental powers are conserved and developed and directed along constructive lines, and the mind's value cannot be estimated, for it is an unlimited power under the direction of a good heart to effect only good. Or we may say the relation of religious literature to general intelligence is that of a healthy and well developed mind to a good strong body. The body must have nourishment and protection and exercise in proper proportion. The laws of sanitation must be kept. All this is the result of a healthy and well developed mind. The one is the cause. The other is the effect.

The relation of religious literature to general intelligence is all that we have just stated for the simple reason that it conserves and develops and puts to the very best possible use all of man's natural resources. Its distinctive work is the production of character. Its first work is to conserve and develop the heart. This prepares for its second work which is the conservation and development of all the physical and mental powers. It is this very work that makes its relation to general intelligence vital. When the greatness of the task of becoming intelligent in all the great fieds of human life, or even in one of these fields, is appreciated it is manifest that he who attempts it can only hope for success by commanding all of his natural resources. He cannot afford to neglect anything that will prevent the dissipation of these. This is the work of religious literature, and if this is true of religious literature as a whole it must be true of each of its parts, and is, therefore, true of the church paper. It not only condemns the deadly habits of alcohol, opium, and the cigarette, but it shows how these impair the body for the doing of the best work along any of the great lines of human interest, and at the same time it encourages and helps in the formation of those habits which conserve the bodily strength, and prepare it to do the very best work in whatever field of activity the individual may choose to enter. It prevents the dissipation of his mental energy by disclosing to the youth the beauty of love, truth, justice, purity, mercy, and goodness. A mind and heart exercised in these never grows weaker, but continuously stronger. Give a young man character and there is no limit to his other achievements. Deny him this and there is no limit to his failures. Character is the soil which yields every other good. Your church paper helps you to grow it.

To read your church paper is one of the debts which you owe to yourself and to your church and to humanity. I recommend the church paper to the farmer because it will give him a clearer brain and a stronger body. I recommend the church paper to the business man because it will quiet his nerves and prepare him for the week's strain and keep his feet out of devious paths. I recommend the church paper to the youth ambitious to succeed because it puts into his hands an infinite capital on which to draw. I recommend the church paper to parents anxious for the safety of their children because it fills the heart and mind with good things and thus makes the life impervious to evil. J. A. Burgess.

THE BEST METHOD.

A great many things might be said concerning methods to increase the circulation of the Methodist Protestant Herald, or any paper, for that matter. But it is a conviction with me that the one supremely best method is a personal man to man canvass by one really interested.

Note the fact that in every instance when a secular paper offers large prizes to the persons procuring the largest number of subscribers, whatever else the winners of these prizes may do, the one thing done in every instance, and done vigorously and persistently is the personal canvass. All else combined would never win if this is left out.

When I traveled our Conference District as President I distributed scores, perhaps hundreds of sample copies of Our Church Record, as it was then called, and urged from practically every pulpit in the Conference the people to subscribe, but with very little resullts. But enquiry revealed the fact that pastors who really succeed in getting subscriptions do so by the personal canvass—"button-holing the man," as one pastor eminently successful expressed it.

When a pastor has several congregations covering a large area he cannot make the whirlwind canvass alone. That is my situation now. My plan is to make the canvass in sections, assigning a list of names to each of several canvassers in their respective locallities.

T. M. Johnson.

—1914 is one-fourth gone.

—Tabernacle Church is preparing for a special Easter service.

—Bro. S. R. Harris was in Greensboro last Sunday, visiting his daughters, Miss Ethel, and Mrs. R. M. Andrews.

—The soul occupied with great ideas best performs small duties.—Martineau.

—Happy is the man that findeth wisdom and the man that getteth understanding.

A HUMAN INTEREST STORY.

It happened one day last week.

Her nurse called for a minister. The patient was a young mother of three months. She was almost a thousand miles from home—from her mother and sister and her infant. Her devoted husband was by her bedside. Her mother had been notified by wire and would reach her the nert morning at three. This was at six in the afternoon. She was a beautiful blond with bright blue eyes. Her husband had large round brown eyes. Both had known each other from childhood. They were professional violinists. One week ago they had come to this city with the hope that she could be cured. He was advised by the physician to take her home at once. He could not give up hope.

On the minister's arrival, the open-souled musician husband said: "I am so glad you have come. My wife is dying. She wanted a minister—some one to comfort her. No, you need not call a priest. I have drifted from the church and she belongs to another church. There is no minister of her church in this city."

The wife gave the minister the same cordial greeting. She immediately told him that she was dying. "I could call in a minister of a church almost like yours," he said. "No, you need not do that. God loves us all—tell me about death—and can I be saved?" were some of her words. The minister said he would give her to Jesus in a prayer. He offered her in simple words to Jesus and to the Father: "Jesus, take this, thy child, to thine own heart. Bless her now with thy salvation. Forgive her sins. Father, receive her into thy loving arms. Breathe thy life into her soul. As she loves her own babe, let her know that Thou dost love her. * * Amen."

The patient sank into the gentlest quiet. Some of her utterances were: "I thought I would be frightened at the approach of death. * * * Do you think this is death? * * * I do not suffer at all. * * * For the last half hour I have had such peace. * * I did want to live for my husband and my child. It may be better that I go. I am so glad that He helps me to say, 'Thy will be done.' Dear, you will come back to God? You will take our boy to the church on Easter Sunday and let him be christened,—on that resurrection Sunday? * * *I wish I could live for my boy and my husband. Sacrifice. This is a woman's part! Sacrifice! * * * Please say some more verses —they are all so comforting. There is nothing like the Bible. * * The Lord is my shepherd? Yes, I have always liked that. We will say that together. * * *

Dear, the Lord's Prayer. Let's say that together. 'Our Father' * * * And 'now I lay me down to sleep.' * * Why are people afraid to die? * * If I go to sleep now, will I awake here in the morning? Or will it be over yonder?"

She did fall asleep in less than an hour. Her husband sat up for the train, met her mother, and they remained up the remainder of the night trying to comfort each other. The mother has been the editor of the German edition of a metropolitan daily for sixteen years. She told about this daughter from infancy—how she was a born musician, how she thrilled an audience with her violin at the age of seven, how she would delight in large audiences—being inspired by the crowd rather than abashed, how she and her younger and only sister were so devoted to each other and that the younger sister was left at home with the infant in her arms and frantic with grief at the news of her sister's critical illness.

The mother declared that this city was a revelation to her; that she had never seen such kindness as was being shown her afflicted ones and herself. "In the big city, everybody seems hard and selfish. Nobody takes time to show kindness. Everybody is after money. * * And you have so many evidences of religion here. That banner on the public square—'Go to church Sunday'—that looks good for this town. * * * There is surely something after death in spite of the many contradictions. I cannot believe that my darling is dead."

In just twenty hours from the time of her translation, the husband and mother started on their homeward journey with the snow white body of this artist young mother. Her greatest triumph, no doubt, was her self-offering on the love-altar of her Heavenly Father and husband and babe. And her husband will likely go to his priest before Easter Sunday and renew his vows and consecrate their child and be a transformed artist henceforth.

J. S. Williams.

Asheville, N. C., March 23, 1914.

—Work on the new Methodist Protestant church has begun in earnest, and it will be pushed to completion as rapidly as possible. Mr. John E. Smith is foreman, and the members of the church will do the greater part of the work themselves. The main part of the building will be 30x45 feet, and there will be a Sunday school room 16x18 feet and a vestibule 9x9 feet. The tower will be about 45 feet high. The building will be storm sheeted and substantially put together throughout. The walls will be plastered, and the church when finished will present a neat and attractive appearance inside and outside.—The Pageland (S. C.) Journal.

SOME SUNDAY SCHOOL PROBLEMS

Bro. McCulloch:

I would like to enter the Sunday School Discussion in your next week's paper. Under the pastorate of Bro. Highfill, Sept., 1890 (I think), we organized a monthly prayer meeting and Sunday school which has continued summer and winter for nearly 24 years. And I am proud of the fact that I have been a regular attendant from the first, having missed but a few Sundays, less than any member of the church or Sunday school, having filled every position (not all at one time, however) from scholar to superintendent, and I have watched the growth of our church with marked interest. The attendance has more than doubled, both in Sunday school and church service. The behavior has almost grown to perfection. The financial interests have increased at least 75 per cent. The members that do not pay any thing can be counted on the fingers of one hand, thumb excluded. The work done in this Sunday school is telling not only on this circuit, but all over the N. C. District. While we feel proud of these facts, we fully realize that we are far behind our privileges and duty. Like every other Sunday school we have many discouragements to front. How to meet them we know not, and write for instruction. And we don't want any advice from any theoretical standpoint. Theory won't run a Sunday school very far.

One of the most discouraging things we have is lack of interest on the part of some of our church members. I believe it the duty of every church member to attend Sunday school. There may be a few exceptions, but very few, and these few could show an interest in the work in some way. For instance, if it is impossible to attend, send a proxy in the shape of some good Sunday school paper or library book. This would show your interest, help you and the work. I remember in our infancy a good old brother, living five miles away, did not attend Sunday school, but showed his interest by suggesting things to me when he met me in town, and every church day he would slip a quarter or fifty cents into my hand for the S. S. Where there is a will there is a way. Now for some questions:

How to get any member of the church to do to the best of his ability anything asked by the church or Sunday school?

How to prevent those who won't do anything from criticising those who do the best they can?

How to prevent those who won't go to Sunday school from visiting on Sunday those who do go? (This is one of the worst things with which we have to contend.)

How to get every member to take part in the opening exercises?

How to get people to see that S. S. service and church service both are for both young and old?

How can we get our children to believe the S. S. a good thing when we manifest no interest in it?

How can we get our teachers at least to study the lessons? How can we teach if we fail to do this?

How can we get our pastors to attend Sunday school? I have noticed some of the excuses they render. "They have to preach." So does a S. S. teacher have to teach, but whom could they teach if no one were present? I consider it just as much my pastor's duty to be present and hear what I have to say in my class as it is mine to be present and hear him preach: am I right? However, this does not apply to our last three pastors, for it has been a great uplift to me to have them in my class nearly every time.

Why does any S. S. go into winter quarters like a snake or frog? I have killed many snakes and frogs with the plow while in winter quarters, and they never knew that they ever existed.

Pardon me for referring so often to our school, but I wish to say our best work is done in the winter and our most regular attendants live two, three, and four miles from church.

In conclusion I will say I hope some one will answer some of these questions in which I feel so much interest, and not pass them by unnoticed as was done by the two asked about a month ago. E. C. Harris.

(As Bro. Harris does not want answers except from experience, we refer these questions to anybody that has seen the difficulties or any of them overcome. We hope somebody can answer to the satisfaction of Bro. Harris and to the great help of others who have the same troubles to meet.—Editor.)

—Rev. W. A. Ledford spent his fifth Sunday vacation at Elon College, the guest of his friends, Prof. and Mrs. Amick. On Sunday night the preached an uplifting sermon in the College Chapel.

—The teachers' normal course at Elon College opens next weeek. A large number of teachers is expected this year.

—One of our M. P. boys at Elon College will be in the graduating class this year. Another is a Junior.

CHILDREN'S HOME.

REPORT OF SUPERINTENDENT.

Bethesda Ch., Halifax Ct. $5.00
Brown Summit S. S. ..... .65
C. Tarkington, Raleigh 1.00
Y. W .H. M. Soc., Grace Ch., Greensboro 5.00
Total $11.65

Mrs. Andrew Luck, High Point, canned fruit, onions, eggs and peas.

Senior and Jr. C. E. Societies, Lincolnton, N. C., two quilts and dress goods.

E. M. Lindley, Siler City, 32 apple trees and one cherry tree. The selection was good.

The Woman's Home Miss. Soc., Asheboro, and the Y. W. Home Miss. Society, Grace Ch., Greensboro, have sent in the spring clothes for the girls they are clothing. These societies are having a wholesome influence on the girls they are clothing.

Some of the children that are not supported by individuals say, "I wish some one would take me to support in the Home." We like something definite to work for. Why not select one of our boys or girls and we will call it yours, and I really believe it will be a blessing to both.

Yours for the children.

H. A. Garrett.

SEEING JESUS.

"A little while, and ye shall see me." This follows another statement: "A little while, and ye shall not see me." This last refers to the few hours which remained of our Lord's life, when his disciples could see him with the eyes of sense, and then he would disappear. But the promise that they should see him uses a different word for seeing, which doubtless signifies that the second seeing was not by the senses, but by a spiritual vision. There is no limit to this second seeing, and it covers the period down to the present and forward to his second coming. The word for "not see me" is different from the word used for "see me." They are different kinds of seeing. One is the sight of sense, the other the sight of faith.

Mary and the disciples on the way to Emmaus and the disciples on the Sea of Galilee each for a time saw Jesus with the sight of sense, but failed to see him with the spiritual sight of faith. They were not happy until they had the spiritual sight. Jesus is always with his people, but they do not always see him. But we always need to see him. It is this spiritual sight of Jesus which makes us strong in our weakness, gives us joy in our sorrow, greets us in our anxiety, and blesses and sustains us in all our experience. We cannot be fearful or sad or straying as long as we can see Jesus.

To have this vision of Jesus, this shining of his countenance upon our hearts, this sense of his presence with us, is personal Christianity. It makes life strong, clean, noble, blessed. It gives victory over temptation. It calls us to repentance, like Peter in the court. It gives us endurance, like Moses, who endured as seeing Him who was invisible. It destroys fear and takes away loneliness. The light of his countenance fills the soul with joy. Nothing is more precious to the believer than the conscious presence of Jesus Christ.

How, then, may we secure and maintain this vision? Our Savior says it is the work of the Holy Spirit, whom we cannot see, to give us this vision. Jesus says: "He shall take of the things of mine and show them unto you." But while the Holy Spirit gives us this vision and is its real source, yet there are conditions which may be cultivated by the believer and which are necessary to this vision. We must be thinking about him and looking for him. Mary was looking for him when she saw him in the garden. The disciples on the way to Emmaus were talking about him. The disciplles at Galilee must have been thinking about him. If we want to see him, he will appear; but if we do not want to see him, he will not intrude. If a man will keep his eye upon the foul bog or the cesspool, he will not see the setting sun, although it may be painting the western sky with the most beautiful colors and tints. It is those who look for Jesus who will see him.

Again, a knowledge of the Word is necessary to see Jesus. The eyes of the Emmaus disciples were holden. The reason is given by our Lord: "O fools and slow of heart to believe all that the Scriptures have spoken concerning me!" It is the Scriptures which give form to his person. Many of us are too blind to see, because we are too slow to believe. Obedience is a great means to seeing. An act of obedience is worth many hours of meditation. It was when his disciples obeyed his command to cast their net on the right side of the ship that Jesus was revealed and John saw him. Let us not expect to see Jesus while we lead the life of disobedience. Submission to his will opens the eyes. While Mary was shedding the tears of rebellion, she saw him not; but when his voice subdued her, then her eyes were open. Love is the great clarifier of vision. When Christ asked the disciples at Galilee, "Children, have you any bread?" and they said "No," he then commanded them to cast in the net; and when they were drawing in the fishes, it was the soul of John, the lover and the beloved, who first said: "It is the Lord." Let us look for Jesus, obey him, submit to him, love him, and we shall find that the "pure in heart . . . shall see God."—The Presbyterian.

TOO MANY FOR THE BOSS.

One of the bosses at Baldwin's Locomotive Works had to lay off an argumentative Irishman named Pat, so he saved discussion by putting the discharge in writing. The next day Pat was missing, but a week later the boss was passing thru the shop and he saw him again at his lathe. Going up to the Irishman he demanded fiercely:

"Didn't you get my letter?"

"Yis, sor, Oi did," said Pat.

"Did you read it?"

"Sure, sor, Oi read it inside, and I read it outside," said Pat, "and on the inside yez said Oi was fired, and on the outside yez said, 'Return to Baldwin's Locomotive Works in Five Days.'"—February Lippincott's.

A GRATEFUL DOG.

Two near neighbors in the county of Suffolk, a tanner and a farmer, entertained a great friendship for each other, and kept up a close intimacy by frequent visits. The tanner had a large Ban-dog for watching his yard, which, from some unknown cause, had conceived such an inveterate hatred to the farmer, that he could not go with safety to call on his friend when the dog was loose, and on this account the tanner loaded him with a heavy clog, that he might not be able to fly at the farmer. As the farmer and one of his ploughmen were going about the grounds together one day, the latter espied at a distance something on a stile. As they drew near they perceived that it was the tanner's dog, which in attempting to leap the wall, had left the clog on the other side, and was thereby almost strangled.

The boy, knowing the enmity which the dog had to his master, proposed to dispatch him by knocking him on the head, but the latter yas unwilling to kill a creature which he knew was useful to his friend. Instead of doing so, he disengaged the poor beast, laid him down on the grass, watched till he saw him recover so completely as to be able to get up on his legs, and then pursued his walk. When the farmer returned to the stile, he saw the dog standing by it quite recovered, and expected an attack; but to his great astonishment the creature fawned upon him, and expressed his gratitude in the most lively manner, and from that time to the day of his death he attached himself to his benefactor, and never could be prevailed upon to go back to his former master.

A HISTORICAL SKETCH OF THE METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH.

By Nemo.

"If we are true to it (the pure, unmixed question of representation), if we are not ashamed of it, if we glory in it, it must finally prevail, and proselyte every Methodist in the United States. They may, indeed, remain episcopal Methodists, but so sure as we are not moved away from our high calling, the whole lump will be leavened into representative Methodists."

This prophecy, uttered in 1864* by the Reverend Nicholas Sneethen, one of the great fathers of the church, is in briefest form the dynamic of the denomination of which we are a part. This was its cause, this has been its purpose, this is its life. For any other purpose it would have no right to life, until this purpose is accomplished it cannot die. That it is leavening the lump of Methodism in the United States, no one who will look back over the last eighty years of ecclesiastical history, can deny. The task is not yet finished, will not be until the tyranny of bishop and elder gives place to the common conception of equal rights, and the officers in the church join with the laymen in the pew in the hand clasp of a common service. The dates 1866, 1h72, and 1900 stand out as years in which evidences of the leaven at work in the lump were especially manifest, and these years stand out as presages of that time when all that the Methodist Protestant Church has stood for and fought for through almost a hundred years of history, shall have been won.

It is my desire to review as briefly as possible the origin and history of our church, but to do so I must go back to the origin of Methodism itself. For let it not be forgotten, we be Methodists, of the stock of Wesley, Methodists of Methodism. In all the glorious history of this the most wonderful religious movement of all the centuries since the Catholic Church was founded, we have a share.

Methodism began, not as a denomination but as an experience, in Oxford University in England in the year 1729, when two young men, "reading the Bible, saw that they could not be saved without holiness, followed after it, and incited others to do so. In 1s37, they saw holiness comes by faith." John Wesley writes in his Journal: "In the latter end of the year 1739, eight or ten persons came to me in London, who appeared to be deeply convinced f sin, and earnestly groaning for redemption. They desired (as did two or three more the next day) that I should spend some time with them in prayer, and advise them how to flee from the wrath to come, which they saw continually hanging over their heads.

"That we might have more time for this great work, I appointed a day when they might all come together, which, from thence forward, they did every week, namely, on Thursday of each week. To these, and as many more as desired to join them (for their number increased daily), I gave those advices from time to time, which I judged most needful to them." Mr. Wesley adds: "This was the rise of the United Society in London first, and then in other places." It is wise to notice the name that he uses—the United Society. He was when he organized these societies, and ever remained, a clergyman in the Church of England, although long out of sympathy with that church; and, at least in the beginning of the movement, many of the members of the societies he organized, were members of the church to which he himself belonged. But the church refused to be spiritualized, and became aggressively antagonistic. The result was that as time passed the movement grew away from the church, and a separate denomination was formed, known as the Methodist Society, not formally distinct from the mother church, but practically so.

Naturally, as membership in the new organization grew, and the tide of emigration to the new world increased, many followers of the new faith found their way across the sea, and set up religious societies in America. These societies were under the fostering care of John Wesley, but as their number grew he found it necessary to appoint others to take over the superintendency of the work in America, while he gave himself most largely to the work in the old world: The ministers of the new societies were for the most part clergymen of the Church of England, maintaining an active relationship in that church while at the same time, they were in sympathy with the more spiritual movement. But the Revolutionary War put an end to the Established Church in the United States and made necessary the organization of the Societies in America, as those in England had already been made, into a denomination. To that end Mr. Wesley appointed Dr. Thomas Coke and Francis Asbury Joint Superintendents. These two called a conference of the ministers of the church, and this conference, which met in Baltimore, Maryland, in December, 1784, voted to establish an independent church with the title of "The Methodist Episcopal Church", and elected Thomas Coke and Francis Asbury bishops of the new organization. The Articles of Faith of the Church of England were made the basis of the new Articles. The government of the church, both legislative and administrative, was placed in the hands of the ministry. The church was organized by ministers, it was, and to a large extent still is controlled by preachers, although legislatively many concessions have, of necessity, been made since the church first began. But these concessions have not been made without many a hard-fought battle. It has taken the pressure of the leaven to make possible what little has been gained.

No sooner had the church been organized, than discontent with the form of government began to be manifest. Our fathers had fought on many a bloody battlefield in the belief that "taxation without representation was political tyranny", it was hardly to be expected that they would submit quietly to that same principle even though it were applied to ecclesiastical government. "Equal rights" and "Lay representation" became increasingly the shibboleths of a new warfare, one that was destined to work as great a revolution in the church as the other had in state. At first in articles in the religious press, then in pamphlets and in magazines established for this special purpose, then in meetings of indignation and protest, the new principles found increasing expression. These protestations at last took the form of petitions to the General Conference of 1824 praying for a repreentation of ministers and laymen in the law-making department of the church, but the only answer the petitioners received was: "If by 'rights and privileges' it is intended to signify something foreign from the institutions of the church as we received them from our fathers, pardon us if we know no such rights; if we do not comprehend such privileges."

Immediately upon the close of the General Conference of 1824, a meeting of ministers and preachers who had been attending the sessions of that conference and were in sympathy with the reformers, together with many prominent laymen of the denomination, was held, at which it was decided to organize Union Societies for the purpose of finding out what strength the reform movement had, and in order that with that knowledge a more determined protest might be brought up to the conference of 1828. Many of the organizers of these societies were tried and expelled from the church, as well as many of the members of the societies. These, with their sympathizers, organized themselves into a society called the Associated Methodist Reformers, and many branches were formed in New York, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, and Cincinnati.

But the great majority still hoped that the church would grant the reforms for which they contended, and with this hope still uppermost they presented a memorial to the General Conference of 1828 proposing the elimination of the episcopacy and the presiding eldership, and the admission of laymen to the general and annual conferences. But the General Conference, "after deliberating three whole weeks in committee upon the memorial, not only denied the necessity or justice of the memorial, but extended the claim for the exclusive right of ministers to legislate for the church to the extreme point of ecclesiasticism. The great Head of the Church himself has imposed on us the duty of preaching the Gospel; of administering its ordinances, and of maintaining its moral discipline among those over whom the Holy Ghost in these respects has made us overseers. Of these also, namely, of Gospel doctrines, ordinances, and moral discipline, we do believe that the divinely instituted ministry are the divinely authorized expounders; and that the duty of maintaining them in their purity, and of not permitting our ministrations in these respects to be authoritatively controlled by others, does rest upon us with the force of a moral obligation."

Unable to find within the church the Methodism they desired, the reformers were forced to organize a new Methodism that would guarantee the things for which they had so long contended. They therefore held a meeting in the city of Baltimore in November, 1828, at which articles of association were adopted, and issued a call for a convention to meet in 1830. This convention, representing fourteen Annual Conferences, and containing one hundred and fourteen delegates, met on Nov. 2, 1830, chose the name The Methodist Protestant Church, formulated a discipline and adopted a constitution, perhaps the first constitution ever adopted by any denomination. The constitution as well as the discipline have stood from that day to this without substantial change, and form together the best denominational system of government that has yet been devised.

The church has grown steadily from the beginning. In the first twelve years of its history it reached the fifty thousand mark. In 1890 it had a total membership of 141,000; in 1906, a total of 178,000; and last year this total had increased to 184,000. No figures are available for the number of souls that during the eighty years of the church's history have found salvation at its altars, but their number is legion. The church has taken its place in all the religious, philanthropic, and educational movements of the last hundred years. Out from her colleges and schools have gone a constantly increasing stream of young men and women into all the activities of our beloved country. But the greatest place our church has held has been in the field of Christian unity. No great movement for the union of denominations in this country in the last fifty years, but has heard the voice of some of our fathers, and their voice has brought about a better understanding, if not always actual union, between many otherwise estranged denominations. In common with many other denominations the slavery question split the church. But it was one of the last to split, in 1858, and one of the first to reunite after the close of the Civil War. So it has given expression in concrete form to the ideal it has of the necessity and beauty of the unity of kindred denominations. This I conceive to be one of the great missions of the church, one that along with the others for which our fathers stood so long, has been the source of its life, and must continue to be until they have been completely secured, the continued purpose for its existence.

*This date cannot be correct, as Snethen had been dead at that time for nearly twenty years.—Editor.

MORE ABOUT THAT CLASS BOOK.

I noticed a piece from Rev. Bartholomew Lightfoot some weeks ago about keeping church registers. I began to get acquainted with my members when I came to this circuit. I would look over the little book with all the members on the circuit on it, and more too. I would read over the names and would pray for them, and I don't doubt that I prayed for some good old soul that has been gone on to glory for years and years, for I called a meeting of the members of the church and a book was opened, and another book was opened, and we had 20 more names on the circuit book than on the local church book. So you see if all the churches had lost as many names as this one did, it would be 80 members that Waldrop had lost in three months. It grieves my heart to see such slack business carried on in the church of God. I hope to make a correct report of the membership this coming fall.

I hope we can have great meetings and build up the membership in reality.

Our second quarterly conference will be held at Stalling on Sat. before the first Sunday in May.

H. E. Waldrop.

Matthews, N. C.

PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENTS.

Richland Ct., ... April 3-5.
Asheboro, night of the 5th.
Reidsville, ...April 11, 12.
Brown Summit, April 12th, at night.
Why Not Circuit,..... April 17th.
Rockingham Circuit, ... April 18-20.
Pageland Circuit, ... April 21-22.
Mecklenburg Circuit ..... April 23-24.
Charlotte Ct., Love and Mill Grove, April 25-26.
Albemarle ..... April 27-28.
Uwharrie, May 16th, at Cid.

Pastors please state where I will be met in going from one field to another.

C. A. Cecil.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

WEST FORSYTH CT.

I spent from the 19th to the 21st on this field. Bro. Austin met me at Bro. J. P. Sprinkle's where we spent the night in Clemmons. I called to see Prof. James F. Bower, my old schoolmate, who is teaching in this village.

Bro. Austin and I started to our first appointment at Harmony Grove and we met a fairly good attendance, and attention was good. We took dinner with Bro. W. L. Moser, then drove to Bro. A. M. Smitherman's and spent the night.

We drove to Baltimore for 11 o'clock service and it had snowed so much there was a small attendance. Services over, we spent a few minutes with Bro. Sanford Doub's and took dinner and left for Stony Knoll service at three p. m. A good service. Spent the night with S. M. Speas.

At 11 a. m. Saturday I preached at Pleasant Hill to a good little congregation. This completed my visit on this field. At some of the churches on this field there is to be some improvement in the way of painting etc. Bro. Austin and his people are getting along smoothlly so far as I learned. The general interests were not paid in full last year and the pastor does not receive as much salary as the charge ought to pay, but they are gradually going up on pastor's salary and they will soon be paying a fair salary, I trust.

My claim overpaid.

I took dinner with the pastor and wife.

FORSYTH CT.

Bro. Lindley came to the parsonage for me and we drove to Tabernacle and found a good attendance for the evening, considering the mud and snow. We spent Saturday night with Bro. R. L. Cox pleasantly and drove to Hickory Ridge for 11 o'clock service. A small attendance on account of snow, I supposed. We drove to the parsonage for dinner; found Mrs. L. looking for us, and as soon as we could eat dinner we were off for Oak Grove appointment where we met a few of our membership and several of some one else's people. Why this church was located out one mile from the town is a mystery to me; but this is just like we have done in several other places in time past, but we ought to cease to do so now. Bro. L. and I spent Sunday night with Bro. Kiger. There was no appointment made for preaching at this place, so we took a good rest. I took dinner at the parsonage on Monday; at 2 p. m. Monday I held the 2nd quarterly conference at Oak Grove; there was a fair attendance, and all seemed to be interested. Reports were fair; but not as good on finance as they ought to have been. I am still insisting on monthly and quarterly payments, especially to pastor. Claim overpaid.

PINNACLE AND MT. ZION CT.

I took the train at Rural Hall for Shoals where Bro. W. D. Moser met me and we drove to his home where I met the pastor. We took supper and drove to the church where there was gathered a good congregation; a helpful service. Spent the night with Bro. H. C. Hauser. Our next appointment was Pilot where we were met by the faithful few. Took dinner with Bro. S. H. Marion; ate lunch at Bro. A. N. Brown's on our way to Mt. Zion for the night appointment.

Several young people and a few of the old ones were out. After services we drove to the parsonage where we spent the night. At 11 a. m. on Wednesday I preached in Pinnacle Church to a good attendance. The school attended in a body which increased our attendance and made the services more interesting. A good service. Took dinner with Bro. Levi Watson. At 4:30 I boarded the train for home; at 8 o'clock I was at home. Claim paid.

More pastoral work and visiting was all the demand I heard on these fields. Let all pastors take notice and look after this part of the work a little more closely.

C. A. Cecil.

March 27, 1914.

FROM OUR PASTORS

Burlington Tidings.

The more I know of Burlington the more I am favorably impressed. I have found Burlington to be a town composed of people who work. In the mill, in the shop, in the store, in the office, in the bank, in the home or in the church,—any where these people find themselves they are ready to work and show that they are energetic and progressive. This same spirit of work is to be found in our Burlington church. They are a working people.. This is so much to be appreciated, for little is to be accomplished without work. It is the working man who "delilvers the goods."

The attendance is not as good as we would like to see it, yet it is very encouraging indeed. The morning services are better attended than the night services. This is due partly to the fact that quite a good number of our people live in the country and cannot well come at night. The night attendance is improving.

Our Sunday school under the efficient leadership of our faithful superintendent, Mr. J. G. Rogers, is doing a splendid work. The attendance under favorable conditions is around two hundred. But this is not enough, for no Sunday school under favorable conditions should be satisfied with a smaller average attendance than the number of its membership. Miss Eizabeth Bunch has recently been elected superintendent of the primary department.

Our prayer meeting is not what we would like it to be. There is a faithful few and that "few" is a number to be depended on. But out of the ten, "where are the nine"? By the way, a discussion in the Herald regarding practical methods to get desired results in prayer meeting woud be more profitable than some things we are having.

While the business department of our church is not entirely satisfactory, it is I believe far above the average. Our regular business meeting is doing a great work. These meetings are not so largely attended, but then real business for the church is transacted. The church that is not having its business meeting is a great loser.

At our first quarterly conference it was found that 13 out of 27 members were present. Had not one man been sick we would have had at least a majority. . We must do better than that next time, for certainly a quarterly conference should have more than one half of its members present at a meeting. To the satisfaction of all Bro. T. T. Stafford was elected Sec. of this conference for the year. The treasurer's report showed that pastor's salary was paid in full to date but that general interests were some behind. This ought not so to be. We should be just as careful to pay other interests as to pay pastor's salary. Something should be done to get our people to begin in the very beginning of the year to pay general interests as well as other things.

Only one of our homes has been entered by death during the year. This was the home of Bro. Ellis Crutchfield when on Mar. 15th little Clara, the bright little twelve-year-old daughter of the home, died of a very severe burn received on Feb. 13. From the beginning it was known that she was very severely burned, but at one time it was thought that she would recover, but in spite of all that could be done death came and left a very sad home. It is very difficult for us to understand just why such must come, yet by trusting in an all-wise Heavenly Father we can become resigned to His will and know that all things that He does are for the best.

Quite a number of our people have been sick at different times during the winter, but at present all are well or improving. Miss Maggie Baldwin who has been very sick is not yet well, but is now improving.

Our Sunday school is very enthusiastically preparing for Easter. It is hoped that the entire program will be rendered as prepared by the Home Mission Board. Bro. G. L. Amick, our choir eader, is doing an excellent work preparing the music of this program. Bro. Amick's work is not only telling in this Easter service, but his splendid efforts are telling in every department of the church music.

We are preparing to begin our spring revival the 10th of May. Bro. Taylor is to be our pulpit help. We trust that a great revival indeed will be the result. For this and every other effort of our work we earnestly desire the prayers of our brethren. In the work for Christ and the Church,

Geo. L. Curry.

Greensville Ct.

The second quarterly conference of this charge is hereby announced to meet at Philadelphia church on Saturday before the second Sunday in April, at 11 a. m.

D. A. Highfill, Pastor.

Grace Church, Greensboro

The Sunday school attendance for Mar. has been 242, 218, 224, 118, and 155, making an average of 190 and two-fifths. Our enrollment is 297.

Halifax Circuit.

Our all-day S. S. Rally came off at Lee's Chapel laost Sunday as had been previously announced. The weather was threatening and in fact a mist fell all day, but there was yet about a house full of people. Some of the speakers and neither of the soloists came, but we went right ahead with the rally. The pastor preached in the forenoon and the Sunday school addresses were in the afternoon. I believe the rally will bear fruit in a larger attendance at Sunday school. Bro. Eli Bellamy was re-elected president and Bro. Lonnie Williams was re-elected secretary of the union.

Our meeting at the Fossburg Camp has been changed from second week to first week in April, the meeting to begin Sunday night.

There will be all-day service at Eden church next Sunday—first Sunday. There will be preaching by the pastor at eleven o'clock followed by communion, then in the afternoon Bro. D. W. Hardee, of Henderson, will speak on some phase of S. S. work. This will be followed by a general discussion of the S. S. problems.

Last Tuesday the writer was called to the home of Bro. B. F. Willey of Eden church to conduct the funeral service of his sister, Mrs. Pattie Smith, who died almost suddenly at the home of her daughter in Littleton on Monday. It was not the privilege of the writer to know Mrs. Smith personally, though he has been informed that she was a good woman. We deeply sympathize with the family and pray God's blessings upon them.

J. E. Pritchard.

ORANGE CT.

The winter is past, the snows are ended (we think) and the spirit of spring is with us. With the coming of spring there come better opportunities for work on the country charge as well as elsewhere.

On Sunday, March 8, we dedicated the church at Chestnut Ridge. Bro. A. G. Dixon was present by invitation and assisted in the dedication, and preached an excellent and timely sermon.

We received a pounding on March 21st when several of the Chestnut Ridge folks gathered at the parsonage bringing canned goods, flour, butter, and other pantry supplies. There were also one or two packages sent from Efland and Union Grove. It is a pleasure to serve a thoughtful and appreciative people and we thank them most sincerely for what they have done.

Our revival at Efland is to begin next Sunday with Rev. N. G. Bethea and Prof. T. O. Pender as our help. We are expecting a good work to be done.

R. C. Stubbins, Pastor.

March 30.

FORSYTH.

Our president, Bro. Cecil, visited our work—preaching at Tabernacle on Saturday, Mar. 21, at 3 p. m., and finishing his work on our charge by holding the second quarterly conference for us at Oak Grove on Monday afternoon. The roads and weather were so unfavorable that a very small congregation heard him present the truth. But those who did hear him were helped, and much pleased with his sermons; and his aid in our quarterly conference. He preached at every appointment on the work except at King, where we have not a suitable house to worship in in cold weather. Bros. J. F. Baity and R. M. Cox are the nominess for delegate to our next Annual Conference. Either one would make a good representative. We are hoping for better weather, and greater accomplishments on Forsyth. Pastor.

March 26, 1914.

RANDOLPH CT.

The second quarterly conference will meet at Bethel on Sat. before the 3rd. Sab. in April. Important business. Come.

W. M. Pike.

March 28, 1914.

MECKLENBURG CT.

There have been many things that perhaps I ought to have written about, as we haven't any reporter on this work this year. Since we last wrote we have put the two coats of paint on Antioch church and some fifteen or twenty broken window panes have been replaced. This church is at the old Antioch Camp Ground. Hope to have a number of our preachers at the camp meeting which will be held about the second week in August.

The church at Beulah is moving on nicely. Have also put some window panes in here.

We are always glad to have the M. E. people from Weddington worship with us in the afternoon of the second Sundays at Beulah church.

Zoar church is 20 miles away from the parsonage, but we always like to go and meet those good people. We have had some very bad traveling, but have filled every appointment on the work this year.

Our church at Stalling will be built this year if something awful doesn't happen. We are having the framing sawed now, and have some of it on the church lot. Some of our good people are doing all they can to help the work move on and some are standing back waiting till it is built. So they can say, Look what we have done.

The work is going on now, and people are glad to see it. One man came from Indian Trail one and a half miles from here to our Thursday night prayer-meeting. When I told him that we were placing the lumber on the yard he said, "I will give you ten dollars on that building." So I feel that there are others who are going to help us. This man was a member of the M. E. Church. A number of our people have told us that they would help build a church at Stalling, because they see the need of a church here.

Our church will cost about $1,500. We have 35 members here. We have some good active members at each church on the work.

We want to thank all the people for their kindness to us, and most especially Grandma Poore for the nice milk she has been giving us for the past three months. Grandma Poore is one of our oldest members at Antioch. May the good Lord repay her for her kindness to us.

H. E. Waldrop.

Matthews, N. C.

SHELBY CT.

Dear Bro. Cecil:

We held our second quarterly conference at Caroleen. Not a large turnout. Lincolnton and Caroleen represented in person. Bro. D. B. Johnson and Bro. Wood went 40 miles to be there. It cost them $2 apiece to get there—that was going some. We held a splendid conference. One note on Caroleen of $100 is due in May. In less than 10 minutes we raised a freewill offering of $75 from Caroleen members. We will get the other $25 by the time it is due, I feel sure. Lincolnton and Shelby are carrying their debt right along. Bro. G. H. Gale, secretary of Shelby S. S., elected in Dec., sent a statement showing that they have paid off a S. S. debt of about $7.90 and have $12.50 on hand. Shelby is behind on pastor's salary—not many to pay—but I believe they will. Caroleen is a little ahead and so is Lincolnton. Bros. C. W. Atkins of Caroleen and D. B. Johnson of Lincolnton are the nominess for delegate. They are talking parsonage—as soon as we can get out of debt. I am satisfied they will have one, and save the pastor $17 per month rent &c. They are good to us. We have had several calls from churches at other points, and I take this method to say: we are full up this year. We are sorry we cannot help all, but we have not very many members, and this is a struggling year with us—to meet our obligations. The 5th S. S. collections will go to our Children's Home in High Point. We would do more if we could. Fraternally,

C. E. M. Raper.

YARBROUGH AND ANDERSON.

Or congregations have been unusually large for winter. During Feb. I filled only one appointment, being sick with catarrhal fever. My appointments were met by Bro. Watson, of Cross Anchor, and Bro. Andrew Pickens, of Greenville. Bro. Watson also held quarterly meeting for Yarbrough charge. I appreciate his kindness to me during my sickness. The people speak well of his efforts.

We have been kindly treated by our people since moving to Easley. People have

Continued on page 12.

PASTOR'S REPORT BLANK TO ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

The committee appointed to prepare such a form submits the following for the information of the pastors now. The blanks will be printed hereafter. These are intended to take the place of the former Official Character Blanks, and when the reports are made before open Conference the character of the pastor may then be passed or referred to the Com. on Official Character, which will act only in such cases. The items named in this report are for the information of the Conference and the public who may hear them; and are designed to include all the points of special importance and interest. There will be blank spaces at the bottom for whatever new items the pastor may desire to insert. None of these reports need take more than three minutes to make, and Bro. W. P. Pickett, who has kindly offered to pay for printing these blanks, says that the first one to move that these reports be not made must pay the printer's bill at once.

THE REPORT BLANK FORM.

I have met .... appointments.
I failed to meet .... appointments.
I have made .... visits.
Have had .... personal interviews about religion.
Have had .... conversions as results of these.
Have held or assisted in holding .... special meetings.
Had .... conversions in these meetings.
Have had .... conversions on my charge.
Reported .... times to the President.
Made .... written reports to my quarterly conference.
Administered the sacrament .... times at each church.
Have given .... Disciplines to new members.
Have collected $..... for church debt.
Have raised $..... for parsonage debt.
Have raised $..... for new church building.
Have raised $..... for new parsonage.
Have fixed pastor's salary for next year at $.....
Have raised $..... for local purposes.
Have raised $..... for Conference claims.
Have .... Sunday schools.. .. ..
Have .... scholars, officers, and teachers.
Church is insured for $..... (Give names and amounts if more than one.)
Parsonage insured for $.....
Have had .... accessions; present membership is .....
Have raised for all purposes $....., which is .. per cent. of all assessments.
(Below the spiritual condition of the work may be briefly stated with other matters of general interest not given above.)

THE SUMMER CONFERENCE.

We are publishing the program of our Pastors' Conference this week because we are exceedingly anxious to get all of our pastors to plan to be present. We believe that you will admit that the program presents an assortment of topics that ought to appeal to even the most indifferent pastor. Later when we have secured the speakers for all these we expect to have it printed in full.

Remember the date—June, night of the 29th, including the 30th, 1st and 2nd of July. The place, the Children's Home, the cost not to exceed $2.50 for all expenses.

Let every pastor who has not yet given his name for membership write at once to Bro. L. W. Gerringer at Kernersville and give assurance of support.

May we suggest to our charges that are far away from High Point that you pay the expenses of your pastor to this Conference. It will be a fine token of your appreciation of his services, and it will do him great good. The cost could not possibly be much to do this for the remotest pastoral charge in our District.

R. M. Andrews, Pres. Sum. Conf.

PROVISIONAL PROGRAM OF THE PASTORS' SUMMER CONFERENCE.

Beginning Night of June 29, Continuing through July 2nd.

MONDAY NIGHT.

8 p. m. Address, The Influence of Wesley outside Methodism. Dr. Tagg.

TUESDAY.

Morning Meditations—Address, The Dawning Day.
Breakfast.
9 a. m. Lecture by Prof. Forlines.
10 a. m. Address, The Pastor as a Personal worker.
10:45 a. m. Address, the Need of an Educated Laity and Ministry.
11:30 a. m. Address, Making Our Prayer-meetings Effective.
12:30 p. m. Dinner.
2:30 p. m. Conference, Our Undeveloped Resources.
4 p. m. Round Table Discussion, Organized for Efficient Work.
Supper.
6:45 p. m. Twilight Talk, Waiting the Message.
7:30 p. m. The Work of the Holy Spirit.
8: p. m. Address, Present Day Missionary Problems. Dr. Tagg.

WEDNESDAY.

Morning Meditations—Address, By the Enemies' Fire.
Breakfast.
9 a. m. Lecture by Prof. Forlines.
10 a. m. Address, The Pastor and Prayer.
10:40 Address, Some Fundamentals.
11:30 Address, Making Pastoral Visiting More Helpful to the Pastor.
12 m. Address, Relation of Conscience to Life.
12:30 p. m. Dinner.
2:30 p. m. Business Meeting.
3 p. m. Round Table Discussion, The Advantages of a Long Pastorate.
4 p. m. Preachers Exchanging Views on Sermon Building.
Supper.
6:45 p. m. Twilight Talk, Fellowship with Jesus.
7:30 p. m. The Amusement Problem.
8 p. m. Address, Thomas a Kempis the Ascetic. Dr. Tagg.

THURSDAY.

Morning Meditations. Subject, The Right Side.
Breakfast.
9 a. m. Lecture by Prof. Forlines.
10 a. m. Address, Jesus Winning Men.
10:40 a. m. Address, The Country Pastor.
11:30 a. m. Address, The Pastor and Church Finance.
12:30 p. m. Dinner.
2:30 p. m. Round Table Discussions of Books that have been Helpful.
4 p. m. Round Table Discussion. Subject, Preaching the Bible.
Supper.
6:45 p. m. Twilight Talk, A Walk with Jehovah.
7:30 p. m. Address, Our Doctrinal Inheritance, by J. F. McCulloch.
8 p. m. Address, Some Tripod Experiences. Dr. Tagg.

THE WORLD CONFERENCE COMMISSION CALLS FOR A TRUCE OF GOD THROUGHOUT CHRISTENDOM.

To Our Christian Brethren in Every Land, Greeting.

We, the Advisory Committee, representatives by appointment of many churches in the United States, have become associated with the Commission of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the preparation of a World Conference on questions of Faith and Order as a first step towards unity. We believe in the one people of God throughout the world. We believe that now is a critically hopeful time for the world to become Christian. We believe that the present world-problems of Christianity call for a world-conference of Christians.

This proposal has already received the approval and co-operation of a large number of Christian churches; approaches are being made to others as rapidly as possible; so that we hope that ere long its world-wide representative character will be established beyond peradventure. In the work of preparation for its convening, we have no authority or desire to enter into a discussin of the important questions which the Conference itself will meet to consider. It is our immediate concern to take whatever measures may be advisable to secure the best possible presentation to the Conference of the matters to be considered. In so doing we cannot, however, remain indifferent to present conditions which may either promote or tend to thwart the purposes and hopes which the approaching World Conference should fulfil.

At the present moment some of these important issues have suddenly become matters of renewed controversy. From the mission field the long outstanding problem of Christian unity has been brought by the providence of God and set directly in the way before all Christian communions. It cannot longer be passed by. The great interests which Christian people of every name have most at heart call for its solution. But solution cannot be secured by surrender. It must be preceded by conference. Before conference there must be truce. The love of Christ for the world constrains us to ask you to join with us and with His disciples of every name in proclaiming among the churches throughout Christendom a Truce of God. Let the questions that have troubled us be fairly and clearly stated. Let scholars, Catholic and Protestant, give freely to the people whatever light from their historical studies they can throw over these subjects. More than that it is of essential importance for us to seek to understand what in the religious experience of others are the things of real value which they would not lose, and which should be conserved in the one household of faith. We pray also that each Christian communion may avoid, so far as possible, any controversial declaration of its own position in relation to others, but rather that all things be said and done as if in preparation for the coming together of faithful disciples from every nation and tongue to implore a fresh outpouring of God's Holy Spirit.

Before alll indifference, doubt and misgivings, we would hold up the belief that the Lord's prayer for the oneness of His disciples was intended to be fulfilled; and that it ought not to be impossible in the comprehension of the church, as it is practicable in the State, for men of various temperaments and divergent convictions to dwell together on agreed principles of unity. We would, therefore, urge all who hold positions of leadership or authority in the Church to labor without ceasing to work out in this generation, by mutual recognitions and possible readjustments, a practical basis of unity in liberty, in order, in truth, in power and in peace. To this end we ask your prayers.

By order of the Advisory Committee of the Commissions of the World Conference on Faith and Order: by William T. Manning, Chmn.

Robt. H. Gardiner, Secy.

WHO WINS? MEDALS OR PENNANTS, WHICH?

As announced on the third cover page of the Easter Program, the Board of Home Missions will give a beautiful Gold Medal to the Sunday school making the largest Easter offering to the work of the Board, and another just like it to the school making the largest per capita offering for this purpose. The medal for the largest offering is held by the Sunday school of the First Church, Seattle, Washington. This school has had this medal for four years, and offers it as a challenge to the whole church again this year. They retained it last year with $282 as an offering. The medal for the largest per capita offering is held by our mission school at Lawton, Oklahoma, with a per capita offering of a little more than $1.15 per member. Surely there are other schools in the denomination that can do as well, or even better. Who will hold the medals next year?

The Board of Home Missions has added a new feature to its contest this year. With the medal contest, only two schools in the denomination can win. We have added a Pennant contest. There will be pennants presented to two schools in each Conference this year under the same rules governing the medal contest. One pennant will be presented to the school in each Coinference making the largest contribution, and another to the school making the largest per capita contribution to the work of the Board. This contest is not limited to the schools using the Easter Program—all Methodist Brotestant Sunday schools may participate. Many schools do not find it convenient to hold the Easter service, but all can make an offering on Easter Sunday, and send it to the Board of Home Missions for the evangelization of America.

RULES OF THE CONTEST.

1. Notice should be given when the remittance is sent, that the school expects to compete for the Medal or the Pennant.

2. All remittances for the contest must be in hand by April 30.

3. All cash paid by Home Missionary Sunday schools previous to April 30 will be credited on the contest.

4. We will furnish envelopes for the offering if you want them, whether you hold the service or not.

The Easter offering is the annual thank-offering of the Sunday school.

We hope that the annual thank-offering will be made by every Methodist Protestant Sunday school in 1914. If we reach our aim, $20,000 from the Sunday schools for Home Missions on Easter Sunday, we shall need an offering from each one, and larger than many of them have been. About one fourth of the schools have been holding the service. An average of $10 per school would make the amount asked for. An average from one-fourth of the schools would require $40 per school. We are counting on you.

UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE.

Each Sunday school in the Methodist Protestant Church will cast a ballot on Easter Sunday. This vote will decide as to whether the Board of Home Missions must reduce the work undertaken; whether the work shall continue at its present standard; or whether we shall enlarge the work and go on to splendid victory. Vote early and often. Faithfully yours,

Charles H. Beck, Sec.

—A correspondent of the Apopka News of Florida has this interesting personal note regarding our esteemed Bro. S. V. Pickens: "No doubt the reader is aware that the Pickens family has for many years figured largely in the history of the Carolinas. It was my good fortune to fall in with a distinguished member of that family, Col. Pickens, a tall courtly old gentleman, was a confederate officer in the late Civil War, and was wounded in one of the battles of that war. His home is in Hendersonville, N. C., and he comes to spend the winter in Florida where he had an orange grove. He talked freely, frankly, and intelligently, about the war and its outcome. He seemed to harbor no grudge or ill will against the north, but to be entirely willing to accept the results as settled and satisfactory. Evidently he is thoroughly reconstructed.

"Among many interesting incidents related by him was one concerning Horace Greely, which I do not recall seeing in print. At a certain stage of internecine strife, Mr. Greely went to England with the hope to turn the tide of British public feeling from its then southward trend, toward the north. He was scheduled to speak in a certain city on a given evening. When the hour came, the American faced an unsympathetic, if not unfriendly, audience. When he rose to speak, they hissed him vigorously, and he sat down. He made three attempts with the same result. At the fourth effort, a burly Irishman arose in the audience, with the query, Might I ask yez a question, sorr?' 'You may,' was the response, 'and if I can answer it, I will.' 'Well, didn't yez say in yez paper that you could whip the Southerners in four months time?' 'I believe that something like that was said.' 'Well, now, why didn't ye do it?' Like a flash came the retort, 'Because they are Americans. Had they been Englishmen or Irishmen, we should have whipped them out of hand.' This stroke of wit settled the feeling of the audience, so that Mr. Greely was suffered to go on with his address."

Continued from page 9.

continued to give us all during the year. Got home today from making three calls, and found my buggy overtaxed and more was offered that I could not take on. Bro. Wyatt has been a father to us in our sickness. The promise of God to be a father to the fatherless is plain to me now. I used to wonder how He did it, but know now. Mrs. Wyatt, his wife, is not one whit behind him when it comes to looking after the pastor's family. A preacher of another church said the other day that he wished he had just one member like her.

Since we have been living in Easley we have been depending on sympathy for milk and butter. She gives a sufficient supply. Some people say "she goes dry often," but we haven't found it so. I appreciate very much the fact that Bros. Julius Watson, H. A. Foster and R. F. Wyatt have kept our woodpile from going out of existence. My last visit to Harmony was by rail. When ready to return Miss Kate Medlock handed my railroad fare to me excepting 75 cents which was paid by Bro. C. A. Moore and wife, and was told "this isn't salary." These gifts encourage a pastor. We received into the church in March at Fair View Mrs. ` ildred Henderson. She is a godly woman; glad to receive her. She was formerly a Baptist.

W. A. Lama.r

Asheville.

You will be glad to know that Mrs. Swain is at home again, and practically recovered from her operations. We are all delighted that it is so.

Work on the church is progressing nicely, although it is now confined to the interior. The supply of brick gave out when the men were about two-thirds done, and we are having to wait for the balance of the brick to be burnt before the exterior can be finished. But that is a matter of not more than a week, since the brick is in the kiln. With the brick they had, the masons were able to complete the entire south side of the building, and got the other side and both ends well along, so that, when the brick comes, it will not take more than a week for the whole exterior to be finished. The carpenters are putting up the ceiling, and fitting the window sash now.

Our men folks in the Sunday school have organized themselves, and have named the class the "Rough and Ready Class." The name is well taken. The men that compose it are rough—meaning by that just common folks, without airs,—and they are ready, ready for any service that they are called on to do.

A farewell reception was given to one of our members, Mrs. Mary Briggs, last Friday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Schreyer. Mrs. Briggs is moving to Kentucky. We are sorry to have to give her up.

The financial report is good this week; the best it has been I think since the campaign started. I want to make a remark or two about some of the items in this report. We are grateful in a larger degree than we can say for each amount, and do not single out some for comment because we appreciate these more than the others, but because of the circumstances connected with them. Mrs. Hattie Fleming, who sends us a check for $25, is a member of our church in Fairmont, W. Va. This is the first amount received from outside N. Carolina. The opportunity here is one that the North Carolina Conference,—I mean the membership throughout the state —ought to take advantage of. It ought to be a matter of regret that those outside this state are seeing it before you do. The quarter was given by a little boy who was paid by his grandfather to keep his ducks while he was in Florida for a few weeks. The boy divided his money, and gives the half of it to the work of the church. I wish we all might practice such self-sacrice. How much we need it here!

C. W. Bates.

ASHEVILLE CHURCH BUILDING FUND

rs. Hattie Fleming	$25.00
"A Friend in High Point"	15.00
Miss Cora Carter	5.00
Rev. C. L. Whitaktr	5.00
Mr. Jasper Roberts	5.00
Dr. I. N. Gill	5.00
Mr. W. G. Burgin	5.00
Mrs. J. McNeely	1.00
Rev. James Pickens	1.00
By ` r. C. C. Greenwood	5.00
William Swain, Jr.,	...25

FROM OUR REPORTERS.

Union Chapel, Granville Ct.

On account of the deepest snow of the winter our pastor could not fill his regular appointment at Union last Sunday. Yesterday being the fifth Sunday he came and preached, although the day was rough and the attendance reduced. He preached a good sermon. Owing to rough weather our S. S. has not averaged as high as it has been; but as spring opens up we are expecting a larger school. We look around and see so many that have good opportunities to go to S. S. and are so careless and indifferent as to how or where they spend the Sabbath it makes us sad.

We are glad to know that Mr. Clifton Floyd is recovering from pneumonia. Hope he will soon be able to be out again.

Bettie Davis, Rep.

Winston.

Our series of meetings, begun three weeks ago, closed last night. II was truly a glorious meeting, and Bro. Tayor's ardent labors for a successful revival were rewarded as night after night he saw the large congregations assemble and the devout and prayerful attention given to the preached word. A solemn awe seemed to pervade every service as though each one present felt the presence of the Holy Spirit in our midst.

Bro. Pender conducted the music which on several occasions was simply sublime and well calculated to inspire and elevate our thoughts to things heavenly and divine. Brother Bethea was with us for nearly two weeks and his heart-searching sermons were well directed and effectual and we all regretted when he had to leave to go to his own work, but we all extend to him a cordial invitation to come again. Pres. Cecil was with us on the second Sunday of our meeting and preached an eloquent sermon, full of true gospel. He regretted, however, that his official visit occurred during our special meeting. The inclement weather prevented our hearing Bro. Gerringer who came up and preached for us one night. We regret that we failed to hear him, as we are told that he is a young man of rare consecration and ability.

We had quite a number of converts and others were reclaimed and have made a new start for Heaven and immortal glory. Some of the converts have joined the church; others are to be received next Sunday.

Nearly all of our city pastors attended our meeting and gave us the aid of their presence and prayers. Dr. Bain, of Centenary church, preached for us twice. Bro.

Taylor is exceedingly popular with all the pastors.

We believe our meeting was and will continue to be a benediction to this city. May we not have received the grace of God in vain.

A vote of thanks is due to Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. J. R. Cummings who so kindly entertained our visiting brethren in their homes. Reporter.

BURLINGTON.

Our attendance was 206 last Sunday, which was a decided increase over the two previous Sundays. This was a good attendance considering the inclemency of the weather. The offering amounted to $4.90.

The children are still being trained for the Easter exercises, and the choir met Sunday afternoon for special practice in preparing music for the Easter service.

A short while before the Sunday-school hour Sunday morning, our pastor was called upon to perform the ceremony which united in marriage Mr. William Mann and Miss Pearl Wagoner, at the parsonage. These young people are very popular in this community, and have a host of friends who wish them much happiness and prosperity in life. Mr. and Mrs. Mann will reside in the southern part of Alamance county on a farm.

Mr. M. G. Curl, one of our highly esteemed Baracas and one of our best Sunday school and church workers, left last week for Alabama where he will engage in the fruit tree business. We are sorry to lose Mr. Curl, as he is a most splendid young man. We wish him success in his new field of labors.

Miss Cuma Reitzel, of near Liberty, is spending a few weeks with her cousin, Mr. T. T. Stafford.

C. B. Way, Reporter.

UNION GROVE, MOCKSVILLE CT.

Pres. Cecil preached a good sermon here on Tuesday night, Mar. 17. It was enjoyed by all present, and there would have been more out but for sickness in the neighborhood.

Bro. Self failed to fill his last appointment on account of sickness. We are expecting him to preach on the first Saturday night and Sunday at 11 a. m., April 4-5.

Our S. S. is coming right on, though our attendance is small.. Hope for better attendance soon. Measles is among our people now.

Had a singing at Mr. S. S. Templeton's Sunday afternoon which was enjoyed by all present. Reporter.

PILOT CHURCH.

We are still living and trusting in the Lord. Our Sunday school closed at Christmas which ought not to have been done, but most of the weather has been too bad to go, as most of us have quite a way to go. But we reorganized Mar. 22 for the summer and I truly hope we will have a better school this year than ever before.

Our pastor, Rev. A. L. Hunter, has been very faithful to us this winter; he hasn't missed a single appointment at our church. Pres. Cecil preached for us last Tuesday, March 24. He certainly delivered a fine sermon.

Mr. Ernest Moser and little Hazel Lawson who had pneumonia are improving very fast. Etta Whitaker, Rep.

Pinnacle, N. C.

ROSENEATH, ROANOKE CT.

Bro. Davis preached another most helpful sermon for us yesterday morning. We had a good congregation although the day was cloudy. He explained to us so clearly that we are either for God or against Him. I hope that more of us may determine from this time on to work more faithfully for our Master.

We also elected officers for our Sunday school: H. C. Neal, Supt.; Marion Ivey, assistant; A. V. Price, secretary; Miss Era Staton, treasurer. We will start next Sunday; hope we will have a good many out on that day. Let us work for a good school.

We are still soliciting funds for our church. We hope we can write more about it later. I will say we are getting on nicely with it, and the solicitors seem encouraged. Emma V. Ivey.

March 30, 1914.

MIDWAY, HAW RIVER CT.

Our pastor, Bro. Ashburn, filled his regular appointment at this place the second Sunday afternoon. And he also preached on Saturday before the fourth Sunday at eleven, and held quarterly meeting in the evening. There were not very many present on account of the bad weather. The business was transacted in a spirit of love. Bros. L. R. Dixon and James Weatherly are nominees for delegate to Annual Conference.

Bro. Ashburn preached on Sunday a. m. to a small but attentive congregation. We haven't had S. S. since the third Sunday on account of bad weather and our Supt. not being able to come, but am glad to know that he is better at present.

Mrs. Tom Bowman, little James Apple and Mr. Will Hubbard's little girl are right sick with pneumonia; will ask the prayers of all the Herald readers for their speedy recovery. Ella Dixon Apple.

March 30, 1914.

BETHESDA NEWS.

Last Thursday, March 19, a crowd of friends and relatives gathered at the home of Mrs. Geo. Wagner in honor of her 90th birthday. There were 90 people present. Ten years ago this occasion was celebrated and at that time she was 80 years old and there were 80 people present. Strange as it may seem, but the greater the number of years the greater the number of people who attend these gatherings. It is sufficient evidence to show that attention and love for Grandma in her last years are increasing. Relatives from all parts of the county and adjoining counties were present. It was a beautiful day. A large table had been prepared and placed out on the spacious lawn. The linen was spread and boxes and baskets of good things to eat were brought forth and set in order upon the table. A more artistic display, a greater variety and a prettier dinner table was never seen than this one was.

All the children and grandchildren around the table with Grandma at the head was the most beautiful scene of all. Talks and speeches, music, both instrumental and vocal, was the program of the afternoon, and very much enjoyed by all present.

While she is bowed with the weight of many years and the frost of many winters has brought to her locks silver threads among the gold, there was never a more pleasant countenance and a sweeter disposition in an eighteen-year-old girl than Grandma now has. At the closing hour when her children were telling her goodbye and wishing her many happy birthdays like this one was, she seemed to be as sturdy and serene as the strongest. Ah, it only means a well-spent life. Grandma's life is indeed a blessing to the world and her descendants are 10 children, 6 living; 69 grand-children, 48 living 75 great-grandchildren, 67 living; 1 great-great-grandchild.

Rev. C. A. Cecil, our beloved president, preached a strong sermon at Bethesda last Sunday. Roby Wagner.

—We thank Rev. J. S. Williams, of Asheville, for his "Human Interest Story." This was written at the request of a friend, and will be read with interest by many of our readers. We hope Bro. Williams will furnish us some more stories, for he is in a position to find the material easily.

—Bro. Klein is still appealing for funds to buy a multigraph to multiply his usefulness as our Missionary Secretary. His persistent appeals should be rewarded.

IN MEMORIAM.

Redding.

Miss Martha Catharine Redding departed this life Feb. 18, 1914. She was born in Randolph County Nov. 23, 1856.

Early in life she heard the call of the Holy Spirit to give her heart to Christ and yielded, joining the Charlotte Methodist Protestant Church, near Asheboro, and remained a faithful member till a few years before her death when she placed her letter with Grace M. P. Church, Greensboro.

Nature endowed her for leadership in the battle of life. She was constituted by nature and training for a teacher. She knew the value of an immortal soul and was willing to wrestle with the dullest until the consciousness of duty dawned in that life. Patient, yet firm and conscientious in all she did she commanded the highest regards of all who went to school to her and by her consistent, godly walk, she commended her Lord to those who came daily in touch with her.

For years she taught public school in many towns and districts in Randolph Co., when by both precept and example she enlarged the conceptions of life of those who came to her and left scores there today who feel a keen sense of indebtedness to her for the faithful service she rendered them. She wielded a remarkable influence over children. They loved her and yielded an unquestioned obedience to her will, and she was equally willing to grant all their requests that were right and proper.

When she came to make her home in the home of one of the members of Grace church she left her letter at her old home church, but when she was told by one of the children of that home that he wanted her to join Grace church with him, she at once sent for her letter and placed it where it remained until her death.

A few months before her death she was called by Supt. Garrett of the Children's Home to be his assistant in caring for the homeless ones under his charge. The work appealed to her, she gladly took up the arduous duties and rejoiced with him in the great work they are doing there till disease weakened her and she was compelled to take her bed. The physician saw at once that she was very ill and every thing was done for her that medical skill could devise, she was cared for by a trained nurse, but she never responded to the treatment, and gradually grew worse till the end came when she passed peacefully over to the other shore.

A brief service was held in the Home by the writer amidst the broken-hearted little folks and loved ones before her body was taken back to her old home church. With fitting service and tender hands she was borne to her resting place in that quiet country church yard to await the resurrection morning.

Her father and mother had gone on before her. She leaves one sister, Mrs. B. F. Bulla, and brother, W. F. Redding, the only members of her immediate family.

We pray that the power of her good example may continue to bear rich fruit for the Master's vineyard and that her mantle of service may fall upon others.

R. M Andrews.

Sapp.

Jemima Caroline Sapp w called to her eternal reward on Sunday morning, March 22, at the age of 65 years and one month. Her husband, the late Thomas Benton Sapp, died a few years ago. Sister Sapp has been a follower of Christ for 23 years; and a member of the Friends church. For several weeks she had been confined to her bed. On March 9, fearing lest she should leave something undone, at her request baptism was performed by the writer; and the request given him that her name be presented to the church at Hickory Ridge, at the next appointment, which request was complied with.

She leaves six children and one sister and four brothers to mourn for her. In her sickness she was very patient.

A large number of people gathered at the Griffin Cemetery to pay their last respects to the deceased, where the writer conducted the funeral services on Monday evening, and her remains were laid by the grave of her husband. A. O. Lindley.

T. R. Totten Dead.

I received a sad telegram to-day from Mr. Tom Carroll, grandson of Bro. T. R. Totten. I promised him if I outlived him I would attend his funeral, if I could. It was late in the day. I am under the treatment of a physician; he said I must deny all the calls I could. The train connections were such I would have had to be up about all night to get there in time for the burial, 2 p. m., March 29th. I am about 175 miles away. Uncle Totten was the cause of my going to Haw River Ct. 23 years ago. He actually shouted for joy when I was sent back four years ago. He has ridden hundreds of miles with me and we have slept together more than 100 nights. He stayed with my wife and daughter while I was at last Conference and waited on them just like they were his own folks. When we separated in Reidsville he said: "Bro. Raper, how I will miss you." He turned to leave without looking at me. He has written me several times. He was the starter of Bethany Church. He walked four miles many Sundays to S. S. there. He was always interested in that church, Haw River Ct. and the cause of Christ

He may have had some strange ways—we all have; but few knew him better than I and my family. I feel that he is in the glory world. He spent many days and nights in my home. He felt so much at home; he would come in without knocking. If he came there and we were away, he would take a seat in the porch and wait our coming. How sad to me to know he is gone. But I feel that he with many others will be waiting and watching for me at the beautiful gate. He was 83 years old. May the Lord keep his loved ones very preciously. Sorry I did not get to go. C. E. M. Raper.

March 28, 1914.

George Scarboro.

On Sunday, Mar. 22, Bro. George Scarboro passed from this life at the age of about 47 years. His wife preceded him about three weeks to whom he had given his greatest care in her sickness for about 5 months. A few days after her burial his two oldest children nearly grown were taken with pneumonia. This made his task very hard, even with good help to wait on them. When he fell a victim to the fatal disease he lived but a short time. It was a pitiful scene to look on, to see the corpse of a father and the two oldest still in bed sick, a broken-up home. The three children deserve help and the prayers of praying people. Bro. Scarboro was a good man in his home, in his community, and also in his church, and was ready to do whatever he could for his Master's cause. He leaves an aged father and brothers and sisters and three children to mourn their loss, and many friends, but we believe their loss is his eternal gain.

His body now sleeps in the graveyard at Lineberry church, Davidson Ct., N. C.

N. F. Morgan.

Theophilus White.

A few days ago death came into our community and took from us Bro. Theophilus White who was born in Perquimons county. He died Mar. 20, aged 84 years and nine days. He came to Guilford county when a boy of ten years and was bound to David and Ruth Wheeler with whom he lived until his 21st birthday. He was married to Nellie Hedgecock, and to this union were born three sons and three daughters, of whom two sons and two daughters survive; namely, Jacob White, of Deep River, and Harrison White, of Jamestown, Mrs. Mesie Parrish, of Trin-

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

Greensboro, N. C.

N. B.—Following schedule figures published only as information and are not guaranteed.

1.00 A. M.—No. 29 daily, Birmingham Special, through Pullman sleeping and observation cars New York to Birmingham and Richmond to Birmingham. Luring car service.

12.48 A. M.—No. 32 daily, Southern's Limited, Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville, Augusta and Aikin to New York. Dining car service.

12.55 a. m.—No. 112 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh open at 9.15 p. m.

[illegible] daily, Birmingham special. Pullman sleeping and observation cars from Birmingham and Asheville to New York and Birmingham to Richmond. Dining car service.

2.25 a. m.—No. 31, the Southern's Southeastern Limited, Pullman sleeping cars from New York to Asheville. Day coaches. Dining car service.

3.45 a. m.—No. 45 daily local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7.10 a m.—No. 8, daily local for Richmond, connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7.20 a. m.—No. 37 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited Pullman drawing room, sleeping cars and club and observation cars New York to new Orleans. Pullman sleeping car New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman chair car Greensboro to Montgomery, solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m.—No. 108 daily local Greensboro to Goldsboro.

7.35 a. m.—No. 11, daily local through to Atlanta, sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m.—No. 154 daily except Sunday for Ramseur.

8.15 a. m.—No. 237 daily for Winston-Salem and North Wilkesboro. Pullman sleeping car Raleigh to Winston-Salem.

9.30 a. m.—No. 44 daily for Washington and points North.

9.40 a. m.—No. 144 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro; handles Atlanta Raleigh sleeping car.

12.30 p. m.—No. 21 daily for Asheville, Waynesville and local points; handles coaches and chair car through to Asheville and Waynesville.

12.50 p. m.—No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12 30 p. m.—No 21 daily for Asheville,

12.55 p. m.—No. 7 daily for Charlotte and points south.

1.40 p. m.—No. 36 daily U. S. Fast Mail for Washington, New York and points north; handles Pullman sleeping cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman sleeping car Asheville to Richmond Pullman chair car Greenville, S. C., to Washington. Day coaches. Dining car service.

2.20 p. m.—No. 207 daily for Winston-Salem, and daily execept Sunday for North Wilkesboro.

2.30 p. m.—No. 151 daily except Sunday for Madison.

3:30 p. m.—No. 230 daily except Sunday for Ramseur.

2.30 p. m.—No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4.20 p. m.—No. 22 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles chair car to Goldsboro.

6.10 p m.—No. 35 daily U. S. Fast Mail for

4.55 p. m.—No. 131 daily for Mt. Airy.

Atlanta and points south Pullman sleeping cars New York to New Orleans and Birmingham and sleeping car Richmond to Asheville which car can be occupied until 7 a. m. Pullman chair car Washington to Greenville, S. C. Day coaches. Dining car service.

6.35 p. m.—No. 235 daily for Winston-salem.

7.30 p. m.—No. 43 daily for Atlanta Sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10.13 p. m.—No. 38 daily New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited Pullman sleeping cars New Orleans, Macon, Asheville and Charlotte to New York and Pullman chair car Montgomery to Greensboro. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

10.20 p. m.—No. 233 daily for Winston-Salem.

10.31 p. m.—No. 12 daily local for Richmond; handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman, Vice-President and General Manager, Washington, D. C.; S. H. Hardwick, P T. M., Washington, D. C.; H. F. Cary, G. P. A., Washington, D. C.; R. H. DeButts, D. P. A., Charlotte, N. C.; O. F. York, P. & A, Greensboro, N C.

Chas. W. Moseley, M. D.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF

STOMACH AND INTESTINES

121 South Elm St.,

Greensboro, N. C.

Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

OVER 65 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Dr. J. E. Wyche.

DENTIST.

Office in Fisher Building, North Elm St,

Rooms 211-213,

Greensboro, N. C.

Dr. C. W. Banner.

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,

Second Floor.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.

Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.

206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C

ity, and Mrs. Bettie Thrift, of High Boint. After the death of his first wife he was married to Hannah Barton, and after her death he married Rena Schism, who with their four children survive him. He was a good, kind, affectionate father and husband and a man that always stood ready to assist in anything for the advancement of his community or country. He ws a veteran of the Civil War and a member of High Point Camp, and was held in the highest esteem by them. In the death of Theophilus White the community has sustained a loss which will be felt for years to come. He made a profession of faith in Christ when about 20 years old and joined Lebanon M. P. Church and remained a member of this church for a number of years. But for some cause he left the church and was not connected with any church for several years. Finally he became dissatisfied out of the church. He came back to the church and remained a member of this church until twelve years ago, or thereabout. He again decided to withdraw from the church and at his death he was not identified with any church. His body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Spring Hill M. P. Church. His funeral was conducted by the writer last Sunday morning at 11 o'cllock. May the Lord bless and comfort all the bereaved, and may they all so live as to be prepared to meet their father and friend in Heaven where friends and loved ones meet to part no more. Peace be to his ashes.

D. M. Loy.

March 24, 1914.

WELLONS' FAMILY DEVOTION.

A neat little book of 20 pages, the object of which is to assist in establishing family worship and systematic Bible reading. The author has been a preacher for over sixty years, and is now in his 89th year. He is so anxious to see the children reared under the influence of family worship and regular Bible reading.

The first lesson in the little book is a consecration vow before rising in the morning. Then Bible reading and prayer at the table, led by any member of the family. If the head of the family is absent, even the children may conduct it. Two appropriate forms of prayer are given, suited to the occasion, or an extemporaneous prayer may be used. Then evening services, all reading the Scripture, then prayer by some member of the family. Here are given two forms, suited for evening services, led by any member of the family, closing with music.

Then suitable forms of graces to be used by any member of the family, that all may become accustomed to asking a blessing at the table.

The object of our good brother Wellons is to do good, and he has put the price at 10 cents a copy postpaid or $1 for a dozen copies.

Order from Rev. J. W. Wellons, Elon College, N. C.

—Bishop Butler said: "We know that a life that does not pour itself freely into the common stream of public good is lost in dry and sterile sands. We know that a life spent upon self is contemptible, barren and empty." Again he speaks of confessing our sins: "The rehearsal of the wrongs that we have done in the past or suffered by us can effect no good. When conscience has done its work and we know that the past is irreparable, let the waters of oblivion bury the crimes and their consequences since human intermeddling may do more injury than good."

—The House of Representatives by a considerable majority has voted to grant Pres. Wilson's request and repeal the Panama tolls act. This was opposed by both Speaker Clark and Leader Underwood.

—Mr. Clark Kirkman, of Pleasant Garden, has returned from California after a prolonged absence.

DIED.

Fuller.

John A. Fuller, born April 17, 1849, died March 11, 1914. Bro. Fuller had been in ill health for some time, but he was not of a complaining nature and he was always so cheerful that you would hardly know of sickness unless you were to inquire particularly. He was taken to the Sarah Elizabeth Hospital, Henderson, for an operation and from a complication of troubles that the doctors could not relieve he succumbed to the master hand of death. When he was being dressed for the operating table he sang, "Where He Leads Me I will Follow," and after he was placed on the table he prayed, and the ones who were accustomed to such scenes were affected by his prayer. He rallied from the operation, but the presence of other troubles for which there seemed to be no cure was revealed, and death came to his relief. During his sickness, but while he was still able to be about the yard, the writer went to see him one day and before getting out of my buggy he asked if I ever prayed with colored people, and I replied that I would go anywhere to help one in need. So he took me to see a colored boy that was very ill with pneumonia near by. We prayed with him and sang a song together, for Bro. Fuller always loved to sing, and while we sang the poor negro gave his heart to God. "Cousin Johnnie," as he was familiarly known, was as happy as the unfortunate darky. He was always ready to help to do good. One of his last acts when he was able to go was to point a lost soul to Christ. A great climax for the ending of a Christian life. He was for many years superintendent of the Union Chapel Sunday school of which church he had been a member since boyhood and had always been a worker in the church. He was always in his place at the organ to help in the singing when at church. He will be missed. Especially in the special meetings at his church, for he was always there with a big box of dinner and all who would go were welcome and many the hungry ones he fed there. He was often criticised, but criticisms that come from those who fail in greater matters are not counted,—the others we may expect. But he was often praised. He was loved by all the children. It was a great day for my little ones when they could go to "Cousin Johnnie" 's, as they called him. It was pleasant to be in his home. He never talked about his neighbors. It had been his desire for some time that Bro. Ogburn should conduct his funeral, and finding this out, before leaving for Winston, I made this arrangement with Bro. Ogburn to come. The services were conducted from Union Chapel and the sermon was highly edifying to the large congregation present. One good woman said, "How could any one hear that sermon and not be better?"

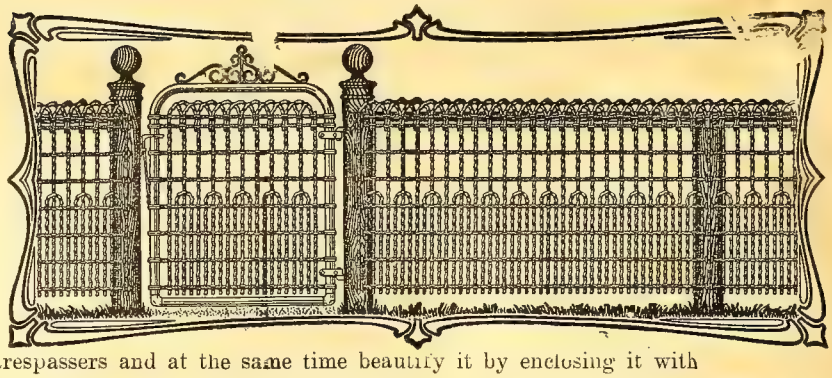
To the good wife left behind we extend our heartfelt sympathy. To the brother and sister and relatives and friends, we will miss that kindly face and smile; but how can we complain when he is in the better land? His wife speaks thus: "I wish that every one could know of his sinless life,—not that he was perfect, but I am sure that if any one would follow his earthly example they would not miss it far.". "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord; their works do follow them." May we all be able to say from ourhearts:

The path that we are treading
Is the path that saints have trod,
That leads to that beautiful city
Whose Builder and Maker is God.

N. G. Bethea.

"GET IT AT ODELL'S"

PROTECT YOUR BURIAL PLOT



from trespassers and at the same time beautify it by enclosing it with

CYCLONE ORNAMENTAL METAL FENCE.

ODELL HARDWARE CO., GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER

Absolute Security for Your Savings

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank. This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

THE YOUNG GIRL.

It is a terrible thing to send girls out into the world, and especially into the business world, where they come into constant close contact with men, without posting them in regard to the temptations and awful dangers they will encounter. Parents might as well expect that lambs would be safe in pastures infested with wolves as to send ignorant innocent young girls out among men, many of whom are brutal and sensual, and expect them to remain unharmed. If any human being in this world is to be pitied it is an ignorant, unsophisticated girl exposed to its perils.—Pictorial Review.

A TALE OUT OF SCHOOL.

In a certain city school a little girl was asked by her teacher to spell the word grateful. She did so, spelling it correctly. The teacher declared her spelling incorrect, and to punish her and correct her kept her in after school and made her write one hundred times greatful! What ought to be done with that teacher?

—Bro. Davis writes that our Enfield people are about ready to begin their new church. They have adopted the plan being followed at Asheville.

"TALENT PLAN" CONTEST.

For Every Woman of the Methodist Protestant Church in North Carolina.

Every woman in the Methodist Protestant Church in North Carolina is urged to enter into "The Talent Plan Contest" for the general fund of the North Carolina Branch of Woman's Home Missions. Contest to begin March 15th, end April 15th. Plan—Each person take 5 cents and with that amount see how much can be earned during the month. Reports and money should be sent to Miss Pearl McCulloch, Greensboro, N. C.

The person earning the most money in the "Talent Plan Contest" will receive a nice Bible.

make offerings to the gods and to the ancestors. Their family have lived there for 500 years. I know this is a poor picture of Soochow and these Chinese homes. How I wish I could have taken pictures of the rooms—but it was so dark that picture-taking was out of the question.

We left Soochow this morning at 9:30 feeling that we would like to go again to "beautiful Soo," as the Chinese call it. We sail tomorrow afternoon (Oct 25) for the South. Cordially, Nancy Virginia Grose.

"I NEVER HAVE."

Peter was to receive his great commission. When, by a marvelous vision of the plan of redemption that was to include the whole world, he was shown his task, he offered as an excuse for deep-seated racial prejudice that he had never done such a thing before.

That time-worn, battered excuse has been presented from that hour to this.

"I never have been interested in politics, nor voted but twice," said a man nearing fifty, a man well up in literary circles. There was scarcely a day when he did not display some narrowness, or some ignorancee of public affairs, the retributive justice he could not escape for failure of public duty.

"I never have been interested in foreign missions." Thousands are the victims of this prejudice, who yet strangely enough call themselves disciples of Christ, and they halt painfully along, seemingly unaware of their crippled Christian life.

"I never have been to college, and see how well I've come out," said a father of plethoric bankbook and emaciated intelligence to the son, to whom a college course would have proved undoubtedly the successful road to manhood. At mid-life the son, with his father's ways exaggerated, and many a vice added, is the bewilderment as the disgrace of the parent who knew but a single way.

"I never have entertained save my kinfolk," said a woman with a niggardly stock of ideas and no vision beyond her garden gate, and when life's burdens were laid on her she bent beneath them, wholly unaware that, with larger scope of life, all its distresses are more easily borne.

"I never have taken any part in the prayer meeting," so she thought the social weekly gathering dull, was easily persuaded not to attend it, and had an unerring gift for criticism of those who did. What happened? Instead of going "from strength to strength," her path led from weakness to weakness.

The members of the "Never Have" Club are many. Peter thought better of it and said wisely, "What was I that I could withstand God?" Is it not precisely what we need to see, that, instead of fancying we have said the last word with "I never have," we are being disobedient to a world vision, when, bidden to any service needful to humanity, we offer so flimsy an excuse? God uses greatly only men and women who obey.

The effective work of the world might easily be doubled if the "Never Haves" would only change their motto to "I always do."—Zion's Herald.

THE GRUMBLING HABIT.

Grumbling is usually worse than an act: it is a habit, and an inveterate one, very hard to get rid of. The children of Israel certainly had this habit. They were always discontented and ready to find fault. It is hard to imagine how a people could be more signally delivered and helped all the way along than they were. Surely they ought to be one people who should never give way to the murmurings of discontent. Their proneness to this sin teaches us that grumbling is no true sign of ill fortune. On the contrary, we often find people most cheerful who are in the saddest circumstances. There is a story about a negro in jail in Kentucky who was of a musical turn of mind. He missed his banjo; but instead of fretting and complaining about this, he set to work to make one. With the tin pan in which his food was brought he made the head of his instrument. A rough piece of poplar whittled down with an old broken-bladed Barlow knife was made into the neck and screws. He took 12 cents, all the money he had, and by the aid of his jailor bought five strings, and his odd-looking banjo, under his skillful touch, was ready to make the sweetest music. It is doubtful, after all, whether there is any real need for fault-finding and worry in this world. The bad things are not as bad as they seem, and there are always good things. Said an old farmer, "I had plowed around a rock in one of my fields for five years, and I had broken a mowing machine knife against it, besides losing the use of the ground where it lay, supposing that it was such a large rock that it would take too much time and labor to remove it. But one day when I began to plow for corn I thought that by and by I should be likely to break my cultivator against that rock. So I took a crowbar and began to poke around it to size it up and then go to work in earnest to get it out of the way. It was one of the surprises of my life to find that it was a little more than two feet long. It had been standing on its edge and was so light that I lifted it into the wagon without help."—Edward S. Lewis, in the Sunday School Journal.

TEN GREATEST MODERN INVENTIONS.

Wireless Telegraphy, the New Means of Communication.

If the aeroplane is the most spectacular achievement of this age, wireless telegraphy appeals most to our imagination and dramatic sense. Its importance and significance however are in direct proportion to the hold it has on our interest. The scheme of transmitting intelligence was never complete so long as ships at sea and remotely situated stations could not be communicated with. "Wireless" supplied this "missing link" and made intercommunication as universal as the world is wide. In the short fifteen years since its introduction by Marconi, wireless apparatus has become part of the equipment of every modern sea-going and naval vessel, has been placed in hundreds of government establishments and dozens of relatively inaccessible stations, has become an important factor in military and naval operations, and, most important of all, has robbed the sea of its terrors and saved thousands of lives through its operation. Rapid as has been its growth, it is but in the infancy of its development and usefulness and promises a career in overland and inter-continental communication quite as startling as its performances at sea.—William I. Wyman in Scientific American.

He had decided at least to make the great avowal, convinced that a word would suffice to assure his good fortune. He only lacked a beginning, a beautiful, poetic, inspiring beginning. At last he found it.

Presenting himself to the desired one, and suddenly showing her a ring, he said, "My love for you is like this ring; it has no end."

The young lady examined the little golden circlet for awhile with close attention, and then returned it to him.

"My love for you is also like this ring; it has no beginning."—The Youth's Companion.

—The space between a man's ideal and the man himself is his opportunity.—Margaret Deland.

AN APPRECIATION OF DR. REITZEL

By W. R. Lowdermilk

I would like to add this testimony in behalf of our late and much lamented Dr. J. R. Reitzel. When I first met him at High Point I was much impressed with him, and as I came to know him better and learned more of his Christian character and devotion to every good cause, my love and admiration for him grew to more than a mere love for a brother in the church. I could trust him. I could depend on him. I knew just where to find him. We can not estimate our loss in cold mathematical calculation. We have to consult our better nature, our inner life, the best that is in us, in order that we may get a faint conception of our loss in the community, in the church, in the home.

He was eminently worthy of the expression "He was a great man," with all that that term implies. But when we come to look at the other side, the great amount of good he had done in a comparatively short life, his influence for good, the impressions he has made on human hearts that will last through eternity, the pains he has relieved of both body and soul, our great sorrow is somewhat palliated and our minds naturally turn to a brighter picture, and we are somewhat compensated in the thought that the real Dr. Reitzel is not dead, but lives. He has moved up into higher territory where there is no sin, no mishaps, no death. Death to him was not his worst day but his best day. It was not his last day, but his first day. It was his reaping day. It was his transplanting day. It was his robing day, when he took off this mortal robe and put on the robe of immortality. It was his crowning day when he took off this mortal crown and put on the crown of immortality. It was the day when he struck hands with loved ones beyond the river. Do we not almost envy him today! Would we call him back again to suffer the sins and pains of this lower life? Or do we not rather congratulate him on his early arrival into the kingdom—the uplands of eternity?

Sister Reitzel, he is just over there wating for you and loved ones. May God bless [illegible]

—Bro. J. G. Rogers, of Burlington, was [illegible] yesterday.

—Bro. W. A. Bowman was in Greensboro on Wednesday.

—Mrs. K. H. Kime has returned from her winter home in Florida to her summer home in Burlington, N. C. How good it must be to be a migratory bird!

WORLD CONFERENCE ON FAITH AND ORDER.

Bulletin No. 5.

In May, 1913, the Commission of the Protestan Episcopal Church on the World Conference on Christian Faith and Order, which was proposed by the Convention of 1910 of the Protestant Episcopal Church as the next step toward Christian Unity, appointed a deputation of non-Episcopal ministers to visit the communions, other than the Anglican, of England, Ireland and Scoland, in the interest of the Conference. The Deputation, as appointed, consisted of the Rev. Newman Smyth, D. D., of the Congregational Church; Bishop J. W. Hamilton, LL. D., of the Methodist Episcopal Church; the Rev. J. H. Jowett, D. D., and the Rev. W. H. Roberts, D. D., of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A.; and the Rev. Peter Ainslie, D. D., of the Disciples of Christ. Bishop Hamilton and Dr. Jowett were unable to go.

Dr. Smyth, Dr. Roberts and Dr. Ainslie reached London on January 7, 1914. The Rev. Tissington Tatlow, M. A., Secretary of he Archbishops' Committee of the Church of England on the World Conference, had arranged a program for their meetings and rendered invaluable service to them throughout their tour.

The leading religious and secular papers of London recognized the importance of their mission and gave much space to it. The first meeting was held in the Whitefield Tabernacle with members of the Swanwick Free Church Fellowship, an organization of about three hundred young ministers of the non-Anglican churches who have bound themselves together prayerfully "in the light of all new knowledge and scientific method to re-examine and, if need be, re-express for our own time the fundamental affirmations of the faith," desiring "to cultivate a fraternal spirit in all parts of the Christian Church."

Conferences were held with the official representatives of the Presbyterian communion with all branches of the Church of England, of the Primitive Methodists, of the Congregational Union of England and Wales, with the Committee on Unity of the Anglican Fellowship, with the officers of the Church of Scotland, the United Free Church of Scotland, the Presbyterian Church of Ireland, the Congregational Church in Scotland, the Christian Unity Association of Scotland, the Welsh Calvinistic Methotists, the Baptist Union of Great Britain and Ireland, the Wesleyans, the United Methodists, the Association for the Promotion of the Unity of Christendom, the Friends, the Moravians, the Disciples of Christ, the Archbishop's Committee of the Church of England, and the Churchmen's Union.

In all, they met thirty-one groups in conference and accepted twenty invitations of a social character for further conference with representative men. In all instances their message was sympathetically received, and from all the conferences they had the definite promise of recommending to the various annual meetings the appointment of commissions to co-operate in arranging for and conducting the World Conference. Not only did they thus advance the project of that Conference, but they were the means of bringing the Christians of England, Scotland and Ireland into much closer relation and sympathy and thus, perhaps, to bring about the beginnings of the healings of division there.

A fuller report is in the hands of the printer and may be had free on application to Robert H. Gardiner, Gardiner, Maine, U. S. A., with pamphlets showing how the World Conference is expected to prepare the way for Christian Unity.

ADVANCE STEPS IN THE WORK OF EVANGELISM

By Rev. W. E. Biederwolf,

General Secretary of the Commission on Evangelism of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

This article is written by an evangelist. Surely he needs no apology for his enthusiasm for and interest in evangelism as long as he does not lose sight of the significant place which other forms of Christian activity occupy in the program of the world's redemption.

It is utter folly to think about the day of evangelism being past. This special form of Christian enterprise is here today as never before, and present time conditions with their resultant problems which have been and are apparently increasing in their seriousness and perplexity, are calling the church to such a task that she can neglect it only at her peril.

It is because of the recognition of this fact and because of the crying need for more thorough ecclesiastical supervision of this work, that the Commission on Evangelism of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ has been called into existence.

It is clear that we must not be satisfied with present conditions. I speak for the strongest and most successful evangelists of the country when I say that they will rejoice in any proposed elevation of the standard of the work to which they are devoting their lives, and they realize that the supervision, the restraint and the encouragement so much needed can only come from the church herself.

It is premature to talk very much at present of any extensive and thoroughly developed plans. The very nature of the situation and the seriousness of the problems with which the Commission will have to deal, make this altogether evident and demand that the policy pursued be a conservative one.

The immediate work of the Commission will relate to the appointment, by each of the co-operating denominations, of a national evangelistic committee, where such committee does not already exist, for the purpose of superintending the evangelistic work of its own denomination and of co-operating in any general work throughout the country which the Commission on Evangelism of the Federal Council may inaugurate. The majority of the constituent bodies have already appointed such committees and the wisdom of it has been amply manifested by what the committees have accomplished.

An endeavor also is contemplated looking toward the appointment of Credential Commitees by the different Synods, Conferences, Conventions and other ecclesiastical units which will make it their studied business to acquaint themselves fully as to the fitness of the men of their own denomination who desire to engage in evangelistic work.

It is also hoped that co-operation can be secured with the Theological Seminaries of the country and kindred institutions, in arranging for the students a series of lectures on the general subject of evangelism by either some competent evangelist or evangelistic pastor, in conjunction with which there could be furnished a practical illustration of evangelistic work by the conduct of a series of regular evangelistic meetings in which the students could be enlisted in personal evangelism and other features of the work. Corespondence has already been held with many of the Theological Seminaries and response has been enthusiastically favorable.

The conducting of conferences for pastors and interested laymen in the various county seats or in some center easy of access for the pastors and laymen of several counties will also constitute part of the Commission's work.

These matters together with the creation of a body of literature calling the people of God to a realizing sense of their responsibility for the unsaved and dealing with valid methods of evangelistic work, will answer to some extent the many inquiries as to the purpose and plans of the Commission.

No one realizes the difficulties of the situation or the seriousness of the problems confronting the Commission, more than the Commission itself. The pastors and evangelists of this country must come together on a basis of operation which will command the respect and approval of the best judgment in the church in general. And when it shall please God to bring us to one mind concerning this matter, and we give ourselves without reserve to do His will, we shall find the way opening along which we can move, pastors and evangelists together, in a sane and thorough evangelism, both of a pastoral sort and of a vocational or so-called profesional kind, out into the whitened fields of harvest, and, please God, the day of land-wide revival and of great in-gathering, for which Christians have so long yearned and prayed, shall dawn upon us.

CHILDREN'S HOME

Report of Superintendent.

Liberty S. S.	$13.10
Bethany S. S., Reidsville Ct.	1.20
Mill Grove, Chorlotte Ct.	1.70
St. Paul, St. Paul Ct.	2.00
Union Chapel S. S., Granville Ct...	3.61
D. H. Parsons, High Point	5.00
Welch Memorial S. S., High Pt...	3.13
Star S. S.	2.55
Grace S. S., Greensboro	15.63
C. E. McCulloch, Wilmington	10.00
Charlotte S. S., Richland Ct.	2.00
Mrs. Emma Guthrie, Concord, Saxapahaw Ct.	1.00
Mrs. Daisy Guthrie, Concord	.50
Mrs. T. H. Moore, Concord	.50
Mrs. Jno. Morrow, Orange Chapel, Saxapahaw Ct.	.50
Mrs. Jno. Crawford, Orange Chapel	.50
Orange Chapel	.50
Mrs. — Montgomery, High Point..	1.00
Total	$64.42

$2.75 credited J. P. Owen last week should have been Shoals S. S.

Thomasville, J. W. Boyles and — Connell, sugar, lemons and ice; Mrs. Boyles, table cloth, aprons and sheets.

Do you want to know some of our needs just now? Table linen and material for sheets and pillow cases.

Dr. S. S. Coe, a promising young physician of High Point, gives his services in the Home since the death of Dr. Reitzel.

Dr. J. W. Long, Greensboro, a very prominent surgeon, offers to do our surgery gratis.

H. A. Garrett.

—During the twenty-five years of Emperor William's reign in Germany the population has increased from 48,000,000 to 68,000,000. In this time the area of land under cultivation has not increased and the rural population has remained stationary.

—The Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research received an additional endowment of $1,000,000 from Mr. Rockefeller for the study of the diseases of animals, such as cattle tuuberculosis and hog cholera, which cause vast economic losses to the country.

—Absolute prohibition will prevail in the United States navy after July 1 next. Secretary Daniels has made public a sweeping order, which will not only abolish the traditional "wine mess" of the officers, but will bar all alcoholic liquors from every ship and shore station of the navy..

—We often pray: "Lord, help me to do my work." As we learn more of the Gospel we pray: "Lord, help me to do Thy work." But as we come closer to Christ we see that the prayer we need to pray is: "Lord, do Thy work through me."—Selected

The number of lepers in the Philippines has been reduced from 5,000 to 2,000 since the United States took over the country; and the number of new cases, from 700 in a year to 200. There were formerly 40,000 deaths in a year from smallpox; now there are only 300 in all the islands.

—Men and Missions reports that Baron Edmund Rothschild has purchased a large tract of land in Palestine for archaeological investigation. He is planning to build on it a Jewish museum, and expects, in the surrounding region, to find much information regarding the history and times of the kings of Israel.

—A Chinese girl, Miss Yarlock Lowe, is studying law in Berkeley, Cali., and will return to China to practise. She says: "It is for the lawyers of China to help in the re-making of the nation; in shaping new laws and enforcing them, and in protecting the interests of the Chinese people while making China a nation of influence in the world."

—Since the two and one-half-cent passenger rate went into effect on the Louisville and Nashville and the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railroads, the companies have agreed to issue penny script in books of one thousand miles at the rate of two cents the mile. This script will be good on practically every railroad in the South and Southeast.

A PIONEER MISSIONARY'S HUNT FOR A WORD.

A missionary in Eastern Equatorial Africa tells this incident to illustrate the difficulty of reaching a people who have no written language. There was one word which it took me two and one-half years to get. It was in my thoughts by day and in my dreams by night, and I shall never forget the thrill of joy that came to me when the long search was rewarded. One night my people were seated around the campfire. I listened to their stories, and finally my head man, Kikuvi, told a story of a man who was attacked by a lion. But he did not say a word that I could construe to be the one I wanted. I was about to turn away when he turned to me and said: "Bwa-na-nu-ku-than-i-wa na Ki-ku-vi"—"The master was saved by Ki-ku-vi." I immediately said to him, "Uk-uthan-ie Bwana?"—"You saved the master?" "Yes," said he. "Why," said I, "this is the word I have been wanting you to tell me all these days, because I wanted to tell you that Jesus, the Son of God, died to—." He turned to me, his black face lighting up in the lurid blaze of the campfire, and said, "Master, I understand now! This is what you have been trying to tell us all these moons, Jesus died to save us."

AN OPTIMIST.

Some one has said that an optimist is one who can scent a harvest while snow still covers the ground. But I read a better definition than that. It was in a story. The young man in the story was trying to establish himself as a peach grower. He had worked for years, and invested his all in a peach orchard, which at last bloomed bounteously—and then came a frost. He didn't go to church the next Sunday, nor the next, nor the next. His minister went to hunt him up, and inquired the reason. The discouraged young fellow exclaimed: "No, and what is more, I'm not coming any more. Do you think I can worship a God who loves me so little that He will let a frost kill all my peaches?"

The old minister looked at him a moment in silence, and then replied kindly: "Young man, God loves you better than He does your peaches. He knows that, while peaches do better without frosts, it is impossible to grow the best men without frosts. His object is to grow men, not peaches."

—The Northern Baptist Convention will meet in Boston, Mass., June 17-25.

TO THE NATIONAL CONGRESS OF THE DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

Shortly after the last National Congress I addressed a letter to the regent of every chapter and State organization in the United States calling attention to a resolution adopted by it favoring the restoration of the sale of alcoholic liquor in the Army Post Exchange.

The many replies in my possession prove that many delegates did not know or realize what was being done when this was passed and the action already taken by various chapters and some State bodies seems to indicate that it does not represent the real sentiment of your organization.

Last fall the great National Convention of the Anti-saloon League of America representing the federated temperance forces of the Nation, including the overwhelming majority of the churches of the country, adopted a resolution respectfully requesting your National Congress to rescind this action. The Board of Managers of the Temperance Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, at the annual meeting at Topeka, Kansas, in November, representing three million communicants and ten million adherents took similar action.

Aside from this letter and the introduction of these resolutions I have taken no action in the premises, believing a mere suggestion to be all that is necessary. I am informed that your Executive Board at a meeting closely following the Congress decided that such controversial questions should not be brought up in the future. But this action leaves your Body on record as taking sides on this controversial, political, economic and religious question which is admittedly outside your province.

We believe that as representatives of American Womanhood your body does not wish to permit itself to be used, however innocently, to do for the brewers what they cannot do for themselves. But if there is any doubt about the rescission of this I respectfully ask the opportunity to be heard in behalf of the temperance forces. However, you will note that our request is not that you actually take the temperance side but that you simply cease to advocate the liquor side of this controversy.

The recent order of the Secretary of the Navy applying to officers the rule which the Surgeon General said had worked so well with the men, indicates the trend of public sentiment on this question, and instead of the Government going back into the saloon business to debauch the enlisted under sanction of law the tendency will be to require the officers of the army also to conform to the efficiency standards of the business world.

William H. Anderson,
State Supt. Anti-Saloon League of New York, Nat. Legislative Supt. of the M. E. Church Temperance Society.

FOREST LANDS PUT TO MANY USES.

Almost every conceivable use to which land may be put is represented in the permits reported by the forest service for special projects on the national forests. Some of the uses shown range alphabetically from apiary through brick yard, cannery, cemetery, church, cranberry marsh, fox ranch, marine railway, rifle range, and turpentine still, to wharf and whaling station.

There are 15,000 permits in force for such special uses, which are distributed geographically from Alaska to the Mexican line, and east to Florida. This figure does not include any of the 27,000 permits in force for grazing cattle and sheep on the forests; nor the 6,000 transactions for the sale of timber, and the more than 38,000 permits issued last year for the free use of timber by settlers, miners and others in developing their homesteads and claims; nor the nearly 300 permits for water power development.

California led all the national forest states in the number of these special use permits, followed by Arizona, Colorado, Montana and New Mexico in the order named. The largest single class of permits was for special pastures, or corrals, to be used for lambing grounds, shearing pens, and the like. Next came rights of way for conduits, ditches, and flumes, practically all these being free. Various agricultural permits come third, telephone lines fourth with more than a thousand permits for 6,500 miles of line, and drift fences for the control of grazing animals, fifth. In both of these latter classes, too, practically all of the permits are free. Reservoirs for which more than 600 free permits were issued for the occupation of more than 100,000 acres come sixth. The rest of the uses are not classified though there are a large number of apiaries, camps, summer hotels, and schools. The use of the government's lands for schools is given free; for hotels a charge is made.

The principle which governs the charge is based, according to the forest service, on whether or not the use of the land is sought by the permittee for a commercial purpose. If it is the intent of the user to make money from a resource which belongs to the whole people, the service holds that he should give a reasonable return for that use. If, on the other hand, farmers want to use the government land for their own telephone lines, irrigation works, and schools, the government gives them that use without cost.

PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENTS.

Concord ..... May 20
Gaston Ct. ..... May 21
Yarboro and Anderson Ct. .. May 22, 24
Asheville ..... May 25, 26
Buncombe Ct. ..... May 27, 30
Pensacola ..... May 31
Lenoir Ct. ..... June 1, 2
Lincoln Ct. ..... June 3, 4
Cleveland Ct. ..... June 6, 7
Falston Ct. ..... June 9
Shelby Ct. ..... June 10, 11
Charlotte ..... June 12, at night

Pastors please state where I will be met in going from one field to another, and make such arrangements between yourselves. C. A. Cecil.

Mocksville Circuit.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

Through the kindness of Bro. Sidney Braswell I was taken fro McFarlan to Cheraw, S. C., where I took the train for Patrick, where I was met by Bro. Quick.

Pageland Circuit.

We drove to Bethsaida where we found a good congregation awaiting our arrival. This church is not finished, but when completed will be a very good church. We took dinner with Sister Roscoe and her son and some other little boy drove us to Chesterfield, S. C., where Bro. Quick hired a man to take us to Pageland in an auto.

I preached in Pageland at 8:30 to a fair attendance. I took supper with Bro. Quick and spent the night with Bro. J. A. Turner.

The church at Rose Hill has been sold and a nice location secured up in the town of Pageland and a church well on the way is being built; the carpenters are at work on it, and the pastor expects to have it completed by the third Sabbath in July. It will be a nice church when completed. We have a good band of workers in our church at this place, and there is no reason as I can see why the membership should not increase rapidly. Bro. Quick and I left Pageland on Thursday a. m. for New Hope Church five miles from Monroe for the 11 o'clock service, and the faithful few were present and gave good attention to the preaching. Service over and Sister Belk was kind and thoughtful enough to bring dinner and four or five of us ate in the church and had a good social chat. Then we separated and I was driven to Monroe for the 2:25 train where I boarded it for Mecklenburg Ct. Thanks to Bro. Belk for conveyance to the latter place. This charge is very much scattered and hard to serve, but the writer sees no way to remedy the situation. Bro. Quick is doing well and is well thought of at all the churches I visited.

Claim overpaid.

Mecklenburg Ct.

I took the train at Monroe for Stallings where I found Bro. Waldrop and spent the night with him. Thursday a. m. we visited some of our members and took dinner with Bro. A. B. Garmon. I preached at Antioch at three o'clock to an attentive people. This church has recently been painted and the membership seems to be taking on new life.

We took supper with Bro. C. M. Garmon and drove to Beulah church for night services where we had a fair attendance, mostly young people. There have been some repairs on this church since I visited here last year and they would do well to paint their church again on the outside. Spent the night with Bro. T. B. Moore.

We drove back to Stallings for eleven o'clock service; a fair attendance and a helpful service. Took dinner at the parsonage again. At two o'clock we met in the second quarterly conference; all of the churches were represented but one. The usual business was transacted.

Some incidental matters ordered looked after. The reports were very good and all things taken together indicate some progress.

Some lumber on the ground to build a new church at Stallings and they expect to have the church complete by the time our Annual Conference meets, and according to the plans and specifications it will be a nice, neat structure.

Bro. Waldrop has raised all of his general interests except the Superannuate collection, and this he expects to collect. Bro. D. A. Braswell preached in Stallings at 8 o'clock on Friday night.

Claim paid.

Charlotte Circuit.

Bro. Braswell came to Stallings for me and we started at 8 o'clock for Mill Grove where we met a good congregation at 11 o'clock. Dinner on the ground. Quarterly conference convened at 2 p. m. Not a large attendance, but a very interesting conference, so said those that were there; all the churches were represented, reporrts fairly good and indicated some progress; the financial reports for pastor and general interests ought to have been better and I trust they will be in the future. I was informed on the account of influences and training in the past the people at Mill Grove and Love's Grove are slow on the subject of finance; but the young generation are coming to see differently. Bro. Braswell and I spent Saturday night with Bro. M. C. Garmon. Sunday at 11 o'clock I preached to a good congregation at Mill Grove; good interest manifested. Took dinner with Bro. S. N. Garmon; drove to Love's Grove and found a large congregation and they gave good attention to the preaching, and I believe good will be the final result.

The pastor and I drove to Bro. J. C. Tarlton's for supper and Mrs. T. soon had a good meal, and I ate heartily and Bro. Tarlton took me to Stanfield station where I took the train for Norwood; here I spent the night.

Bro. Braswell is doing his best to do the work and to please his people. I heard no complaint of his work in any way. Claim overpaid at these two churches.

Stanly Circuit.

On Monday morning I took the train for Albemarle. I made my way to Bro. M. Hatley's for breakfast. Soon Bros. Reed and Curry came in and we talked over some matters, and Bro. Reed and I drove to Friendship for 11 o'clock service. We stopped at the parsonage where I met Bro. Reed's mother; she is blind and growing feeble, but she is cheerful and trustful. May the good Lord bless her in her declining years. I preached to a goodly number of Bro. Reed's official members and several of the membership at Friendship. I took dinner on the ground. At 2 o'clock the second quarterly conference met and the usual business was transacted and we had a good conference. All the churches were represented. Some of the reports were good and the financial report was extra good, the best in the history of the charge, they using the budget plan. Bro. Reed and I drove back to Albemarle where I was to preach at night, but in view of the fact that Bros. Curry and Reed had been running a meeting for about a week I refused to preach and Bro. Curry preached a good practical sermon and there was one conversion and several others asked an interest in the prayers of the church. I trust much good will be accomplished before the meeting closes. I spent the night with Mrs. E. A. Plyler.

The church at Porter is being built and they hope to have it so they can hold their third quarterly conference in it. I did not go to Porter to preach, only passed through on the train.

Bro. Reed and several of the members stated that the work is moving along nicely and the prospects indicated a good year. So may it be. Claim paid.

C. A. Cecil.

April 28, 1914.

Greensville Circuit.

Since my second quarterly report appeared in the Herald the brethren and friends at Wesley Chapel have raised $92 to repaint the church, and about $65 has been collected at Matthew's Chapel to paint the inside of the church there and to buy carpet for the aisles and chairs for the pulpit. I hope to be able to report other material improvements on the charge after awhile. Fraternally,

D. A. Highfill, Pastor.

Powellton, Va., May 1.

Pee Dee, Rockingham Ct.

Our pastor filled his regular appointment the first Sunday in April with a good sermon enjoyed by all. At the close he held the largest communion service we have ever seen held after which he received four into the church. Our work is moving along nicely. We were glad to have Bro. Cecil with us from the eighteenth to the twentieth. He gave us a helpful sermon and good advice for which we thank him and invite him to come again. Our Sunday school is improving; we have over a hundred on roll. Our pastor is now at the upper churches, Melton Grove and Pleasant Grove, where he held our 2nd Quar. Conf., also where Bro. J. B. Solomon and your writer just returned from yesterday. The business of the conference was carried on nicely and in love, and we stayed over till after service Sunday morning and then we took our long ride on our wheels home, about thirty miles. We are expecting our special meeting to begin the first Sunday in May. Pray for our success that many souls may be saved. W. T. Collins, Rep.

Mill Grove, Charlotte Ct.

Our S. S. declined during the winter but is now growing and we expect to have a large and flourishing school during the summer. Bro. Cecil was with us on last Sat. and Sun. He gave us an excellent sermon on Sat. morning; there was dinner on the ground and quarterly conference in the afternoon with Bro. Cecil presiding. Every one seemed to enjoy Bro. Cecil's visit very much; he gave the church members some advice, which I think if only put into action would bring about a more prosperous condition in the church, as I am sure he is a man competent to give advice. We are all pleased with Bro. Braswell. We think we could not have gotten a more earnest worker than he. We are hoping to have the best camp meeting this year we have ever had. Pray for us that we may. Bro. M. C. Garmon was appointed reporter also; I have been waiting for him to report, but haven't seen anything from him.

Nealie B. Fincher, Reporter.

Thomasville.

The Philathea class met at the usual time, Sunday, April 26. We had an interesting lesson which our efficient teacher, Mrs. J. W. Boyles, explained in an interesting but simple manner. After the lesson, the officers for the ensuing term were elected. They are as follows: President, Ruby Jones; Vice president, Addie Maie Burkhardt; Sec., Ada Wood; Asst. Sec., Mrs. Lee Tysinger; Treas., Ruby Jones; Membership—Misses Delia Perry; Asst. Treas., Delia Royals; Teacher, Mrs. J. W. Boyles; Asst. Teacher, Grace Harris.

Our committees are as follows: Volunteer—Misses Delia Royals, and Rosa Burkhardt; Relief—Mrs. J. W. Boyles, H. A. Ritchie, and Lee Tysinger; Social—Misses Myrtle Perry, Grace Harris and Ruby Jones; Membership— Missees Delia Royals, Ada Wood and Vetra Carmichael. We want to thank the officers who preceded us for their faithfulness to us as a class and as individuals. We hope the class will still keep growing under the supervision of the new officers.

Praying God's blessings upon all I am your sister in Christ, Ruby Jones, Rep.

Mecklenburg Ct.

We had Brother Cecil with us Thursday and Friday of last week. He preached at Antioch, Beulah and Stallings; held our Quarterly Conference Friday afternoon. The business was transacted very pleasantly, though we didn't have as many official members out as I think we should have had.

Brother M. T. Stallings and Brother A. B. Gorman were named to be voted on for delegate to the Annual Conference which is to be held in Asheville. Some more names were mentioned but some one said a member that wouldn't go to a Quarterly Conference might not go to an Annual Conference. I hope our official members will all turn out to the Quarterly Conference when it is possible.

About dark on Friday evening we saw Brother D. A. Braswell coming in and he preached for us on Friday evening. We enjoyed the splendid sermons delivered to us by Brother Cecil and Brother Braswell. Hope to have them again soon.

We had the largest congregation at Beulah and Antioch last Sunday that we have had since coming to the work. The weather has gotten warm and we hope that we will still have more attendants.

I think the work is moving on very well, but there is room for more moving on. Pray for us that we may do the will of our Father in Heaven.

H. E. Waldrop.

Center, Alamance Circuit.

Our W. F. M. S. held Thank Offering service first Sunday p. m. in May. Questions and answers by two of our members on missionary work, a short exercise by children, a very good talk by our pastor, Bro. Ledbetter, songs and prayers, made up our program. If before hearing Bro. Ledbetter's talk any doubted the great necessity of foreign missions and our duty to help all we can, it seems that they could not but believe and understand now, knowing that all he said was based on great truths from the Bible. Thank Offering $6.73, dues $1.35, penny collection, 6 cents; total, $8.14. Our next meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. J. W. Whitehead first Sunday p. m. in June. We were glad of the presence of Bro. Dosier and glad indeed was the writer to have Bros. Dosier and Ledbetter spend the night at our home. Their company and conversation was enjoyed very much.

Miss Daisy Richardson has been elected as delegate to Branch meeting in Greensboro. We are expecting to hold Children's Day service at Center some time soon. Guess all the Center people will be glad to learn that Bro. Ledbetter is expecting Bro. Stubbins to assist in the protracted meeting, as he was liked so well last year.

We miss Miss Lillian Lindley, who taught at Chestnut Hill, since her school is out. Mrs. R. W. Lindley.

Charlotte, Richland Ct.

Last Sunday Bro. Bowman filled his regular appointment. He gave us a splendid lesson. There was a large congregation. I am sure that everybody that heard him was benefited. We certainly de appreciate our pastor being with us in S. S. Hope he will every time.

Our S. S. attendance is larger since we are having fine weather, and several new families have moved into the neighborhood. There is no reason why we should not have a fine school. May we all get busy in church work.

Our regular preaching appointment has been changed from 11 o'clock a. m. until 3:30 p. m. Hope our people will attend our second quarterly conference Saturday evening before the third Sunday in May at Fairmount.

Jessie Redding, Reporter.

Pleasant Grove, Lebanon Ct.

We had a very pleasant meeting of our quarterly conference April 25. Everything reported in good condition. Bro. Loy gave us a very good talk on our duties. We nominated for delegate Bro. B. E. Payne and Bro. J. W. Johnson.

We were glad to have Bro. Loy with us in S. S. He made us feel like he was one of us. We took the regular monthly offering for our Children's Home, amounting to $1.53. We think we should do more for our Children's Home, for it certainly is a noble work.

At the close of Sunday school Bro. Loy preached an excellent sermon, then administered the Lord's Supper.

Well, Brother McCulloch, we just love the Herald fine. It is an excellent paper, and may the Lord bless and prosper you in your good work.

Walter Burton, Reporter.

Denton.

Yesterday was communion day, and there was a full turn-out, comparatively speaking. The largest this season. Pastor Reynolds was at his best, and delivered well the sermon. Our regular days are first and third Sundays at 11 A. M. and at 8 P. M. of each month. Bro. J. H. Spencer from Why Not attended services with us yesterday. Come again, Bro. Spencer. You are always welcome to take part with us.

Our S. S. seems to be in a prosperous condition. Still there is room for others. May I ask the questin, why is it that in our S. S. lessons of May 3rd, the word temperance is added to the Prodigal Son for the subject of this lesson.

We are all looking forward to the annual Commencement. Sermon will be preached in the auditorium of the school building May 17 at 11 A. M. by Rev. C. A. Cecil. Monday night the children will have their entertainment. Tuesday, May 19, wil be commencement day. The Athenian and Phi Literary societies will have their annual oratorical contests, and Rev. G. W. Holmes will deliver the address. We will be glad to have any of the trustees and friends of the school attend these exercises. Drop us a card and we will be glad to arrange free entertainment.

C. H. S., Reporter.

Uwharrie Ct.

Our second quarterly conference will convene at Cid on Saturday, May 16. President Cecil will preach for us at 11 A. M. and hold quarterly conference at 1:30 P. M. Brethren, take time to attend and look after the business of the church, and then the Lord will bless your business, and your souls will enjoy more of His presence. So come and do not fail.

Joel B. Trogdon.

Concord, Saxapahaw Ct.

Our pastor, Rev. G. W. Holmes, was with us again Sunday, and preached another one of his excellent sermons to a very good congregation. All seemed to give strict attention to the beautiful words of truth as they fell gently from his lips. He always gives us an interesting and helpful sermon.

We met Easter Sunday and reorganized our S. S. with A. N. Roberson Supt., C. M. Moore Asst. Supt., Lena Roberson Secretary and Grace Curl Ast. Secretary. The school is not as large as desired, but we are trying to do our best, and if we do this I am sure we will be rewarded.

Mrs. W. H. Guthrie has been some feebler than common, but glad to say she has improved.

Louvenia Lewis, Reporter.

May 4.

Friendship, Haw River Ct.

Sunday was a good day for us. We had a splendid Sunday school. We were pleased to have such a large attendance. We have in our school so many bright little girls and boys, and they take such an interest in Sunday school.

Our pastor, Bro. Ashburn, filled his regular appointment and preached a good, helpful sermon. A large congregation was present. We are preparing for Children's Day, and expect to have it the third Sunday in June. We are hoping it will be a great success, and that our Sunday school will be better this year than ever before.

Blanche Weatherly, Reporter.

Burlington.

Last Sunday was a Red Letter Day in our Sunday school. The attendance was 270, the largest we have had this year. It was known as "Baraca Rally Day," and the members of the Baraca Class rendered a very interesting program. There were 62 Baracas present. The entire offering, which amounted to $7.77, goes to the Children's Home at High Point. At this hour pledges were taken to the amount of $150, which will be used in installing a new furnace in the annex of the church. The Baraca Class of our Sunday school is certainly living up to its motto: "We Do Things."

The Philathea Class will observe next Sunday as "Philathea Rally Day." They are preparing a special program, and are expecting to have a large attendance. The Baraca Class is making special efforts to have a large attendance also, as next Sunday is the close of the Baraca-Philathea contest. There is quite a rivalry between the two classes for the victory in the contest.

Rev. G. F. Millaway, of Greensboro, who assisted Rev. C. H. Whitaker in a revival meeting on his charge last week, spent a short while in our city last Saturday en route to Greensboro. We were pleased to see Rev. Mr. Millaway, as he is very pleasantly remembered as one of our ex-pastors.

Rev. C. H. Whitaker, pastor of the Mt. Hermon Circuit, was a pleasant visitor in our town last Monday.

Our special meeting began Sunday morning and is in progress this week. Rev. Taylor arrived Monday, and is doing the preaching. His messages so far have been directed to the church members. The service on Monday night was not well attended because of the threatening weather. However, the Tuesday night service was largely attended and much more encouraging. There was considerable interest manifested by the members of the church, as a good number responded to an altar call for the consecration of their lives to the work of the meeting and for the salvation of the lost. We believe there will be a great revival in our church and many souls won for the Master. There are simultaneous meetings in progress in four or five of the other churches of our town, and there seems to be a great united effort on the part of the several churches in this religious campaign. Readers, pray for our meetings.

C. B. Way, Reporter.

—Biblical Recorder: The Supreme Court of the United States call it "a business that tends to produce idleness, disease, pauperism, and crime." It is, according to Sir Wilfred Lawson, "the devil in solution," according to Robert Hall "distilled damnation," and according to Lord Chesterfield, "an artist in human slaughter." The verdict of mankind has been pronounced against it. Why not wipe it from the face of the earth?"

I FEEL SAD AND LONELY.

My father died when I was a small boy, leaving mother a widow with eight children, three boys and five girls, and I was the youngest of them all. My father was not a member of any church at the time of his death. But the first person I ever knew was a Methodist Protestant; that one was my dear mother! Why should any one be surprised at my being an uncompromising Methodist Protestant? I love the very name, and I am not willing to go into any union of church organizations by which the name of the church of my dear mother will be lost and unheardof except in musty history of the past that many will never see or read! And then I also think of the hard battles fought in 1828 and 1830 and the years following, by our forefathers, and how they were persecuted and misrepresented. Yes, I think of the Bellamies, Drakes, Joneses, Harrises, Gray and Hunts, who labored so hard and also many others that they and their children and grandchildren and all true Americans might have the opportunity of living in a country without a king and belonging to a church without a bishop. I wonder how these fathers would look upon us their descendants, should we ever consent and vote for any measure that would lead to the loss of the name of our beloved church. In my mind, I can see now old Brother Ivey Harris, with his sightless eyes, sitting in his great arm chair, and always ready almost to the very last to enquire as soon almost as I entered the room, "Bro. Hunt, sit down and tell me the news." If he were living today and I had enteered his room on my return from last Conference, and he had asked, "Bro. Hunt, what is the news from our Annual Conference?" O what a trial it would have been to have broken to him the news that over half of the Conference had voted to refer the subject of church union with another denomination with bishrop proclivities to a commission and by said action the name of the M. P. Church was subject to be forever lost as an organized church! (Bro. Hunt will pardon us for injecting a word here: it was to our General Confereence and not to a commission that our Annual Conference voted to refer the matter.—Ed.)

But then I ask, what is wrong with the organic laws of the M. P. Church? How are we to give up any part of our organic law, and Scriptural doctrine, without substituting something not as good as that we now have? Anything that did not require the giving up of some things and the adoption of something else, would not be a union at all, but simply joining our M. P. Church. The government is as near perfect in my opinion as human wisdom can make it! We have had some difficulties, it is true, but these have come from electing men to office of bishop proclivities who usurped powers not given them by the government of the Methodist Protestant Church! Hence a good government may be abused; but a bad government is absolutely wrong all the time!

But pardon me for this digression from the subject I had in view mainly when I set out. My main object to write about the sad and lonely condition I am left in, viz: Mother lived to raise her eight children and see them all grown and all married but one daughter, who was taken away in the bloom of life by that much dreaded disease consumption, or tuberculosis. She passed over the river shouting with almost her last breath! This was the first break in my mother's family of children. What a happy family we were, mother and eight children all grown and all members of the M. P. Church at old Crooked Run. Neighbors would gather in of nights to hear the family sing those songs of that day so full of gospel truths, fresh in memory still. It was not then considered a mark of weakness to see and hear people shout aloud the praises of God, and some of the happiest times I ever saw was in that family circle, when no one was present but the family. Sometimes the whole family was happy at the same time!

"What peaceful hours I once enjoyed,
How sweet their memory still!"

But, Mr. Editor, I do not want to make this article too long, therefore, I must abridge what I would like to say. But I do not suppose there has ever been a family so happy that lived together long, but what sooner or later that family circle was broken by death! Such was the case in our family. For in years after the death of that sister that was first taken as previously referred too, our kind and loving mother was taken from us. Next another sister, the eldest, and being many miles away it was not my privilege to be with her in the closing hours of her life, but she sent me word to be "faithful and we would soon meet again, never more to part." A few years later another sister was taken by that cruel disease consumption, but it was my privilege to be with her to the last, and she left the shore of time shouting back that all was well, as she was crossing the last heaving billow!

The family yet living consisted of two girls and three boys. We were somewhat scattered, but not so far but what we could meet occasionally; what a pleasure that was! Yet we felt keenly that the original family circle was broken.

The next one taken was my eldest brother, Rev. I. N. Hunt, who had stood so often side by side with me in the Lord's work, and when it was our privilege to meet we would frequently talk all night, being so interested in each other's company. But at last the sad hour with us came, when I received a telegram saying "He was dead and would be buried tomorrow." How sad this news, and especially so when the last train had passed by which I could possibly reach there, even to look upon his face here in this world. How sad I felt in this my helpless condition!

The next one called away by death was my youngest sister. Again I failed to get the news in time even to reach her burial.

The next one to be taken was Brother J. T. Hunt, who stood by me in time of the Civil War and was so devoted to me that I believe he would have sacrificed his own life to have saved mine, had it been necessary; and I have but little doubt that he was the instrument in the hand of God to save my life one time! Here was true brotherly devotion. I just did get the news of his death in time to reach his burial and look upon his face for the last time in this world!

This only left living two of the original family, viz: Sister Amy J. Scott, of Pinnacle, N. C., and myself. But owing to the distance I live, especially from the telegraph office, I failed to get the news of her death, which occurred on the 20th inst. in time to attend her burial or see her face for the last time in this world!

Thus, one by one, of that once large and happy family have all past away but myself!

Now, Mr. Editor, are you surprised at my feeling "sad and lonely?" And what makes me feel especially sad and lonely is this: For 59 years, although at times we have been separated by hundreds of miles, I have in my humble and imperfect manner tried to pray for each and every one of the family; often by name, but how sad I would feel whenever I would come to the name of one who had crossed over the river and realize that their case or cases are beyond the reach of my prayers now and that they all did once pray for me, but I suppose they have ceased to pray for me now.

Oh, how sad, sad, these reflections! I

—The Baptist Advance tells the story of an Italian who was converted while sojourning in Pittsburgh in this country, and upon his return to the homeland he gave himself to the work of the Lord, and in the shortest kind of time organized a church with 223 members. That iis doing foreign mission work at home.

—The State Industrial Commission of Ohio, in its investigation of wages paid women and girls, has received reports from 1,086 mercantile establishments employing 15,744 girls. Of the 14,635 young women more than eighteen years of age, 3,133 received less than $6 per week, 5,960 less than $8, and 5,542 more than $8. Of the 1,109 girls under eighteen, only 145 received more than $5 a week.

—The minister of public instruction of Italy has asked the parliament of his country for an appropriation for the education of prospective emigrants to the United States. This action, in view of the literary test proposed by Congress, is construed as meaning special schools are to be organized to prepare emigrants to read and write their dialects that they may have access to the United States.—Christian Advocate.

—I found it difficult the other night to cross a muddy street because of the deep shadow cast by my own body, which stood between the electric light and the walk over which I was crossing. Not a little of the time, I fear, do we stand in our own spiritual light, making shadows cast by our own personality, while the light flashes all around us. If you would avoid the shadows, walk toward the electric light in the heavens and let its beam fall in your face.—George L. Perin, in Christian Observer.

—"Not long ago," says Dr. Edwin M. Kent, of Changli, North China, "a valuable old man brought a friend into our hospital. He was eager to emphasize the enviable reputation that our medical work had won. 'Why,' he exclaimed, 'everybody around here knows that you opened a school boy's stomach last fall, took out the roots of his sickness, and in ten days he was back in school.' A smile went around the hospital group as we thought of that appendicitis case again!"

—Gen. Robert E. Lee was a singularly modest and humble man. It is related of him that, at the time of his appointment to the command of the main army of the Confederacy, a banquet was given in Richmond, at which the division commanders were to meet President Davis. It was understood that the seat of honor was to be filled by the new appointee, whose identity was then a state secret. When Lee entered the room all the seats were filled except the seat of honor, and he stopped at the foot of the table, and said in a tone of utmost sincerity: "One of you gentlemen has made a mistake and appropriated my chair." And when the applause of the guests and the significant nod of President Davis showed that he had made the mistake, he blushed like a school boy.

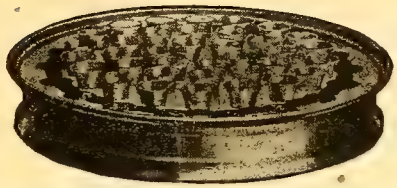
—A white man, traveling thrrough a country where the natives had some years before been cannibals, found one of them reading a Bible. The traveler, himself, sneered at the occupation. "That will never do you no good," he said. "It never did us any good; we are giving it up." The islander stared at him in surprise. "If it does you no good in your own land it is surely of use to you here," he said, "for if it had not been for this Book you would have been cooked and eaten before this." There are not a few scoffers at Christianity who forget that their personal safety and their liberty of speech are the gift of that which they revile.—New Guide.

—We are reading much about the American flag. Every patriotic American loves the Stars and Stripes and is ready to bear arms in its defense. Woe unto him who pulls it from its lofty standard and tramples it underfoot. No greater insult can be offered the United States government than to dishonor its flag. Why? Has a yard of bunting with its stars and stripes any inherent virtue? Why should we have any more regard for the flag than for any other piece of cloth? Because it is the emblem of the authority of this nation. He who despises the flag, despises the nation. In the Kingdom of God there are certain great emblems or symbols which have no virtue in themselves, but represent great facts in the ministry of the Son of God. Baptism and the Lord's Supper are the emblems of the death, the burial and resurrection of our Lord. They do not save, but they set forth the gospel which saves. In belittling these divinely-given symbols, we belittle the truths of the gospel. We have not as much right to neglect these ordinances, as we have to scoff at the flag of an earthly nation. Back of these ordinances is the authority of Him who is to reign until He hath put all enemies under His feet.

—How would it sound to sing "Praise Evolution from which all Blessings Flow?" Dr. Shailer Matthews, a "Baptist" evolutionist, who is at the head of the Church Federation, should change the doxology to fit his creed. We sincerely believe that his church federation movement is sending many professed Christians down the stream of apostasy. The great cry is unity and for the sake of unity (so-called), principles and truth are sacrificed. It looks like the outward banding together of the Sons of Adam (to whom the Anti-Christ will finally come) who will set themselves in array against the Son of God at His coming.—Baptist Messenger, Okla.

"I didn't notice you at the mothers' congress."

"No," replied the woman addressed. "I'm not a theoretical mother, you know. I have six."—Philadelphia Ledger.



Over 18,000 Churches USE and ENDORSE the

THOMAS INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION SERVICE.

The above fact is conclusive proof that the THOMAS SYSTEM has the preference.

If YOUR CHURCH is not using it, write for illustrated circular and price list.

ODELL HARDWARE COMPANY, GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank. This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W. M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

Greensboro, N. C.

N. B.—Following schedule figures published only as information and are not guaranteed.

1.00 A. M.—No. 29 daily, Birmingham Special, through Pullman sleeping and observation cars New York to Birmingham and Richmond to Birmingham. During car service.

12.48 A. M.—No. 32 daily, Southern's Limited, Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville, Augusta and Aikin to New York. Dining car service.

12.55 a. m.—No. 112 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh open at 9.15 p. m.

... daily, Birmingham Special. Pullman sleeping and observation cars from Birmingham and Asheville to New York and Birmingham to Richmond. Dining car service.

2.25 a. m.—No. 31, the Southern's Southeastern Limited, Pullman sleeping cars from New York to Asheville. Day coaches. Dining car service.

3.45 a. m.—No. 45 daily local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7.10 a m.—No. 8, daily local for Richmond, connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7.20 a. m.—No. 37 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited Pullman drawing room, sleeping cars and club and observation cars New York to new Orleans. Pullman sleeping car New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman chair car Greensboro to Montgomery, solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m.—No. 108 daily local Greensboro to Goldsboro.

7.35 a. m.—No. 11, daily local through to Atlanta, sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m.—No. 154 daily except Sunday for Ramseur.

8.15 a. m.—No. 237, daily for Winston-Salem and North Wilkesboro. Pullman sleeping car Raleigh to Winston-Salem.

9.30 a. m.—No. 44 daily for Washington and points North.

9.40 a. m.—No. 144 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro; handles Atlanta Raleigh sleeping car.

12.30 p. m.—No. 21 daily for Asheville, Waynesville and local points; handles coaches and chair car through to Asheville and Waynesville.

12.50 p. m.—No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12 30 p. m.—No 21 daily for Asheville,

12.55 p. m.—No. 7 daily for Charlotte and points south.

1.40 p. m.—No. 36 daily U. S. Fast Mail for Washington, New York and points north; handles Pullman sleeping cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman sleeping car Asheville to Richmond Pullman chair car Greenville, S. C., to Washington. Day coaches. Dining car service.

2.20 p. m.—No. 207 daily for Winston-Salem, and daily execept Sunday for North Wilkesboro.

2.30 p. m.—No. 151 daily except Sunday for Madison.

3:30 p. m.—No. 230 daily except Sunday for Ramseur.

2.30 p. m.—No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4.20 p. m.—No. 22 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles chair car to Goldsboro.

6.10 p m.—No. 35 daily U. S. Fast Mail for

4.55 p. m.—No. 131 daily for Mt. Airy.

Atlanta and points south Pullman sleeping cars New York to New Orleans and Birmingham and sleeping car Richmond to Asheville which car can be occupied until 7 a. m. Pullman chair car Washington to Greenville, S. C. Day coaches. Dining car service.

6.35 p. m.—No. 235 daily for Winston-salem.

7.30 p. m.—No. 43 daily for Atlanta Sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10.13 p. m.—No. 38 daily New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited Pullman sleeping cars New Orleans, Macon, Asheville and Charlotte to New York and Pullman chair car Montgomery to Greensboro. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

10.20 p. m.—No. 233 daily for Winston-Salem.

10.31 p. m.—No. 12 daily local for Richmond; handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman, Vice-President and General Manager, Washington, D. C.; S. H. Hardwick, P T. M., Washington, D. C.; H. F. Cary, G. P. A., Washington, D. C.; R. H. DeButts, D. P. A., Charlotte, N. C.; O. F. York, P. & A., Greensboro, N C.

Drs. Moseley & MILES

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF

STOMACH AND INTESTINES.

Corner S. Elm and W. Market Sts.,

Greensboro, N. C.

Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

OVER 65 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Dr. J. E. Wyche,

DENTIST.

Office in Fisher Building, North Elm St,

Rooms 211-213,

Greensboro, N. C.

Dr. C. W. Banner,

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,

Second Floor.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.

Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.

206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

GENERAL NEWS.

—We are told that the American girls' candy bill is $134,000,000.

—Venezuela has also signed Secretary Bryan's arbitration treaty, making the fourteenth country to do so.

—During the past year an average of forty saloons a day have gone out of business in the United States.

—If the United States had as many people to the square mile as China has our population would be over 600,000,000.

—Lyman Abbott says people nowadays think of God, not as a Father, but as a Grandfather, loving but not to be obeyed.

—The next international Sunday school convention will meet in Chicago, and already that city has raised $100,000 to finance the meeting.

—Nineteen college men have been presidents of the United States, and sixteen of the nineteen have been trained in Christian colleges.

—At Tulsa, Okla., the state militia took charge of the track and stopped racing, threatening to shoot the horses if they were brought on the track.

—A woman once told Rowland Hill that she had been converted in her sleep. "Well," said the great preacher, "we will see how you live when you are awake."

—The supreme test of discipleship is seen in the way you treat Christ. Obedience to Christ is the supreme test. "If you love me, keep my commandments," said Jesus and this is the supreme proof of love.

—The Chapman-Alexander meetings in Edinburgh, Scotland, have been the center of a great revival. The country has not been so stirred for many years, say the reports.

—It is deeply significant that the Pittsburg, Pa., Chamber of Commerce has given out a plea for National Prohibition to stop waste, disorder, and economic deterioration of industrial forces.

—Japan has reduced its military expenses by $15,000,000 and withdrawn two army divisions from Korea. This is a relief to the people, for the taxes have been correspondingly lessened.

—The minimum wage commission of the state of Washington has decided unanimously on ten dollars a week as a minimum wage for women in mercantile establishments.

—A movement to bring about the nomination of William Sulzer for Governor of New York on an independent ticket has taken definite form in the incorporation of the "American party."

—A new island, about 100 feet high and five miles in circumference, was born in Bonin group during the recent activity of the Fuji volcanic system. The Bonin group lies off the Japan coast due south of Yokohama.

—It is announced that the queen of Bulgaria will come to the United States in May. Her husband, Emperor Ferdinand, will probably come a little later. They will come to study our people, institutions, industries, customs and ideals.

—Secretary Wm. J. Bryan, it is rumored, is to become director general of the Carnegie Peace Foundation at a salary of $25,000 a year and a retirement pension. If this is true he will soon resign.

—During the past year the Metropolitan Tabernacle, Dr. A. C. Dixon, pastor, has received 153 members, 94 for baptism. The year's work was closed with a handsome surplus in the treasury and with no debts. There are now 2,668 members.

—A magnificent new Waldensian church has been erected in Rome, Italy, close to St. Peter's, by the generosity of Mrs. John S. Kennedy, of New York. It is just the kind of a Protestant church building needed in a Roman Catholic city, full of great churches.

feel so lonely, no father, mother, brother or sister now living in all the world! But old and feeble I must make the balance of life's journey alone, so far as these dear ones are concerned. While feeling so sad and lonely I am so glad that I believe all of them have gone to make an undivided family beyond the river.

I ask all of God's people to pray that I may be ready to meet them by and by. Geo. E. Hunt.

GRASS ON THE PRAYER PATH.

From a convert in Uganda
Comes to us a story: grander
Is the lesson that it teaches
Than a sermon often preaches—
For they tell what sore temptations
Come to them, what need of patience,
And a need all else outweighing
Of a place for private praying.
So each convert chose a corner
Far away from eye of scorner,
In the jungle where he could
Pray to God in solitude.
And so often went he thither
That the grass would fade and wither
Where he trod, and you could trace
By the paths, each praying place.
If they hear the evil tiding
That a brother is backsliding,
And that some are even saying,
"He no longer cares for praying,"
Then they say to one another,
Very soft and gently, "Brother,
You'll forgive us now for showing
On your path the grass is growing.'
And the erring one, relenting,
Soon is bitterly repenting.
"Ah, how sad I am at knowing
On my path the grass is growing;
But it shall be so no longer,
Prayer I need to make me stronger;
On my path so oft I'm going,
Soon no grass will there be growing."

—Selected.

OH, LORD, IS IT I?

Alma Horton-Potts.

Somebody stands in the way
Of the Word
That with all its might
Cannot redeem the lost and stray,
If one of us his charge betray,
Fails to do what he can and may,
Oh, Lord, is it I?

Somebody stands in the way
Of the Work
That needs to be done;
That cannot go on if one falls out,
Cannot go on if one turns about,
Cannot go forward if there is doubt,
Oh, Lord, is it I?

Somebody stands in the way
Of the World
To be won for Christ.
Of the world, sad and weary,
Dying for words that are cheery.
Oh, Lord, is it I?

Lord, take me out of the way
Of the Word,
The Work and the World.
May I help the Word to succeed,
May I not the Lord's Work impede,
For the World may I work and plead,
Even if it is I?

—Baptist World.

WHAT CHILDREN LIKE IN MOVIES.

In the "Interpreter's House," a department of the August American Magazine, appears an interesting report of an investigation of the moving picture business recently made in Cleveland, O. Sixteen hundred children wrote letters giving their ideas of moving pictures. Following are extracts of these letters written by children—each paragraph an extract from a different child's report:

"Sometimes the Indians fight so hard and kill the men that it makes me sick and I have a headache."

"I see pictures of war, Indians, funny pictures and about fishers. I earn my money to go. My parents do not like it and have forbidden me to go because it has made my brother out of his sense and has spoiled him."

"When you go to the show you see men robbing houses, and you learn to rob houses and people."

"I like war and murder and burglar pictures best."

"The moving pictures make me decide that I am going to join the army. It makes you feel great to think that you once served for your old, old country."

"The pictures I like best are the love pictures, when the girl has run away without her mother or father knowing about it, and the father and mother finds her."

"I like to go to the show and like to see the moving pictures. The best show I like is—because I see a beautiful vaudeville and a lady smoking."

A Korean lady of great wealth, beautifully gowned in shining linen and soft silk, stopped her sedan chair outside a bookstore in An Dong. A friend stopped to speak with her, and she said:

"I have been buying some books to take home with me to give away to my unbelieving neighbors."

"Where are they?" I asked.

"In the chair," was the reply, and one of the chair coolies, with a disgusted look on his face, raised the chair curtain; and Mark's Gospels, tracts, and hymn books.

"But," I said, "the chair is full, you cannot get in."

"That's no matter," she laughed, "it's only thirty li (fifteen miles), and I can walk."

The chair coolies were bidden to take up the chair, and they did so rather gruntingly, and the lady followed, walking with her woman servant, her face beaming with pleasure, and the smiling "good-bye." Only those who know what riding in a chair stands for among Korean women can appreciate this story of the sacrifice.

"To leave the city of An Dong on foot when she might ride!" exclaimed a bystander. The lady was past fifty years of age. This is the way the Gospel is preached in Korea.—Exchange.

MORMON GROWTH.

Every year for a long time until 1914 the Mormon papers have given figures of their missionary success early in the year. But this year we have scanned three Mormon papers weekly in vain; there have been no such figures! This may be because of our use of them to hinder their work, or because the work of public information which has been so much in evidence for a few years back has made their figures too small to bear publication beside the former ones; or both may be true. We hope the latter is so, at any rate; and if figures come later we expect to issue them for the general public. About 1,000 converts have been claimed in the Southern States east of the Mississippi, yearly, for a long time. But in either case there must be no let-up in the work of keeping people informed.

—Christian Advocate, Dallas: "Religion is not a question of emotion or of sentiment, but of conviction, of life and character. As a result sentiment and emotion are not ignored; but back of them is something deeper and more abiding."

—There are signs of revival in many of the great universities of America. These are the best signs of the times. A revival is due at the seats of learning which for years have been the seats of much flimsy, foolish religious speculation. Scholasticism has been a foe to religion in every age. True learning is a friend to religion. Religion in turn is the friend to learning and the deadliest foe to mere scholasticism. A revival in the education centers will redeem the schools to their proper service.

Grace Church, Greensboro.

Last Sunday was a day of more than usual interest to us. The churches of the entire city observed it as Go-to-Church day. The Sunday school showed the fruits of the city canvass. There were 266 present, and a very large congregaion at the morning service. The Baraca Class attended in a body and sang very effectively, "Lord, I'm Coming Home." The night attendance was better than usual.

We held our second quarterly conference last week. Brothers W. C. Bain and G. G. Hendrix are the nominees for delegate to conference.

Mebane.

Since coming to Mebane charge, Dec. 12, 1912, six of our best and most loyal members have gone to their reward. The first to go was Brother Levi Job. Next, Bro. Albert J. McCaully. November 29, 1913, Bro. W. D. Fogleman was called home. January 31, 1914, Sister Sallie Nicholson Job answered the roll call in heaven. On April 24, 1914, Sister Artitia Ellen Job, after long and patient suffering, breathed her last, and then April 29, 1914, Brother Jonathan Franklin Job smiled and fell asleep in Jesus. All these are buried at Hebron except Bro. McCaully. Four of the six who have died were members at Hebron. Bros. McCaully and Fogleman were members at Mebane.

When I stand and look at the freshly turned up earth at Hebron, even in my waking hours I dream of that time when the earth and the sea shall give up their dead.

The church at Mebane has been wired and the electric current will be turned on in a few days. The back yard of the parsonage is now inclosed in a solid plank wall six feet high and the front yard in a nice wire fence. The violets, roses and lawn grass are all doing well.

Our special meeting will begin at Mebane Thursday night, May 7th. After next Sunday Bro. C. L. Whitaker will be with us and do the preaching. Broher T. O. Pender will have charge of the music.

Let me request that all Christians who read his will offer special prayer that the Lord will make this meeting a great blessing to the town and community. Mebane is a splendid town in which to live, and yet there are conditions here that are sometimes depressingly peculiar.

Mr. J. M. Sharp and Miss Ophelia Wright were married at the home of Mr. Samuel Sharp in the town of Mebane April 29th. Brother Edward Scott, remembered by some of the former pastors, is now happily married and keeping house. He and his wife are some of the best.

Some time last year Brothers Talton and Herbert Job bought out a cafe here and have been doing a nice business, but for some time they have been troubled by thieves breaking in and robbing their place of business. Sunday night, the 3rd, after church, they went to their place of business together with a number of young men. While the others stood round the door Talton and Herbert slipped inside without being seen by any one who might be watching. About 1:30 Herbert, who had been on the watch up to that time, called Talton to take their turn. In a few minutes they heard some one at the back window. They waited and watched. Soon a man's head appeared above the window sill. He tried to pry the window open, but it was nailed down. He ran his hand through a hole in the pane and proceeded to make further entry. They opened fire on the man. He dropped to the ground and ran and another man ran with him. A cap was found under the window and recognized. They got help, went to the house of the suspected party and arrested him and he told on the other fellow. They are now in Graham jail and will doubless get their deserts when court comes. One pistol ball entered the arm of the fellow at the window and is there now unless it has been gotten out since he went to jail. Talton and Herbert are splendid Christian young men. W. E. Swain.

Stony Knoll, West Forsyth Ct.

Rev. Mr. Austin filled his regular appointment first Sunday in May, with a very large congregation present.

Our Sunday school started the first Sunday in March. The following are officers and teachers: Supt., Mr. J. O. Patterson; Asst. Supt., Mr. H. G. Hening; Sec. and Treas., Miss Emma Reece; Organist, Miss Lucy Speas; Teachers, Mrs. J. W. Speas, Mr. W. T. Hening, Miss Lucy Speas and Mr. F. E. Myers.

We took our first collection for the Orphan Home at High Point the first Sunday in May. It amounted to $2.04.

We expect to take collection every first Sunday the rest of the year.

Reporter.

Mt. Zion, Uwharrie Ct.

Pastor Trogdon filled his appointment here yesterday with a good sermon to the young people. We are glad that we have a pastor that is so much interested in the young people.

We were glad to have our Township Sunday school President, Bro. J. W. Welborn, with us yesterday.

Our Sunday school is increasing. I hope it will continue to increase till they have all come. Think of the Shepherd carefully counting his sheep at the close of the day. One is missing. What does He do? Is he content with his ninety and nine, and leave the missing one? No. He safely houses the others, and then goes in search of the one which is lost. Can you not see Him hunting for the lost one, going over mountains and rocks and crossing brooks? And what joy there is when the wanderer is found! Oh, what a Shepherd is that! He wants to be a Shepherd to all. Will you not accept Him?

The man who saw a shepherd calling his sheep by name wondered if he could tell one from another, they all looked so much alike. When he enquired on the matter he was pointed to several little defects on the sheep. One had a black spot, another a torn ear, another a bad toe, one was cross-eyed, and so on. The shepherd knew his sheep by their defects. And so it is with our heavenly Father. He knows us all by our defects, and yet with all our faults He loves us.

But as Bro. Trogdon said yesterday, we hope to have all our trouble here in this world. But let us give thanks that we have such a good Shepherd to guide and protect us, and though these afflictions may come upon us and seem hard at the time, let us remember his great mercy and loving kindness.

Ethel Gaddis, Reporter.

May 5, 1914.

Asheville.

Happy? Well, I should say so! Just like a crowd of school children when school is over. Happier than that. So happy that we haven't words to tell you about it. I suspect some of you were happy, too, even if you couldn't be here with us. The first service in the church home. My, that sounds good! And it was good.

The attendance was the best of the present pastorate. The Sunday school session was good. There were seven new scholars enrolled. The collection for the Children's Home amounted to $2.00. The day had been set apart six weeks ago as the Sunday when the school should bring the preacher some seed (pennies) for his garden. The preacher wanted at least a half peck, but was disappointed in that part of it. However, there were 1350 pennies in the measure—almost a quarter of a peck—so he feels pretty well satisfied. The money will be used to pay for one of the art glass windows in the church auditorium.

The financial report is so long this week that I shall omit a good many things I would like to say. We thank the friends whose names appear in this list, and appreciate very much more than we can say their interest in the work here, an interest that doesn't confine itself to words, but finds expression in substantial aid. If all our friends were like minded we would soon quit begging for help. However, we shall have to keep it up until you send the help we need. Come, friends, we have got to have at least $1,500 more before we can get the church to rights, and that doesn't include the balance we owe on the lot. You help us finish the church, we'll take care of the rest. How about that Sunday school offering? Two dollars apiece from the schools of the conference—only two dollars—means $400 for us. Say, can't you do it? Certainly you can.

Asheville Church Building Fund

Col. and Mrs. S. V. Pickens	$25.00
Mrs. J. J. Welch	10.00
Mr. W. P. Pickett	10.00
Hon. Zeb Weaver	5.00
Hon. John J. Mackey	5.00
Mr. N. A. Reynolds	5.00
Mr. Gay Carter	5.00
Mr. Penrose Baldwin	3.00
Mr. Chris Carter	2.00
Mrs. H. A. Eller	1.00
Mrs. Carson	1.00
Mr. T. B. Allen	1.00
"A Friend"	1.00
G. W. Epps, S. H. Michelove, Mrs. A. L. Eller, T. H. Revis, S. F. Roberts, "A Friend," J. S. Hands, W. S. Lunsford, each 50c.	4.00
Mrs. J. A. Guffey, J. D. Parker, "A Friend," Mrs. Klein, T. R. Roberts, M. E. Mostin, J. E. Woods, Mrs. Clare Roth, Robert Shelton, each 25c.	2.25

I'd be absolutely happy if I had the amount you are going to give. I'm waiting patiently. C. W. Bates, Pastor.

Mocksville Circuit.

On the first Sunday in April, I went to Union Grove. I found them in the usual spirit, and doing good work in the Sunday school and in the other services. I am pleased to serve such people as these. On my last round the people gave me a pounding, so much that I could not bring it home with me on account of not having a conveyance large enough to carry it. I thank them for this kind deed. The collection was $7.75.

The second Sunday in April I filled my appointments at Union Chapel and Bethel. At Union Chapel we had a large congregation, a good Sunday school and a good service. This church is in fine condition, and looks to be greatly built up. The collection was $5.25.

Bethel is also doing a good work. We had a good crowd, and good attention, and are having a good Sunday school. The collection was $1.75.

The third Sunday I was at Dulins. This church is doing the best work that it has done for several years. I think it will soon be one of our best churches. They have just put carpet on the floor and fixed things up nice indeed. The collection was $1.00.

Elbaville also on the third Sunday. I found them going on as usual; the old stand-bys still at work. No changes made, but I am hoping to see them rise to their strength. Good services, and S. S. is also good, but not what it ought to be. The collection was $5.60.

Byerly's Chapel, on the fourth Sunday. A very good congregation for that church. We had a good service. We have a few only at this place, but they are a good, faithful people. I love them and feel at home when with them. The collection was $1.00. J. W. Self.

May 2, 1914.

On last Sunday at 4 P. M. Mr. O. T. Boger, the son of T. H. Boger, and Miss Maggie E. Allen, the daughter of Mr. Thomas Allen, were joined together in matrimony by the writer at the M. P. parsonage in Mocksville.

They are members of our church and a good boy and a good girl. We wish them a long and happy life. J. W. Self.

May 2, 1914.

Mocksville Ct.

Job.

Jonathan Franklin Job was born July 27, 1832, married to Sarah Walker Nicholson June 17, 1855, professed faith in Christ and joined Mount Hermon Methodist Protestant church in August, 1855, lived a consistent Christian life till April 29, 1914, at which time his spirit returned to God who gave it. The fact that he found Christ the same year he was married leads one to guess that the godly woman he had taken for his life companion exerted a wholesome influence. She fell asleep January 31, 1914, and thus preceded him only a few months. Eleven children came to bless that home, seven of whom are now living, four sons and three daughters. A great many grand children and great grand children rise up and call him blessed. It is a little remarkable that of all his posterity who have reached the age of accountability not one remains outside the church. But even that is not remarkable when the man is known.

In 1868 he moved from the neighborhood of Mount Hermon to the neighborhood of Hebron church and joined there. Doubtless many of the former pastors will remember the faithfulness of this man of God. For about two years he had been confined to the house and for two or three months to his bed, but he was resigned there. One day he said to me: "I have tried to do the Lord's will and now if it please the Lord I am ready to suffer His will." When his wife left him for heaven, he said: "I surely thought I would go first, but Sallie has beat me there; however, she will not have long to wait for me there and I will not have to wait long here before going to her." He spoke of his departure as one would of a very pleasant journey. It seemed death had no terrors for him. He looked upon it as a friendly door through which he was ready to enter and be at rest. Lingering disease had eliminated the physical vigor of other days, but it was evident that as "the outward perished the inward man was renewed day by day." During his last few months on earth his face was a study. There was that about it "that never can float into speech." Pinched by pain and somewhat drawn by disease that face had about it that which I never remember to have seen before. Far back in the great depths of his inmost soul there seemed a glow and as the physical man sank lower the unspeakable nature of his happy spirit smiled even through his tears. One could not help feeling sorry that he suffered so, and yet it was a privilege to study that face that so evidenced the divine power sustaining him in the hour of suffering.

I don't think I ever before so understood what Solomon said when he exclaimed: "The path of the just is as a shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

Uncle Frank is no more among us, but the good influence he set in motion will go on deepening, widening and increasing in mighty volume until it shall break at last in billows of eternal praise at the blessed Savior's feet in glory.

Six strong clean Christian young men, the grandsons of the deceased, were the pall bearers—Kennett McAdams, Daniel Wilson, Highfill Job, Talton Job, Floyd Job and James Job. It was fitting, and the scene was solemnly beautiful.

W. E. Swain.

WEST DORMITORY
ADMINISTRATION BUILDING
Elon College Campus View, Looking North-East From the Depot.
EAST DORMITORY
The New $26,000 Men's Gymnasium.
the Best of any in the South. The Gift of the Alumni Association.
The Administration Building, Looking
North West, Showing the West Dormitory in the Distance
West Dormitory, Front View, Showing Rear Porch and Annex, Containing College Dining Hall, Women's Gymnasium and Art Studio

Elon College

For Both Men and Women

Elon College, North Carolina

For a quarter century Elon College has rendered the best families of the South a paragon service in providing young men and young women with the best mental, moral and physical training under positive Christian influences, tho entirely free from sectarianism.

Karl Lehman, of Boston, testifies that "of all the Colleges I have visited as International Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor during six years, the spirit of Elon College appeals to me as most genuinelu Christian." Elon College is situated in the delightful hill country, a section unsurpassed for beauty, with a climate far-famed for its healthfulness. There is no medical fee, for there is no necessity for it. Its campus, comprising twenty-five acres of native oak and hickory, shrubbery, winding walks and driveways, is one of the most beautiful in the South and, with its two unsurpassed gymnasia, provides abundant opportunity for recreation and relaxation.

The splendid equipment of Elon College was only made possible through liberal endowment. It maintains seven elegant new buildings, especially designed and appointed for college work. These are furnished with every known convenience; steam heat, electric lights, running water, baths and sewerage. The College plant is conservatively valued at $300,000.00.

Elon College is distinctly a high-grade institution, though its charges are moderate. Its graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of all the great universities without examination. Its literary and scientific courses are arranged in various departments which lead to the degrees of Master of Arts, Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Philosophy, Bachelor of Pedagogy, and a three-years' course leading to the degree of Licentiate of Instruction, designed especially for teachers. This institution affords special opportunities for training in Piano, Voice, Expression, Fine Arts, Normal Training, Physical Culture and Commercial Practice.

The Faculty consists of twenty-one specialists; men and women selected not only for their superior teaching ability, but also for their exemplary character and manners.

The student body numbers nearly four hundred and comes from thirteen states.

The lowest Rates in the South, only $131 to $191 per College session of ten months. Fall Term always opens the first Wednesday in September. For full descriptive catalogue and view-book, address

President W. A. Harper, LL. D.,
Elon College, N. C.
Box 87

Front, the New Gymnasium and Power House in the Distance
West Dormitory, a Winter View. The Old College Well, now a Campus Lounging House, but Sacred in Elon History.
The Gym. Room of the Alumni Building, one of the largest floors of polished maple in the South.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER EVEN CHRIST AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XX. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, MAY 14, 1914. NUMBER 25.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCULLOCH, Editor and Publisher.
PRICE.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
RULE IN DEALING WITH SUBSCRIBERS.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

INFANT BAPTISM AS VIEWED TO-DAY.

In the Prayer Book of the Protestant Episcopal Church, in the prayer set for use in the baptism of infants occurs this expression: "Sanctify Water in the mystical washing away of sin." Farther on in the ritual, after the child has been baptized the minister is to say, "Seeing now that this child is regenerate." From these and other expressions it is clear that the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States, if it believes in its own Prayer Book, still believes in baptismal regeneration.

In the "Faith of Our Fathers," a Roman Catholic book, the author, Cardinal Gibbons, says: "Baptism, which washes away original sin, is as essential for the infant as for the full grown man, in order to attain the kingdom of heaven." And again: "If your child is deprived of heaven by being deprived of Baptism, God does it no wrong because he infringes no right to which your child had any inalienable title." Yet the cardinal admits that in case of a man who has not been baptized because of lack of opportunity or because he was not sufficiently instructed as to its necessity, God accepts the will for the deed and the man is saved by the "baptism of desire!"

It is clear that the Roman Catholics still retain the ancient belief that water baptism washes away "original sin."

The ritual of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, seems to imply the belief that the infant has already been regenerated (before baptism), and the purpose in baptism of infants is to ask for the continual replenishing of God's grace that the child baptized may ever remain in the fellowship of God's holy church.

Our Methodist Protestant fathers seem to have sought to get away from even that belief. They wrote anew the ritual of infant baptism, making it simply a service of dedication or consecration. "You are now about to dedicate your child to the service of the living and true God." "You now solemnly promise . . . to bring up this child in the nurture and admonition of the Lord."

Thus we seem to have escaped from all ancient errors and from doubtful theories of the present and to be standing on solid ground in our practice of infant baptism. If we will see and admit that infant baptism should not take the place of the penitent believer's baptism, we believe our position will be unassailable from any quarter so far as this subject is concerned.

THE WORLD IN THE CHURCH.

A well-known Swiss historian, in dealing with characteristics of the early Christian church, has written the following words:

"From the very first there was a sharp distinction between the Christianity that was actually lived in the churches and the Christianity which the teachers of the Church postulated in their writings. That which is called worldliness did not make its way into Christianity through decay from some high level of excellence. It came through the mission itself, as each new convert brought in a portion of the world along with him."

There is reason to fear that this tendency has persisted through the ages, and is still active. The Church needs expulsive as well as attractive influence; there is much that she must reject in those who come into her brotherhood, while opening her arms to all of the Spirit of Christ which they manifest. While, like her Master, she must manifest the tenderest pity and consideration for the frailties and weaknesses of her converts, there must be no truce with the worldliness that may still cling to their views and habits. The spirit of the world, anti-Christian in its essence, must be met with unflinching opposition.—London Christian.

—EX-Senator Cannon, of Colorado, son of a distinguished Mormon of Utah, is now going over the country warning the American people against the designs of the Mormon hierarchy. He spoke in Greensboro last Sunday afternoon and made out a strong case. He says the Mormons will destroy the American republic, if allowed to go on as they are going. They are violating shamelessly their pledges made to the country when Utah was admitted as a State. Mr. Cannon was one of the men sent to Washington twenty years ago to bring the pledges of the Mormons and to seek for admission to the Union as a State. Afterward when he saw those solemn pledges violated, he protested to his own people. Finding this unavailing, he says he now feels it his duty to warn the American people against their movements. Every time we buy a pound of sugar we are paying tribute to the Mormons. They have acquired immense revenues and are using them to extend their power. Mr. Cannon advises that they be denied the use of the United States mails for their polygamous teachings and that the constitution of the United States be amended forever prohibiting polygamy in the United States.

—Bro. Burgess quotes Rev. Washington Bowman as saying that to fall into the hands of the Grip is equivalent to falling into the hands of the Devil.

A "Seeing Mxeico" exposition car will be in Greensboro May 18 to 24. Open daily from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m. Many things Mexican will be exhibited. Admission, 10 cents. School classes, 5 cents.

—Jacob Kennett, son of John Kennett, of Pleasant Garden, was knocked from a freight train and killed by a water crane last Saturday. Burial at Pleasant Garden on Sunday. He had been working on the railroad about two months. Sad!

THE WISEST PREFERENCE.

There was a good woman who, when she was ill, being asked whether she was willing to live or die, answered: "Which God pleaseth." "But," said one standing by, "if God should refer it to you, which would you choose?" "Truly," said she, "if God should refer it to me, I would even refer it to Him again."

THE WORK OF THE MINISTRY.

A SERMON BY REV. J. H. STOWE.

(Prepared as Alternate Conference Sermon for the High Point Conference: offered for publication by Pres. Cecil and gladly published by the editor.)

1 Thess. 5:13—"And esteem them very highly, in love, for their work's sake."

The preceding verse reads: "And we beseech you, brethren, to know them which labor among you and are over you in the Lord, and admonish you; and esteem them very highly in love for their work's sake."

In speaking of the work of ministers I shall pay more attention to the purpose than the manner, considering results more inspiring and helpful than the manner by which they are brought about. And in all I say I shall perhaps give you nothing new, but only, if possible, deepen and intensify the impressions and convictions you already have.

The minister's work is God-given work. He is employed by the great Head of the Universe, and while this in a measure may be true of all people who are living the life that God wants them to live, it is in a special and higher sense true of the one who is called to do the work of a minister. He is an ambassador for Christ, and deals with men in Christ's stead, and can say with Paul, "I received this ministry of the Lord Jesus Christ, and not of men but of God," and that for reasons often inscrutable to man he counted me faithful, putting us in the ministry. That the Lord sometimes calls to this work through men, and assigns us to our work through some church organization does not change the fact that it is all God-given and that primarily we are employed by the Almighty and called to work for Him, and account to Him, and receive our final reward from His hand.

But not only is the minister employed by the greatest Employer in the universe; he is sent to do the greatest work ever given man to do. And sometimes I wonder if it is not the greatest work God ever gave to any class of beings. At least we can say that it is greater than the work of kings or emperors, presidents, or rulers, engineers or master builders of natural things. In the ancient times the prophet was greater than the king or ruler, and the same is true yet, for we are sent to admonish the great as well as the small, and to seek the reconciliation of all men to God.

Again, the work of the minister is a work of greatest glory to God, and the greatest benefit to men. Both of these statements may be questioned by some, but it is hard to conceive of anything that would bring greater glory to God than the successful accomplishment of the great purpose for which God has employed the minister.

It was great glory to God to create; it was greater to redeem; it is still greater to reach out through man whose powers have been weakened by sin, and through his work confound the mighty powers of darkness by snatching poor lost men and women from the jaws of hell. What, may we ask, can glorify God more?

As to its being the work of greatest benefit to men, we will say that it is the only work that benefits man in every sphere of life and in every part of his complex being.

1st. It benefits man financially.

That Christianity is dependent upon the work of the gospel ministry for its impress upon the nations, I think will not be denied. That the nations in which the greatest amount of this work has been done are the nations that control the wealth and commerce of the world is a statement which I have never seen any attempt to deny. That a community, a home or an individual prospers more materially where the preacher's work is successfully done is a fact so often demonstrated in actual life that none but the most bitter enemies of religion would ever think of denying it. Financially as well as in a higher sense, the work of the ministry gives mankind gold for brass, silver for iron, brass for wood and iron for stones.

2nd. It benefits men physically.

A part at least of the minister's work is to induce men to live righteously and Godly in this present world, and nothing tends so much to retain or restore health as to live Godly and righteously day by day. I know good people get sick, and many of them are great sufferers, and I am no Christian Scientist, nor "Divine Healer," but I do know that righteousness tendeth to life and that he that pursueth evil pursueth it to his own death. And I know that oft-times physically as well as spiritually the work of the minister brings men beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness.

3rd. The work of the minister benefits man mentally.

Since nothing has ever aroused the minds of men in general so much as the preaching of the gospel of salvation, schools flourish in Christendom as they do not in other parts of the world, in Christian communities as they do not in non-Christian. Christian parents make the greater sacrifices that they my educate their own children, and do more for the education of the massess. Back of all our institutions of learning, high or low, church or state, stands the minister pointing upward to the light. And in every land and community and home where the preacher accomplishes the great purpose of his work, is fulfilled the prophecy of Isaiah: "The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light, and they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them the light shineth."

Again, the work of the minister benefits man socially. For through the work the people are caused to go out with joy and are led forth in peace. The mountains and hills break forth into singing, and all the trees of the field clap their hands. And in the social world also, instead of the thorn comes up the fir tree, and instead of the brier comes up the myrtle tree. Instead of the things in the social world that pierce and hurt and tear, come the things that sweeten and heal. The wolf (that old ferocious beast of a person that would rend society into pieces) dwells peaceably with the gentle lamb, and the leopard lies down with the kid, and the calf and young lion and fatling together, and a little child shall lead them. The cow and the bear feed and their young ones lie down together. Antagonistic natures become peaceful and easily managed, a little child leads them, and the roaring old lion becomes so tame and so his nature becomes so changed that he eats straw like an ox. Those who were as poisonous as serpents and whose sting or bite was death become so harmless that the suckling child plays upon the hole of the asp and the weaned child puts his hand in the cockatrice's den, and people cease to hurt and destroy because their hearts are full of the knowledge of the Lord as waters cover the sea. Only let the work of the gospel ministry succeed and we will need no Hague Conference, for not only will men beat their spears into pruning hooks and their swords into plowshares, but the great war vessels will be turned into channels of commerce, and the great guns into implements and machinery for the welfare and not the destruction of men, while the mighty explosives will be used to blast down the mountains and to fill up the valleys, to make the crooked straight and the rough places smooth and all flesh would see the salvation of God.

But great and beneficial as those things are, they are only the outflowings of the real purpose of the Gospel minister's work; secondary benefits benefits coming from the great overshadowing benefit.

This great purpose and benefit are both set forth by Christ when he sent Paul far away among the Gentiles, saying to him, "I send you to open their eyes, to turn them from darkness to light, from the power of Satan unto God: that they may receive forgiveness of sins and an inheritance among them that are sanctified by the faith that is in men." We see then that the great purpose of the Lord in sending men out to preach his gospel is that men's eyes may be opened that they may see themselves as they are, that they may understand the ruinous nature of sin, and their own great need, and to turn them from their dark, Godless, hopeless condition to see the light in the face of Jesus Christ, and to bring them out of the bondage and from under the dominion of Satan. We are liberators, saving men from the bondage of hell, that they may be members of the household of God, and fellow-citizens with the saints in light and heirs of that inheritance that is incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away, but is reserved in heaven for all that are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time."

So you see that the chief benefit of the minister's work is not that it gives you earthly but heavenly treasure, not that it increases physical health, but prepares you for the land where there is no sickness; not in giving us knowledge, but in preparing us to pass to the realm where we shall know even as we are known. Not that it prepares for greater social enjoyments here, but for the society of saints and angels in the sweet by and by. But why continue? Not until we can tell the depth of hell and the height of heaven, the evils of sin and the blessings of holiness, the horrors of eternal damnation and the glories of eternal salvation, can we tell the real worth and greatness of the work of the minister of Christ. Enough, if amid our struggles in this stupendous task we hear the voice of one saying: "All power is given to me in heaven and earth, go on with the mighty work; and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." And if for our comfort he leads us as he does sometimes into the chamber of some dying saint on whose brow is the dew of death but on whose countenance there shines the light of eternal life, and that saint takes us by the hand while the gleam of heaven shines in his eyes and says something like this: "Dear preacher, my feet are touching the Jordan's brink, but all is well. I will soon be over on the banks of eternal deliverance, but before I go I want to tell you that under God it was you that opened my eyes, turned me from darkness to light and from the power of Satan unto God, I have received forgiveness for my sins and am now going to enter upon the inheritance of those who are sanctified by the faith that is in Christ."

In such a case we can look up and say, "Lord, give joy or grief, give ease or pain, take life or friends away, only help me to be so faithful in the work of this ministry that I may come and find scores and hundreds, if possible, saved through my faithfulness in this great work, in that eternal day."

Now, it is for the sake of this great work that the minister is to be esteemed very highly in love, not for his sake, but for his work's sake; not for his learning, not for his sociability nor for his eloquence, not for anything but his work's sake, that the Gospel be not hindered.

I wanted to say something about how we ought to esteem the faithful ministers of the past, who have by their faithfulness transmitted to us the glorious Christian heritage we possess today. And by whose ministrations our eyes were opened, and we ourselves were turned from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, and have received the forgiveness of sins and the title deed to the inheritance with the saints. But I forbear; only I will say that of all those who have lived in the past none should have a higher place in our esteem than those who have preceded us as ministers of Christ.

1st. I wish to say that the ministers should esteem each other very highly for their work's sake. No where else is it more important that we be examples of the flock. Their work is one, whether they come from the halls of learning or the halls of industry; from behind college walls, or behind counters, from the student's desk or the plow handles, we are employed by the same Master to do the same great work. There is simply no place among ministers for jealousy or envy or variance and pure low-down littleness. A preacher ought to be big enough to esteem others better than himself. No preacher ought ever to allow himself to think that he is it or all of it. He ought to esteem himself highly, only for his work's sake, and the more he esteems the work, the less he will esteem himself. And he should esteem his brother minister so much that he will never allow himself to say anything that will hurt the influence of that brother, he may have faults, but we should esteem him enough for his work's sake to keep our mouths shut about those faults. Many a poor preacher's work has been made harder and more difficult and sometimes impossible of success because some other preacher did not esteem him enough for his work's sake to be careful about what he said. Then we should esteem each other enough to let every one do his own work in his own way, for while our work as to purpose is the same, God did not call us all to do our work in the same way. What does it matter, whether I preach from manuscripts or extemporaneously, whether I appeal to the emotions or the reason, whether I visit from house to house, or spend the time in preparing better sermons, whether I work in the school room or out on the streets, so I can accomplish the great purpose of the ministry and turn men from darkness to light; and I think I may do much harm if I esteem myself so much and my brother so little that I want to compel him to do his work in my way. Though he follows not with me, if he casts out devils, may I never hinder him.

Of course the minister (because the success of his work depends on it) should seek to win and hold the esteem of the people to whom he ministers. To do this he will have not only to live worthily, but will have to do things that may seem to some as outside of real ministerial work, and deny himself some innocent, harmless pleasures. I know a preacher who gained and held the esteem of a community by helping a sick brother's wife and little boy plant a field of corn, and helping an old, feeble brother mow a meadow with an oldtime mowing blade, and doing it all cheerfully and without money and without price. And old people say that that preacher has done more good in that community than any other preacher they have had there for years. I know another preacher who lost the esteem of a family by reading a novel while stopping in that home. It may have been a good novel, it may have helped that preacher, but it hurt his usefulness in that home. Another lost the esteem of a community by indulging in pastimes, playing games that the people thought beneath the dignity of a preacher. We may say that it is nobody's business what I do if it is not sinful. True, perhaps, but "for our work's sake" we should respect the weak brother's conscience and be all things to all men, if by all means we can save some.

Our text was written to laymen, and so now I turn to you. And, dear brother layman, let me say first of all that next to the presence of the Holy Spirit the success of the minister is dependent on nothing so much as the esteem in which he is held by you. Other things being equal the minister who held in the highest esteem by the laity in general will have the greatest success. It is often said that the ministers of the present day do not have the success that preachers had in former days, and some may say that it is because we do not have the Holy Spirit with us as they did. But, is not a part of the secret the fact that the people as a whole do not esteem the ministry as highly as they once did? I think there are hundreds if not thousands, who perhaps think they have made the same discovery that a man in Randolph county said some years ago that he had made. He said that when he was a boy he thought the preacher a superior kind of being, who with his whole outfit—horse, buggy and all, came direct from heaven, and ought to be looked up to and given the best of everything. But, he said, he had discovered that a preacher was just a man, worthy of no more respect and no better treatment than other men. I claim that the boy's view was nearer correct than the man's, for as St. John says of the Baptist, "There was a man sent of God whose name was John." So it may be said of any of these ministers, there was a man sent from God whose name was Cecil, or Dixon, or Johnson, or Taylor. If he does not come straight from heaven he comes with heaven's commission and with heaven's message to do a work that leads men straight up to heaven, and he deserves your highest regard for his work's sake, and you should show your esteem.

1st, by saying a good word for the preacher every time you have an opportunity. We have rung the changes on "If the preacher's sermon helps you, tell him so," and "Give him the flowers now, don't wait to put them on his grave," until I fear it has become fashionable to compliment the preacher to his face and criticise him behind his back. If the preacher does you good, tell your family and your neighbor and shower the boquet you have for your preacher around among your fellowmen.

2d, Esteem your preacher so high in love that you will attend the services not only on bright days and when you feel good, but when the weather is bad, and your liver out of fix. For every time you stay away you lower the preacher in somebody's estimation, perhaps your own children's and thus hinder his usefulness. And every time you attend the services, especially when you put yourself to some inconvenience to attend, you raise him in the estimation of some one and thus increase his usefulness.

3rd. Esteem him enough for his work's sake to give him a working salary. Much has been said about giving a preacher a living salary. I have always had that. I have never had a salary that enabled me to do my best work. It does not take much to keep a preacher and his family alive; it takes a right nice little sum to enable him to do his best work. I have had among my parishioners the past three years a man who was employed by a man of wealth to manage a large grain and cattle farm. This owner not only pays his manager a living salary, (a hundred or two dollars a year more than I have ever received for preaching, and that is something to think about when a man is considered worth more to look after cattle than one is who looks after souls) and pays it promptly, but he says, "whatever money you need to run this business draw on me for it." He has a living salary. He has a working capital. Our missionary and other boards are continually complaining that they need more money to push forward the work. The same is true on every field of labor. You men of means do not esteem the work highly enough to give us a working capital.

4th. Esteem the preacher so highly in love for his work's sake that you will practice what he preaches. We preachers would soon turn the world upside down, and we would have the good side up and the bad side down, if people would practice what we preach. One of the greatest hindrances to the success of the minister's work is the fact that the church membership does not esteem him enough to follow his counsel or co-operate with his plans. And if the church does not esteem the minister enough to heed his warnings and walk in his counsel we could hardly expect the world to do so.

Too often in these days it may be said even of church-going people as the Lord said of the people in the days of Ezekiel the prophet, "And they come unto thee as the people cometh, and they sit before thee as my people, and they hear thy words, but they will not do them; for with their mouth they show much love, but their heart goeth after covetousness, and lo, thou (the preacher) art unto them as a very lovely song, of one that hath a pleasant voice and can play well on an instrument, for they hear thy words, but they do not do them." "We have piped but you would not dance."

And esteem them very highly in love, for their work's sake. For their work's sake! For their work's sake! It matters but little what becomes of the preacher, his reputation, his happiness. But it does matter what becomes of his work, which reaches down to the gates of hell, and up to the throne of heaven; and men would better be particular how they touch the Lord's anointed and do his prophets harm lest they hinder the work that is so dear to the Almighty. And may the Lord help all ministers to esteem their work so highly that nothing may move them, and that they may not count their lives dear unto themselves so that they may finish their course with joy, and the ministry which they have received of the Lord Jesus Christ to testify the Gospel of the grace of God. And may the Lord help you laymen to so esteem the minister in love for his work's sake that you will be faithful to the great Master that at the last, in the inheritance among God's saved ones, you and your loved ones may be found singing the song of the redeemed, and praising God for the wonderful work done through His ministers.

Asheville.

As I said in my last letter, we were happy in our first service in our church. We are happier yet after the second service. Listen to this and see if it doesn't make you happy, too: "The largest Sunday school attendance during the present pastorate. Twenty new scholars enrolled. A church attendance more than double the average congregation of the last 12 months. Three baptisms. Four additions to the church membership. More to be received next Sunday. Mother's Day was observed, and we had a splendid service of songs and readings, followed by a sermon and the reception of members.

Since my last report considerable work has been done on the church. The plastering has been finished, the wainscoating almost completed, and the basement cementing is well under way—will be finished before this report appears. The door casings are being put up this week, and the doors hung. We have just received word that the art glass windows have been shipped, and I suppose they will be in place by Sunday.

Sunday was a great day for this preacher. He got about $10,000 of the invisible salary that Dr. Elderdice used to tell us about. It came in the form of the reception of a member at Clark's Chapel—Bro. Lucius Eller. He needs no more introduction than that to the former pastors of Buncombe circuit. A man who has been coming home for months, who tried to find complete satisfaction in Christian work, apart from salvation in his own heart, but who found that service empty of real happiness until he had given himself to the Master and consecrated himself by the vows of membership to the service of the church. His wife, who was a member of the M.E. Church, South, joined with him. The preacher was halfway through receiving Bro. Eller when one of the brethren came up and whispered to him that Bro. Eller's wife wanted to join with him, so he stopped and received her with her husband. He was so conscientious that he had kept his intention of joining even from his wife, not wanting to influence her to leave her own church. I have never seen a congregation so broken with tears as this one was as these two splendid people were received. It was good to have a part in it.

The people at Clark's Chapel and at Jupiter, where I held service Sunday night—and I am sure the other points on the work will be when they hear it—are delighted that Bro. W. R. Lowdermilk is coming to take charge of the work. I am no less delighted, selfishly perhaps, because it will relieve me of a tremendous amount of extra work. I have preached three times each Sunday for the last two months and a half, trying to hold up the appointments that were not too far away from Asheville to make me miss a night appointment here, and at the same time have had all the work that it is possible for one man to do here in Asheville. I have done it freely, the country work, without financial recompense, except as the appoinements have appreciated it enough to give me an offering for the Asheville work—done it for the glory of God, and for the strengthening of this section. This is more of that invisible salary.

Two of the classes at Clark's Chapel are to hold an ice cream supper for the benefit of the Asheville church, and the Sunday school at Jupiter is to take an offering for the work. Come along, folks, and do like wise. If you could only see the need and the opportunity, you would help. I don't know how to make you see the need. Just one offering out of fifty-two. That's all we ask. It won't hurt you, it won't hurt the Children's Home—if I thought it would I wouldn't ask for it,—it will help us. Do it. Pastors, you may come to take charge of this work some day. Do you want to come here knowing that you never gave any one a chance to help, that you didn't lift a finger to help lift the load? Members of the church in North Carolina, won't you rise in your might to do this thing that will mean so much to the denomination? Come on! COME ON!

Asheville Church Building Fund

Mrs. Charles Maxwell	$5.00
Mr. T. M. Duckett,	5.00
Mr. M. A. Kelley	5.00
Mrs. J. E. Smathers	3.50
Mr. W. G. Burgin	2.00
Mr. Frank Smith	2.00
Mrs. Jasper Roberts	1.00
Mr. E. E. Roberts	1.00
Mr. M. B. Taylor	1.00
Mr. Merrimon	1.00
Mr. White	1.00
Mr. C. W. Brown	1.00
Mr. N. K. Carson	1.00
"A Friend"	.50
Mr. J. W. Neely	.50
Mr. H. E. Bruns	.50
Mr. J. M. Rogers	.50

And not one cent of it from our friends east of the Ridge!

C. W. Bates, Pastor.

BRANCH MEETING.

The Fifteenth Annual Branch Meeting of the W. F. M. S. will be held in Grace Church, Greensboro, May 20th. The day following, May 21st, the Executive Board will meet here. Delegates are asked to remain for this Board Meeting. We are expecting a full attendance of board members. We hope many of our ministers can be with us. Let us know when you will arrive or when you do arrive (if we should miss you) call up the Corresponding Secretary. Ladies, lay aside your other affairs for a while and attend both these meetings.

Ladies coming to represent any of our churches will be most cordially welcomed and entertained free of charge by our ladies in Greensboro. Let every church in the N. C. Conference send a representative.

Harris Glascock, M. D.,
Cor. Sec. of N. C. Branch.

Program of Branch Meeting.

Wednesday, 10 o'clock A. M.
Consecration service.
Roll call.
Address of Welcome, Mrs. W. K. Hartsell.
Response, Mrs. A. G. Dixon.
Greetings from Home Mission Society. Mrs. E. B. Siler.
Address of President.
Appointment of Committees.
Miscellaneous Business.
Wednesday, 2 P. M.
Devotional.
Roll call.
Minutes.
Treasurer's Report.
Report of Corresponding Secretary.
Report of Auxiliaries.
Reports of Committees.
Election of Officers.
Election of Delegates to Board Meeting.
Unfinished Business.
Adjournment.

—A London minister recently gave a charge to a newly-ordained minister. He said: "Over the grave of a famous German astronomer was written the epitaph, 'He brought the stars near to us.' And that was the preacher's main business—to make the unseen real to his people; to show them the world within the world, to bring near to them the stars—all stars of God.'"—Journal and Messenger.

We wish to return our heartfelt thanks to those who have so generously shown their love and sympathy to us in our sad bereavement in the death of son and brother. May God's richest blessings rest upon you all.

J. W. Hopkins, Sr., and Family.

CHRIST'S HABIT OF PRAYER.

A SERMON BY REV. J. K. JOWETT, D. D.

Luke 9:29—"And as he was praying, the fashion of his countenance was altered."

It is a very momentous matter reverently to study any one of the personal habits of Christ, to seek to enter into his secret faith and thought. For when a man begins to make reverent quest into the life of Christ, Christ knows it. On this plane study of the work and the word is communion with the speaker and the worker. To contemplate a personal habit of Jesus is to enter into fellowship with a person. We not only observe, we are observed. We not only make observations, we obtain recognition. The student of the Master becomes the Master's friend. Or, to put it in another way, a reverent study of the historic Jesus puts us into communion with the living Christ.

I find the Master praying when temptation drew near. I am not going for my illustration to that early experience in the Master's life which we describe as "the temptation"; but I will go to another experience when I think the temptation was even more subtle and more secret, where the snare was even more enticing. I will seek my illustration of the temptation of Jesus on the Mount of Transfiguration. On that mount he won his victory over his greatest snare.

What was it? Let me remind you of the situation. We have got to get beneath the circumstances as they appear, the mere superficies of the occasion, and we have to get down to the secrets of the soul. See what had happened. Our Lord, before the experience, had manifested his love. He had declared his purpose. He had confirmed his message by his deeds. He was already shedding his blood in sacrificial service. With what result? The sky was already blackening with omens of rejection. Storms of hostility seemed to be brewing on every side. The air was thick with menace, with rejection, with plot and mischief. "He came unto his own, and his own received him not." And just then, when storms of hostility were gathering on every side, when the tempest of antagonism was drawing ever nearer and nearer—just then, I am told, "he went up into a mountain to pray."

PRAYING TO CHOOSE.

Now, why do you think he went? The more human we can be in interpreting our Lord, the more we shall eventually glorify him. Why did he go? Just grip the situation. He had declared his love. He had been going about doing good. He was shedding his blood in chivalrous and sacrificial service. And there was the darkening road that led to desolation and crucifixion. What was the temptation? Is it worth while? Should he go to night and desolation and crucifixion, or should he there and then finish with translation?

Reverently I have come to believe that these were the two alternatives presented to our Lord on the mount—translation, desolation. And as though to emphasize the inducement, we are told there appeared unto him Moses and Elias, the very two who were reputed to have finished by translation and to have escaped the common death. And it does appear to me as though their very presence gives a subtlety to the snare by which he was beset. Should he end by re-entry into "the glory which I had with thee before thew orld was," or should he choose re-entry into the road of resentment, down among the evil spirits, the malice, the rejection? And we are told he prayed. Up or down? Finish there or back to the thorny road? And see how even Simon Peter comes in to emphasize the snare. "Lord, it is good for us to be here. Let us make three abiding-places," and stay, and not return again to the way of rejection, and perhaps ultimately to the cross. "Lord, it is good for us to be here; let us make three abiding-places."

But the Lord brushed it aside. He prayed, and he chose. And he chose desolation, crucifixion, death. When Peter said, "Let us stay," he brushed it aside and said, "Down, down; down again; down to the waiting multitudes, down to the envious eyes, down to the malicious designs, down to the cross!"

Well, now, don't you think that we have similar hours, as far as our own limitations will permit? That bit of blood-demanding work of yours—have you not come into this church this morning feeling inclined to ask the question "Is it worth while?" Those lads you are working with, their levity, their flippancy, their almost contempt. Is it worth while? You have come to your crisis. I always remember that wonderful incident in the life of Josephine Butler, as you can see her life in the life she herself wrote of her husband. That woman, comparatively frail and fragile of body, retiring, reticent in spirit, called to a publicity from which she shrank, called to a loathsomeness of ministry which to her was a constant crucifixion, called to do it amid the almost brutal indifference of the majority of men. If you turn to that life of sensitive sympathy you will find that Josephine Butler was continually enticed to say to herself, "Is it worth while? Is it worth while? Shall I keep on the bloody road or go back to the beautiful deanery, to that delightful and delicious cloistered seclusion? Is it worth while? Shall I go back to my husband and the quietness of family life, or back to the dark and troubled way?" And you can hear her praying; and while she prayed she chose—back to the ways of shame. And if you want to know what the Lord did for her, look at her face. It was transfigured with the only light that ever beautifies a woman, the light of a glorious self-sacrifice. She prayed and chose, and was illumined with the light of life.

A BULWARK OF THE SOUL.

And that bit of work of yours in one of the slums of the city, you know perfectly well that while I am speaking you are just balancing. There are Sunday school teachers here who are just balancing. They have never had a convert. They have never yet gleaned a golden ear of harvest for the garner of God, and they are saying here this morning, "Is it worth while?" Well, now, Jesus prayed when he came to that point, and while he prayed he chose.

Now, may I turn you to another example of the Saviour's personal private habit of prayer? May I read to you a passage, and ask you to note the wonderful sequence, and to mark the wonderful force of the conjunction on which the sequence hangs? "And he healed many that were sick with divers diseases, and cast out many devils; and he suffered not the devils to speak, because they knew him. And in the morning, a great while before day, he rose up and went out, and departed into a solitary place and prayed." Why? Why did he go apart just then for private communion with his Father God? He was himself intently doing good. The once-blind eyes were now radiant with thanksgiving. Men and women who were carried to him maimed and halt were now leaping about in buoyancy of heart. He was doing good work and enjoying a measure of public favor. Why leave the sick and the infirm and go away into a solitary place to pray?

I think he went aside to pray that he might provide against nervous exhaustion. All that healing, all that steady giving, all that sympathy meant expenditure of vital force. There is nothing so exhausting as healing. The hardest part of a minister's life is the expression and expenditure of sympathy. Every minister, when he goes around visiting the sick, careworn and burdened, will return home very much more weary than if he had been spending the time preparing sermons. When Jesus had been healing the crowd I do not wonder that he went apart to pray, to be quiet, to provide against nervous exhaustion.

I remember that the Dean of Salisbury some time ago, at the opening of the session of one of our great medical schools, delivered an address in which he counseled the medical students to find reprieve from their somewhat exacting studies in the ministry of poetry. I thought that counsel was eminently healthy and sane and peculiarly relevant to the strain and stress of our time. But without disparaging the ministry of poetry I should say that there is no nerve rest, no nerve restorer, nothing that quiets and refreshes the body, as the ministry of quiet prayer. You cannot meet that by argument, but only by experiment. If, exhausted by the turmoil and trouble of daily life, you can get apart and enter into quiet communion with your Father you will find that you are in touch with the fountain of life. The river of the water of life will flow into your very being. You will rise from your knees as tho' you had been dipped in a bath of regeneration, and you will be able to say, in the beautiful phrase of the twenty-third Psalm, "He restoreth my soul."

If I am to give a second reason why after a very successful day our Lord went into retirement for prayer, I should say this: that our Lord went away to pray that he might secure his soul against the perils of success. He very rarely had the perils of triumph presented to him in his earthly life. They were usually the perils of defeat. But I think our Lord knew this: that success can bruise the spirit even more perilously than defeat, and that where there are six men that can bear adversity, only one can stand the test of prosperity.

And so our Lord prayed—prayed in the hour of popular favor, not merely that he might be saved against nervous exhaustion, but lest his very success should impair his life of service.

If I may add one other illustration of our Master's habit of prayer it shall be this: I find that whenever our Lord was going to make a great decision he went aside to pray in order that he might refine the instrument of choice and sharpen his judgment to a fine and exquisite discernment. Listen to this passage, and mark the sequence: "And it came to pass in those days that he went out into a mountain to pray, and continued all night in prayer to God. And when it was day, he chose twelve." The words are their own exposition—the night of prayer and then the great decision. He took time to pray over great choices. Before he made the choice he spent time to prepare the instrument and implement of choice.

THE LEVER OF PRAYER.

And we have similar choices to make in our own individual or private or corporate life. We have to choose our careers. We have to choose at many-winding and ever-turning ways. Christ went aside to pray before he made a great choice in order that the greatest considerations might fill his mind. We are so prone when making great decisions to make them from small motives. We can make a great choice in a little way. Now to go aside and pray gives us the big manner. It gives us the great way of making a great decision. There is nothing so kills little things like prayer.

And you remember the end of it all. Christ of Nazareth, when he prayed like this through all his day, prayed too in the moment of death. "Father, forgive them." "He prayed for them that did the wrong." A prayer like that could never have been offered unless prayer for others had become habitual. Our Lord prayed in the hour of baptism and he prayed in the hour of death, and between his baptism and his death the light in the temple of his soul never went out.

And if all this is true there is only one conclusion—we are exceedingly wise when we pray, and we are exceedingly foolish when we cease to pray. To stop praying is to seal up your windows, to close your ventilators, to shut out light and air, to imprison your soul where you are deprived of all inspiration. If you are burdened in heart this morning, pray. If you are carrying a heavy cross, get aside and pray. If you are eaten up and consumed by secret sin, pray. And you will find that the Father in heaven who communed with his son Jesus Christ will commune with you, and your yoke will become easy and your burden will become light.—The Christian Herald.

THE CHURCH AND SCHEMES FOR SOCIAL BETTERMENT.

There be many in our day who assume to command and correct the church, undertaking to constrain her to renounce her position, contract her mission, and consent to make an exchange of the service of God for what they are pleased to call "the service of humanity." They would have her abandon her high calling in Christ Jesus and give herself exclusively to all sorts of pretentions programs of "social betterment," "improved environment," and the like. They conjure her to rely upon eugenics rather than upon regeneration by the Holy Spirit for the making of a new and nobler race, and to bring to bear upon man, the free agent, stock-raising expedients and plant culture devices as the most efficacious means to improve the species. But she may not heed the voices of these spurious renovators of mankind, who have framed their systems according to the postulates of a materialistic philosophy and not according to the pattern shown to her by her Lord in the mount. As he is in the world, so she is in the world, "to seek and to save that which was lost." Recognizing man as a being made a little lower than the angels and not simply a little higher than the brutes, she approaches him in the altitudes of his nature, with saving powers from above, and not with soothing potions from beneath. She knows full well the disposition of a fallen and prodigal race to get away from the Father, provided his goods may be enjoyed after his presence has been escaped; and she understands the excess of riot to which such departure from God leads and the dreadful degradation in which it ends. Hence she refuses to spend her strength in merely carrying more modish apparel and more wholesome food to wayward souls and arranging more refined associations and elegant environments for them however good such things may be; she can be satisfied with nothing less than bringing the wanderers back to the Father's yearning heart, who waits to welcome them, and to the Father's house, where there is for them not only "bread enough and to spare," but a banquet of love overflowing with heavenly joy. She believes that "the soul of all improvement is the improvement of the soul," and that social progress can never go in advance of the regeneration of personal character by the power of God and its perfection thru the grace of Christ the Redeemer.

The church is not indifferent to the bitter cries of the fallen and forlorn sons of men. On the contrary, her heart is filled with the tenderest pity and the most compassionate concern for them, as her hands are filled with most loving ministries to them; but she holds them in too high esteem to regard them as no more than animals to be filled with food and satisfied with improved physical conditions. Because she recognizes them as free-born and immortal souls, and not ephemeral beings which live to-day and to-morrow die, she declines to be the mere servitor of their appetites to the end that they may eat, drink, and be merry before their brief lives end forever. Because she looks upon them as children of God, though alienated from him, she refuses to regard them as hungry brutes to be pampered and pacified with the meat that perisheth, but does rather seek to feed them with the meat that endureth to everlasting life as befits beings created in the divine image and capable of becoming partakers of the divine nature.

(From the episcopal address to the General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, now in session. Written by Bishop Candler.)

—Rev. W. R. Lowdermilk has been assigned to Buncombe circuit and will enter upon his charge very soon. It is regrettable that Bro. Hatley's condition of health seemed to require him to surrender the charge, but Bro. Lowdermilk will make an excellent supply for the work the rest of the year. He is one of our best pastors and the Buncombe people may well congratulate themselves that he was free to come to them at this time.

—The board of bishops of the M. E. Church, South, after going over the history of the Vanderbilt University case in their address to the General Conference now in session in Oklahoma City, thus concludes:

"We do not presume to indicate to you what course you should pursue to repair the loss which has been inflicted upon the Church. That is for the wisdom of the General Conference to determine, and we venture to express the opinion that our people will promptly supply whatever means you may judge necessary to make up for the institution which has been taken from the ownership and control of the Church. It is respectfully recommended that the whole matter be referred by the General Conference to a select committee to report what should be done as the case now stands."

THE BETTER PRAYER.

I thank thee, Lord, for strength of arm
To earn my bread,
And that beyond my need is meat
For friend unfed.
I thank thee much for bread to live,
I thank thee more for bread to give.

I thank thee, Lord, for snug thatched roof
In cold and storm,
And that beyond my need is room
For friend forlorn.
I thank thee much for place to rest,
But more for shelter for my guest.

I thank thee, Lord, for lavish love
On me bestowed,
Enough to share with loveless folk,
To ease their load.
Thy love to me I ill could spare,
Yet dearer is the love I share.

—Davis.

GOD'S LABOR.

Martha stood, but Mary sat;
Martha murmured much at that;
Martha cared, but Mary heard,
Listening to the Master's word,
And the Lord her choice preferred.
Sit on, hear on.

Work without God is labor lost,
Full soon you'll find it to your cost.
Little is much if God is in it;
Man's busiest day's not worth God's minute.
Much is little everywhere
If God the labor do not share.
So work with Him, and nothing's lost.
Who works with Him doth best and most.
Work on.—Selected.

—More than 858,000 young trees are being set out this spring on national forests in Utah and southern Idaho, and the season is reported as particularly favorable to their successful growth.

N. C. BRANCH W. H. M. S.

Program of Annual Meeting, High Point, May 15, 16, 1914. (At Children's Home)

Friday, 10 A. M.
- Consecration service, Mrs. A. G. Dixon.
- Roll Call.
- Address of Welcome, Mrs. H. A. Garrett.
- Response, Mrs. Geo. B. Harris.
- Reports of Standing Committees.
- Review of Year's Work, by President.
- Report of Treasurer.
- Appointment of Committees.

Friday, 2 P. M.
- Devotional, Mrs. Emma B. Siler.
- Roll Call.
- Minutes.
- Report of Corresponding Secretary.
- Ways and Means of Aiding in the Support of the Children's Home, Mrs. H. A. Garrett.
- Round Table, Mrs. J. M. Millikan.
- Reports from Auxiliaries and Churches.
- Report of President, Mrs. A. G. Dixon.
- Unfinished Business.

Friday, 8 P. M.
- Devotional, Rev. A. G. Dixon.
- Entertainment, by Children of the Home.
- Address on Children's Home, by Mr. J. M. Millikan, Chmn. Brd. Trustees.
- Present Conditions, Needs and Opportunities in the Home, Mr. H. A. Garrett, Supt. Children's Home.

Saturday, 9:30 A. M.
- Praise Service, Mrs. Fannie E. Page.
- Roll Call.
- Minutes.
- Impressions of the Children's Home, by Miss Pansy Anderson.
- Reports of Committees.
- Election of Officers.
- Election of Delegates to Board Meeting.
- Unfinished Business.
- Adjournment.

—The defeat of Hobson for the United States Senate may lead some to conclude that the liquor forces are in the ascendency in Alabama, as Mr. Hobson made prohibition an important issue in his campaign. But such is not the case. The next legislature will be "dry" by a big majority, and the state will swing back into the columns of prohibition for the entire commonwealth.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

—Bro. J. M. Guyer of Kernersville attended the meeting of veterans in Jacksonville.

—Webster's Weekly, of Reidsville, has suspended because the income has fallen below the expenses.

PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENTS.

Concord ..... May 20
Gaston Ct. ..... May 21
Yarboro and Anderson Ct. .. May 22, 24
Asheville ..... May 25, 26
Buncombe Ct. ..... May 27, 30
Pensacola ..... May 31
Lenoir Ct. ..... June 1, 2
Lincoln Ct. ..... June 3, 4
Cleveland Ct. ..... June 6, 7
Falston Ct. ..... June 9
Shelby Ct. ..... June 10, 11
Charlotte ..... June 12, at night

Pastors please state where I will be met in going from one field to another, and make such arrangements between yourselves. C. A. Cecil.

Mocksville Circuit.

Liberty and Liberty Grove.

Last Sunday a memorial service was held at Liberty Grove. It was a good and helpful service. Singing by the Hamilton Quartette was one of the leading features of the day. Everybody enjoyed it. The following persons took some part in the exercises of the day: Rev. W. C. Kennett, Rev. J. F. Dosier, R. E. Patterson, A. P. Brower, Dr. Gregg of Liberty (Baptist), and Rev. C. A. Cecil made appropriate remarks, also made a short talk for the church. Flowers were brought in abundance and every grave had flowers placed upon it. 234 graves in all. The attendance was very good, and we believe much good was done.

President Cecil preached in Liberty at night, rather a severe arraignment of negligent church members, but approved by all, especially by the young men of the congregation.

The Sunday school in Liberty is, we think, a model one. Supt., R. E. Patterson; teachers, George Smith, Rev. W. C. Kennett, Mrs. Coble, Mrs. Mamie Smith, Mrs. R. E. Patterson, and Mrs. J. F. Dosier. These are all good and faithful teachers. Bro. Patterson is justly proud of his teachers. There are many good things we could say about this church and S. S., but we will mention one more now, and here it is: Nearly all the children remain for preaching, and the reason is because they are taught by precept and example to do so. G. F. Millaway.

Union Chapel, Granville Ct.

We had a splendid S. S. yesterday. We are pleased to have such good attendance because when the scholars don't attend regularly we can't have a good S. S.

Our S. S. teachers are all busy preparing papers to read at the S. S. convention at Rehoboth the fifth Sunday in May.

We have ordered our Children's Day literature and we will start to work getting up a Children's Day service just as soon as we can. We usually have it on the fourth Sunday in May, but for some reason or other we have neglected it this time. Bettie Davis, Rep.

Shelby.

Bro. Cecil: We observed mother's day and had communion service at Shelby to-day. Good attendance at S. S., nearly $2 collection. We put up our new bell in this church yesterday. Bro. Ramsey and others did it. 26-inch, guaranteed five years. Fine singing to-day. Glorious service. I go to Lincolnton 22 miles for night service. The pastor's salary is short, but the Lord knows our needs, and "the cattle on a thousand hills are His." We are carrying our debt. There is a $100 note due on Caroleen church. I got all I could when our meeting was going on and told them if they did not get it by the 15th inst. to let me know. There is a great deal of sickness at Caroleen and you know what that means in a factory town or towns. They are good to us by word and action. They seem to love us and we do them.

It was sad to bury Bro. R. C. Smith's wife Friday. He had promised $20.00 on the $100 note.

We will organize a Baraca at Shelby soon. Bro. Joe Carter's little Inez has been quite sick but is better. So has Sister Weaver been quite sick but is better.

Fraternally, C. E. M. Raper.

Caroleen.

Bro. Cecil: We closed a glorious revival at Caroleen last Sunday night. Quite a number reclaimed, 15 converts, 10 joined our church, one gave her name to join the Baptist. We held ten days or nights. I attended the funeral at Caroleen yesterday of Bro. R. C. Smith's wife. She was a good woman. Her daughter was converted during our meeting. Will join later. This is a real missionary field, but few own their homes in fee simple. Four deaths at Caroleen last week. A lot of our people have measles and mumps. We will arrange for you to preach at Caroleen 10th at 7:45; Shelby, 11th at 11 a. m.; Lincolnton, 11th, 8:45. Truly,

C. E. M. Raper.

Corinth, Littleton Ct.

Our Easter program reached us too late for us to get up the exercises, but we took an offering for Home Missions which was $5.00.

Our Sunday school and public school children combined and had an egg-hunt and picnic over in Uncle Bill Morris's yard, Easter. He is so near spent with age that he can't go anywhere or do any thing for himself; wanted us to have a good time at his home, so that he too might rejoice with the children. They all had a delightful time.

We have given out some of our recitations for Children's Day which we hope to have 1st Sunday in June. We are expecting Prof. Forlines that day also.

First quarterly conference will meet in Littleton M. P. Church Saturday, eleven o'clock.

Rev. J. D. Williams, of Henderson, is to deliver the commencement sermon for Aurelian Springs High School.

Fannie Barnes.

Shoals Church, Pinnacle and Mt. Zion.

Our pastor filled his regular appointment Sunday. A pretty day and a large turnout of people. S. S. attendance, 60; collection, $2.18.

Bro. Hunter finished his ten days' singing which he has been teaching at our church Saturday and gave an enjoyable song service Sunday night, which was attended by a large crowd.

We think the singing has been helpful in creating a greater interest in the singing as well as the training it afforded.

Steps are being taken toward repainting our church; a good portion of the money has already been raised.

Ira O. Hauser.

Hebron Church, Mebane Ct.

We have been silent for some time. We have had so much sickness and so many deaths that it seems we've had no time to think of writing what we have been doing.

We have had to miss several sermons on account of bad weather and sickness, but Bro. Swain has filled each appointment when the weather would allow him. His sermons are always good and instructive; if we will do as he tells us, we will come out O K.

We have organized Sunday school and are having a good S. S. Lots of young people to work with. We hope to have children's day, but haven't decided yet. We want to make this the best year yet. We hope to have more to report next time. We do hope that all members will do their duty and help to hold up the hands of our preacher. Pray for us, that we may succeed in our undertakings.

Mrs. F. W. Nelson.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas at the second quarterly conference of the North Main Street Methodist Protestant Church it was resolved that in the death of our brother, Dr. Jas. Riley Reitzel, who was a member of our quarterly conference, we desire to say that we have lost a man of worth to our church and to the church at large; a man who was beloved by all who knew him, a man of kindly disposition.

He was always interested in everything relative to the affairs of his church. His service was carefully rendered and his advice given in an earnest way to the upbuilding of Christianity, which endeared him to all of us and made him our never-to-be-forgotten friend.

Whereas it is the desire of this committee to place upon record an expression of our deep affection for him and our sincere appreciation for his faithful and efficient service as a member of our quarterly conference and all the duties performed and pertaining to his church—

First, Be it resolved that the quarterly conference has lost one of its most loyal and devoted counselors and North Main Street Methodist Protestant Church and the Children's Home for which he worked so faithfully, one of their most liberal and consecrated members.

Second, Be it resolved that these resolutions be spread on the records of our quarterly conference and a copy be sent to his family and published in our church papers. Respectfully,

W. P. Pickett,
W. D. Burgess,
A. M. Idol, Committee.

Laban and Catherine Payne.

Laban Craig Payne died April 23rd, 1914, having reached the advanced age of 86 years, 4 months and 20 days. Catherine Payne, his wife, had preceded him to the great beyond just two months and eleven days. She was 80 years and 5 months old. They were united in marriage in the year 1851. To them were born six sons and four daughters, of whom 5 sons and two daughters survive them. There are now living 45 grandchildren and 52 great-grandchildren.

They were members of Cedar Cliff church, Mt. Hermon Ct. They manifested in many ways their interest in and love for their church.

A short while before her death, Sister Payne, feeling that her departure was near, called her children around her bedside and requested that they so live as to meet her in heaven.

She was buried at Cedar Cliff. The funeral was conducted by the writer assisted by Rev. H. S. B. Thompson.

Bro. Payne, though feeble on account of age, was able to attend the funeral at the church, but he at once began to decline rapidly and for several days before his death seemed to be lingering on the border between life and death. He seemed unconscious of earthly things, yet often his lips were seen engaged in prayer, and the radiance of his face showed that he held sweet communion with Him who giveth victory over death.

His remains were laid to rest beside those of his departed wife. The funeral was conducted by the writer and Revs. C. H. Whitaker and H. S. B. Thompson.

G. W. Holmes.

Edson Charles Dimick.

Mr. Edson Charles Dimick was born Jan. 11, 1851, in New York State, near Buffalo, and died April 11, 1914, in the city of Richmond, Va. Mr. Dimick had made his home in Greensville county, Va., for the past thirteen years, having come to this State from Nebraska; immediately upon his arrival here he presented his letter for membership with the Methodist Protestant Church at Spring Church, where he was received, and remained a devoted, faithful and loyal member until his death, which came very suddenly while he was walking a street in Richmond. In his church he was loyal, always helping in every way he could to the financial needs of it, faithful to such an extent that he attended every service unless providentially hindered, and took an active part in the work of each service; loyal to such a degree that he believed in being on time for each service, always urging others to be on time and ready for service, and the importance of the same, and while his summons to come up higher came suddenly and without a moment's notice, we believe that even then he was ready. During his short stay among the people of Spring Church and others with whom he came in contact he had so greatly endeared himself to them, that since God hath seen fit to call him home to receive the rich reward which He had laid up for him there, the comment has been, "We will miss him so much in Sunday school, where he was the most help," and "how can we get along in Sunday school without him?" and "there is no one who can take his place." Mr. Dimick did indeed love the Sunday school and did all he could for the upbuilding of it, especially his class of young men whom he taught so faithfully Sunday after Sunday, coming to S. S. sometimes when he didn't feel able to because of his class; didn't want to disappoint them; also the little folks, in Sunday school, whom he tried to review the lessons with, trying in his most earnest way to impress the teachings upon their young minds. And not only was he interested in the Sunday school, but was licensed to exhort by the quarterly conference and often filled the pulpit of his home church and others during the absence of the pastor, always teaching plain Gospel truths.

Mr. Dimick served as class leader of his church, also as delegate to Annual Conference which met in Rocky Mount, N. C., and as Sunday school superintendent and teacher, proving worthy of his position in every case. Since his death letters from the West have been received here saying just as we do, that a worthy man indeed has been taken from our midst. Mr. Dimick's interest in upbuilding the Kingdom of God here on earth did not end with the homeland, but rather extended to far distant China where for three years with some help he has supported a native teacher to teach Christ and his love to the heathen there; so that doubtless the influence of his life will go on and on throughout the ages, while he now is enjoying the rich blessings that follow a life spent in Christ's service. Mr. Dimick's remains were brought home from Richmond, then carried to Spring Church and the funeral service held by his pastor, Rev. T. F. McCulloch, who compared his life beautifully with the life of Elisha. Mr. Dimick is survived by his wife and one son, Charles E. Dimick, and one daughter-in-law, also two sisters, Miss Carrie M. Dimick, of Hillsboro, Kans., and Mrs. A. E. Lindley, of Sterling, Kan., who have our deepest sympathy in their time of sorrow, and with whom we humbly bow in submission to His will and say as did the poet:

"Though cast down, we are not forsaken,
Though afflicted, not alone;
Thou didst give and thou hast taken;
Blessed Lord, 'thy will be done.'"

After the singing of the following—

Servant of God, well done!
Thy glorious warfare's past;
The battle's fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last.

In condescending love,
Thy ceaseless prayer be heard;
And bade thee suddenly remove
To thy complete reward.

O! happy, happy soul!
In ecstasies of praise
Long as eternal ages roll,

Thou seest thy Savior's face.

Redeemed from earth and pain,
Ah! when shall we ascend,
And all in Jesus' presence reign
With our translated friend?

his body was tenderly borne out into the church yard by the following members of his S. S. class: Rupert M. Robinson, Jesse W. Massey, H. Eugene Vassar, R. Clinton Crew, Dallas H. Massey, and John R. Crew, where it was laid away to await that final day when the grave shall bring forth its dead and all shall be made alive. May God comfort the bereaved ones.

Mrs. H. E. Vassar.

Dies after Brief Illness.

Miss Annie Barneycastle died Monday morning at 9 o'clock at her home four miles south of Winston after an illness of only a few days. Surviving are several sisters and brothers. The funeral was held Friday at Union Ridge church. Miss Castle has been a Sunday school teacher most of her life. She was a faithful member at Union Ridge. A Friend.

—On April 23 the baby of Mr. and Mrs. Pat Deal died at the age of six mos. The father and mother will miss their darling baby. I hope they will so live that they may meet it again in Heaven. Bro. A. H. Towery conducted the burial service after which it was laid to rest in Mt. Moriah Cemetery. Susan Sisk.

WHO IS TO FEED THE CONVICT'S FAMILY?

When a young husband and father commits an awful crime and is sent to the penitentiarry for thirty years, the State may hire him out for $1.00 a day and thus put more than nine thousand gold dollars into the State treasury.

What about his wife and children? If the wife has no home and no money to buy one, we may expect her soon to break down in trying to feed, clothe and shelter those children. They ought to have a part of the nine thousand dollars. Let the legislature require county commissioners to look into such cases. A. D. Betts.

Greensboro, N. C.

A little slum child was enjoying his first glimpse of pastoral life. The setting sun was gilding the grass and roses of the old-fashioned garden, and on a little stool he sat beside the farmer's wife, who was plucking a chicken.

He watched the operation gravely for some time. Then he spoke. "Do yer take of their clothes every night, lady?" —Youth's Companion.

CHILDREN'S HOME

Report of Superintendent.

Spring Hill S. S., Piedmont Ct. ..	$2.65
C. Tarkington, Raleigh	5.00
Bethel S. S., Mocksville Ct.	1.00
Tabernacle S. S., Tabernacle Ct. ..	2.40
Mt. Lebanon S. S., Randleman Ct.	2.10
Bethesda S. S. Yadkin College Ct.	1.73
Mizpah S. S., Haw River Ct.	3.00
Friendship S. S., Stanley Ct.	3.00
Union Chapel S. S., Mocksville Ct	3.00
Mebane S. S.	3.30
Elbaville S. S., ...	1.25
Rehoboth S. S., Granville Ct.	8.75
Whitaker's Chapel S. S., Roanoke Ct.	5.80
Whitaker's Temple S. S. Roanoke Ct	2.50
W. H. M. S., Henderson, on support of child	19.50
Bethesda S. S., Halifax Ct.	2.26
Pilot Church S. S.	2.08
Stony Knoll, W. Forsyth Ct.	2.00
Pleasant Grove S. S., Lebanon Ct.	8.10
Siler City S. S.	4.21
Rose Hill S. S., Pageland, S. C. ..	2.42
Graham S. S.	3.32
Brown Summit S. S., ...	.79
Mt. Pleasant S. S., Mt. Pl. Ct.	2.00
Friendship S. S., Mt. Hermon Ct. ..	1.31
Mt. Zion S. S.	1.75
Friendship, Fallston Ct.	6.00
Lebanon S. S., Lebanon Ct.	1.76
Mrs. A. B. Kimball's class, Grace Ch., Greensboro, toward clothing c.	2.06
W. H. M. S., dues, Henderson, ...	2.20
Total	$105.14

Greensboro: Mrs. Mary Moser, half bushel peas and canned goods. Denton: C. W. and J. C. Morris, corn meal. High Point: Mrs. H. T. Hancock, frying chickens.

Ladies of Bethesda, Halifax Ct., 14 towels, 1 table cloth, 3 center pcs., 4 dresser covers, 2 pr. pillow cases, domestic sheeting, hamburg, and pictures for children.

Please give name of S. S. or church and circuits when sending contributions.

It is encouraging to see the S. S. and churches awakening from their lethargy and feeling the great responsibility that rests upon them in caring for the unfortunate. The letters for the last few weeks have greatly strengthened our faith in this work. There are still many S. S. and churches we would like to hear from. Will the pastors and superintendents acquaint their people with the work of the Children's Home? H. A. Garrett.

Deacon—So your congregation gave you no vacation this year?"

Minister—Not a week; not a day!

Deacon—Well! well! They are the hardest people to tire out I ever heard of. —New York Weekly.

EDUCATION AT THIRTY.

The old proverb, "It is never too late to learn," is only coming into its own in these days of Chautauqua and University extension courses, of individual and community efforts toward education and culture. A recent writer has put the situation thus:

"The best time to get an education—perhaps the only time—is any time after one has passed thirty. The stuff that one learns before twenty is not meant to be remembered. It is only a placing of the chutes and an arranging of the bins for the permanent contents. From twenty to thirty one is all torn up with courting, marrying, and getting a foothold in life. After that is the time for education—from then on until death or senile debility.

"A man or woman past thirty is exactly at the most favorable period for mastering knowledge, training the mind, forming the taste. Some systematic effort is all that is necessary. Having a goal is what gives zest to any game.

"And having a goal is both easy and delightful. To study anything with interest, from logarithms to caterpillars, gives one fun and profit at the same time. Try it."

The writer's terse final injunction needs reiterating. Try it! You college man or woman who "only wish you had kept up to date with the things you used to know"—it will be easy, the bins and chutes are ready. Pour into them what you will. You busy mother whose children are outstripping you in their school work—don't let them. Keep abreast of the educational system of your children's day. It is your day, too. You're never too old to learn, though you may have been, in times past, too young. Age should increase rather than diminish your learning capacity. Your power of discrimination should be greater, your ability to concentrate stronger. Take it as your slogan for middle life and work it —I can learn, learn, learn, and I will!— The Deaconess Advocate.

A farmer who went to a large city to see the sights engaged a room at a hotel and before retiring asked the clerk about the hours for dining.

"We have breakfast from 6 to 11, dinner from 11 to 3 and supper from 3 to 8," explained the clerk.

"Wa-al, say," inquired the farmer in surprise, "what time air I goin' ter git ter see the town?"

Rev. C. L. Whitaker was here Monday.

Reidsville.

Our second quarterly conference met at Sandy Cross the 10th of April. Each of the churches was represented. Business was transacted in a brotherly spirit.

Bros. G. D. Williams and J. A. Gunn were nominated for delegate to Annual Conference. A payment of $500 on the parsonage debt was reported to the quarterly conference. The quarterly conference voted to raise $560 to pay on parsonage debt by the time the next payment is due.

The next quarterly conference will be held at Bethany.

Through the kindness of the Ladies' Aid Society some repairs have been made at the parsonage. Many thanks to them for their thoughtfulness.

Mrs. J. D. Bouldin, a good and faithful member of the Reidsville church, has been sick quite a while. May the Lord continue to be with her.

E. G. Lowdermilk, Pastor.

Stallings Sunday School.

Our pastor, Rev. H. E. Waldrop, was with us again Sunday night and preached another excellent sermon to a large congregation. All gave good attention. He preached to the mothers. Our prayer meeting and Sunday school attendance is very good since we are having good weather. But there is no reason why we shouldn't have a better prayer meeting and Sunday school. Prayer meeting was enjoyed very much last Thursday night, being conducted by Mr. M. T. Stallings. Next Thursday night it will be conducted by Mrs. J. F. Biggers. We wish her much success. Pray for us that we may be successful in building the church that we have just started to build.

Mrs. E. A. Porter has been very sick; was able to be out at preaching Sunday night. Mrs. R. A. Dry who has been sick for some time is not very much improved. Lillian B. Noles, Reporter.

Haw River, Graham and Haw River Ct.

Our pastor, Bro. O. B. Williams, filled his regular appointment at this place Sunday morning and at night, preaching two very helpful sermons. After the morning service the communion was celebrated. Quite a large number took part in celebrating the Lord's Supper. We have learned to love Bro. Williams very much. We feel that we are very lucky in getting him for our pastor. We are making some improvements at this church. We just placed an order for new seats which will add very much to our church. T. S. C.

Burlington.

Our attendance at Sunday school last Sunday was 268, and the offering was $6.10. The attendance was only two below the attendance the previous Sunday. The Philathea class did not have their rally day exercises as was announced last week. Owing to the special meeting in progress it was found impossible to prepare a program. However, the Philatheas will carry out the idea, as they have decided to have this rally day on the last Sunday in this month, at which time they will have charge of the exercises in the Sunday school and render an interesting program.

Our special meeting which began last week is still in progress. Rev. Mr. Taylor has been preaching very faithfully and touchingly. The attendance upon the services has been very good, considering the fact that similar meetings are being conducted in five other churches in our town. Most of last week was spent in reviving the church and getting it ready for the work of the meeting. The church has manifested much interest and concern for the unsaved of our community, and the appeals of the pastor and his helper to do personal work have met with very encouraging responses by a good number of interested members. There were several conversions and reclamations during Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights. The meeting will probably continue through this week. We will give you a more complete report of the results of the meeting next time.

Our pastor, Rev. G. L. Curry, was absent from the Sunday morning service. He conducted the funeral of Mrs. W. E. Moore of this city, who died Saturday and was buried at Graham Sunday morning. He performed the ceremony of the marriage of a young couple Sunday morning about nine o'clock. We did not learn the names of the contracting parties. C. B. Way, Reporter.

May 12.

Hickory Grove, Siler City Ct.

Our pastor, W. A. Ledford, preached us another good sermon the second Sun. to a very large congregation. All seemed to pay close attention to the words spoken. We think Mr. Ledford gets better every sermon he preaches. We are always glad and look forward for our preaching day to come.

Our Sunday school is still doing well, and we still have the same good and faithful superintendent we have had for some time, Mr. J. M. Ray.

May the Lord bless and help him in the great work. We also have excellent teachers; they are among the best, and I am sure they will reap a rich reward for the work they are doing in Hickory Grove church. We are always glad to have our pastor with us in our Sunday school the second Sunday: he takes so much interest in the young people.

We have prayer meeting twice a month with very good interest but not what it should be.

We were glad to have Mrs. John Holt who has been quite sick for some time worship with us Sunday.

Aunt Millie Wells who has been confined in her room for sometime is slowly improving.

Mr. Larkin Hinshaw was also with us Sunday. We are always glad for him to be with us; he used to be such a faithful attendant at church when health would permit.

The health of the community is very good at this writing.

Our fourth Sunday School Convention of Albright Township will convene at South Fork Friends church the fifth Sun. in this month. Hope our meeting will be a success. We hope all will go that can: we hope to see a large representation from our church at the convention.

(Miss) Lellia Lemmons, Rep.

May 11.

Union Grove, Gastonia Ct.

I have been appointed reporter and will try to report.

Our pastor filled his appointment the first Sunday in May and preached a fine sermon. Congregation was large. Our Sunday school is fine; had 72 on roll, but it can be made better yet. Outlook for the future is bright. Our quarterly conference was held Sat. before first Sun. in May. Mrs. Thos. Newton died May 4th at her home, Loray Mill, after suffering six months. She was a true Christian, a member of our church. She leaves a husband and children. Her pastor preached the funeral. She was laid to rest at King Mountain cemetery. May the Lord comfort the bereaved family in their hours of sadness. Annie Steward.

Bethesda, Yadkin College Ct.

The health of this community is good.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely. Bro. R. E. Leonard is our Supt. and Miss Bessie Wagner is our organist.

Our 2d Quar. Conf. convened at Bethesda last Sat. with a large attendance of the official members present. Rev. Mr. Suits preached a very good sermon at 11 o'clock. After dinner the business of the conference was transacted in harmony. Bro. Jeff Berrier and Bro. C. L. Hedrick were nominated for delegate to the Annual Conference. On Sunday our pastor, Bro. Powell, preached and administered communion service. Bro. Powell has been with us five years and I heard some say yesterday the longer he stays the better we like him. Our special meeting will commence on the 2d Sun. in Aug. Brethren, let's pray for a good revival, believing the Lord will give a blessing to every one that asketh.

Miss Hughes and Miss Wallace of High Point were pleasant visitors at Mr. R. J. Wagner's on Sat. and Sun., worshiping with us at Bethesda on Sunday. Miss Minnie Wagner visited her brother Everett at Gastonia last week, but was back for her Sunday school class on Sunday.

I hope this will not go to the waste basket, as this is my first letter to the Herald. I am a boy twelve years of age and love to go to Sunday school.

Paul Yokley.

[Glad to hear from you, Paul, and hope this will not be the last time.—Ed.]

Alleghany, Davidson Ct.

On account of sickness in Rev. J. W. Hulin's family Prof. Reynolds filled his regular appointment at Alleghany and preached a good sermon. Our Sunday school is starting off well. We had a very good number yesterday and hope to get better. There are many children around Alleghany and we hope that parents will come and bring the children and all take part. Pray for us and for our pastor. We have a good preacher. We all like Bro. Hulin., so let us all remember him and his family. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Smith have a very sick baby.

Abagail Coggin.

May 11.

Roseneath, Roanoke Ct.

Yesterday was our regular preaching Sunday, but Bro. Davis failed to be with us: he preached a funeral at Whitaker's Chapel in the afternoon. We were very sorry indeed he couldn't be with us, as we had an unusually large congregation. We had a large number at Sunday school. We are getting on nicely. Our Supt., Mr. Neal, asked all who raise chickens and were willing to give their Sunday eggs to the M. P. Children's Home to raise their hands; a good number did. I think this a good plan; would work well in any country church. We took an offering in Sunday school for the Home yesterday and will one Sunday every month from now on. This is one cause or work we should all try to do something for. The writer and a number of others from Roseneath attended Mothers' Day service at Whitaker's Chapel Sunday A. M. and enjoyed it very much.

The ladies of the church have raised $25 on the building fund since I reported last. We have some lumber on the church yard, so we think the work will soon begin. Pray for us that we will have success with our work this year.

Emma Ivey.

May 11.

Flat Rock Item.

Died at Suummerfield, April 28, at the home of Mrs. T. J. Rhodes, Miss Rebecca Wilson, aged 83 years. The eldest child of Mr. Archie and Mary Wilson. The passing of this soul marks the demise of a strong woman and a unique character. She was largely known, and by almost all our older ministers. Her life dates back with our church in its infancy. Being a member with her entire family, save one, of Hopewell church, in this community she lived and labored and loved. She was for years seemingly the backbone of this church, supporting it by her means. And who has not eaten of her baskets of excellent food at the revival season and refreshed themselves at her board, ever the minister's home?

When this church (due we presume to the sparsely settled community) could no longer survive, she joined Flat Rock church. Her neighbors loved her, and shall we say she was universally loved? The rather, loved wherever known. Imperfect though we all are, in middle life sorrows indeed "like sea billows rolled." But staunch as the stalwart oaks about her she stood. Living at the old homestead alone, for some twenty years.

After burying the last member of the family, a brother, she described to the writer the scene thus: "I stood by the candle stand in front of the old hearthstone, and queried as I gazed upon the lamp: Shall I extinguish it or shall I not? Tears streamed and I thought of the oncoming years. But I felt it must begin and blowing it out I retired."

Hers a buoyant soul, rebounding, she took heart again. Resourceful, tactful and industrious, her larder was ever full, which she lavishly shared with all her friends. Why this woman of beauty and refinement in youth remained in celibacy is unknown. Rumor intimates an attachment to a minister. "But men have come, and men have gone, but she went on forever." Alone, thus undaunted she dwelt, all doors unlocked. Cellar, pantry, crib. On the fifth of May annually celebrating her birth at a nearby pond, her friends at home and many from Greensboro gathered to share its joys and swell its store.

Two years ago, coming to live with her sister here, who on reading to her that little booklet "Intra Muros", said if I thought Heaven was like that I would be willing to go tomorrow, to which she acquiesced. (O friends, I like to think of that stream in which all earth scars are removed, and that land where the Savior mingles with us ever.)

The old home is tottering in, the bees have flown, the herd is gone, the throng of visitors passed, but Miss Rebecca lives forever.

Reporter.

Sandy Ridge, Oak Ridge Ct.

Our Sunday school is improving: 82 present last Sunday and we hope soon to have a hundred on roll. We are expecting to have an enjoyable and helpful time at our Sunday school rally at Pine Grove the 5th Sun. in this month. We hope all the Sunday schools on the circuit will be represented.

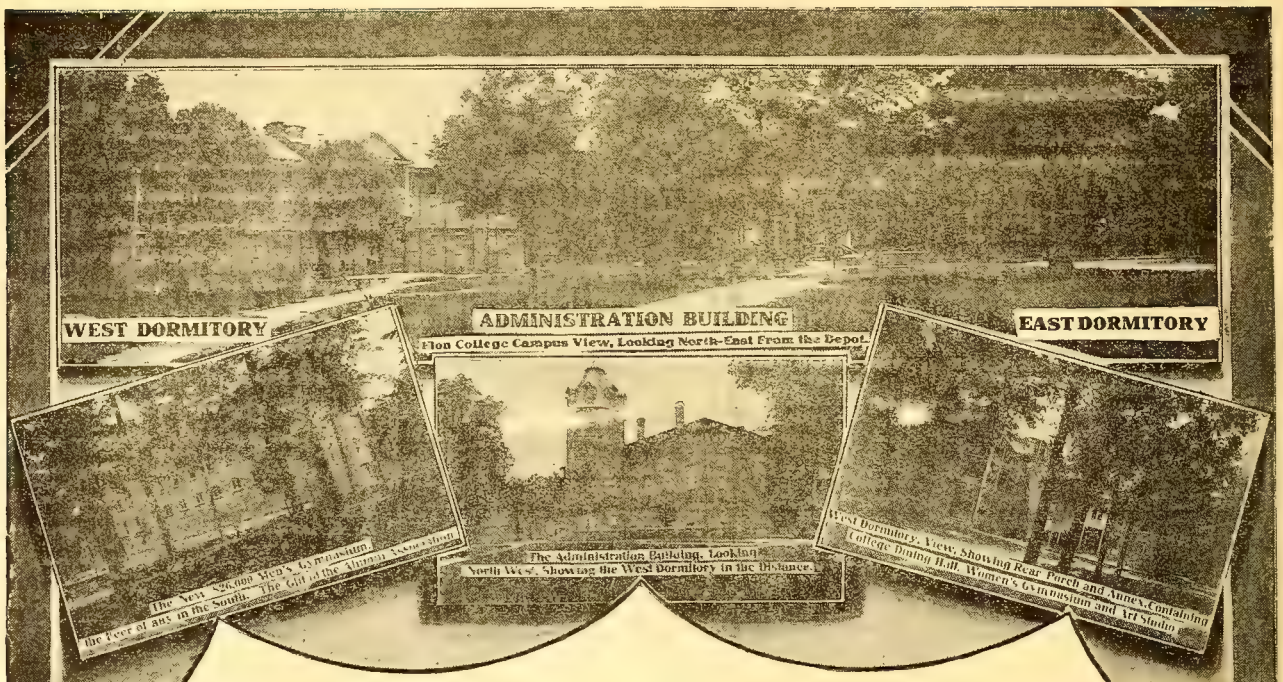
Our pastor was with us again last Sun. and preached an interesting and helpful sermon. I am sure all present were benefited. At the close communion service was held after which one new member was received into the church. We were also glad to have our pastor with us in S. S. He helps us out so much.

Roella Pegg, Reporter.

WHY SHOULD I FEAR?

Why should I fear to pass the gate
That opens into heaven?
The mansions where my friends await
My coming, morn or even,
Are bright with everlasting bloom
Of flowers, that glow in every room.
Why should I fear to have him say,
"Come, child of mine, and rest!
Come to the place of endless day,
The mansions of the blest.
There is no storm or tempest here,
No pain nor sorrow, care nor fear."
Why should I falter in my faith,
When he who made me keeps
And guards his own and daily saith,
"The earth with sorrow weeps,
But heaven is glad with songs that bear
A harmony beyond compare."
Why should I shrink at thought of death
When none of his can die?
God breathes on them his loving breath,
And gives eternity;
He wipes away all tears from eyes
That open into paradise.

—Charles M. Sheldon.



WEST DORMITORY
ADMINISTRATION BUILDING
Elon College Campus View, Looking North-East From the Depot.
EAST DORMITORY
The Administration Building, Looking North West, Showing the West Dormitory in the Distance.

Elon College

For Both Men and Women

Elon College, North Carolina

For a quarter century Elon College has rendered the best families of the South a paragon service in providing young men and young women with the best mental, moral and physical training under positive Christian influences, tho entirely free from sectarianism.

Karl Lehman, of Boston, testifies that "of all the Colleges I have visited as International Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor during six years, the spirit of Elon College appeals to me as most genuinelu Christian." Elon College is situated in the delightful hill country, a section unsurpassed for beauty, with a climate far-famed for its healthfulness. There is no medical fee, for there is no necessity for it. Its campus, comprising twenty-five acres of native oak and hickory, shrubbery, winding walks and driveways, is one of the most beautiful in the South and, with its two unsurpassed gymnasia, provides abundant opportunity for recreation and relaxation.

The splendid equipment of Elon College was only made possible through liberal endowment. It maintains seven elegant new buildings, especially designed and appointed for college work. These are furnished with every known convenience; steam heat, electric lights, running water, baths and sewerage. The College plant is conservatively valued at $300,000.00.

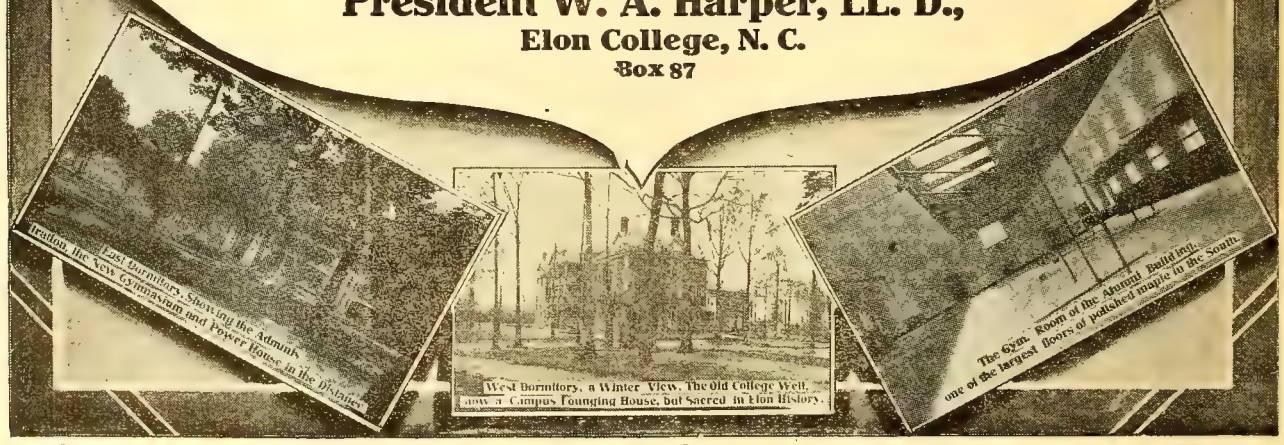
Elon College is distinctly a high-grade institution, though its charges are moderate. Its graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of all the great universities without examination. Its literary and scientific courses are arranged in various departments which lead to the degrees of Master of Arts, Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Philosophy, Bachelor of Pedagogy, and a three-years' course leading to the degree of Licentiate of Instruction, designed especially for teachers. This institution affords special opportunities for training in Piano, Voice, Expression, Fine Arts, Normal Training, Physical Culture and Commercial Practice.

The Faculty consists of twenty-one specialists; men and women selected not only for their superior teaching ability, but also for their exemplary character and manners.

The student body numbers nearly four hundred and comes from thirteen states.

The lowest Rates in the South, only $131 to $191 per College session of ten months. Fall Term always opens the first Wednesday in September. For full descriptive catalogue and view-book, address

President W. A. Harper, LL. D.,
Elon College, N. C.
Box 87



SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

Greensboro, N. C.

N. B.—Following schedule figures published only as information and are not guaranteed.

1.00 A. M.—No. 29 daily, Birmingham Special, through Pullman sleeping and observation cars New York to Birmingham and Richmond to Birmingham. During car service.

12.48 A. M.—No. 32 daily, Southern's Limited, Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville, Augusta and Aikin to New York. Dining car service.

12.55 a. m.—No. 112 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh open at 9.15 p. m.

[illegible] daily, Birmingham special. Pullman sleeping and observation cars from Birmingham and Asheville to New York and Birmingham to Richmond. Dining car service.

2.25 a. m.—No. 31, the Southern's Southeastern Limited, Pullman sleeping cars from New York to Asheville. Day coaches. Dining car service.

3.45 a. m.—No. 45 daily local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7.10 a m.—No. 8, daily local for Richmond, connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7.20 a. m.—No. 37 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited Pullman drawing room, sleeping cars and club and observation cars New York to new Orleans. Pullman sleeping car New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman chair car Greensboro to Montgomery, solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m.—No. 108 daily local Greensboro to Goldsboro.

7.35 a. m.—No. 11, daily local through to Atlanta, sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m.—No. 154 daily except Sunday for Ramseur.

8.15 a. m.—No. 237 daily for Winston-Salem and North Wilkesboro. Pullman sleeping car Raleigh to Winston-Salem.

9.30 a. m.—No. 44 daily for Washington and points North.

9.40 a. m.—No. 144 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro; handles Atlanta Raleigh sleeping car.

12.30 p. m.—No. 21 daily for Asheville, Waynesville and local points; handles coaches and chair car through to Asheville and Waynesville.

12.50 p. m.—No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12 30 p. m.—No 21 daily for Asheville,

12.55 p. m.—No. 7 daily for Charlotte and points south.

1.40 p. m.—No. 36 daily U. S. Fast Mail for Washington, New York and points north; handles Pullman sleeping cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman sleeping car Asheville to Richmond Pullman chair car Greenville, S. C., to Washington. Day coaches. Dining car service.

2.20 p. m.—No. 207 daily for Winston-Salem, and daily execept Sunday for North Wilkesboro.

2.30 p. m.—No. 151 daily except Sunday for Madison.

3:30 p. m.—No. 230 daily except Sunday for Ramseur.

2.30 p. m.—No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4.20 p. m.—No. 22 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles chair car to Goldsboro.

6.10 p m.—No. 35 daily U. S. Fast Mail for

4.55 p. m.—No. 131 daily for Mt. Airy.

Atlanta and points south Pullman sleeping cars New York to New Orleans and Birmingham and sleeping car Richmond to Asheville which car can be occupied until 7 a. m. Pullman chair car Washington to Greenville, S. C. Day coaches. Dining car service.

6.35 p. m.—No. 235 daily for Winston-salem.

7.30 p. m.—No. 43 daily for Atlanta Sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10.13 p. m.—No. 38 daily New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited Pullman sleeping cars New Orleans, Macon, Asheville and Charlotte to New York and Pullman chair car Montgomery to Greensboro. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

10.20 p. m.—No. 233 daily for Winston-Salem.

10.31 p. m.—No. 12 daily local for Richmond; handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman, Vice-President and General Manager, Washington, D. C.; S. H. Hardwick, P T. M., Washington, D. C.; H. F. Cary, G. P. A., Washington, D. C.; R. H. DeButts, D. P. A., Charlotte, N. C.; O. F. York, P. & A., Greensboro, N C.

Drs. Moseley & MILES

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF

STOMACH AND INTESTINES

Corner S. Elm and W. Market Sts.,

Greensboro, N. C.

Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

OVER 65 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &C.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents.

Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York

Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Dr. J. E. Wyche.

DENTIST.

Office in Fisher Building, North Elm St,

Rooms 211-213,

Greensboro, N. C.

Dr. C. W. Banner,

W. Market St., Opposite Court House,

Second Floor.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.

Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.

206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

ANNUAL 20TH OF MAY CELEBRATION, CHARLOTTE, MAY 17TH TO 21ST, 1914.

SPecial train via Southern Railway, Premier Carrier o fthe South, from Greensboro and intermediate points to Charlotte and return May 2oth.

Sched. of Spec. Train.	Round Trip F.
Lv Greensboro	6:00 AM $3.05
Lv Jamestown	6:17 AM 2.90
Lv High Point	6:27 AM 2.60
Lv Thomasville	6:39 AM 240.
Lv Lexington	6:57 AM 2.10
Lv Linwood	7:06 AM 2.10
Lv Spencer	7:30 AM 1.75
LLv Salisbury	7:45 AM 1.55
Lv China Grove	8:05 AM 1.55
Lv Landis	8:12 AM 1.45
Lv Kannapolis	8:20 AM 1.25
Lv Concord	8:35 AM .85
Lv Harrisburg	8:55 AM .70
Lv Newell	9:10 AM .40
Ar Charlotte	9:30 AM

Returning Special Train will leave Charlotte at 9:30 P. M. May 20th.

Tickets will be on sale for all regular trains May 17th to 21st with final return limit May 24th, 1914.

For tickets, information, etc., call on any Ticket Agent of Southern Railway.
O. F. York, P. & T. A., Greensboro, N.C.
T. J. Anderson, Ticket Agt., Salisbury.
R. H. DeButts, D. P. A., Charlotte, N. C.

A TELEPHONE COMEDY.

The young lawyer had opened his office that very day and sat expectant of clients. A step was heard outside, and the next moment a man's figure was silhouetted against the ground glass of the door. Hastily the legal fledgling stepped to his brand-new telephone, and, taking down the receiver, gave every appearance of being deep in a busin ess conversation.

"Yes, Mr. S.," he was saying, as the man entered, "I'll attend to that corporation matter for you. Mr. J. had me on the 'phone this morning and wanted me to settle a damage suit, but I had to put him off, as I'm so busy with cases just now. But I'll try to sandwich your matter in between my other cases somehow. Yes, yes. All right. Good-bye."

Hanging up the receiver, he turned to his visitor, having, as he thought, duly impressed him.

"Excuse me, sir," the man said, "but I'm from the telephone company. I've come to connect up your instrument."—The Pathfinder.

—Rambling through the park one afternoon, a gentleman took a seat on one of the numerous benches, and while in this restful position, he noticed a boy lying close by.

"What's the matter, young man?" he kindly asked, addressing the youngster. "Why don't you play with the other children?"

"I don't want to play," answered the boy.

"But why don't you want to play?" insisted the gentleman.

"I'm just waitin'," was the startling response of the boy. "A feller painted that bench about fifteen minutes ago, and I want to see you get up."

—Robert's father took his small son to the park one day. They fed bread to the swans and then stood for a long time in front of a cage of serpents. Robert looked at them with keen interest. At last he exclaimed:

"I like these tails all right, but where are the animals?"

—Mr. Post, the wealthy manufacturer of postum, took his own life last week. Ill health the cause.

REPORT FROM "TALENT PLAN CONTEST."

I am glad to be able to make the following report from the "Talent Plan Contest":

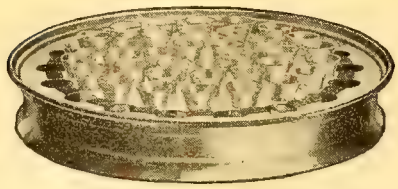
Mrs. L. L. Wrenn, Siler City, ...	$2.00
Mrs. J. N. Johnson, Siler City	2.25
Mrs. Ed. Woody Siler City	2.25
Mrs. Emma Siler, Siler City	3.00
Miss Cladie Andrews, Siler City ..	1.65
Miss Flossie Cooper, Siler City	1.00
Mrs. W. H. Finch, Kittrell	2.00
Mrs. W. H. Gaither, Mocksville ..	.55
Mrs. U. L. Boger, Mocksville	.30
Mrs. J. B. Robertson, Mocksville ..	.05
Mrs. Chas. Allen, Mocksville	.05
Mrs. J. A. Cheshire, Mocksville ..	.05
Mrs. Hancock, Asheboro, ...	1.00
Miss Harriet Hammer, Asheboro ..	.75
Miss Sarah Wood, Millboro	1.00
Miss Mabel Stuart, Elon College ..	1.85
Miss Carrie Insco, Littleton	.15
Miss Irene Walker, Littleton	1.00
Miss Fannie Barnes, Littleton ...	2.25
Miss May Wilson, Greensboro	1.20
Miss Pearl McCulloch, Greensboro .	.20
Mrs. Eugene Faulkner, Henderson	3.00
Mmes. J. D. Williams, O. O. Youung, S. R. Harris, G. B. Harris, Henderson	2.45
Total	$30.00

I am glad that so many took part in this contest. A Bible was offered to the one making the largest amount, and you will see that $3 was reached by Mrs. Emma Siler, of Siler City, and by Mrs. Eugene Faulkner of Henderson. Each of these ladies received a Bible. I want to thank all of these ladies for this contribution to the general fund of the N. C. Branch of the Woman's Home Missionary Society. Sincerely,

Pearl McCulloch.

THE HONEST MORAVIAN.

In one of the wars in Germany in the early part of last century, a captain of cavalry was out on a foraging party. On seeing a cottage in the midst of a solitary valley, he went up and knocked at the door. Out came one of the Moravians, with a beard silvered by age. "Father," said the officer, "show me a field where I can set my troops a-foraging." "Presently," replied the Moravian. The good old man walked before, and conducted them out of the valley. After a quarter of an hour's march, they found a fine field of barley. "There is the very thing we want," said the captain. "Have patience for a few minutes," replied his guide; "'you shall be satisfied." They went on, and some distance farther on they arrived at another field of barley. The troop immediately dismounted, cut down the grain, stacked it up, and remounted. The officer upon this said to his conductor, "Father, you have given yourself and us unnecessary trouble; the first field was much better." "Very true," replied the good old man, "but it was not mine."—African Friend.



Over 18,000 Churches USE and ENDORSE the

THOMAS INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION SERVICE.

The above fact is conclusive proof that the THOMAS SYSTEM has the preference.

If YOUR CHURCH is not using it, write for illustrated circular and price list.

ODELL HARDWARE COMPANY, GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank. This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W. M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

A FIRELESS LOCOMOTIVE.

For shipping frfeight cars to different parts of the works, the National Cash Register Company of Dayton, Ohio, has what is said to be the only fireless locomotive in the United States. The engine has a large tubeless boiler tank, thirteen feet long and six feet in diameter. The tank is filled about half full of water, and steam at a pressure of 150 pounds is injected into it from the stationary boiler plant. The steam raises the pressure in the engine to 150 pounds in about fifteen minutes, and some of it is condensed, so that the boiler is about three-quarters full of water when ready for work. When charged with steam, the locomotive will run from two to three hours, according to the number and the weight of the cars it has to shift. As nothing passes up the stack except exhaust steam, the engine can safely be used in the timber yard, and in and near buildings filled with inflammable material. The cost of running is small.—The Youth's Companion.

REVIVAL CLOSES SALOON.

A stirring revival has just closed the saloons in Rushville, Neb. At a hotly contested election, the "drys" won. The pastors of the Protestant churches at the suggestion of Rev. W. S. Morrow (Presbyterian church) engaged Dr. Smiley, evangelist of Denver, Col. On election day the saloons boasted a iarge majority, but when the polls closed, the saloon men were dumbfounded to find themselves beaten. While the fight between the "wets" and "drys" was in progress, the evangelistic meetings, afternoon and night, were kept up vigorously. Many were converted, backsliders were reclaimed and church members renewed their consecration. The spiritual uplift has advanced the cause of righteousness through the entire community.—Christian Herald.

WANTED—SOME CHURCH EXTENSION MONEY.

Requests are coming in from Pastors on Mission fields that the Treasurer send them some money, with which to meet urgent needs. Nearly six months have passed, and the Treasurer has received but three amounts—one of these a personal contribution. Pastors are urged to send in the amount due from their charges or as much as they can, that the calls of the brethren in need may be answered in the way that will do them some good.

J. Norman Wills, Treas.

A "Funny Man" thought he would break up a suffrage meeting, so, from the audience, he called out to the woman speaker: "Say, madam, would you like to be a man?"

Back instantly, came the reply, "Yes, I would. Would you?"—Ladies' Home Journal.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XX. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, MAY 21, 1914. NUMBER 26.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCULLOCH, Editor and Publisher.
PRICE.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
RULE IN DEALING WITH SUBSCRIBERS.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE BAPTISTS

Dear Brethren in Christ:

I know not how to write what I have to say gently enough. I would not give offense. I would do you good. I would try to induce you to do even more than you are now doing to advance the cause of Christ. I recognize your worth in the world. I admire your loyalty to Christ and your devotion to His church. I see the good you are doing in your sturdy insistence upon a separation between church and state. I know and approve your position regarding the tyranny of the church over the individual. I understand and appreciate your protest against the domination of the Roman Caatholic Church in particular. I agree with you in the exaltation of the Bible as a rule of faith and practice. My associations with you have always been pleasant. My mother was for a time a Baptist and some of my good friends to-day are Baptists. I do not think that any personal feeling of mine can lead me to reflect in the least upon your conduct. But believing as I do that your influence for good is marred by one of your conceptions (misconception, I think it is) and the resulting practices, it may be my duty to speak of it in this public way.

The thing I refer to is the emphasis you put upon one particular mode of baptism. You insist that baptism to be valid must be by immersion. You contend that Jesus was baptized by immersion and that his example determined the proper mode for all his followers. The name you bear as a denomination of Christians indicates the great importance you attach to the rite of baptism. In this I think you are not helping but hindering the progress of Christianity in the world.

You condemn formalism, ceremonialism, in the Roman Catholic Church. But you are yourselves severe formalists, ceremonialists, in regard to baptism. A man need not contract more than one disease to become a sick man,, and a church need not have more than one form to make it a formalist, provided it insists on that form as you insist on immersion. You seem to violate one of your own cherished principles—the "voluntary principle." When a candidates comes for baptism, the Protestant Episcopal Church gives him choice of mode. So do the Methodist churches. So does the Presbyterian Church. So do other churches. But you do not permit him to exercise choice. You do not allow him the privilege of private interpretation. You insist that he must be immersed or stay out of the church. Even if he has been satisfactorily baptized in some other way, you require him to be immersed by one of your own ministers. Did any church ever make greater claims to authority to dominate the individual conscience?

I believe that you are making essèntials out of non-essentials, and that you are misleading men to their spiritual injury. The tendency of your course is to make men trust in baptism rather than in divine agencies and operations for salvation. You exalt the symbol above the thing signified in the minds of many. Water baptism comes to be looked upon as the door into the church. There is a great satisfaction in the minds of some in the thought that they were baptized in precisely the same way that Jesus was. They followed Jesus into the water: therefore they are followers of Jesus, even though they may not follow him at all in really important things! But some begin to reflect and to ask themselves the question: "Ought we not to be baptized not only in the way that Jesus was but also in the very same place?" So we read to-day of long pilgrimaages to the River Jordan and of baptisms in its sacred waters at the exact place where John the Baptizer baptized Jesus, as nearly as that spot can be determined!

This is the natural result of your teaching regarding baptism. If I had to choose either extreme, I would feel more nearly justified in taking the position of the Quakers and doing away with the symbol of spiritual baptism altogether than I would in making so much of the symbol as to turn men's minds away from the really important thing—spiritual cleansing by the Holy Spirit.

If St. Paul were to come back to the world and write letters to the various denominations, I expect he would write a sharp letter to us Methodists about some things; but I think he would address you Baptists in much the same way that he addressed the Galatians. If he did not say, "O foolish Baptists, who did bewitch you, before whose eyes Jesus Christ was openly set forth crucified?" I think he would ay something like this: "For freedom did Christ set us free; stand fast, therefore, and be not entangled again in a yoke of bondage."

The letter killeth; the spirit maketh alive. If the mode of baptism were as important as you make it, is it not strange that the Bible does not make the matter clear beyond all controversy? There were in Jesus' time those who paid tithes of herbs and omitted the weightier matters of the law. You do not mean to neglect the weightier matters, and many of you do not; there are fine Christian characters in some of the Baptist churches; but the point I am trying to make is that your by pour position regarding water baptism, you are leading some men, not toward, but away from, the weightier matters.

May God help us and you to see, honor and do the truth!

—Bro. Gerringer passed through on Monday morning going to the help of Bro. O. B. Williams in a meeting at Graham. We were grieved to hear him say that Bro. W. R. Lowdermilk has had a relapse necessitating his resignation of the Buncombe charge. This will be disappointing news to the Buncombe people, no doubt. Bro. Lowdermilk's throat trouble has come back upon him.

—Our thanks to Principal Totten for an invitation to the commencement exercises of Yadkin Collegiate Institute, May 20 and 21. We would enjoy being present.

A MOTHER'S PLEA.

On the morning of January 2, 1914, my seventeen-year-old son, Bliss, and Ray, the boy employed to help, went in the highest glee to the woods to chop. Every one was enjoying the holidays more than ever befofre, for we were every one at home once more, well and happy, and expecting more company and joys the following day. So of course no thought of horrible tragedy had entered our minds. When the tree that they were chopping fell, a large limb hit another tree and broke, then flew back, hitting Bliss on the head and shoulder, and just scraping the skin on the other boy's shoulder. Both boys were knocked senseless for a while. Ray regained consciousness first, and tried to help Bliss. A passing neighbor heard the chopping, and saw the falling tree. Knowing the disposition of the boys, he wondered that they did not yell and rejoice when the tree fell,—and when he could hear no sound and see no one, he became anxious. Then, when he saw the pet dog rush toward the fallen tree, acting so strangely, he was convinced that disaster had befallen some one, and hastened to the scene. He found Ray trying to rub life into my boy. Other help was summoned, and when his father reached him, he spoke a few words, asking first what had happened. When told that a limb had struck him, his father asked him what hurt him, and he answered his head and arm. He then lapsed into an unconscious state and never uttered another sound save his heavy, hard breathing.

They finally got him home, and laid him on my bed—and oh how tragically sad! I went to him, kissed him, rubbed his head, called, begged, and pleaded with him to open those beautiful, truthful, blue eyes and speak just a word to his mother, but it was all in vain—not a word could he speak to me. My prayers then were for the Lord to do what was best. With the most agonizing pain a mother's heart can know, I walked, talked and prayed with the good Lord that He help my poor suffering boy to bear his pain and that if it was His will to take our darling boy to a better home than we have here in this sinful world for him, that by the help of God we might have strength and courage to bear the burden of sorrow.

When the physician arrived, he tried to console us by telling us that there was a possible chance if they could reach the hospital in time. And when the car started for Greensboro, we still had hope. But they got only about four miles from his earthly home when God called him to his Heavenly home. Then his father endured the saddest and hardest hour of his life. Still holding the lifeless form of his son in his arms he had to turn his face toward home that would never seem home again, for when that soul took its flight, it made a vacancy in our home that can never be filled. To some degree, time can heal our broken hearts, yet the scars will always remain.

The news was sad enough itself, but to break it gently to us, and especially to the elder members of our family, rendered it hard indeed. For, for almost thirty years Tempy and Laura Sharpe (the maiden lady cousins with whom my husband has lived since he was a mere boy) have helped us with our children, sharing our joys and sorrows alike and they feel so near and dear to them. Laura is eighty-four and rather spry for her age; but Tempy who is eighty-six and has been blind for four years, was so feeble that we dared not break the news to her without a physician near by. When the death news was told Laura she shouted and prayed and exerted herself until we had to calm her. And Tempy just prayed that she might go right on with Bliss because he had always been so kind and thoughtful, ever trying to comfort her and make her life brighter, and she feels that she will soon be with him and little Carl who was taken eighteen years ago.

For seventeen years God gave us Bliss to make bright our lives and help us forget little Carl's departure, and we loved him so dearly and were so proud of him. But with all our love and care, could we shield and protect him as he is shielded and protected from temptations in Heaven? Or could we love him as God does? With all our devotion we are bound to say, No. Therefore we willingly return the gift to the Giver of all things good and beautiful, resolving that our separation shall only be to await our summons.

Dear friends, we have only one boy now —the other two are angels waiting and watching with outstretched hands to welcome us to that glorious home beyond. So pray for us that we may instruct this boy correctly and that he may meet his angel brothers. He is only eleven years old, but he is a Christian and says he wants everybody to be. There are many temptations awaiting him, many pitfalls to entrap him, but, Christian friends, pray that he may escape them. My father, mother, three brothers, a sister and two sons have gone on, and still I must labor on in this old world of trouble. You parents who read this, don't ever get discouraged —but keep praying. Pray daily for your children and have them pray with you. It will do you good, and it certainly can not make them any worse. Train up a child in the way it should go, and your harvest will be good. If you do not have family prayer, why I implore you to begin this day. Let each child in turn have its night to lead. They will enjoy it; and it will be so comforting to you and make you live nearer to God. It is hard and sad for me to write this, but I feel it a duty and I hope it may assist some father or mother to press onward and upward with increasing courage, prayers and love for God and the gifts He has put in your care. So few parents realize their true responsibility. If you have not taught your child to read daily from the Scriptures and pray—and that child becomes wayward and careless and indifferent concerning church matters, why, don't be too hasty in blaming some one else for the misfortune. Don't leave such an important work for the Sunday school teacher or the school teacher. These may be of unquestionable value, but nothing can nor was intended to take the parent's place. It is a sacred duty to God and His gift.

The Lord has been with us during our sorrow and affliction. He is our comforter at all seasons. The kindness of our good neighbors has been of great comfort and the many letters of sympathy received have given us much consolation. I shall always remember this line in one of those letters: "He was one of the best boys I ever knew. You could read his pure character in his noble face." Not until you have endured a similar ordeal can you fully realize how highly we appreciated every thought, word or deed given. Dear friends, there is much comfort for me now in a letter Bliss sent last year while away at school. It is this: "Dear mother, I have no mother to go to now with my hard lessons and troubles, but I go to the Lord." I feel that some of my prayers have been answered, for I always prayed that he might not be led astray. So often I would caution him to be careful and avoid evil companions lest he be led astray. But always he would answer the same, "No, mother, don't worry. I'll not be led astray." And now it is true. It is all over and he is safe within the vale where no one can harm him or lead him from father's and mother's care. Oh, how we miss him! But God had a greater work for him to do; so He took our dear boy just as he was budding into manhood. We feel that we had to give up our boy to save some one else's boy; and it is a great warning to his companions and others too, to ever be ready to answer that great call; for "ye know not the day or the hour when that call cometh." We have freely given him up and would not have him back in this sinful world, if we could.

Dearest Bliss, thou hast left us,
With our hearts so sad and lone.
Soon we hope that you will greet us
In that bright and heavenly home.

You are singing with the angels,
For we've given you up to God.
Now you wait and watch the angels,
As they lead the loved to God.

God does all things for the best,
So He has taken from us our boy,
And placed him in a home of rest
To warn his friends and be a joy.

It makes this world seem sad and lone,
To give to God as He calls them home.
Yet, it is a joy to know
That we have loved ones gone before.

And we know that we'll be led
Where we'll meet to part no more;
Where no farewell tear is shed,
In that bright forevermore.

Martha Garrett Nicholson.

MEI JUI (Many Blessings)

In Peking, April, 1878, in the Methodist Hospital, a little girl was born. She was named Mei Jui. The mother died soon after the birth, and the question was asked, Who would care for the baby? The mother was not a Christian, but the father was and was chapel keeper, also a Manchu. I said to the father, "Take the baby home and I will furnish milk and come every day to wash and dress her." I found the little one had had no care from morning to morning, and the skin was bleeding in many places. I said to the father, "You must not let this baby die, she is a strong baby." He said, "I don't want her, you can have her." I told him to bring her to my back door in the evening and I would meet him. I hurried home and found some of my babies' old clothes, stripped off the ones his baby had on, threw them out in the yard to be burned. I carefully bathed and anointed her sore body and put on my baby's old clothes until I could get some Chinese garments made. I hired a Chinese wet nurse, but found the baby was losing flesh. Why? Because her baby came at night and took all the milk. I turned that nurse off and hired another and another with the same result. I decided to try tin milk and sent for the old woman who had helped to take care of my baby. Dear old Mrs. Chang, she faithfully cared for her until she was sent to the girls' boarding school just across from our home. She was a fine scholar, graduated in June, 1896, went to teach mathematics in a girls' boarding school 150 miles east of Peking. In August, a Chinese young man asked to be betrothed to her. As he was our adopted son, I knew how he had made fun of her little eyes and small plait of hair. I said, "No, you don't love her." "Yes, truly, mama, I do; please ask her if she loves me." So I sent for the timid girl and asked her, saying, "If you do not love him you need not marry him; you can keep on teaching." After a few more questions, she said, "How could I not love him?" To be real sure, I asked again and she again replied, "How could I not love him?" Before he came to America to study, he said to my husband, "Papa, please give me money to buy an engagement ornament"—not a ring, as with us, but hair ornament. It was bought and sent to her. After three years of study, he came back to Peking and they were married. This picture shows my bright little girl grown to womanhood, wife and mother. Did it pay?

The world's advance is due only to the hopes, the plans, the progress, and the work of living men and women who have tasted the waters of life for themselves and know what it is to live and who are determined that the rest of the world shall have life more abunndantly, as Jesus Christ himself has promised.—E. E. Hale.

"Our gospel is a gospel of peace, of power, and of joy—the joy of the Holy Ghost. It takes in earth and heaven, time and eternity, grace and glory."

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK.

In the hope of promoting greater activity along the lines of our Young People's Work the board recommends the following: (1) that each S. S. put itself in position to compete for the Conference Sunday school banner; (2) that S. S. Rallies be held on circuits and stations; (3) that Teacher Training classes be organized at as nearly every church as possible.

Now the board believes that all of these things can be worked in almost any community. Of course any school can report its attendance each week to the M. P. Herald. This may seem a small thing and yet it is just such little things as this that help to add interest to the S. S.

As to the second, this may not seem so easy, and yet there is scarcely anything which helps a Sunday school so much as a general discussion of S. S. problems. This kind of a meeting can be made especially helpful by having an all-day programme. In this way the people can mingle socially and learn each other better. Wherever this plan has been tried it has worked remarkably well. Now how many circuits and stations are willing to give it a trial? There are some strong laymen in our church who would gladly help out in any way possible. The Board of Young People's Work is ready to help by suggesting subjects for discussion, etc.

Now about that Teacher Training Class.

"This is one of the best things we have ever undertaken yet" is the verdict of a great many who have tried it. There are a great many people who have perhaps studied small portions of the Bible but not the Bible as a whole book. Why not organize a class and give the people the benefit of that knowledge which can be found in the book, Training the Teacher? Many pastors have used this course in connection with the mid-week prayer meeting. Why not try it? This will give the people something to do as well as the pastor.

Who should teach the class? Well, some good layman might do it, but in most communties the pastor is the only one who would undertake it. Any pastor can sufficiently master the book in a short while to teach it successfully to others.

Remember the Board stands ready to help here in every possible way. Who will be the first to try these suggestions?

J. E. Pritchard,
Chmn. Board of Young People's Work.

CHINA LETTER.

Kalgan, China, Mar. 23, 1914.

Dear Record Friends:—

Let us hope this reaches the May "Record." Kalgan has been silent for some time and some of you have missed it. The last few months "Record" readers have been more than usually kind. Several have written letters to show their sympathy and to encourage us to go on as we again faced work alone. We have needed your prayers and sympathy too, for not only have we been left without foreign coworkers, but we have also found some of the Chinese untrustworthy. One of the boys on whom we depended to go on to school as he was very bright has had to be expelled because of misconduct. So we bury some of our hopes here just as workers at home bury some of theirs. But there are the faithful ones in China too.

We, Mrs. Heininger, Helen and myself, have been taking a little vacation. We spent a few weeks in visiting Peking and Tientsin friends. It was the first time in a year we had been away from our station for more than three days in taking girls to school. I trust it has done us good to get away and see how other people live and work. One of the privileges I had was to preach at the Tsing-hua College. This school was built and is supported out of the Boxer indemnity which the United States returned to China. The graduates from this school are sent to the United States to study. So the school has a great opportunity. It was good to know that a considerable number of the students are Christians. The United States through making this school possible has won a place of influence in China. The students who become friendly to the United States here and then go there to study will come back as leaders in China and firm friends of America. The educational standards of the school are also very high and good work is being done.

It seems that with trying to do things we do not get time to tell what is being done. There have been many things to report,—the holidays with their joy and our biggest celebration; another country trip—always full of interest; the opium burning when Kalgan burned more money in opium than we are asking the church to pay for this property—don't that make you rejoice? China is trying to free herself from that vice. Let us give them a Savior to help them break loose from this awful demon. The Railway school duct a Sunday school had a big celebration at the close of their first year's work. They presented me with a silver loving cup. It was inscribed with the motto in Chinese: "He teaches men virtue." And then our year's sale of Gospels, Testaments and Bibles amounted to seventy-five thousand. Isn't that a tremendous power let loose to testify for Christ!

But it is getting late. The mail carrier who was to have taken this has come and gone. A caller prevented me from having the letter ready. It is only a poor greeting this time, but it will—if the editor edits it—let you know that we are still at Kalgan and working away. We are hoping for the re-enforcements. We know several volunteers ready to march and we believe you will send them speedily. In a short time we are going to open our new chapel at Ch'aikoupu. That will be a great event for our work. May the Lord bless you all and help you to keep the missionary fires burning in the churches.

Yours truly, Chas. S. Heininger.

—From Woman's Missionary Record.

IN THE CRUCIBLE OF TIME.

The swiftly flying years to the unthinking mind are nothing more than arbitrary divisions of time. But to those who see life in its divine relationships, they are one of God's most gracious and potent forces whereby He fashions character after the image of His Son. Their silent influence affects us as constantly as the sunshine or gravitation. We cannot escape their molding power. They come and go like swift shuttles, each leaving its mark upon us. They seem to us dreadful or divinely sent in proportion as we see behind them pitiless fate or loving fatherhood. They either grind us to powder, melt us into wax, or they consume in us the dross, reveal the gold, and shape it to tthe purpose of God.

The years of childhood, when parental love guards every step of the onward way, when the world is beautiful and sorrow and death arer unheard-of things; the years of adolescence, when we feel within us the working of strange new forces, and the mysteries and potencies of our nature slowly unfold themselves; the college years of happy comradeship, of contact with libraries, laboratories and inspiring teachers, of awakening to the delights and rewards of the intellectual life; the years when young life first roots itself in a business or a profession, and responsibility for one's personal share in the work of the world is assumed; the early years of wedded life, when immeasurable additions are made to the sweetness and richness of existence; the middle years, with their peculiar perils and responsibilities that call for steadiness and courage; the older years, when the sun is nearing the western horizon and the vision of celestial glories is either dimmed or clarified—what a wonderful environment for this human spirit is this procession of the years! Through every one of them God knocks at the door of our hearts, forever bringing us some new measure of His truth and grace, while, as the years pass, God also plunges us again and again into the melting pot to the end that we may be purified and ennobled.

A single calendar year—shall we judge it simply by what we have done? That test would often fill us with dismay at the thought of so little accomplished, or of so many uncompleted tasks. Shall we judge it by what has come in the way of outward good? Perhaps we have made no addition to our bank account, perhaps we have missed the attainment of much that yields pleasure and profit to others, but when we judge this year by what God has done for us in the twelve months now forever gone, by what He has taught us through our mistakes, failures, and even our sins, by the gains in character that came out of the furnace of affliction, by the comfort and hope and peace that have been ours through quiet, uneventful days and months, by the sense of His goodness and mercy that crowns the year's end, then the departing year, despite any lack of achievement on our part, seems to us God 's blessed crucible in which changes for the better have taken place, that could only come about through glad surrender to His will.

This, also, is our source of strength and hope as we face another year, its uncertainties, its joys, its discipline. To do something for God, to do everything we can for Him and our fellowmen—that aim should nerve us for the hardest efforts. But the supreme gladness of the new year will come as we rest quietly in God and let Him do His best for us and in us.—The Congregationalist.

Welch.

Mrs. Nancy Welch, May 7th, died at the age of 59 years and 7 months. She had been a member of the church near 40 years. She was a very good woman, but on account of poor health she had not attended church very much for several years. It was our privilege to visit her several times during our stay here and in sickness and in health she often spoke of her acceptance with Christ and stated that she was living in readiness to meet her God any day or hour.

Mt. Lebanon has lost a good member, and the community a good neighbor. She has one brother still living and many friends who loved her. J. B. O'Briant.

Burlington.

There were 235 at Sunday-school last Sunday, and the offering was $4.57. Bro. L. W. Holt, who was a delegate to the Baraca-Philathea convention, made a brief report of the convention to the Sunday-school which was listened to with much interest.

The Junior Philathea Class, through its teacher, Dr. W. A. Hornady, has given to the singers of the Sunday school an invitation to attend a four-months' singing school which is to be conducted under the auspices of the above-mentioned class. Prof. G. Scott-Hunter, of this city has been secured as instructor. This singing class will begin work this week and will meet every Tuesday night. The Sunday school showed appreciation of this generous offer by extending to them a rising vote of thanks. This class of young girls is about the livest and most active class in our school, and deserves much praise and credit for what it is doing.

Our special meeting closed last Thursday night, and Rev. Mr. Taylor returned to his home on Friday. The meeting was the best that we have had here in several years. There were about thirty conversions, and twenty-six presented themselves for membership on Sunday morning, twenty-one of whom were received into membership in our church while the other five gave their names to join other churches. We have been requested to give the names of those who joined our church Sunday morning. The list is as follows: Sadie Loy, Annie Goins, Nettie Durham, Irene Layton, Nettie Wright, Cleader Durham, Daisy Payne, Bertha Tatum, Mattie Knighten, Lillie Knighten, Harlan Moser, May Ingle, Sidney King, Paul Jones, Ernest Brown, Lester Brown, George Shatterly, Devo Moran, Raymond Amick, Beta Elkins, Alta Glenn. There will probably be others to join later. The results and success of the meeting were very gratifying indeed. Bro. Taylor brought the gospel to the people in a most simple and convincing manner. His sermons were very helpful and convincing to the sinner and uplifting to the Christian. Our people became very much in love with and endeared to Bro. Taylor, because his stay with us and the faithful service rendered by him has meant so much to our church and community. One notable feature of the meeting was the manner in which our Christian people devoted and consecrated themselves to prayer for the meeting and for the unsaved. It was especially noticeable among the organized classes of the Sunday school, as they gathered in their respective class rooms each evening fifteen minutes before the service began and engaged in a prayer service for the unsaved ones of their class. This idea is to be perpetuated by these classes, as they will continue to meet in a short prayer service each Sunday night just before the preaching service begins. We can truly say that we have had a great revival of religion in our church, and only eternity will reveal the good that shall result from this meeting in the coming months and years.

A called business meeting of the church was held Monday night and the business of the church was transacted. Among some of the important matters coming before the meeting was the proposition for furnishing the Sunday school with a piano. After hearing from committees, the proposition was freely discussed and finally decided in favor of purchasing a piano. The Philathea class assumed the responsibility of raising the money and buying the piano. A committee was appointed to arrange a program for the anniversary of our church which will be celebrated sometime during June.

Our second quarterly conference will be held on the first Tuesday night in June.

Since our last report the Death Angel has visited our church and community and removed from our midst one of our most faithful and earnest members, Mrs. Adolphus Moser, whose maiden name was Miss Mary Cole. Mrs. Moser died last Thursday afternoon at her home about three miles from town. The funeral service was conducted in the church Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock by our pastor, Rev. G. L. Curry, and interment in Pine Hill cemetery. The funeral service was attended by the local council of the Daughters of Liberty, of which Mrs. Moser was a member. The service was also attended by a large number of friends. Mrs. Moser was aged 36 years, and a good woman. She united with the M. E. Church at the age of 14, in Moore county, and after moving to Burlington transferred her membership to the M. P. Church here in 1902. She was always a faithful and untiring worker for the church and Sunday school, and the testimony of her neighbors and friends is that she was a devoted, conscientious Christian woman. In the death of this woman our church has lost one of its valuable members, and the community in which she lived has lost a good, neighborly woman. We as a church and Sunday school extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved relatives and friends and pray God's blessings upon them in their sad bereavement. The deceased sister is survived by four brothers, two of whom reside here and two live in Moore county. C. B. Way, Reporter.

From the Children's Home.

This week, as Mr. Garrett reported to us of the new churches and S. S. that were taking an interest in the Children's Home and had sent in a liberal offering, we felt so grateful, that I should like a few words of appreciation in the paper this week. I want to assure those that have made the sacrifice, that we feel very thankful for it. Though the children cannot reward you for this act of interest taken in them, God will prosper you. And these dear young lives have been made to rejoice to know that in you they have that friend that has that deep interest every Christian should have for the orphan child.

Somehow I believe that God, in His wisdom and love, is leading our churches and S. S. to see this phase of work differently. And I am persuaded to believe in the future the church will manifest a deeper interest in the Orphans' Home.

I would that now I could remedy the phrase "so many" and say all of our churches are awakening to a sense of duty toward the Home.

But we feel the day is near when this great change can be made. For God will prosper this great worrk. And with eager hearts we are looking forward to the day when every church and S. S. in N. C. will be added to our Supt.'s financial report.

Pansy Anderson.

The following ladies from outside the city were here yesterday to attend the meeting of the N. C. Branch of the W. F. M. S.: Miss Tacy Woody, Bethel, Ala mance Ct., Miss Daisy Richardson, Center, Alamance Ct.; Mrs. Hammer and Mrs. Otis Rich, Asheboro; Mrs. F. R. Harris, Henderson; Mrs. W. P. Pickett, Mrs. L. W. Kivett, and Mrs. H. A. Garrett, High point; Mrs. Emma B. Siler, Siler City; Miss Ila Stafford, Mrs. J. B. Cheek, and Mrs. S. M. Hornady, Burlington; Miss Virla Coble, Liberty; Mrs. J. E. Devinney, Mrs. Tom Coble, Julian.

"Stand for thy Father in the world's great Fight;
With loyal heart uphold His Kingly right
To reign from pole to pole;
Wear royal arms, and boldly strike a blow
For God and right, that heaven on earth

—Yellow poplar, or tulip tree, the laargest broadlef tree in America, has been known to reach nearly 200 feet in height and 10 feet in diameter.

PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENTS.

Concord ..... May 20
Gaston Ct. ..... May 21
Yarboro and Anderson Ct. .. May 22, 24
Asheville ..... May 25, 26
Buncombe Ct. ..... May 27, 30
Pensacola ..... May 31
Lenoir Ct. ..... June 1, 2
Lincoln Ct. ..... June 3, 4
Cleveland Ct. ..... June 6, 7
Falston Ct. ..... June 9
Shelby Ct. ..... June 10, 11
Charlotte ..... June 12, at night

Pastors please state where I will be met in going from one field to another, and make such arrangements between yourselves. C. A. Cecil.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

The first Sunday in May I preached at Thomasville and Mt. Carmel. The second Sunday in May I was at Liberty Grove at 11 o'clock at the memorial service, and preached at Liberty Sunday night. All of these services were well attended and will result in much good, I trust. On Saturday, the 16th, I preached at Cid church on the Uwharrie Ct at 11 o'clock to a fairly good attendance; in the afternoon we held the second quarterly conference. Not a full attendance; reports were not very good; but I trust they will be better in the near future. Sunday, the 17th, at 11 a. m. I preached at Denton.

The pastors on all these fields are faithful in filling their appointments and they are endeavoring to lead their people to higher and better things.

All the churches on Uwharrie paid my claim except Cid and Mt. Zion and that is promised.

I regret to say I have a letter from Bro. Lowdermilk saying he will have to decline going to Buncombe on account of his throat trouble.

I should be glad to hear from Bro. Neese and the La Grange people. Will soon be on the Buncombe Circuit and will see what I can do for them in the way of a pastor. C. A. Cecil.

May 18, 1914.

Halifax Circuit.

Our second quarterly conference was held at Union church on Friday before 1st Sunday in May. There was preaching by the pastor at eleven o'clock and quarterly conference immediately after dinner. Not a large attendance though every church on the circuit was represented. Financial report about as good as usual. Nominees for delegate to next Annual Conference are Bros. J. H. Harrison, Jr., of Bethesda, and J. W. Hardee, of Eden.

A goodly number communed at Bethesda 2nd Sunday. One new member was received. On account of the burial services of Mrs. Ivey Hamill at Eden church the appointment at Union Sunday afternoon and at Ringwood Sunday night had to be called in.

Dr. C. E. Forlines will preach at Eden church on 5th Sunday in May at 11 a. m. He will lecture at Eden church Monday night, June 1st, at Bethesda Tuesday night, June 2nd, at the Fosburgh Camp Wednesday night, June 3rd. All the appointments at 8 p. m. There will be Children's Day service at Eden church 1st Sunday in June at 11 o'clock, preaching in afternoon. There will be Children's Day service at Bethesda the second Sunday in June at 11 o'clock. No service in afternoon.

The re-painting and plastering of Bethesda began this week.

The books for the Teacher Training class at Lees Chapel came this week and the class will be organized next (3rd) Sunday.

Miss Agnes Wills who has been teaching near Red Springs has returned and favored us with a delightful solo at Bethesda last Sunday.

Bro. S. M. Lewis of Union church has been critically ill for two weeks. We are hoping for his recovery. J. E. Pritchard.

May 15th.

Lincoln Circuit.

Held our second quarterly conference with Knob Creek church Sat. before the fourth Sunday in April. Good congregation, but few officials owing to busy planting season and sunshine following rain. Rev. J. H. Moton preached at 11 a. m. Seemed to have preached his masterpiece. Saw a demonstration of this in the audience. Business transacted in harmony, Bro. Moton presiding. Delegates nominated to Annual Conference, Bros. J. W. Alran and Robt. Short. J. D. Morris.

Lincoln Ct.—President's Appointments.

Laurel Hill, 10:30 a. m., Knob Creek, 3 p. m., Wed., June 3rd.
Hebron, 10:30 a. m., Bess Chapel, 3 p. m., Thursday, June 4th.

Bro. Martin, please arrange so I can meet Pres. at Burk's Chapel.

J. D. Morris.

St. Paul M. P. Church.

We are pleased to note that St. Paul is making some progress, which is very encouraging. The S. S. is the most marked feature of progress. Last Sunday there were present 133, one year ago, 90; enrollment, 195. Bro. E. M. Routh who was our former superintendent was faithful and made good progress. Bro. G. H. May, our present Supt., is doing a good work also. Supt. May shows his interest in the classes and the teachers. The following are the teachers: W. M. Taylor, J. W. Steward, E. M. Routh, Miss Addie Honeycutt, Miss Lizzie Wyrick, and Mrs. Millaway.

Our special meeting will begin on the 5th Sunday in this month. Rev. N. G. Bethea is engaged to assist in the meeting. He will come up on Monday after the 5th Sunday and remain over the 1st Sunday in June. G. F. Millaway.

Charlotte Circuit.

We had Pres. Cecil with us at Mill Grove and Love's Grove April 25-26. He preached three good sermons and they were enjoyed by all who heard them; and I have also heard many good remarks about Bro. Cecil and his helpful sermons. Bro. Cecil held our 2nd quarterly conference and the many business questions he asked will be remembered and will do good in the future. I like the way Bro. Cecil conducted our quarterly conference. His visit was a help to me and my people. Our quarterly conference was a success. We are moving along slowly with our work. Our Sunday schools are doing very good work, but there is room for improvement.

Bro. C. O. Garmon, one of our faithful young men at Charlotte, was licensed to exhort at our 2nd quarterly conference. He has our prayers.

Our people have been good to us. We have received some tokens of kindness all along during the year. Bro. J. L. Belk of Charlotte gave us a nice piece of meat and some nice table peas. Sister Lily Furr has given us fruit and sausage. Sister Ethel Kiser has given us fruit and butter. Bro. John Howell has given us corn. Bros. Ollie and Floyd Furr gave us corn. Bro. S. More gave us a load of stovewood. We thank all these good people and all others that have shown us tokens of kindness.

We held a meeting four nights at Love's Grove and the Lord was with us: on the fourth night we had fifteen conversions, and all who attended were made to feel it was good to be there. We are looking for a good camp meeting at Mill Grove embracing the third Sunday in August. We are also looking for a good meeting at Love's Grove embracing the 2nd Sunday in August and we hope to have a good meeting or two in Charlotte this year. Brethren, we need your prayers. Yours for service. D. A. Braswell.

Asheville.

Sunday was not a record breaker, but we did have a good day. Eleven additions in Sunday school. Two new members added to the church membership. I have the letter of another person, who will probably join next Sunday; and we are expecting others to join at the same time. So we are already experiencing results from our removal from the Y. M. C. A. hall, in addition to a very largely increased attendance at the services.

Work on the church progressed fairly rapidly the past week. The windows came on Wednesday, and all those for the completed side of the building have been put in. The windows are beautiful. The brick work is not yet finished, work will be resumed by Wednesday of this week, and be completed inside of another week. Just as soon as that is finished, the rest of the windows will be put in position, and all the work completed.

The Baracas and Philatheas descended on the occupants of the parsonage in a little donation party, and left the pantry somewhat better supplied than before they came. We thank them.

Asheville Church Building Fund

Mr. Ed. Brown, Jr.	$5.00
Mr. and Mrs. Pickett Montgomery	5.00
Dr. R. G. Buckner	5.00
Mr. Geo. Barber	5.00
Miss Jane M. Brown	5.00
Dr. G. E. Matthews	2.50
Mr. F. M. Riddle	2.00
Mrs. Celia Roberts	1.00
Mr. John Ball	.50
"A Friend"	.50
Mr. W. B. Carpenter	.50
Mrs. Sally Keith	.25
Mr. W. M. Young	.25

Thank you, friends. Now if the rest will come on, I'll be able to quit this, and give this space to some one else. We need your help. The church can't be finished unless you do help us.

C. W. Bates, Pastor.

Buncombe Ct.—President's Appointments.

Clark's Chapel, Wed., May 27, 11 a. m.
Weaverville, Wed., May 27, 8 p. m.
Jupiter, Thurs., May 28, 11 a. m.
Democrat, Thurs., May 28, 8 p. m.
Terry's Fork, Friday, May 29, 11 a. m.
Pleasant Gap, Friday, May 29 4 p. m.

In the absence of a pastor, these appointments were arranged by the Asheville pastor, with the assistance of some of the brethren. Give Bro. Cecil a good welcome at each appointment. He will do you good.

Announcement:

Piney Grove Church will observe Children's Day service on the first Sunday in June at 11 a. m. and there will be preaching in the afternoon also. The preaching service at Zion for the morning of the first Sunday in June is called off, on account of this all-day service at Piney Grove. W. A. Ledford, Pastor.

Siler City.

Thomasville.

We wish every one of our members could have been present and heard the sermon by Pres. Cecil. Some of us I know were encouraged and strengthened by the truths he presented. We feel and know the need of co-operation in order to do our best in God's work.

Misses Mary and Sarah McCulloch will be missed by us, especially by the Philathea class. Hope they may come back here to teach and join us again in the fall. We are glad to have Miss Alta Pickett of High Point in Sunday school occasionally when she is down visiting her sister, Mrs. Finch. We like for her to visit real often.

The Ladies' Aid Society met with Mrs. D. R. Connell on last Thursday afternoon. This home, always lovely, never appeared more attractive with its decoration of spring flowers tastefully arranged. The most interesting feature of the society was the election of officers for the coming year as follows: Mrs. Chas. Finch, Pres.; Mrs. J. W. Boyles, Vice Pres.; Mrs. Homer Ritchie, Sec.; Mrs. T. G. Perry, Asst. Sec.; Miss Vetra Carmichael, Treas.: after which Mrs. Connell served wafers and temperance mint julep to the invited guest, Miss Mary Wills McCulloch, and the ten members present. Reporter.

May 4, 1914.

A Good Woman Gone.

Gillie A. Lasley was born April 6, 1852. On July 11, 1871 she was married to Mr. R. H. Ingram. She died May 6, 1914, and was buried at Pine Grove the following day. She professed faith in Christ when about fifteen years old and joined the M. E. Church near where Stokesdale is now located. Some years later she moved her membership to Pine Grove Metho'ist Protestant church where she remained a member till her death.

"She was a good woman" was the expression from many on the occasion of her death and funeral.. And if no one had said these words, the fact that the church was full when we came together to pay our last respects to Sister Ingram was enough to show the place she held in the estimation of the people of the entire community in which she lived. A husband, one daughter and six sons are mourning the loss of a loved one. The pastor could not help but notice two strong testimones to the goodness of this good woman. These testimonies were not spoken but were stronger than any spoken words could have made them. The first was the fact that all seven of the children are members of the church. The influence of a Christian mother! The other testimony was expressed by the presence of almost the entire community at her funeral.

I had known Sister Ingram only five months, but during that time I too had learned that she was a good woman. Yes, she was one of the best on my charge. I as pastor will miss her. On my first visit to her church I went home with her for dinner; and on the last Sunday before she went to Heaven on Wednesday I again went home with her for dinner. I little thought then that she would so soon enter Heaven's gate. But a stroke of paralysis took her away in about thirty or forty minutes.

May He who wept with the bereaved sisters at Bethany comfort the husband and children and friends of our good sister who has left us for a while.

Linley W. Gerringer, Pastor.

Hamill.

Lorena Estelle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Hawkins, and wife of Ivey Hamill, was born Nov. 23, 1891, and departed this life May 9, 1914, thus being in her 24th year. While yet young she professed faith in Christ and united with Eden church, Halifax Circuit, about ten years ago. So far as the writer knows she lived a consistent Christian life until called to her reward.

Mrs. Hamill was a faithful attendant at church and always seremed interested in the service. Truly a good woman has gone, one who will be missed in the community.

About two or three years ago she was married to Mr. Hamill who is now left alone. In addition to her husband she leaves father and mother and several brothers and sisters. Burial service was at Eden church on Sunday afternoon, May 10th, and was conducted by her pastor. Our deepest sympathy goes out to the relatives. J. E. Pritchard.

A song leader does not always select the most appropriate song for the occasion. At the end of a very long and tiresome sermon, a Sankey struck up on the piece, "Hallelujah, 'tis done!"

Union Grove, Gaston Ct.

Our pastor, Rev. H. W. Braswell, preached to a large congregation the third Sunday; he had something good to tell us. Our Sunday school is still getting better; 74 on roll. We are always glad to see so many bright boys and girls in Sunday school. Mr. Cecil will preach Thursday night, May 21. We are looking and praying for a great revival meeting this summer. Pray for us.

Annie Steward, Rep.

Rockingham.

As I have been a reader of the Herald for some time and have learned to love it very much, I will write a few lines about our revival meeting just closed. We had a wonderful meeting with several conversions and six joined our church. Bro. Allred preached the old-time religion and we had an old-time revival. Meeting closed on Friday night and on Saturday Bro. Allred carried me over to McFarlan with him. We had prayer meeting Saturday night with a very good crowd out. Bro. Allred preached two of the best sermons on Sunday I believe I ever heard him preach. Large congregation at both services. Bro. Allred seems to be well liked all over this circuit, especially at Pee Dee church where I am a member.

McFarlan is a very beautiful little country town with some of the best people to be found. They were so kind to us that I will never forget them. They have the old-time religion which is the best of all.

J. W. Jenkins.

Lincolnton.

Sunday we observed "Mothers' Day", closing with communion. It was one of the most impressive meetings I was ever in. The way the pastor preached to the young people was just grand. I wish all the boys and girls in town could or would have heard it. The world is perishing for more preaching like this. Our S. S. attendance was good, also the collection. Our special meeting will soon be on us. We are looking for a good meeting. Pray for the meeting to be a success for Jesus' sake.

D. B. J.

Flat Rock Items.

Our church in a quiet way, with an attractively decorated house, in beautiful white flowers, with some thrilling songs and a sermon bearing on the subject, celebrated Mothers' Day. Collection goes to orphanage.

The beloved wife of our pastor, Mrs. Annie Kennett, after an absence of six months, worshiped with us, her familiar figure slightly emaciated by disease; was a benediction to us. And we hope will yet be restored to its former vigor.

Bruce Township S. School Convention convenes at Morehead Chapel Saturday before the fourth Sunday in June.

Some interesting speakers are scheduled for the day. Dr. Blair, editor of the Christian Advocate, Rev. A. G. Dixon, of High Point, and Rev. R. M. Andrews, of Greensboro, besides our local pastors and Mr. Peeler, have all consented to be present. Let's give them a full house. Rep.

Yarboro-Anderson.

President's appointments: Liberty Hill, Anderson Ct., May 22 at night and at Harmony on Yarboro Ct 24th at 11 a. m. and night. He will not be able to reach the other churches, as he has only three days for both Cts. and no man can preach at all of the churches in three days unless he drives at night.

The death of Mrs. S. J. Knox is a great loss to Yarboro church. The facts of her life and death will be sent very soon.

Cid, Uwharrie Ct.

The 2nd Quar. Conf. convened at Cid last Sat. Rev. C. A. Cecil preached for us at 11 o'clock and delivered an able sermon to a very attentive congregation and we all enjoyed his being with us. All the churches but one represented. The general business was transacted in the usual way. The reports from all the churches were good and seemed to be in a prosperous condition. Our pastor, Bro. Trogdon, had an excellent report. He has served us so faithfully regardless of bad health. We thank our sister churches for their financial help and we always extend a hearty welcome for their presence. Bro. Harris Hill and Bro. L. E. Hoover were nominated for delegate to the Annual Conference. Two good men. We had the pleasure of having Miss Mattie Thayer of Mt. Pleasant with us Sat. Mr. Wm. Cecil and family who recently moved to High Point will be greatly missed in the spiritual work. May the Lord bless every one of us and may this be the most prosperous year in saving precious souls that we have ever had is the prayer of an humble servant, and may every one that feels that he or she is a child of God step out and help to save some precious soul.

Mrs. N. W. L., Reporter.

Bethany, Randleman Ct.

We had memorial and mothers' services the 2nd Sun. in May. Bro. O'Briant was with us and preached two excellent sermons to a large congregation

We are looking forward to our special meeting which will be the second Sun. in Aug. Our people are all pleased that Rev. G. F. Millaway, one of our former pastors, is to help Bro. O'Briant.

Committees were appointed last Sunday to get up Children's Day. We think they will get up a good exercise, we have so many children to take a part.

Our S. S. is very interesting. The attendance for this month so far: 1st Sun., 113; 2nd, 132; 3rd, 108.

A Member.

Richland Circuit.

The 2nd quarterly conference convened at Fairmount May 16th. The business was transacted in harmony. The attendance was rather small; only eleven members were present. All churches were represented. The Sunday schools are doing nicely at all churches.

We are looking for a prosperous year. We are liking our pastor (Bro. Bowman) finely. He preached at Giles Chapel the 3rd Sunday and I think his sermon was enjoyed by all present.

R. L. Allred.

Mt. Carmel, Granville Ct.

Sunday school in good condition. Last report as follows: 73 on roll, 43 present; 61c collected and three new scholars.

Will be preaching next Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock by the pastor. This is an extra service we are getting now and it seems to work well.

W. Polk Garrett.

5-19-'14.

Richland Circuit.

The second quarterly conference was held at Fairmount on last Saturday. The attendance was very good. Each church was represented. The conference was very interesting. The reports were good, some of them very good. I think the work is progressing very nicely. I have taken so far about 20 new subscriptions for M. P. Herald besides some who have renewed their subscriptions. Bro. W. C. Jones of Fairmount and Bro. J. H. Redding of Charlotte were nominated for delegate to Annual Conference.

J. H. Bowmamn.

Midway, Haw River Ct.

Since our last report we have reorganized S. S. L. R. Dixon, Supt.; G. R. Wright, Asst.; E. J. Elmore, Sec.; A. J. Dixon, Asst.; teachers, J. D. McCollum, Ella Apple, Pearl Haynes, Nell Hayes and G. R. Wright. Organist, Pearl Haynes, Tom Butler to assist. Our S. S. is doing very well but could do better if all the church members would take an interest in it. Pray for us that we may do all we can for the good of our school.

We are making preparations for Children's Day in the near future.

Our pastor has filled all his appointments with good, interesting sermons.

There is not much sickness around us now; some whooping cough among the children. Ella Dixon Apple.

May 17, 1914.

Mount Hermon Ct.

Dear Bro. McCulloch: I want to tell you how the Lord blessed us in our meeting. We had 45 conversions and 15 joined the church here at Bellemont. Some are going to the Baptist at Mt. Zion. Bro. Millaway preached for us the first week, and Bro. Anderson Branson the second. It was a blessing to be in the meeting, for the power of the Spirit came down upon us. Men could not resist the Spirit of God, but would come and bow down at the altar for prayer. Only one ever left the altar unsaved during the meeting. We want more of the old-time religion that makes people happy and makes them love their enemies, so that they are willing to pray for them and if necessary go and be reconciled with their worst enemy. That is the spirit of the Master who died for his enemies. May we love more and hate less. H. M. Neese.

Piney Grove, Uwharrie Ct.

The writer did enjoy so much the day of the quarterly conference at Cid. The sermon at 11 o'clock was grand. I think we have a president worth being proud of. He told so many good things, as how we ought to labor together with God. As always, those present received the benefit. Those absent lost what they might have gained. And every time we are absent it is a link out of the chain of life. As we promise when we join the church to attend all the ordinances, we cannot get the best out of life unless we fulfill our promises. When we let an opportunity to do good pass by unnoticed, it is gone for life time, never to return. Other opportunities will come, but if we get in a habit of letting them all pass by, the next thought, life is ended and what is our reward?

Our pastor gave us a helpful sermon yesterday evening at the regular hour. There are not enough doers today in the churches. There is a work for all to do. God does not require us all to do the same work. But there is a place for every one and room for all. Be our part ever so little, done in the right spirit it is great in the sight of God. He does not require more than we are capable of doing. He is such a good Master. But we are inclined to be disobedient servants. May all that heard Bro. Cecil Saturday and Bro. Trogdon Sunday put the good words to practice, also pass them on with new life to those that were absent.

I love to hear from different charges, also the different churches; both pastors and reporters. Mrs. C. H. Hill.

Grace Church, Greensboro.

Attendance at S. S. last Sunday was 251. Five members were received at the morning service.

Sunday night Rev. O. L. Stringfield, representative of the Anti-Saloon League, spoke. Good congregation at both services.

This week we are to have the N. C. Branch and the Executive Board of the W. F. M. S. with us.

The Postal Card - - W. F. Kennett, Ed.

The Editor of the Postal Card has been too busy for several weeks to write the Postal Card. In the meantime many things of interest have transpired. Week before last the M. P. Herald failed to reach this office. We missed it awfully and wondered why it did not come. We had requested the Editor if he found it necessary to write Bro. Burgess a postal card to drop us one also, but no card came. Last Friday the Herald came, but we found no explanation of the failure of the week before. Our 2nd quarterly conference met in Bethel church on Saturday before the 1st Sunday in this month. We had a very good attendance—all the churches were represented and the reports were the best we have ever had at a 2nd quarterly conference. The third conference is to be better attended, as every man present at the 2nd pledged himself to attend the 3rd, if not providentially prevented.

Bros. J. B. Ogburn and N. W. Gordon were selected as nominess for delegate to the Annual Conference. Bro. Ogburn was sick and unable to be present at the conference. We missed him, for he is usually on hand and is one of our safe counselors.

The appeals of Bro. Bates in behalf of the Asheville church always interest us and it is pleasant to know that the work is progressing so well. The young and zealous pastor and his loyal and deserving flock are worthy of our sympathy and encouragement. We are determined to put something into that church before going there as pastor and in order to make sure of this we hope to do so before the meeting of the next Annual Conference. I know we are all going to enjoy our trip to Ashevile next November and I think we will enjoy it only the more if we have something in the church.

We were so much pleased to see that Lucian Eller of Weaverville has joined the church at Clark's Chapel. May the mantle of his father fall upon him and he will be a power for good. Buncombe circuit was our first pastorate and we have always felt a keen interest in its success.

Mrs. Roxie Lee Parish, the young wife of Mr. Oscar Parish, was buried at Flat Rock Wednesday afternoon of last week. A large congregation was present. Funeral conducted by the pastor. Sister Parish was a member at Flat Rock and was a very gentle and patient Christian.

Though late, we wish to acknowledge the kindness of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Tucker in sending us a box of good things for Easter.

Mrs. H. G. Moore and Mrs. Robert Wray of Flat Rock have been sick for some time. May health soon be restored to them.

We have noticed the request of Bro. Wills and we are mailing check for church extension, also check to complete payment of assessment for supeerannuates. These causes have a special claim upon us and should have our prompt attention.

Mt. Moriah, Cleveland Ct.

We have had a lively Sunday school for the last few Sundays. There would be more in the Sunday school if it were not for the measles and whooping-cough.

I am a little girl twelve years old. I like to send little pieces to the Herald.

Susan Sisk.

Why I Feel Thankful.

Last fall I was real sick and out of heart. I wrote a letter to the Herald and asked prayers. I also told my trouble, which was stomach trouble. Well, some of the readers wrote me personal letters saying it was no use to go to the hospital and sent me other remedies. I waited on and continued to get no better. Those readers asked me to let them hear from me through the Herald. I am thankful for all prayers and remedies. But I will say I finally went to Charlotte to the specialist. I am much better now; am not strong, though won't ever be either. I don't suffer as I did. I found a remedy after I went to the specialist that gave me relief from suffering. Have used it ever since. Will have any sufferer as I was sent a sample if they will write me personally. I am in my Sunday school as ever. All love our good preacher, Bro. Morris. Etta Sain.

Henry, N. C., R. F. D. 3.

—To secure a merit badge in forestry, boy scouts are required, among other things, to identify 25 kinds of trees.

Death of Mrs. Knight at Rocky Mount.

Mrs. Sarah Whitaker Knight entered into "The life eternal" as sweetly as she had lived, May 9th, 1914, at the home of Mr. R. W. Arrington, Rocky Mount, in her seventy-sixth year. Every thing that loving hands could do was done "to stay the reaper," but the summons came, "It is enough, come up higher."

She was the youngest daughter of Wilson Cary and Agnes Olivia Whitaker. In the summer of 1864 she was married to W. H. Knight; to this union only one daughter was born, Eulalie, who married R. W. Arrington.

The funeral services were at Whitaker's Chapel Cemetery Sunday afternoon, May 10th, "as the sun was going down," by Rev. T. E. Davis, amidst sorrowing relatives and friends.

"Asleep in Jesus" and "The Christian's Good-night" were sweetly sung. The floral offering covered the mound and was a beautiful tribute to her; she was so fond of flowers.

Mrs. Knight was a member of the Methodist Protestant Church in Enleld. In her younger days she was a great worker in church and Sunday school. She was reared in a Christian home with its influence of family prayer, conducted by her mother; her father died when she was quite small.

In all the relations of life, as daughter, sister, wife, mother and friend she was loving and true. "None knew her but to love her." She had been an invalid for years, but bore her suffering patiently. Two years ago she had to give up her daughter, three months ago her only brother. She bowed in submission, saying, "I don't sorrow, for I expect to go soon."

God grant we may so live as to meet her. (The Methodist Protestant is requested to copy.)

Hopkins.

Dr. Ernest Hudson Hopkins, of Danville, Va.,, son of Bro. J. W. Hopkins, of Brown Summit, N. C., died May 5th 1914. He was born Oct. 15, 1884; age, 29 years, six months, twenty days. He was converted when about fifteen years old; united with the M. P. Church at Brown Summit; remained a member there until last December, when he moved his membership to Danville, Va. This child was brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. His mother, who was a Miss Roach, was a godly woman; after her death several years ago, Miss Moore became his step-mother. She also showed a real interest in him and all the children. This child was taught by precept and example, by his father, mother and stepmother. "Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it."

He had been in declining health for a year or more. He was treated in Baltimore, also in Richmond; his health seemed to be improved some. On the 5th day of May, 1914, he worked in his office; that night, between 9:30 and 11:30 he came to his death by his own hands. The writer conducted the funeral service of a Mr. Clinard, of South Side, Salem, who shot himself. The Jr. O. U. A. M. conducted a part of the service. One Bro. said, "We know he was our brother in the order, and I can't help but believe he is our brother in Christ." We heard Bishop Rondthaler conduct the funeral of Walter Tise who shot and killed himself; he was the manager of the Postal Telegraph office of Winston for 25 years. The bishop said, "Walter was a good boy, true to the church of his mother, strict and upright in business, but in these days of over work our powers fail." If Bro. Hopkins was right before he fired the fatal shot, we believe ail is well with him now. Surely no man who is sane will take his own life. Think of his raising, his conversion, uniting with the church, moving his membership about six months ago, of his declining health, of his mental defect while in a hospital in Richmond, Va., and of the mercies of God, and let us hope to meet him in the better land.

We would not hold out a false hope, but have said what we really believe. We know it is a source of great consolation to Bro. Hopkins, Mrs. Hopkins, and the brothers of the deceased, that he was brought up right, that he was a good boy, grew up to manhood and retained his Christian character. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. W. F. Ashburn and the writer at Brown Summit, May 7, 1914.

A large congregation of sympathizing relatives and friends was present. There was a profusion of flowers as a token of the high esteem in which he was held. May not all these things be of some comfort to her who has been left a widow?

G. F. Millaway.

Job.

Artitia Ellen Brown Job was born Feb. 27, 1852, married to Henry Michael Job, Dec. 21, 1852, died April 24, 1914. She leaves three children, three grandchildren, four brothers and two sisters, and a great number of relatives and friends to mourn their loss. She suffered for years with a stomach trouble and other diseases together, and while she never complained as some do, we have no idea how very much she suffered.

We have known her for years and have always thought her to be one of the highest types of Christian character that we ever knew; she simply lived religion in every way. She was a member of Hebron church for a number of years, and we have seen her there during revivals, and don't think we've ever seen a happier soul praising the Lord than she. It just seemed that she couldn't praise the Lord enough. Her everyday life was such that no one doubted her true Christian spirit.

We used to visit their home while her husband lived, and while they were not wealthy, we don't think we ever saw a happier couple. Always pleasant, kind and affectionate, willing to do all the good they could to all. Cousin Tish will be sorely missed by her children, and all who knew her. We don't suppose she had an enemy; if so, we don't know who it could be, for she made friends wherever she went. She raised her children up to be Christians, like herself, and may they still serve the God of their mother.

While her daughter lives away in Tennessee, her heart is so sad for the loss of her mother. May her dear children each live a noble Christian life, and meet their angel mother in Heaven.

May all her relatives and friends with whom she talked and whom she asked to meet her in Heaven be there when the final day comes.

All that loving hands and medical aid could do for her was done, and yet God said, "Come up higher."

She was buried at Hebron on Sunday, 26th, a large crowd attending the funeral. We never saw more flowers placed for one grave; they were beautiful to behold. The funeral, conducted by Rev. W. E. Swain, was very impressive, beautifully illustrating her pure Christian life. We all hope to meet her in the Great Beyond.

Hebron has lost another of her truest members. It seems that the older members of Hebron are passing away very fast, but we feel that our loss is their gain. There is a bright day coming for all who serve God, a home with our loved ones, lasting through all ages.

After fades life's setting sun,
After faith her race has run,
After love's last task is done,
She sleeps, our loved one sleeps.
After broken hearts have bled,
After love's last words are said,
After hope enshrines the dead,
She sleeps, our loved one sleeps.

Fannie Nelson and Cora Nicholson.

Moore.

Omor Moore was born Sept. 15, 1893, and died May 4, 1914. Omor had been in ill health for only about four months; he was in school at Oak Ridge when fire destroyed the building and got too hot and contracted cold and continually grew worse until God took him. He was not of a complaining nature, although he suffered a great deal; he never murmured, only said he wanted to get well. Omor was not a member of any church, but often attended church and seemed to be interested. He would often read God's word and study it and he was able to praise God before he died. He said he would soon be at home. The day before he died he lay with his eyes cast upward and seemed to be talking to some one not visible to those in the room. Omor was a kind and obedient son, loving brother, and a friend to all; he leaves a father, three brothers and two sisters and a host of friends to mourn their loss; but we trust our loss is his eternal gain. His mother, one sister and one brother preceded him to the great beyond during the last seven years. Omor had a bright future before him, but the Lord saw best to take him and we trust today he is in the arms of Jesus. His body was laid to rest in Spring Hill grave yard, May 6th, amid a large crowd of sympathizing relatives and friends. His funeral was conducted by Rev. C. A. Davis. To those left behind we extend our heartfelt sympathy. How we will miss that kindly face and smile, but how can we complain —it was God's will. The path that we are treading is the path that saints have trod, that leads to that beautiful city whose builder and maker is God.

A Friend.

Keiger-Hunter.

One of the prettiest weddings of the season was celebrated at 3 o'clock last Tuesday afternoon, May 12th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Keiger, of King, N. C., when their charming daughter, Miss Addie May Keiger, became the bride of Mr. Clyde C. Hunter, of Tobaccoville, N C. The home was beautifully decorated in palms, ferns and cut flowers which made a most fitting setting for the ceremony that joined these two lives. Before the ceremony Miss Mallie Redman of Pilot Mountain, N. C., softly rendered "I love You Truly" and "Oh Promise me." Then to the winsome strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march came the bridal party. First the ring-bearer, little Master Thames Keiger, carrying the ring in the dainty petals of a lovely bridal rose; then followed the maid of honor, Miss Pearl Jackson, of Mt. Airy, in lovely attire of white-shadow lace over white silk batiste, carrying pink carnations and maiden hair fern; after which came the groom with best man, Mr. Clinton Sprinkle, of Winston-Salem. Then with slow steady tread came the bride leaning on the arm of her brother, Mr. Will R. Keiger, who gave her away. The bride wore white crepe de chine trimmed in dutchess lace and pearls with bridal veil, and carried a bouquet of bride's roses. In the stillness of this scene, Rev. A. O. Lindley, the bride's pastor, in an impressive ring ceremony made them one, the bride and groom kneeling on white satin cushion beneath an arch of roses for the benediction prayer. Congratulations were received in the hall then all repaired to the attractively decorated dining room where delicious refreshments consisting of cream and cakes and fruits were served by Misses Marjorie Jackson, Sula Madearis and Mrs. L. Holland, the color scheme of pink and white being carried out.

The display of beautiful presents and the large number of friends and relatives there go to prove the extreme popularity of this couple. Amid a shower of rice and old shoes the happy couple left in their machine for Winston-Salem, where they boarded the train for Washington, Baltimore and other northern cities.

WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Report of Branch Meeting.

The Branch meeting was held at the Children's Home on May 15th and 16th. This seemed to be an ideal place for our meeting. I wish many more of our churches could have been represented, for I am sure the delegates would have enjoyed the kind hospitality of the Home and been impressed with all those bright little faces that are there.

Although our attendance was not as good as we had hoped for, still it was the largest that we have ever had, and we had a good meeting. Every one seemed to be interested, and entered heartily into the discussions. All sessions were very pleasant, and the program was fully carried out with one exception.

We had not grown much in numbers in the past two or three years, but we believe that the home missionary spirit has grown very decidedly. We have realized very forcibly for some time that it would be impossible for us to grow extensively as an organization unless we had a field secretary who could go to the various churches and get the people interested and help them get started in this great work by organizing Home Mission Societies. It has seemed that the right person was not available,, and also we lacked funds for the support of such a person. But at this Branch meeting we decided that we must if possible find some one who would be willing to do this work. And we consider ourselves very fortunate indeed in securing two young ladies, Miss Pansy Anderson, of Asheville, for western N. C., and Miss Mary Young, of Henderson, for eastern N. C.

The officers for the coming year are: Pres., Mrs. W. C. Hammer; Vice Pres., Miss Mary Young; Rec. Sec., Mrs. A. G. Dixon; Cor. Sec., Mrs. Emma B. Siler; Treas., Mrs. J. W. Austin; Missionary Record Agent, Miss Millie Bowman, Liberty, N. C.

Pearl McCulloch.

During the year 1912-13 the Missionary Education Publishing department sold a total of 153,611 text books. The study of the "Immigrant Forces" seemed to be the most popular, for there were more sales of that book than any other. The sales were 29,316. The next highest sale was that of "The Emergency in China." Of this book 20,246 were sold. In two months there were 7,481 copies of "The New Era in Asia" sold. The department closed the year with a surplus in the treasury.

The Missionary Education Movement and the Federated Boards of Missions, both home and foreign, have united on a general program for united study for the year 1914-15, beginning in September and ending in June. The text-book will be— "The Social Force of Christian Missions." To use with this study a set of stereopticon slides are being prepared, and a lecture to accompany it. There will also be maps and charts.

—A Chinese girl, Miss Yarlock Lowe, is studying law in Berkeley, Cali., and will return to China to practise. She says: "It is for the lawyers of China to help in the re-making of the nation; in shaping new laws and enforcing them, and in protecting the interests of the Chinese people while making China a nation of influence in the world."

—Men and Missions reports that Baron Edmund Rothschild has purchased a large tract of land in Palestine for archaeological investigation. He is planning to build on it a Jewish museum, and expects, in the surrounding region, to find much information regarding the history and times of the kings of Israel.

AUNT MATTIE'S INFLUENCE.

"Of course, Hannah, it's your own house, and you've a right to your own ways, but I just can't sit still without telling you what I think. The boy may be well enough—I don't say that he isn't—be that as it may—but forgery's twin brother to stealing, and if we inherit good traits, isn't it likely that we are going to inherit bad ones? Mind, I don't say the lad's a thief—maybe he never will be—we'll hope not—but you can't get away from the fact that his father"—

"Yes, yes, Mattie, I know," interposed Mrs. Cope, hastily, "we all know—everybody knows—about poor Mr. Rand. Of course, he did sign another man's name where he had no business to, but it was the first piece of dishonesty that he'd ever been guilty of, and he's suffering punishment for it now. And I don't think public sentiment is very bitter toward him, for we all know the difficulties he went through, and how his wife's illness for years before she died undermined his health and strength."

"All the same, that's no excuse for his turning dishonest," pursued Aunt Mattie, with her most virtuous expression. "That's the regular criminal's plea, Elmer says, ill fortune and everything to battle against."

"Well, I'm glad that everybody isn't so ready to down the poor fellow as you are, Mattie, for Frank says that when he comes out, if there's nothing else open, he will take him on at the works. He says that the best place for him to start afresh and be able to hold his head up is right here in his home town, and that he wants Mr. Rand to experience the meaning of true Christian fellowship."

"Oh, Frank makes me tired with his quixotic ways," said his sister-in-law, testily. "All I hope is that he won't get stung, as the saying is, nor you either, by this boy of Rand's that you've taken from the county home. It's foolish for Frank to say that he needed him to help with the furnace and around the grounds—with Mahlon, big boy that he is—and even if you took him for that purpose, that isn't any reason why he should eat with the family, and sit here at this very writing-desk doing his lessons, as he was when I came in. I don't think you've got the proper pride for your own children, Hannah, indeed I don't—putting them on a level with the child of a"—again she sniffed, with an air of righteous indignation.

Her own tall son looked up from the aforesaid desk, gathering the papers upon which he had been working into the green cloth bag which indicated the busy young lawyer.

"Come on, mom, if you've done chinning with Aunt Hannah. What is it this time—suffrage, or has the Women's Club voted in an undesirable? I heard you say something a while ago about inheriting; I will bet I inherited my argumentative proclivities from the mater all right! Good-by, Aunt Hannah, and you two limbs. See you before a great while. Be careful, mother, of the step."

Mrs. Cope watched the two figures from the window a moment; then, as she turned to go out into the diningroom, her eyes met those of her pretty young daughter.

"Mother," said Althea, impulsively, "other people think the same way as Aunt Mattie does, for Christine Harvey said that her mother said she wondered why you took Lewis in to live with us."

"Mrs. Harvey!" a sparkle of indignation darkened the mother's eyes. "Well, I shouldn't think Mrs. Harvey or any other mother would question why we brought Lewis from the almshouse into a Christian home until his father is able to have him under his protection again."

It was after supper that evening, dishes had been done and put away, and all the family were gathered in the cozy sitting-room, the three young people at their lessons, while father read and mother sewed.

Mahlon at the desk began skirmishing around, looking in the different compartments, under the blotter, even on the floor, behind the furniture. Suddenly his face darkened and he turned to the other lad, pale and over-sensitive then from the enforced ostracism he had suffered in consequence of his father's act.

"Say, Lewis, what did you do with my theme?"

"Your theme! Why, Mahlon, I didn't have it. I didn't know it was done."

"Yes, you did, too," angrily, "'cause you asked me if I was going to help with the wood, and I said no, I was going in to work on the theme. You needn't deny it—you"—

"I'm not denying it," Lewis said, slowly, "because I remember that, but, all the same, I didn't know it was done, honest. Of course, I heard you say you were going to do it."

"Well—get it!" commanded Mahlon, peremptorily.

"Why, I haven't got it, I tell you!" He flushed a vivid red. "I don't know anything about it!"

"You were the only one at the desk, and it couldn't have walked off! Yes, I know, mother, but I've got a little sense, haven't I? It took me over an hour to prepare it, and he sat down here as soon as I was through. Certainly it hasn't got wings! Why doesn't Lewis own up what he's done with it?"

"Mahlon!" said his father, sharply. "Behave yourself this instant, sir, or else go to bed!"

Across the table Mahlon looked significantly at Althea. He didn't say any more, for he dared not disobey his father, but he wrote something on one of his tablets, and after making sure that he was out of sight of either father or mother, held it up where his sister could read the words:

"I guess Aunt Mattie was right after all!"

Althea's eyes acquiesced, and then she reddened, for she saw that Lewis, too, had read the words, and must have guessed that they were about him.

Somehow, the next day Althea's chum found out that Lewis was in disfavor with the boy and girl whose parents had taken him under their protection, and "ill news flies apace," as the old saying is. While Lewis had not been at all what you'd call popular, now, by common consent, he seemed to have dropped out of everything. It was all so sudden and inexplicable—for no reason at all, that he could see, he was shunned and almost ignored in a polite way, which hurts the worst. No more did he walk to and from school with the Copes, for they either slipped off before he was ready or lingered pointedly until he had gone.

It had been like a bit of heaven's blue opened to the lad, after more than a year shut within walls where most of the inmates were poor old men, when Mr. Cope had told him—had told every one—that he needed a boy. He had said good-naturedly that Mahlon was lazy, and wouldn't take up the ashes from the heater; but after a few days in the home so rich in its quiet and refinement, its books and simple food, he understood that it was not for the help he was to them, but for the love and kindness they could give him, that he had been taken. Neither the father nor mother had any idea of the unpleasantness existing between the lad and their own son and daughter, though it seemed to Mrs. Cope that Lewis was unusually quiet, and sat poring over his books more than was good for him.

"What is the matter, Lewis?" she asked, kindly, one evening, looking up from a pile of stockings in the mending basket, "I mean that you're so quiet. You're feeling well, aren't you? Are you getting along in your lessons all right? Sometimes, you know, it isn't well to study too hard."

"What do you think, mother?" Althea turned around from the piano where she had been going over some studies of Bach —whether she had heard her mother's question or not they didn't know. "Lewis got a hundred plus for his theme, and Mahlon didn't even get fifty! Mr. Peters said it was disgraceful, and it showed lack of completeness in its thought, and poor preparation. He scored Mahlon before the whole room! I cried, mother, I could not help it!"

In amazement Mrs. Cope looked at her daughter, and from there to the group—at her son's white, defiant face and the crimson cheeks of the boy to whom she was trying to be a mother.

His eyes swimming, he closed his book and flung it aside, and came unsteadily across the room to stand before her.

"I'm going back, Mrs. Cope," he stammered. "I can't stand any more of it. I didn't take his theme—honestly, I never laid my eyes on it; but they won't believe me, and it's only hurting you for me to stay here. I'll go back and I'll quit school and see if I can get work somewhere."

"Why, what is the meaning of all this? Sit down in your chair, Lewis, and let me understand this affair at once."

"Wait a few moments, Frank," his wife put in quickly, "I hear some one at the door. I think it's Mattie with Elmer. Don't say anything until after she goes."

This time Aunt Mattie had a petition which she laid before her brother-in-law's wife to sign, in which all the residents of that immediate vicinity stated a grievance against the unsatisfactory way in which the garbage was collected. Frank Cope himself, momentarily forgetting his displeasure, watched her with a twinkle in his eye. "Mattie lives to stir up things," was his unspoken comment, and it always amused him to see how philosophically Elmer took these harangues of his mother's.

"Say, Uncle Frank, I've brought a brief over that I want to show you. It's the most complicated affair. You had a case at the works—oh, long ago, when I was quite a chap—similar to it." He reached into the capacious green bag and drew out a handful of papers.

"Look here, one of you children, here's some composition stuff that I took—unintentionally, understand—off of your desk the day I was over. I meant to have brought it back before, but there are no bones broken, I hope. A little extra head work won't put you in your grave so young." He tossed a piece of paper on the table, and Althea flew across the room and snatched it up.

"It's your theme!" she said, in a horrified tone, and Mahlon gulped and Lewis' eyes gleamed.

As they confessed to each other afterwards, their hearts went way down in their boots, for they realized that this was one of the occasions in their lives when they merited well-deserved punishment. With womanly wit, Althea resorted to finesse; neither of them dared encounter their father's or mother's gaze. Between the two boys she led them from the room along the hall, in the direction of the kitchen in the rear.

What took place there I couldn't tell you, for there are times when confidences are safe between the guilty ones and God; but quite a while later, before Aunt Mattie and Elmer had gone, Lewis and Mahlon again made their appearance, carrying a basket of apples between them, while Althea had the yellow bowl full of popcorn and a pan of walnut taffy.

"So that's what you were up to, was it? Making candy. I thought I smelled it cooking!" Aunt Mattie settled back for another half-hour's stay. She looked critically around. "I hope some folks know which side of their bread's buttered."

The enigmatical words fell short of their meaning, for Lewis was happily deaf to hints—he was past all that. Frankly, he had no idea the words were meant for him, if he heard them at all.

After the company had gone, there was a moment of breathless suspense, then Mahlon slipped his arm through the other boy's and faced his father.

"I deserve anything, dad, I know it, for I've been no end of a brute and caddish and nasty. But with Lewis it's all right. He's our brother now; before he wasn't, and we really didn't know what mother meant when she said so often, 'Alas for the rarity of Christian charity!'"

"Are you satisfied, Lewis?" asked Mr. Cope, quietly. With his keen discernment he saw that the matter had been taken before the Heavenly Father and forgiveness obtained. "Are you satisfied that we let the affair drop now?" But one glance at the boy's shining face was enough.—Helen I. Castella in Zion's Herald.

—The mediators betwween the United States and Mexico are now earnestly engaged with the matter and they may be expected to reach a conclusion before long.

"At Jesus' feet I calmly wait,
Until effectual faith is given:
Then I shall pray, receive, be loosed,
And soar on eagle's wings to heaven."

CHILDREN'S HOME

Report of Superintendent.

Fair Grove S. S., Haw River Ct. ..	$2.60
Shoals Sunday School	2.18
Spring Valley S. S., ,Henderson ..	3.49
Henderson Sunday School	5.89
Love Joy, Why Not Ct., ...	.78
Macedonia S. S. Why Not Ct.	3.32
Asheville Sunday School	2.00
Pleasant Union Philathea Class	1.75
Cedar Cliff Ch., Mt. Hermon Ct.	1.66
Mt. Carmel S. S., Granville Ct.	2.75
Concord Sunday School	5.65
W. H. M. S., Julian	10.00
Mrs. Emma Siler for W. H. M. S. ..	1.20
Asheboro Sunday School	4.69
Asheboro W. H. M. S. on support of child	47.76
Mrs. Lottie F. Brown, Concord	5.00
Mrs. Emma Siler, Siler City	1.00
Mrs. R. R. Ross, Asheboro Sun. eggs	1.10
Elk Fork S. S., Gay, W. Va., ...	1.65
Eliz. Norman Phila. Cl., Greensboro	7.17
Friend	.25
Total	$111.64

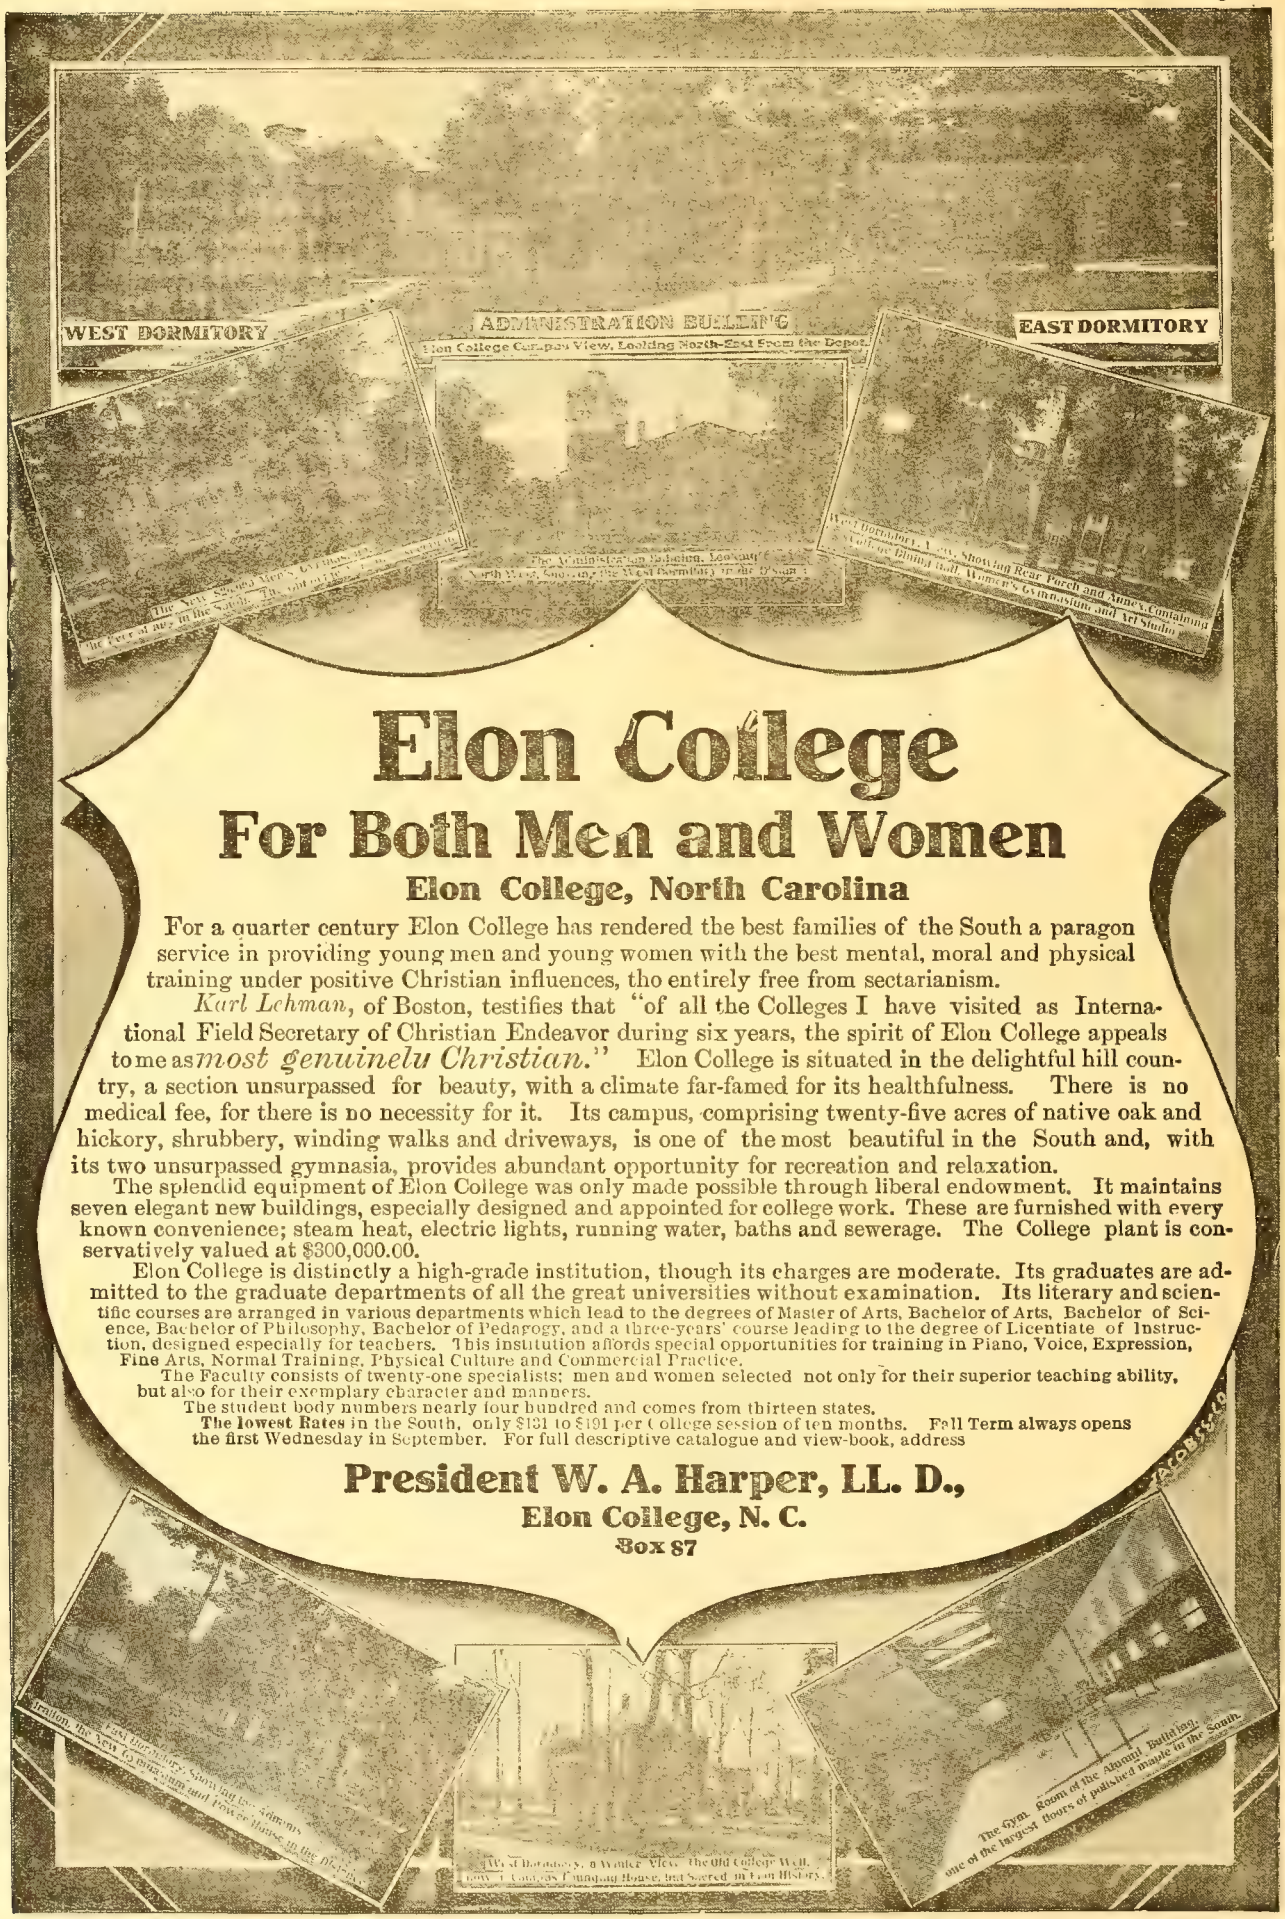
Thomasville: J. W. Boyles, 100 pounds ice; Mrs. Finch, vases; Phil.Cl., table cloth and pillow cases.

Two Greensboro ladies who are busy with their own household cares (names withheld by request) solicited funds from some ladies at Bethel Ch., Flat Rock Ct., and Pine Grove Ch., Oak Ridge Ct., and bought material and made 35 useful garments for the children. They consulted Mrs. Garrett so they might make just the things that were most needed.

Mrs. B. L. Johnson, Friendship church, Mt. Hermon Ct., three embroidered center pieces and pair embroidered pillow cases. Mrs. Johnson is the mother of Rev. T. M. Johnson and because of her age these gifts are appreciated the more. Only those who are acquainted with her know the pleasure it afforded her in making these presents.

The N. C. Branch W. H. M. S. held its annual meeting here the 15th and 16th. On Sun. the W. B. H. M. Societ, of the M. P. Church in annual session at High Point visited the Home and held a delightful praise service. H. A. Garrett.

—Dr. John R. Mott, who declined President Wlison's offer of the ambassadorship to China that he might continue his work in the interest of missions, says that Yuan Shi Kai, president of China, wished him to remain in China. He said 'You must change your plan. I want you to stay in China and visit the secondary cities. Confucius teaches us the truth, but your message tells us of the power to obey the truth.'"



Elon College

For Both Men and Women

Elon College, North Carolina

For a quarter century Elon College has rendered the best families of the South a paragon service in providing young men and young women with the best mental, moral and physical training under positive Christian influences, tho entirely free from sectarianism.

Karl Lehman, of Boston, testifies that "of all the Colleges I have visited as International Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor during six years, the spirit of Elon College appeals to me as most genuinelu Christian." Elon College is situated in the delightful hill country, a section unsurpassed for beauty, with a climate far-famed for its healthfulness. There is no medical fee, for there is no necessity for it. Its campus, comprising twenty-five acres of native oak and hickory, shrubbery, winding walks and driveways, is one of the most beautiful in the South and, with its two unsurpassed gymnasia, provides abundant opportunity for recreation and relaxation.

The splendid equipment of Elon College was only made possible through liberal endowment. It maintains seven elegant new buildings, especially designed and appointed for college work. These are furnished with every known convenience; steam heat, electric lights, running water, baths and sewerage. The College plant is conservatively valued at $300,000.00.

Elon College is distinctly a high-grade institution, though its charges are moderate. Its graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of all the great universities without examination. Its literary and scientific courses are arranged in various departments which lead to the degrees of Master of Arts, Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Philosophy, Bachelor of Pedagogy, and a three-years' course leading to the degree of Licentiate of Instruction, designed especially for teachers. This institution affords special opportunities for training in Piano, Voice, Expression, Fine Arts, Normal Training, Physical Culture and Commercial Practice.

The Faculty consists of twenty-one specialists; men and women selected not only for their superior teaching ability, but also for their exemplary character and manners.

The student body numbers nearly four hundred and comes from thirteen states.

The lowest Rates in the South, only $131 to $191 per College session of ten months. Fall Term always opens the first Wednesday in September. For full descriptive catalogue and view-book, address

President W. A. Harper, LL. D.,
Elon College, N. C.
Box 87

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

Greensboro, N. C.

N. B.—Following schedule figures published only as information and are not guaranteed.

1.00 A. M.—No. 29 daily, Birmingham Special, through Pullman sleeping and observation cars New York to Birmingham and Richmond to Birmingham. During car service.

12.48 A. M.—No. 32 daily, Southern's Limited, Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville, Augusta and Aikin to New York. Dining car service.

12.55 a. m.—No. 112 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh open at 9.15 p. m.

[illegible] daily, Birmingham special. Pullman sleeping and observation cars from Birmingham and Asheville to New York and Birmingham to Richmond. Dining car service.

2.25 a. m.—No. 31, the Southern's Southeastern Limited, Pullman sleeping cars from New York to Asheville. Day coaches. Dining car service.

3.45 a. m.—No. 45 daily local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7.10 a m.—No. 8, daily local for Richmond, connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7.20 a. m.—No. 37 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited Pullman drawing room, sleeping cars and club and observation cars New York to new Orleans. Pullman sleeping car New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman chair car Greensboro to Montgomery, solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m.—No. 108 daily local Greensboro to Goldsboro.

7.35 a. m.—No. 11, daily local through to Atlanta, sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m.—No. 154 daily except Sunday for Ramseur.

8.15 a. m.—No. 237 daily for Winston-Salem and North Wilkesboro. Pullman sleeping car Raleigh to Winston-Salem.

9.30 a. m.—No. 44 daily for Washington and points North.

9.40 a. m.—No. 144 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro; handles Atlanta Raleigh sleeping car.

12.30 p. m.—No. 21 daily for Asheville, Waynesville and local points; handles coaches and chair car through to Asheville and Waynesville.

12.50 p. m.—No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12 30 p. m.—No 21 daily for Asheville,

12.55 p. m.—No. 7 daily for Charlotte and points south.

1.40 p. m.—No. 36 daily U. S. Fast Mail for Washington, New York and points north; handles Pullman sleeping cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman sleeping car Asheville to Richmond Pullman chair car Greenville, S. C., to Washington. Day coaches. Dining car service.

2.20 p. m.—No. 207 daily for Winston-Salem, and daily execept Sunday for North Wilkesboro.

2.30 p. m.—No. 151 daily except Sunday for Madison.

3:30 p. m.—No. 230 daily except Sunday for Ramseur.

2.30 p. m.—No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4.20 p. m.—No. 22 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles chair car to Goldsboro.

6.10 p m.—No. 35 daily U. S. Fast Mail for

4.55 p. m.—No. 131 daily for Mt. Airy.

Atlanta and points south Pullman sleeping cars New York to New Orleans and Birmingham and sleeping car Richmond to Asheville which car can be occupied until 7 a. m. Pullman chair car Washington to Greenville, S. C. Day coaches. Dining car service.

6.35 p. m.—No. 235 daily for Winston-salem.

7.30 p. m.—No. 43 daily for Atlanta Sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

10.13 p. m.—No. 38 daily New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited Pullman sleeping cars New Orleans, Macon, Asheville and Charlotte to New York and Pullman chair car Montgomery to Greensboro. Solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

10.20 p. m.—No. 233 daily for Winston-Salem.

10.31 p. m.—No. 12 daily local for Richmond; handles Pullman sleeping cars for Richmond and Norfolk.

E. H. Coapman, Vice-President and General Manager, Washington, D. C.; S. H. Hardwick, P T. M., Washington, D. C.; H. F. Cary, G. P. A., Washington, D. C.; R. H. DeButts, D. P. A., Charlotte, N. C.; O. F. York, P. & A, Greensboro, N C.

Drs. Moseley & Miles

PRACTICE LIMITED TO DISEASE OF

STOMACH AND INTESTINES.

Corner S. Elm and W. Market Sts.,

Greensboro, N. C.

Hours: 9 a. m. to 1 p. m., 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

OVER 65 YEARS' EXPERIENCE

PATENTS

TRADE MARKS
DESIGNS
COPYRIGHTS &c.

Anyone sending a sketch and description may quickly ascertain our opinion free whether an invention is probably patentable. Communications strictly confidential. HANDBOOK on Patents sent free. Oldest agency for securing patents. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice, without charge, in the Scientific American.

A handsomely illustrated weekly. Largest circulation of any scientific journal. Terms, $3 a year; four months, $1. Sold by all newsdealers.

MUNN & Co. 361 Broadway, New York
Branch Office, 625 F St., Washington, D. C.

Dr. J. E. Wyche.

DENTIST.

Office in Fisher Building, North Elm St,

Rooms 211-213,

Greensboro, N. C.

Dr. C. W. Banner,

W. Market St., Opposite Court House.

Second Floor.

PRACTICE LIMITED TO THE EYE, EAR. NOSE AND THROAT.

WILLS BOOK AND STATIONERY CO.

Booksellers, Stationers and Office Outfitters.

206 South Elm St. Greensboro, N. C.

EXCURSION TO WASHINGTON, D. C., AND RETURN.

Via Southern Railway, Premier Carrier of the South, Friday, May 29, 1914.

Round trip from Greensboro, $5.00. The rates from Morganton, Winston Salem, Norwood, Salisbury and intermediate points to Lynchburg in proportion.

Special train will leave Greensboro at 10:20 p. m. on the 29th and arrive in Washington at 7 a. m. Returning, Special Train will leave Washington at 11 p. m., May 30th.

Passengers from other stations will use regular trains to Greensboro connection with special train there.

A great opportunity to visit the Nation's Capitol at small cost. See the White House, Congress in session, Congressional Library, National Museum, Smithsonian Institute, Mt. Vernon (home of George Washington) many parks and other points of interest.

Separate coaches will be provided for colored people.

For tickets, information, etc., call on any Ticket Agent, Southern Railway, or write O. F. York, P. & T. A., Greensboro.

R. H. DeButts, D. P. A., Charlotte, N. C.

—Just now when an effort is to be made to get a national divorce law in view of the apparent hopelessness of getting the various states to agree on any one law it is interesting to note the causes of divorce, as given in the report of the court of domestic relations of Chicago. Forty-six per cent. of all the divorces given were due to drunkenness, immorality of the husband came next with 12 per cent., while the immorality of the wife was the cause of only 2 per cent.; ill temper of husband and wife was the cause of 3 per cent.; mothers-in-law were responsible for 6 per cent., and fathers-in-law for only 1 per cen .; immaturity was credited with 4 per cent.; laziness, 3 per cent.; sickness, 1 per cent, and all other causes, 14 per cent.—Baptist Commonwealth.

—The Boston Pilot: "Whenever there is a new Catholic church to be built, Protestants are always pulled for liberal donations. Usually the edifice is to cost no less than $50,000. Catholic editors are printing the statement that the Protestants of Prince Edward Island gave $21,000 to rebuild a cathedral which had been destroyed. Whoever heard of a Catholic donating one cent toward building a Protestant church? Cardinal O'Connell's paper says: "It is none the less true, but the rules of our church forbid us to help build Protestant churches. The intention of the holy father, for which we are so frequently asked to pray, always includes the prayer for the extirpation of heresy," etc. When the Romish church gets as much money of the Protestants as she needs, then she will be ready to begin her crusade of extirpation of heretics!

STRENGTH OF A SPIDER'S WEB.

The strength of the spider and of the materials it employs is something almost incomprehensible, when the size of the insect and the thickness of his thread are taken into account, says the New York Press. Recent experiments have shown that a single thread of a web made b y a spider supported endwise a weight seventy-four times the weight of the spider itself.

When, therefore, a spider spins a web to let himself down from the ceiling, or from the branch of a tree, and we see him descending without perceiving his thread at all, we may be perfectly sure that he is not only in no danger of falling, but that he could carry seventy-three other spiders down with him on his invisible rope. Knowing this fact with reference to a single thread, we need not be surprised that the threads of a web, interwoven and reinforced one by another, have a very considerable strength, and are able to hold bees and wasps, themselves very powerful in proportion to size, and to bend without breaking under a weight of dew or rain.

OUR DUTY.

The great world's heart is aching, aching fiercely in the night,
And God alone can heal it, and God alone
give light;
And the men to bear that message, and to speak the living word,
Are you and I, my brothers, and the millions that have heard.

Can we close our eyes to duty? Can we fold our hands at ease,,
While the gates of night stand open to the pathways of the seas?
Can we shut up our Compassions? Can we leave our prayer unsaid
Till the lands which sin has blasted have been quickened from the dead?

We grovel among trifles and our spirits
fret and toss,
While above us burns the vision of the Christ upon the Cross;
And the blood of Christ is streaming from
His broken hands and side,
And the lips of Christ are saying, "Tell my brothers I have died."

O Voice of God, we hear Thee above the shocks of time,
Thine echoes roll around us, and the message is sublime;
No power of man shall thwaart us, no stronghold shall dismay
When God commaids obedience and love has led the way.

—Frederick George Scott.

MODERNISM.

Dr. D. G. Whittingill, our missionary in Rome, thus defines the movement called Modernism:

The principles of this program are as follow:

1. The scientific attitude in the study of all questions.
2. Obedience is due first to God and not to any organization.
3. Separation of church and state.
4. Abolition of enforced celibacy of the clergy.
5. The adoption of the primitive form of worship.
6. The Scriptures must be given to the people.
7. The reform of the liturgy and its use in the vernacular.
8. The pastoral function one of service.
9. Sympathy with every great moral and social movement, without alliance with any political party.
10. Brotherly relations between all preachers.

Of course this movement has assumed different forms in different countries as a result of varying conditions and problems and finds expression in intellectual, political and spiritual activities. There have been numerous examples of the shameful abuse of some of the leading Modernists, but in spite of this the movement is yet very much alive and is still growing rapidly. Dr. Whittinghill recommended to those who wish the best short works representing Modernism, Paul Sabatier's "Modernism," and Mrs. Humphrey Ward's "Richard Maynell." The Baptists have more in common with those in this movement than any other body, and therefore they are entrusted with a tremendous responsibility.

This is a statement taken from The Christian Index. There is much error mixed with the movement. It is a distinctly get-away-from-the-Pope move. But it is a move with much good and hope in it. Baptists should guide and spiritualize it.—Baptist Standard.

—Adrian College commencement comes June 11th this year.

Wise men change their minds if they grow wiser.—Life.

The best way—the safest way—to get good ice cream is to make your own, and make it in a Triple Motion
White Mountain
Ice Cream Freezer
One turn of the handle stirs the cream three times—can revolves and two dashers work in opposite directions. Makes better ice cream in one-third the usual time. Sold by dealers everywhere. Write for free booklet, "Frozen Dainties."
THE WHITE MOUNTAIN FREEZER COMPANY
Dept. RD, Nashua N. H.

ODELL HARDWARE COMPANY, GREENSBORO, N. C.

FOUR PER CENT. FOUR PER CENT.

Absolute Security for Your Savings

Is the first and most important thing to consider when selecting a bank.

This bank with its capital of $200,000, surplus $70,000 and stockholders' liability of $200,000, making in all $470,000—is an absolute guarantee for the safety of your funds.

Greensboro Loan and Trust Company

J. W. Fry, Pres. W. E. Allen, Treas. W. M. Combs, Mgr. Sav. Dept.

—President Harper announces that Dr. Tagg, editor of the Methodist Protestant, will preach the baccalaureate sermon at Elon College on May 31st. Bro. Harper is somewhat mistaken in the age of Dr. Tagg: it would be about as near correct to say that President Harper has just passed his tenth birthday as it is to say that Dr. Tagg is "almost ninety."

—"A Mother's Plea" published this week in which a mother tells of the sudden death of her son is a piece that touches the heart and brings tears to the eyes. The spirit of Christian resignation which the article breathes out before it closes manifests the marvelous power of divine grace to comfort and heal the wounded heart.

—Grace church people in this city enjoyed an address last Sunday night by Rev. Mr. Stringfield, of the N. C. Anti-Saloon League. We learned incidentally that Bro. J. E. Swain, of Asheville, is an honored son-in-law of Rev. Mr. Stringfield.

—Prof. Amick, of Elon College, recently lectured on the Rise and Development of the Early Universities. He spoke of education among the Egyptians, Greeks and Romans, and then of the subsidence of education during the middle ages, and then of the renaissance at the close of the dark ages.

GENERAL COMMISSION ON ARCHIVES & HISTORY
THE UNITED METHODIST CHURCH

Methodist Protestant Herald.

ONE IS YOUR MASTER — EVEN CHRIST — AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XX. GREENSBORO, N. C., THURSDAY, MAY 28, ,1914. NUMBER 27.

METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD.
Published weekly in the interest of the Methodist Protestant Church as an organ of the North Carolina Annual Conference.
J. F. McCULLOCH, Editor and Publisher.
PRICE.—One dollar a year, payable in advance.
RULE IN DEALING WITH SUBSCRIBERS.—Papers are discontinued on expiration of the term of subscription. Subscribers who request it will be marked on our books as "regular," their papers not to be discontinued, and payment to be made as near the beginning of the year as convenient.
Subscribers can remit directly or hand their money to pastors, who act as our agents in the field.
In directing change of address, give the old address as well as the new. In renewing, give the same initials as before. We cannot often supply back numbers.

Entered as second-class matter at the post-office at Greensboro, N. C.

—The continued drouth is becoming serious, and people are beginning to pray for rain. How dependent we are upon God!

—The Jewish Army and Navy league is a new organization designed to encourage patriotism among the Jews. President Wilson has consented to become honorary president.

—The General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, appointed a committee of eight ministers (including four bishops) and eight laymen to reconvey to the eight patronizing conferences whatever right the church has to the control of Vanderbilt University and to consider the advisability of establishing another university.

—The State Normal College in this city has had 650 students this year in regular courses. Sixty-nine are graduated this week, the largest number ever.

—Rev. Sam Small spoke to a large audience mainly of men in this city last Sunday afternoon. He is working under the auspices of the National Anti-Saloon League in favor of a constitutional amendment authorizing the prohibition of the liquor traffic. His manner is much like that of Sam Jones under whose whose preaching he was converted and with whom he was associated for a time in evangelistic work. He is a master of ridicule, but his argument is good and his speech convincing. We are hoping that this movement for national prohibition, embracing as it does hundreds of earnest and able speakers, will in the course of a few years win out. The League is asking for financial support for a period of five years.

—Our church in Greensboro was highly favored in being permitted to entertain the Executive Board of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, M. P. Church. Their meetings began Wednesday night of last week and closed on Monday of this week. There were present ladies from Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Kansas, Maryland and the District of Columbia. Their earnestness in the work for foreign missions is inspiring to those with whom they meet. It was a pleasure and a privilege to entertain them in our homes. They are doing a great work in China and Japan, but could do very much more with larger means. Every woman of our church should seek to ally herself with this society and take part in the work which Christ commanded all his followers to engage in. Why not form an auxiliary in every one of our churches? It would help the women, it would help the church, and it would help the heathen. How can any woman or any man who looks to Christ for salvation be content to do less than his or her best to advance the borders of Christ's Kingdom?

—The following ladies who attended the meeting of the N. C. Branch here last week remained for part or all of the meetings of the Executive Board: Mrs. Siler, Mrs. F. R. Harris, Mrs. Cheek, Miss Stafford, Miss Tacy Woody, Miss Richardson. Mrs. A. G. Dixon was among the visitors present.

—Rev. T. M. Johnson addressed the Executive Board in one of their afternoon meetings. Bro. J. Norman Wills at another time brought greetings from the Board of Foreign Missions.

—Among the attractive public features of the Board Meeting were a setereopticon lecture by Dr. Wilbur on our mission work and workers; two addresses by Miss Virginia, Grose, a returned missionary, and an exercise by a number of young ladies on Sunday night.

The General Assembly of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church expressed itself against Sunday amusements, mentioning particularly baseball, riding for pleasure, and visiting by young people.

—Rabbi Wise, a distinguished Jewish teacher of New York City, spoke in this city at the Normal College on Tuesday and in the Court House on Tuesday night. In the latter place he spoke on "Civic Religion." By this term he means good morals in politics. To be the best American citizens we must, he says, get away from three moral heresies. The first is that of partisanship, the disposition to hand over our political judgment and conscience to party bosses, to be led by them at their will. The second is race prejudice. Here he seemed to have in mind particularly the prejudice against the Jewish race. He denied that there is any such thing as a Jewish vote except in the sense that Jews were urged (by him) to refuse to vote for men of their own race for office if they are bad men. He objected to hyphenated terms, such as Jewish-American or German-American, as they imply a divided allegiance. All are to be thought of as true Americans, if they are true men. To get away from the third heresy a man must learn to put the interests of his city and his state before his own private interests.,

Mr. Wise is an entertaining speaker, abounding in humor and pleasing wit, and his sentiments in favor of honesty in politics and of genuine patriotism are to be applauded. But there was this great lack in his speech—a lack of recognition of the supreme part played by Jesus Christ in bringing men up to the exalted state of character necessary to make them such citizens as Mr. Wise described. The demand for them does not produce them without the help of the agencies centering in the Person and Spirit of Jesus Christ. He mentioned Jesus, but simply in the same category with Moses and Isaiah and Peter and John.

—N. B. Broughton, distinguished S. S. worker of Raleigh, died this week in a Philadelphia hospital after an operation. He was 66 years old and a prominent Baptist.

—Roosevelt insists that he really did discover a river in South America that was unknown to the geographers. In their explorations, his party got out of food and subsisted on monkey's flesh.

WAR.

By Victor P. Hammer.

That grave, ghostly monster—
The father of woes,
Who leaves but destruction
Wherever he goes;
Who dooms the innocent
And crushes the pure,
Was justly created
Our peace to secure.

The patriarch shepherds
Attending their sheep,
Along the still waters,
Or mountains so steep,
With eyes turned heavenward,
And seeing afar,
Prayed for the Great Master
To spare them from war.

Now, it's the same story,
If we only pause:
What are the real troubles?
And what the real caause?
Think! Cannon and rifle
And carbine at play
May number by thousands
The toll for a day.

But where's the solution?
And when will be peace?
When wisdom shall guide men
And selfishness cease;
When leader shall plan and
Rule justly with pen,
Arms will be abandoned
And peace shall come—then!

Washington, D. C., May 7, 1914.

WALKING WITH WISE MEN.

A man is not only known by the company he keeps, but he himself in due time comes to resemble those with whom he most intimately associates. Unconsciously he absorbs their ideas, imitates their manners, treasures up their words, adopts their ways of thinking and his whole moral and mental nature is moulded and shadowed by the companions with whom he spends his time. The man who chooses as his associates the learned, the intelligent, the courageous and the honorable, will find the atmosphere of intelligence and intellectual and moral improvement surrounding him on every side. The better powers of his nature will develop themselves, while that which is base and inharmonious will sink out of sight.

Let every man choose as his associates those whose course and whose end commends itself to his purest and noblest thoughts. When a young lady gave her heart and hand to a humble but godly minister; to those who complained that he had no pedigree, that "No one knew where he came from," she answered, she knew where he was going, and was content to be in his company. And if we, turning from the companionship of the sinful and the debased, seek out the good and the gracious, those of sound judgment and good understanding, we shall find in our course through life, that while we have honored virtue and purity in others, we have also cultivated it in ourselves; and we shall prove at last the truth of that word of wisdom, "He that walketh with wise men shall be wise, but a companion of fools shall be destroyed."—Selected.

HELPING THE CAUSE.

A writer tells of a sturdy old Methodist, who, with another old brother, was in the habit of shouting in the church on meeting day when things went well. One day the other brother kept silent, while our sturdy brother went off as usual. Meeting in the churchyard after the service he said to his companion in holy joy:

"You didn't shout to-day. What was the matter?"

Said the other, "I didn't feel like it."

"I didn't either," said the shouting brother; "but I thought it would help the cause."

He seemed to have an idea that about so much pious racket would be helpful to "the cause," whether it was the genuine expression of devout joy, or a fusillade of noisy pretence. He was not entirely singular in his views. There are many persons whose religious exercises are largely intended to "help the cause." They sing words which they do not mean, they pray prayers which they do not expect to have answered, they shout and babble with a mock enthusiasm, and they think they are helping "the cause."

It may be they are. But what cause is it that can be helped by pretence, and sham, and hypocrisy? Certainly it cannot be the cause of Christ, for that does not depend upon such pretentious performances. He who desires "truth in the inward parts," wants none of this empty babble to help His cause along. He who hates hypocrisy, and requires that men should serve him in spirit and in truth, in simplicity, in sincerity, and with godly fear, is not in the least dependent for the welfare of His cause upon empty noise, and words which do not express the inward thoughts of the heart.

And yet men are continually trying to "help the cause" by false pretenses, by misleading reports, by misstatements of facts, by concealment of truth, by putting the best side out, until everything seems honeycombed with trickery and deception, and intelligent people almost doubt whether there is in the universe anything like truth or conscience left.

We shall best help the cause of God by being honest in the sight of God, by speaking the things which we mean, and expressing emotions which we feel, by telling the honest truth, or maintaining silence until we have something to say which we are not ashamed to tell. And if we draw near to God, He surely will draw near to us, and we shall have cause for real joy, and praise, and thanksgiving, instead of the empty and hypocritical babble with which men try to "help the cause."—Clipping.

HOME.

Go through the town any evening, and you will be surprised, if you have never given the matter any thought, at the number of boys and young men who make a practice of squandering their evenings, to say nothing about the days spent in the same manner. Squandering time is the sin of the age. As a rule, the idle, indolent boy goes to the bad. He may have all the elements necessary to make a first-class business or professional man; but if he is not instructed or encouraged to form habits of industry, he will be a failure, almost inevitably. There is wisdom in the Jewish proverb, "He who brings his son up without a trade, brings him up to be a thief." Prison statistics show that a large proportion of convicts never learned a trade till they learned one in prison.

There is one way this great evil of squandering time can be remedied, if not altogether obviated. Parents must take the matter in hand—must themselves set the example of industry and frugality, and must see that their children imitate the example, and that they have something to do. Make the home pleasant and attractive. If the boys love the street or the loafing place better than the home, you may rest assured that the home is wanting in some important particular. Provide the boys with interesting reading matter, and useful tools, and encourage them to employ their time in any harmless way that will keep them from idleness and profligacy. When you see a boy or a young man willing to trifle away a day, a month, or a year in doing the work of a disgusting street loafer, you may set it down that it would not take much to persuade that boy or that young man to become a full-fledged scoundrel

It is in the power of most parents to regulate this matter, and if they will do it, we shall see our army of trifling, loafing young men and boys diminish. Make the home what it should be, and you have done much toward assuring the future of our boys.

But if parents suffer their own minds to grovel continually in sties and stables, and see nothing higher in life than land and money, how can they lead their children out to useful lives, fruitful in noble words and deeds?—H. L. Hastings.

QUITTING TOO SOON.

There are two or three things that the minister who reaches middle life should set himself steadfastly to do, and unquestionably the advice applies equally to men in many other callings as well. In the first place he should determine not to lose his grip of himself. If a man keeps fast hold of his courage, his enthusiasm, his buoyancy of spirit, and does not allow his reverses, or hardships, or disappointments, to sour or embitter him, he has made one of the first and most necessary preparations for the coming on of the years that are to try him.

Men sometimes foolishly think that as the hair grows gray and the years crowd on into the fifties, that it is a call to slacken effort. In most cases it is no such thing. There is no reason why any ordinary man should not grow and develop and advance in knowledge and ability and usefulness in the fifties or the sixties —or even the seventies, for that matter —no reason in the world save as he allows carelessness and inertness and slothfulness to settle down upon him.

The great necessity for the middle-aged man, let him be preacher or what not, is that he hold on to his faith and hopefulness. The man who believes in the future really never grows old; the old man is the one who believes only in the past.—Selected.

CANDY AND CIGARS.

Some one tells a story of a father who promised his boys if they would save their pennies and put them in their banks he would double what they had in a month's time. One day as the father was buying a cigar, his son who was with him looked longingly at the candy and then at his papa, and said:

"If we ought to save our pennies and not buy candy, you ought to save your money and not buy cigars."

The father thought the boy had the best of the argument, and that boy's papa does not smoke cigars any more.—Select Miscellany.

POPULAR TALKS ON LAW.

The Right to an Education.

By Walter K. Towers, A. B., J. D., of the Michigan Bar.

The American public school is undoubtedly one of our most important institutions. No branch of government comes more intimately into contact with all of us, and so it is that affairs relating to public education are of importance to almost every person.

Almost everywhere the government provides schools for its young citizens. Education is the function of the state, and so it is the state that provides for public schools. The legislature enacts the laws which provide for those schools and by which they are governed. The school district is a political subdivision of the state, organized under state law.

One theory of the public school is that a state provides schools in order that its citizens may be trained to become useful members of society, capable of being self-supporting, profitable members of the community instead of a burden to the state. It is further recognized that intellectual enlightment is necessary if our democratic form of government is to succeed. The future voter must be educated. And so it is that the state not only provides free schools, but further requires that residents within the school age attend school. Another theory of public instruction is that it is a sort of mutual benefit arrangement by which all join together to share the expense and thus secure greater efficiency at a lower relative cost.

But whatever the theory of the reason for the public school most parents desire that their children attend school and a majority of children probably appreciate the advantages of an education. So there is usually a desire to attend school and the question frequently arises as to the rights of a child to attend school. These questions frequently find their way into a court of law.

Generally speaking a child of school age who is within the rules of eligibility prescribed by law, and is a resident within the school district is entitled to attend the public school in that district without charge. The school laws of the state usually fix upon the school authorities of the district the responsibility of providing reasonable and convenient accommodations and opportunity for instruction. These privileges are open to all who are legally entitled to attend the schools and who wish to do so.

As has been before stated the school system is conducted by the state and so is within the control of state law. So it is that the right to attend school depends upon the laws passed by the legislature. Under the laws in force in most of our school depends primarily upon residence. The resident child may attend the public school without cost; the child who is not a resident may be refused entrance, or may be charged a tuition. The residence of the child is generally that of his parent or guardian. The residence necessary to secure the right to attend school need not be a legal domicile, but any genuine residence of ordinary permanence. If a parent moves into a school district for the school season and only for the purpose of allowing the child to attend school in that district, the right will not be secured, and the child may be barred from school as a non-resident, or tuition may be charged. But, generally speaking, if the parents move into the district for other purposes, even though it be but a temporary residence during the school term, the child is regarded as a resident with the right to attend the public schools.

It is possible for a child to secure a residence apart from his parents and if this occurs the child has school rights in the district of his residence. A child who comes into a school district to make a permanent home with a family living there, it being the intention of his parents that he make a permanent home there secures school rights. One does not secure a residence by coming into the district to live with others temporarily, or simply for the purpose of attending school there. The school board may accept non-resident pupils on such terms as it may fix,—as the payment of tuition—if this does not interfere with the other pupils who, being residents of that district, have the first right to the school accommodations of the district.

Children of persons kept upon the county poor farm are usually held to be entitled to attend school in the district where the farm is situated. But the law frequently rules against the right of orphans or paupers at public institutions to attend the public school in the district where the institution is situated, especially where funds are provided for the education of young inmates. In some of our states a broader view is taken, however, and school privileges are freely extended to inmates of denominational orphan homes and similar charitable institutions.

The school board, or other officials in charge of the schools, are allowed a wide discretion in the management of the schools and regulation of the pupils, except as restrained by the state law, and unless their acts are clearly unreasonable and prejudiced the courts will not interfere. The redress of a parent whose child has been illegally barred from school is by a legal remedy known as "mandamus." A parent who finds it necessary to take such steps to enforce his legal rights should consult a competent attorney.

A child cannot be barred from the schools altogether because of color, but separate schools may be provided if the accommodations are equal. The age within which pupils may, or must, attend school is usually fixed by state law.

Children have been barred from the public schools on the ground of immoral character even where no acts evidencing this have been committed in school. Proven immorality is recognized by the law as a proper cause for barring a child from the public schools, yet some states require that evidences be presented during school hours before such action may be taken.

The matter of transfers often causes much difficulty, and in this the school board has a wide discretion, its action, unless clearly unreasonable and improper, being final. These matters are frequently regulated by state law.

Health regulations may be legally imposed upon attendants at a public school. The right to require vaccination of all pupils is generally held to be within the legislative power, and children who are not vaccinated as required may be barred from the public schools.

(Copyright, 1913, by Walter K. Towers.)

THE DOCTOR'S LARGER DUTY.

(From an address before the Sixth District Medical Society by Dr. F. R. Harris, of Henderson, President.)

We are all keenly alive to our duty to our patients, but may it not be true that we are so engrossed with the individual that we too often forget that we owe a larger service to the community? When we recall that, in 1911, we had in North Carolina over 2,000 more deaths from tuberculosis, over 1,000 more deaths from pneumonia, over 1,000 more deaths from typhoid, over 1,800 more diarrheas (under two years), and nearly 500 more deaths from whooping cough than we would have had with the average death rate in the United States, I am forced to the conclusion that somebody is at fault. This lamentable state of affairs is due to indifference on the part of the public, and this is due to ignorance of the laws of health.

Now, to whom can the public look for relief but to our profession? We know the conditions; we know the remedy. Then is it not our bounden duty, as citizens, to give the benefit of our knowledge to the public? The State Board of Health, with its efficient and wide-awake secretary, is doing all it can with the petty sum at its disposal. But this is only the entering wedge. It rests with us, the rank and file of the profession, individually and collectively, to do our part in this great work. If each member of this society would do his part in this work during the coming year, with the pen, on the rostrum, on the street, and especially in the homes whenever and wherever the opportunity offers, what a strong right arm might we not be to the State Board of Health, and what a blessing we would be to the public in the prevention of sickness, the prolongation of life, and in promoting, in many ways, happiness and prosperity in our beloved State! This is what I regard as the paramount privilege and duty of the profession.

The Physician and Vital Statistics.

Our last General Assembly passed a strict and comprehensive vital statistics law. It is incumbent upon us, as guardians of the public health, to popularize this law by telling the people of its significance. In my judgment, we shall find a great many obstacles to be overcome before the people can realize that it is for the public good. Let us lose no opportunity to aid the State Board of Health in popularizing this advance step by pointing out to the people the advantages that will accrue from its enforcement, and even by going out of our way to personally see to it that every birth and death is reported to the local registrar of the town or township, whether or not it occurred in our practice.

The Physician and Preventive Medicine.

Let our slogan be, "A competent health officer paid for his entire time for each county in the State." Pardon me if I suggest right here that we see to it that in each instance a competent county health officer is selected, and not be guilty of selecting a man because he needs a job. Rather let us select a man because the job needs that man. With a competent health officer paid for his entire time in each county, each county should arrange a program of popular lectures to be given by the members of the county society throughout the county, particularly in the school houses. in this way every section of every county in the State can be reached, and untold good will result. In my county, members of our local society have done just such work as this. We have used not only the school houses, but also the churches, and we find that the people always attend these lectures. The public is beginning to see that there is something in sanitation.

The highest form of service which the medical profession can perform for mankind is in the prevention of disease. It is in the study of the prevention of disease that medicine has no rivals, and is least likely to be misunderstood. This realm is not invaded by the charlatan, the pseudo-scientific sect, or the patent medicine man. These are all zealous in the treatment of disease, but the science of medicine diffrentiates itself from them in that, while they are concerned for the sick, scientific medicine is searching out the causes of disease and applying preventive measures. Medicine, as an organized profession, is the only great movement having as an aim the reduction of morbidity by preventing the well from becoming sick. Intelligent and scientific effort in the prevention of disease is tangible and can be measured, and is freer from confusion than is treatment. In the treatment of disease the forces of nature are just as kind to the mercenary quack, with his "incomparable elixir," as they are to the conscientious and skilled physician. The patients of both will recover. Therapy is the inexact part of medicine.

We all know what preventive medicine has done with cholera. The same may be done with typhoid fever. The 15,000 persons who died of typhoid fever in the United States during the past year are a needless sacrifice, for medicine has developed the knowledge which, if applied, would make typhoid fever an unknown disease. Medicine has perfected the knowledge of this disease and the means for its prevention, and the people want the disease stopped, but the representatives of the people are busy with mergers and tariffs and appropriations and jobs, while the pale faces of those 15,000 dying of a preventable disease are seen only by the profession of medicine. When some community is awakened by an awful epidemic, it arouses itself and local measures are applied, always successfully, to prevent the disease, but what is done for a village should be done for the state and nation. This will be done,—it should be done now—and then typhoid will pass into history, a conquered disease.

Give Facts about Alcohol.

The time has come when we should take a positive stand on the question of alcohol. We know the harm that alcoholic beverages are inflicting upon the people. The ravages of alcohol are as well known as those of typhoid. We know them so well that we scarcely need to discuss them among ourselves. We know how much weaker is the resistance to disease on the part of the man who has habitually taken alcohol. We know the frightful mortality in pneumonia and Bright's disease among drinking men. We know the frequency and dangers of delirium tremens, occurring, as it often does, in men who have drunk daily but never in amount to produce intoxication. We know the difficulties experienced by the drinking man when he requires a surgical operation. It devolves upon us to instruct the public as to the dangers of alcohol, just as it does to instruct them concerning the dangers of polluted water or bad milk. Alcohol is not a food. It causes one-tenth of the deaths in the United States, and yet the peopl spend over $2,000,000,000 yearly for the poison. It devolves upon us to give the facts to the public. I am not a fanatic on the subject of alcohol. The facts are bad enough without the exaggerated statements so often made by the uninformed temperance advocate. The time is ripe for a great and sane temperance movement, conducted by our profession, telling the public simply the truth about alcohol, disseminating knowledge of the incontrovertible facts. The value of such a movement to this country is beyond the power of the most hopeful to foresee.

Venereal Diseases.

Our profession has signally failed in its duty to the public in that we have not given them the facts in regard to venereal diseases. . . . .Our women should know that a man who has once had gonorrhea is a dangerous man for a woman to marry. The public should be made to know that one-third of the deaths from apoplexy are nothing but syphilitic affections. They should know that locomotor ataxia, Bright's disease, paresis, many other forms of insanity, and those unaccountable moral lapses are frequently venereal indications. The trail of physical suffering which follows in the wake of these diseases is insignificant when compared with the mental anguish, the broken hearts, and the saddened homes that mark the path.

At the bottom of these troubles lies the ignorance which it is incumbent upon us to help remove. Whenever the public realizes that it pays, in dollars and cents, to prevent disease, to say nothing of the relief from suffering and sickness, they will cooperate with us, and not till then.

In conclusion, I wish to repeat what I said here a year ago. We are living today in a time of transition, I might say a time of crisis. While our politicians are figting over the tariff, we, the medical profession, have issues of paramount importance to solve. For what is more important from every point of view than the health and racial integrity of a nation? Let us be in the vanguard with Him who said, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." Let us then realize the importance of the task before us. Let us go forward, harbingers of hope, pluck the prematurely dead from the tomb, strew flowers upon the path of the living, and, in our unselfish service to humanity, emblazon our names high up among the immortals.—Reprinted from The Health Bulletin.

BECKER OR THE BABIES—WHICH?

The New York Police Commissioner, Becker, has again been convicted of murder in the first degree. Everybody knows that Th papers are full of it, and Becker will probably die before the summer is over. But who is this one Becker, that we should be mindful of him? Right here, in North Carolina, there will be blotted out about 2,000 of our little innocent babies this summer, even more surely than Becker, the murderer, will meet his fate.

Becker may have one chance in a hundred to get a pardon or a new trial, but the only chance our babies have is against a relentless army of myriads of flies fresh from the old open-back privies. These disease-bearing flies are reinforced by dirty milk, collected perhaps from dirty cows in dirty stables, and certainly in old dirty buckets not thoroughly scalded and washed out. And so it goes.

Baby's only chance is in being given natural food, at least for the first ten months; in being kept away from flies and fly-infected food at all other times; and in being under the care of an intelligent mother. If any one has to eat fly-infected food, let it be the adults. We can perhaps stand a little of the fly's filth, provided it is not from a typhoid patient or a consumptive, but a baby is almost sure to contract summer complaint from such filth. In three cases out of four, this should really be called fly complaint or filth complaint.—State Board of Health.

BRUEN AND HIS ENEMY.

A gentleman once sent his servant to John Bruen, Esq., of Bruen, requesting him never to set foot upon his ground; to whom he sent this reply: "If it please your master to walk upon my grounds, he shall be very welcome; but if it please him to come to my house, he shall be still more welcome."

By thus heaping coals of fire upon his head, he melted him down into love and tenderness, and made him his cordial friend.—Arvine's Cyclopedia.

WOMAN'S HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Report of Board Meeting.

The twenty-first annual meeting of the Woman's Board of Home Missions was held in the North Main St. M. P. Church, High Point, N. C., May 16-19, 1914.

The work of the past year was generally discussed and many plans for the Children's Home and the Pine Ridge School were arranged for the coming year.

On Saturday, the ladies were entertained at dinner at the Children's Home. I wish more of our members could have been with us to enjoy this treat and see that beautiful home and the twenty-five dear children who are being trained for the Master's service. Truly it is a noble monument to the church in North Carolina and should be dear to the hearts of all Methodist Protestants in our several Conferences. Contributions and donations in money, or clothing, will be gratefully received by the worthy superintendent, Bro. H. A. Garrett, The Children's Home, High Point, N. C.

Our own missionary, Mrs. M. O. Everett, brought us the full outline of the work accomplished in our school at Pine Ridge, Ky, and told of the many needs in the mountains, and we ask your prayers and help for this work which our Heavenly Father has given us to do.

One of our great needs is a dormitory for which we hope to raise funds sufficient to build this year. Will not some of our kind friends help to equip the school with some tools, etc., for the manual training department? O that we might interest our church in general in this work—it is the Master's vineyard, truly the harvest is great, but the laborers few.

Those of us who were privileged to attend this meeting shall long remember the sweet and bountiful hospitality of our southern sisters. Dr. C. H. Beck brought welcome and greetings from the General Board and gave many helpful thoughts and suggestions for the work.

We do ask the prayers of our people and God's blessings on both of these needy and useful works and remembering the precious words of our Savior, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these," try and do as he commands.

Send contributions for the school to Mrs. Fred Neer, Mechanicsburg, Ohio.

Elsie M. Jones, Sec.

—One of the largest and most valuable timber trees of the country is the tulip tree, known to lumbermen as yellow poplar. It is related to the magnolias, but is the only tree of its kind in the world.

PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENTS.

Concord	May 20
Gaston Ct.	May 21
Yarboro and Anderson Ct.	May 22, 24
Asheville	May 25, 26
Buncombe Ct.	May 27, 30
Pensacola	May 31
Lenoir Ct.	June 1, 2
Lincoln Ct.	June 3, 4
Cleveland Ct.	June 6, 7
Falston Ct.	June 9
Shelby Ct.	June 10, 11
Charlotte	June 12, at night

Pastors please state where I will be met in going from one field to another, and make such arrangements between yourselves. C. A. Cecil.

Lee's Chapel, Halifax Ct.

Our pastor, Bro. Pritchard, was with us again last Sunday and preached a very interesting and helpful sermon; am sure all present were benefited. At the close communion service was held. Quite a large number took part. We have learned to love Bro. Pritchard very much; we feel we are lucky in getting him for our pastor.

We also organized a teachers' training class to meet on the 3rd Sunday morning at ten o'clock; preaching at eleven.

We were glad to have our pastor and wife with us in Sunday school. We are planning for children's day third Sunday in June at 11 a. m.; preaching in the afternoon.

The ladies of this church will give an ice-cream supper in Mr. F. N. Porter's grove Saturday night, May 30th for the benefit of this church; everybody is invited.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely though there are still some that do not attend..

Attendance first Sunday in May, 69; second Sunday, 73; third Sunday, 61. Some of our people seem to be interested in Sunday school; hope those that do not attend will come. Reporter.

Union Grove, Orange Ct.

We are still doing good work. Our pastor, Rev. R. C. Stubbins, filled his regular appointment last Sunday morning, preaching a helpful sermon. All seemed to pay close attention to the words spoken. We think Bro. Stubbins gets better every time he preaches. After service the Lord's Supper was celebrated. We are always glad and look forward for our preaching day to come.

We have made some improvements at this church. We have placed an order for new seats which will add very much to our church. Our Sunday school is still doing well. We are preparing for children's day service and expect to have it the fifth Sunday in May. We are hoping that it will be a great success and that our S. S. will be better this year than ever before. Rep.

May 19, 1914.

Palestine, Flat Rock Ct.

Our Sunday school is getting along nicely. We have a good attendance every Sunday. We have preaching once a month, and of course there is no use to say the sermons are good, for we expect no other kind from Bro. Kennett. Last Sunday we had a good sermon and the Lord's sermon was administered which a goodly number partook of. Pray for us that we may have a gracious revival.

Mrs. R. J. Sharon.

Cleveland Ct.

Dear Bro. Cecil:

We are neither dead nor fast asleep in this corneer of the world. A number of the brethren at each church are getting almost wide awake. The S. schools are increasing in numbers of scholars and interest. Congregations are increasing and no one could reasonably wish for better attention to the preaching of the Word. Don't understand me to say that the whole of Cleveland Ct. has waked up. Only a fractional part is now awake. If only half were fully awakened you would soon hear of great things being done in the name of the Lord in this neck of the woods. But and if the whole circuit was wide awake what would be the result? Who could imagine? The shackels of sin would fall from the sinner and his brother, the backslider. The cold hearts warmed up, the purse strings untied, the Lord would be God instead of the dollar, the windows of heaven opened and all needed blessing poured out while the soul would be saved and happy. Satan's kingdom would come to naught. It would take more of Satan's time to hold the hypocrite that he would be worth so he would leave in disgust and the hypocrite would be saved also. For this glorious result I am praying and preaching with all my soul.

Our 2nd quarterly conference was held at Pleasant Hill Sat. before the 3d Sunday in April. A bountiful and sumptuous dinner was served at the church after which we reassembled for the transaction of business. Bros. W. J. Morrison of Mt. Moriah and W. M. Warlick of Pleasant Hill were chosen nominees for delegate. The most interesting part of the work of that body was appointing a committee at each church to work up a circuit Sunday school convention to be held later in the season. Mt. Moriah and Pleasant Hill have observed decoration day. They have cleared off their sleeping place for the departed nicely. The one at Pleasant Hill is dotted over with rose bushes which were in full bloom. It was the prettiest grave yard I ever saw.

Your appointments for Cleveland Circuit are as follows: Mt. Moriah, Saturday, June 6th at 11 a. m. Pleasant Hill, 3 p. m. Oak Grove, Sunday, 7th, at 11 a. m. Kistler's, 3 p. m. Bro. John T. Warlick has kindly consented to take us to Mt. Moriah and back to Pleasant Hill in his machine. I have no flying machine at present. Bob has pulled all his presidents for the past 18 years, beginning with the late Rev. W. A. Bunch. He can't get over ground as fast as he did in his younger days, but is good yet.

W. C. Lassiter.

Caldwell Circuit.

Bro. Cecil: You will be met at Connelly Springs Monday, June 1st, and preach at Shady Grove at 7:30 p. m. At Burke Chapel, Tuesday, 11 a. m.

W. P. Martin.

Gibsonville.

First Sunday Bro. Hutton filled his appointment at 11 o'clock. On the third Sunday we had mothers' day, and he preached a splendid sermon on Purity.

Our committee meets next Sunday to decide on the style for our remodeled church. Bro. Owen has ordered a lot of plans. We are somewhat like the colored people that were going to whitewash their church. One old brother asked what color they were going to whitewash it.

Our ladies' aid society had an ice cream supper Sat. night at the Masonic Hall, making about $25. They already have on interest upward of $100, may be near $200 now. Officers are Mrs. W. J. Jennings, Pres.; Mrs. Will Summers, Vice Pres.; Mrs. D. M. Davidson, Sec.; Miss Elizabeth Brown, Asst. Sec.; Miss Maggie Lewey, Treas.

Our Sunday school is still on the increase in attendance and collection; average attendance for the four Sundays in May was 114; average collection, $3.82¼. We have our S. S. reports in the Times, a new paper for our city. Gibsonville is still growing; several dwellings are being built. Mr. D. W. Kernodle, Jas. Apple, J. W. Burke, Mrs. Troxler are each building one. Mr. McCauley is building two.

An automobile turned over near Elon College Sunday evening run by a Mr. Malette of Burlington. Some of the men were severely hurt. When a man runs a machine of any kind his head should be kept level. Many a man has lost his life or wrecked the lives of others by taking too much for his system. Rep.

Peedee, Rockingham Ct.

Special meeting began 1st Sunday; interest good, even at the first service. The meeting went on for ten days in which we had about fifteen converts and also about fifteen reeclaimed. The church has been greatly revived. Six joined the church and others are expected to join. Eighteen have joined the church this year. In time of the meeeting Bro. Allred, the pastor, was taken very ill for three or four days, but the meeting did not stop, as Bro. J. W. Jenkins, a membeer here, has started out this year in the Lord's work; he did some good preaching, so Bro. Jenkins and I kept the meeting going till Bro. Allred could take hold again.

Our S. S. is good. Pray for our success.

W. T. Collins, Rep.

Flat Rock, Vance Ct.

Mr. Burgess filled his appointment here the third Sunday with a fine sermon. We were very glad to have Mrs. Burgess and children with us on that day.

Our Sunday school is growing: we now have forty-one members. One interesting feature of our Sunday school is, the Supt. appoints some member each Sun. to read a paper on any chosen subject they think helpful. Miss Clair Reavis read one yesterday (May 24) on The Church and the World. It was very much enjoyed. Miss Rosa Satterwhite was appointed to read one next Sunday.

M. V. W.

Antioch, Mecklenburg Ct.

Our pastor filled his regular appointment last Sunday with a good sermon, as he usually does. Every one of his sermons seems to be better and are drawing larger crowds. Our Sunday school is progressing nicely. We are looking forward to the second Sunday in June as our "big day," and want everybody to come and bring well-filled baskets, especially the members of this church. The history of the church will be read, as far as it can be gotten up.

We are planning to have a Children's Day in July. May Garmon, Reporter.

May 25.

Graham and Haw River.

Our revival began last Sunday a week ago; Bro. Gerringer came on Monday, and he has preached every night since, and also three afternoons and at the 11 o'clock hour Sunday. After we have heard Bro. Gerringer for the past ten days we have come to the conclusion that he is one of the best preachers in the N. C. C. We have had very large congregations all the time; on several nights we had more folks than could get into the building. The interest has been shown from the start. There have been 29 professions thus far, and the meeting is yet in progress. Bro. Gerringer started Monday by requesting the people to talk up the meeting, and pray for the revival to come down. We are thankful that it has come. He is gathering together all the "Russell books" he can find in our town and will have a bonfire of them the last night of the meeting; has about 23 volumes in his possession at this writing and the promise of many more. Prof. T. O. Pender is with us conducting the song services and singing the "gospel in solo." He is doing a great work. Miss Wilson, of Burlington, attended the services Sunday, and played the violin. When a consecrated woman plays a piece of music on the violin in the church, it sometimes has more and better effect upon the heart than a sermon. Pray for us that the revival may continue here in our church and town, and many more souls be saved.

Mrs. W. J. Crutchfield of Haw River is seriously ill. She is suffering from a stroke of paralysis which came upon her fifteen days ago. Reporter.

CHILDREN'S HOME

Report of Superintendent.

Albemarle S. S., Stanley Ct.	$6.24
Burlington S. S.	7.77
Friendship S. S., Haw River Ct.	1.81
Oak Ridge S. S., Oak Ridge Ct.	.43
Pine Grove S. S., Oak Ridge Ct.	.65
Sandy Ridge S. S., Oak Ridge Ct	.32
Ai S. S., Oak Ridge Ct.	.29
Kernersville S. S., Oak Ridge Ct.	.82
Level Cross, Randolph Ct.	.75
A Friend	3.00
Treas. N. C. Branch W. H. M.	8.55
Enfield Sunday School	15.00
Miss O. H. Whitaker, Enfield,	.50
Miss Temp Bachelor, Enfield	.50
Flat Rock Ch., Flat Rock Ct.	6.00
Mt. Hermon S. S., Mt. Hermon Ct,	1.63
C. Tarkington, Raleigh, N. C.,	5.00
Lees Chapel S. S., Halifax Ct.	.75
J. G. Lee, Lee's Chapel,	1.00
Love's Grove S. S., Charlotte Ct.	1.30
Miss Tacy J. Woody, Snow Camp,	2.00
Mrs. Susan E. Anderson, Pittsburgh,	10.00
Miss Lena Hammer, Wagram	5.00
Mitchell's Grove S. S., Guilford Ct.	1.25
Total	$80.56

Liberty, Miss Virla Coble, 3 dresses.

Siler City, Mrs Emma B. Siler, one dress, two shirt waists.

Wilmington, C. E. McCulloch, one crate strawberries. High Point, J. G. Anthony, 25 pounds of sugar.

Please read Miss Anderson's article. She tells you about the inspiration our visitors gave us last week. They were from Washington, D. C., Md., Penn., N. J., Ohio, Ind., Ill., Mich., Kansas and West Virginia.

Miss Cora Redding,, niece of the late Miss Martha Redding, will spend the summer in the Home.

H. A. Garrett.

From the Children's Home.

Since my last letter we have had the pleasure of entertaining the Woman's Home Missionary Society, founder of the Children's Home.

The Executive Board met in High Point just as the Home Missionary Society was closing its work. We were given the honor of having the delegates in the Home to share a meal with us. It is a great inspiration to us to have the able and open-hearted Christian workers with us.

Saturday, May 23, the good ladies of High Point enteertained the Foreign Missionary Board whose meetings were being held in Greensboro last week. The ladies arrived at the Home at 4 p. m.. After being served with the delicious refreshments that had been so carefully prepared by High Point ladies, the children of the Home gave a program, after which the Foreign Board were asked to give their impressions of the Home. Many of them did very favorably.

Every one seemed to enjoy the meeting very much. We look forward to the day when every M. P. in the United States will become interested in the Home and call it "ours," not just the North Carolina Home. Pansy Anderson.

—Dr. Charles T. Nesbitt, county health officer for New Hanover, reports that a man in his county contracted smallpox. The wife and nursing child of this man occupied the same room and even slept in the same bed with the patient. The wife refused to be vaccinated, but permitted her baby to be vaccinated. She contracted smallpox, but her nursing baby did not contract the disease, although the mother nursed it while she had the disease. Does not this show the value of vaccination?

—It is predicted that western yellow pine will furnish an excellent source of turpentine as the southern pine becomes exhausted.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

Concord.

I spent May 20th on this field. Bro. Suits met me at the station and we drove to Sister S. E. Blackwelder's for dinner. At 3 p. m. I preached at Fairview. Not a large attendance. Several subscribed for the church papers. The Supt. of S. S. promised to take one collection a month for the support of the children in the Home. The church in good repair. A small debt on the church not provided for; the pastor is taking the matter up and hopes to pay the amount off by fall. We drove back to the parsonage where I spent the night. At 8 o'clock I preached to a fair congregation of very good hearers. Bro. Garrett was present in the inteerest of the Home.

This church has been greatly improved on the inside since I visited here last. The interest on this charge is on the increase from what I could learn from pastor and people. Bro. Suits is very acceptable as pastor and preacher, and he and his family seem to be well pleased with their people and surroundings.

I spent a few minutes with Bro. D. A. Braswell pleasantly. Then I took the train for Greer, S. C.

Claim overpaid.

Anderson Circuit, S. C.

Bro. Compton met me at the station at Greer and took me to his home six miles in the country near Liberty Hill church where I spent the night. I took dinner with Bro. P. W. Smith and enjoyed a short stay with him and his family. At 6:30 p. m. on Friday we met at Liberty Hill where quite a number of the members had supper on the ground, and we enjoyed the occasion very much. At 8 o'clock we had a good congregation and a very helpful service. Bro. Lamar had just closed a good meeting. This church has been greatly improved in a material way since I visited here last year. I spent Friday night with B. A. McClemons. Bro. Dean Poole drove me to Greer where I took the car for Greenville. There Bros. Lamar and Wyatt and I took dinner with Bro. J. L. Poole; a good dinner, thanks to Mrs. Poole. Bro. Poole showed us the M. P. property in Greenville, two nice dwellings on the lot both rented, one at $20, the other at $17 per month; valued at $6,000, and at the close of this conference year there will be no debt on the property; so said Bro. Poole, the manager of the property.

Anderson is in the best condition it has been in since it has belonged to the N. C. Conference and they want a pastor all the time next year, and if the work is to develop they must have a man on this field. Claim paid except at Fairview a small amount behind but vouched for.

Yarborough Ct.

Bro. Lamar and his chauffer, a young Mr. W. T. Garrett, and I left Greenville for Harmony church 32 miles and reached Bro. G. B. Taylor's in due time where I spent the night. Here I met Rev. T. A. Martin of the S. C. Conference. At 11 o'clock on Sunday I preached at Harmony; a good congregation and a good service; took dinner with Mrs. M. J. Medlock and we were soon off for Cross Anchor where I spent the night with Bro. L. H. Wilson. I did not preach at Cross Anchor, but heard a Baptist brother preach on the subject of "love" who is a bachelor. I left Bro. Wilson's for Enoree on my way to Asheville.

The parsonage at Cross Anchor has recently been painted and rented out. These people say they must have a pastor to live in their community next year and it is the only way to develop the work. Claim paid.

C. A. Cecil.

May 25, 1914.

Yadkin College Ct.

I held my special meeting at W. Lexington, commencing on the first Sunday night in May. The first sermon was preached by the pastor. On Monday Rev. Edward Suits, of Concord, came and stayed till the close, preaching each night to large and attentive congregations. Bro. Suits is what I call an old-time Gospel preacher uncompromising with sin. The word had effect. The church was greatly benefited and sinners were saved. Thirty-three conversions and reclamations. Three have joined the church; we are expecting others to join. Somehow people who have no home do not join the church in factory towns. They are continually migrating from one town to another; hence the great problem of saving the town.

A gracious session of our Q. C. was held at Bethesda which has been reported through the columns of our M. P. Herald. Bros. J. F. Berrier and C. L. Hedrick were nominated for delegate to Annual Conference. We found Bethesda greatly improved by a new coat of paint and I hear that by this time another has been put on. Of course the faithful membership ever ready to do its part never failed to respond to sister Bessie's plea for funds.

May the Lord bless them and all other faithful laborers.

Thanks to Bro. Suits for his efficient service in meeting. We enjoyed him in our homes.

H. L. Powell.

Mt. Hermon, Mt. Hermon Ct.

Our pastor filled his appointment the third Sunday at 11, preaching a good sermon, telling about our duty to our fellowmen. There was a large congregation out to hear him. It seems that our Sunday school has taken on new life. I believe the greatest factor that brought this about is the organization of the Philathea class, especially on the part of the girls; almost all the girls that are eligible to membership have joined. The girls of the Philathea class are contemplating an ice cream supper at the church in the near future; if they decide to have one, the proceeds will go for the benefit of the church. Children's Day will be observed the third Sunday in June. Some of the children are now memorizing their recitations.

Mr. Calvin Sharpe, of Goldston, spent a part of last week visiting his father, Bro. W. G. Sharpe.

Mrs W. T. Durham, of Cabarrus county, spent last week with her father, E. A. Isley, who continues very feeble.

In the second quarterly conference Bros. Gilbert Holt and Green Nicholson were nominated as candidates for the next Annual Conference.

Hubert L. Isley, Reporter.

May 25, 1914.

Burlington.

The attendance was 260 in our Sunday-school last Sunday, which was a decided increase over the previous Sunday. Next Sunday will be known as "Philathea Rally Day," and the Philathea class will have charge of the exercises during the Sunday school hour. They are preparing an interesting program. We are expecting a large attendance.

Our people were very highly honored and greatly benefited by the visit of Dr. C. E. Wilbur last Sunday night. He gave us his most interesting and instructive lecture on our missionary work in China and Japan, illustrated by stereopticon views. This lecture was received with interest by an immense audience, the church being filled to its utmost capacity. We trust our people have gotten a clearer conception of our missionary work in the foreign fields since Dr. Wilbur's visit to us, and hope his lecture shall cause us to realize fully our responsibility and duty regarding this very important branch of our church work; that we may contribute more liberally to the support of our foreign missioinary board.

Next Tuesday night is the time set for our second quarterly conference. We are expecting to have good reports from stewards and other church officers concerning the work we have done during the past quarter. At this meeting we will elect candidates for delegate to the Annual Conference. We hope to have a large representative body of the church officials present, and every member of the church is requested to be present also.

J. R. Way, Reporter.

May 26, 1914.

Asheville.

And we're still growing. The growth this time, though, is confined to the Sunday school. Attendance reached the hundred mark for the first time during the present pastorate, and there were ten additions to the roll. Morning service was well attended. We held our first night service in the new church with a splendid attendance. One of the things that please us most is the large number of strangers who are attending the services. Most of them are from the immediate neighborhood, but it shows that the community is interested and appreciates the opportunity of having a church near.

Work on the building is advancing slowly. One can see by a daily inspection that the work is nearer completion than it was. That's about all that can be said, however. I had expected that the brick to finish the job would be delivered and the job done before this, but I am informed that the weather man, rather than the brick man, is to blame for the delay,—the weather has been so warm that the kiln could not cool sufficiently for the brick to be got out. I'm not going to tell you anything about that brickwork hereafter until it is done.

Thank you, Bro. Kennett, for that word of encouragement and for the promise to help. You certainly had better send your offering before Conference or the folks up here won't even have you in mind for the next pastor. I think they are going to boycot every preacher who refuses or fails to contribute to the work—a sort of black list, you know. Folks, we need your help, preachers and laymen. Come along. How much it would please the Master for you to give a little aid here. No place in the Conference that needs it as badly, no place where the returns will be as great. We are past the failure stage in Asheville. The success of Greensboro and High Point and the other points in the Conference that have come up out of great tribulation will be ours beyond any shadow of doubt. Won't you help to bring that success nearer? DO IT.

Asheville Church Building Fund

Mrs. Sarah D. Harris, Enfield $2.00
Mrs. A. H. McCormick 5.00
Mr. E. H. Tomlinson 10.00
Mr. E. T. Belote 1.00

Hereafter, in giving the amounts received, I shall report the place from which the money is sent as well as the name of the sender. You will understand that when no place is given the money was received from Asheville. C. W. Bates.

Mitchell's Grove, Guilford Ct.

We are still alive spiritually. Our S. S. is getting along very nicely We have re-elected our same Supt., Mr. J. A. Allred, and elected one of our young men for assistant, Mr. Harrison Jones; they both seem to be very much interested in the work. We older members should I think try to get the young boys and girls to take up the church work while young.

We have temperance meeting the second Sunday in each month at 3 o'clock. We are expecting to have a temperance rally the second Sunday in June. We extend a cordial invitation to all to be with us that day; we hope many of you who are in reach will come, and we especially invite Guilford circuit to come and be with us. Let us have a great rally that day for temperance.

We are expecting to have mothers' day next Sunday; hope to see many of you to help us celebrate mothers' day. We are expecting Mr. Garrett, the Supt. of Childrn's Home, and Matron Miss Pansy Anderson to be with us and also some of the children to take part with us; we hope to have a great day, a day of great honor to our mothers. I have just been to visit Children's Home and will say I am very much pleased to see so much interest taken with our children. I think Mr. Garrett is the right man in the right place; he is a pleasant, energetic man and is firm with the children. That is one thing we should be grateful for; we see so many parents that are not firm and the children lose confidence in parents when not firm. We hope we may all help Mr. and Mrs. Garrett and Miss Anderson much by our prayers and by words of appreciation and our contributions also. I feel everything is going on nicely over there and let's keep it going that way. We feel we have been sorely bereaved by the death of Miss Redding and our Dr Reitzel; not so many that have such good name as Miss Redding. She seemed so patient and kind; "a good name is rather to be chosen than great riches and loving favor rather than silver and gold." We feel so bereaved by the death of Dr. Reitzel. We feel that no one can fill his place. But we know God had a purpose in taking him and also in the way He took him, and can raise up another to do the work. I can say for one, his life has been and will continue to be an inspiration to me; he was so kind and so pleasant. May God bind up all the broken hearts and may we all so live that we shall all meet in the sweet by and by. Martha Parsons.

Union Chapel, Granville Ct.

Our pastor, N. G. Bethea, preached another good sermon Sunday to a large congregation. Our S. S. is still improving.

We have given out some of our recitations for Children's Day which we hope to have the fourth Sunday in June. Our protracted meeting will begin the fourth Sunday in July. I hope the Christian people will begin praying now so when the meeting commences we will be ready for a good revival. Bettie Davis, Rep.

Fairmount, Richland Ct.

Our pastor, Rev. J. H. Bowman, was with us again Sunday and filled his appointment here. He brought his wife with him. I am sorry that I was not here to meet Mrs. Bowman, for all who met her certainly do like her.

Our S. S. was not so large on account of meeting near by. We are getting on nicely in our Sunday school work. We have a good prayer meeting on Thursday nights. I hope all the people around Fairmount will help us and do all they can in this good work.

We are glad that Mr. E. N. Nelson was down again last Sunday. I hope that Sister Bowman will come again soon. We will be glad to have her with us. All pray for us down here at Fairmount.

Josie Jones, Reporter.

Friendship, Yadkin College Ct.

We have a good S. S. Mr. W. M. Byerly, Supt.; J. E. Walser, Asst.; Roy Philips, Sec.; C. M. Perryman, Asst. Much interest is being taken and we believe good seed are sown.

The fourth Sunday in May Mr. Powell filled his appointment with a very able sermon after which the Lord's sermon was administered. We were glad to have Mr. and Mrs. Early Snider and Mrs. Powell worship with us. Our special meeting begins the fourth Sunday in July. Rev. Jesse Pritchard our help. Reporter.

—Greensboro is being canvassed for funds to help rebuild Oak Ridge Institute.

—Automobiles are dangerous weapons in the hands of drinking men.

DIED.

Thomas R. Totten.

On March 27, 1914, the angel we call death claimed the oldest member of Bethany church, Thomas R. Totten, he being more than four score years old.

As a matter of justice—to say nothing of our own feelings in the matter—we must ask a little space in our good paper to record, at least, a few items concerning the life and work of our departed brother.

About 21 or 22 years ago he came to this community where there was no church and no Sunday school and scarcely a man who would lead in prayer. In a little school house he organized and superintended a Sunday school and held prayer-meetings all summer, and in the fall planned for a revival meeting. He invited and obtained preachers to conduct the meetings. And how he worked and prayed for the conversion of those Sunday-school scholars! Many of us were saved and at once he began to work for an organized church here. At Conference he asked that Bro. Lineberry, who was then pastor of Haw River Circuit, be allowed to come over and preach in the little school house. The organization was realized and then of course we needed a church house.

"Uncle Totten" took the lead and no one can record the difficulties he encountered or the hardships he endured, soliciting money and labor, planning and in work with his own hands for that church. He spent the greater part of his time and never let up in his efforts on the building until it was completed. And how happy he was when it was finished and dedicated! He served as Superintendent of the Sunday school many years and resigned only when age and ill health made it impossible for him to attend.

He has been class leader, steward, or trustee almost or quite all the time since the church was organized. Bethany has, so far, had no other such a faithful worker.

How we do miss him! Who will take his place? On whom does his mantle fall? Always ready to admonish, advise and pray with and for us. Loving us almost as a father loves his own children. And even wanted his body buried at Bethany. So on March 29 we laid him away almost in the shadow of the church he loved so well. We feel our loss very keenly, though we will not be selfish, and grieve, for surely he is reaping the reward of his labors in the Lord.

A Friend.

Massey.

Millard Franklin Massey was born in Northampton Co., N. C., Aug. 16, 1884. He was ushered into the Great Beyond on April 16, 1914. He was taken away right in the very prime of manhood after an illness of seven weeks, during which he suffered intensely, and all was done for him at home that friends and loved ones could do, but to no avail; he was taken to Johnson-Willis Hospital, Richmond, Va., for treatment. All that doctors and nurses there could do still proved of no avail; he succumbed to the master hand of death.

Early in life he heard the call of the Holy Spirit to give his heart to Christ and yielded, joining Spring Church Methodist Protestant Church, near Pleasant Hill, and remained a faithful member till death.

Millard was of such a cheerful disposition and such a bright Christian, he bore his affiictions bravely. During all his illness, he was resigned at all times to God's will, and often talked of dying.

He said on the morning of his death, "To-night I shall be with Mama," who had preceded him to the Glory World. None knew him but to love him. Surely our community has been made better by his having lived. He will be greatly missed in Spring Church where he has taken such an active part, especially in the Sunday school work, having served as secretary and treasurer, always performing his duties well. It has been said by a co-worker in the Sunday school that Millard was never asked to perform a duty but that he willingly responded. He was always faithful in attending services Sunday after Sunday with a bright smile and kind word for each one. We loathe to give up Millard, but God is infinitely wise and doeth all things well. "His will, not ours, be done." No longer will he meet with us and mingle his voice in prayers and songs of praise. No longer will he meet at the fireside with father, sister, brother and aunt, for God had a greater work for him. Now instead of mingling with friends on earth he is singing praises to God on high, having gone to live with loved ones who have passed over the river and are now resting under the shade of the trees. Millard has just passed over the river a little ahead of us. We shall soon follow. It is an inspiration to have had such a noble Christian character among us and surely it is a great loss to give him up, but we realize that our loss is his gain.

Millard is survived by his father, Mr. Thomas W. Massey, also a brother and sister, and an aunt who had cared for him as a mother since childhood. All of these have our deepest sympathy and prayers during the time of their sorrow and breavement. We can only point them to the God in whom Millard trusted so faithfully.

The remains were brought from Richmond home, where the funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. T. F. McCulloch, and his body tenderly laid to rest in the family burying ground near Pleasant Hill amid a large concourse of friends and beautiful floral tributes, proving in what high esteem he was held.

"Why do we mourn when another star
Shines from the glittering sky?
Do we weep when the voice of war
And the rage of conflict die?
And why do our tears roll down,
And our hearts be sorely riven,
For another gem in the Savior's crown,
Another soul in heaven?"

Mrs. H. Eugene Vassar,
Cinderella Stanley.

The second quarterly conference of the Spring Church Circuit appointed a committee to write resolutions in reference to

1. Edson Charles Dimick, who died suddenly on the streets of Richmond, Va., on the 11th of April, 1914. He was a licensed preacher, a Sunday school teacher, and in the past had served as Sunday school superintendent, steward, and trustee in the church. He was faithful and punctual in attendance at the various services of the church. He was liberal in his support of benevolent causes. At the time of his death he was individually paying the salary of a foreign missionary teacher in China.

2. Millard Frankin Massey, who died April 16, 1914, in his 29th year in Johnson-Willis hospital, Richmond, Va., where he had been carried for treatment. He was a member of the choir at Spring Church, had served as secretary of the Sunday school and as steward in the church. He was faithful and of a genial disposition and was esteemed by all who knew him.

(The committee adds:)

3. James Augustus Robison, who died May 11, 1914, in his 72nd year. For years he had been a leading member of Spring Church. He had filled the office of class leader, Sunday school superintendent, steward, and trustee, had been elected delegate to the Annual Conference a number of times, at the time of his death was the secretary of the quarterly conference. He was a noble Christian character. He had been afflicted for years but bore his afflictions with becoming Christian resignation.

This conference desires in some measure at least to express its appreciation of the worth of these loyal and faithful members.

Resolved, 1st, that in the death of these brethren the church, the Sunday school, the community and their families have sustained a great loss.

Resolved, 2nd, that a copy of these resolutions be recorded in the minutes of the quarterly conference; that a copy be published in the church paper and that a copy be sent to their families.

G. F. Robinson,
H. E. Vassar,
T. F. McCulloch, Committee.

Brown.

Sister Ada, the wife of the late Dr. Falkin Brown, of Vaughn, N. C., passed from earth to her reward on April 20th. She had been in failing health since the death of her husband three years ago.

She was born in New York State, and came to Warren county with her parents at the age of twelve years. She was married to Dr. Falkin Brown, a member of one of Warren county's most prominent families, at eighteen years of age. To this union ten children were born, seven boys and three girls, all of whom are living. She lived to see the most of her children grown.

Sister Brown leaves a mother, two sisters, two brothers, to mourn their loss. Bro. George O. Rightmyre, a faithful member of our Littleton church, is her youngest brother.

She had been a faithful member of the Methodist Protestant Church at Vaughn for about sixteen years. The leading characteristics of her life, self-sacrifice and devotion.

It was said by those that knew her best —"She was a faithful wife, affectionate mother, devoted child and consecrated Christian."

To those who are heavy-hearted because of this dispensation of divine providence, I would say, "There has never been a cloud so dark, but that it had a silver lining." Look to mother's, sister's and daughter's God who is able to comfort you in this dark and trying hour.

She was laid to rest from the Methodist Protestant Church in Vaughan's Cemetery on April 22, witnessed by a large number of friends and relatives.

Charles J. Edwards, Pastor.

April 30th, death took from Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Yow their precious darling Woodrow, aged one year, seven months and 25 days. He was a bright little boy, the sunshine of the home. The funeral was conducted at the home May 1st by E. F. Cagle after which the little body was carried to the cemetery at Pleasant Hill. He was sick only a short time.

Your darling is now safe in the arms of Jesus. Try to live so that when death comes you can meet little Woodrow and other loved ones on the other shore where there will be no more parting.

Dora Beane.

Seagrove, N. C., R. D. 1.

INGERSOLL'S DENUNCIATION OF ALCOHOL.

In a speech delivered before a jury in a liquor case the late Robert G. Ingersoll said:

I am aware that there is a prejudice against any man who manufactures alcohol. I believe that from the time it issues from the coiled and poisonous worms in the distillery until it empties into the jaws of death, dishonor and crime, it demoralizes everybody that touches it, from its source to where it ends. I do not believe anybody can contemplate the object without being prejudiced against the liquor crime.

All we have to do, gentlemen, is to think of the wrecks on either bank of the stream of death, of the suicides, of the insanity, of the ignorance, of the destitution, of the little children tugging at the faded and withered breast of weeping and despairing mothers, of wives asking for bread, of the men of genius it has wrecked, the men struggling with imaginary serpents, produced by this devilish thing; and when you think of the jails, of the almshouses, of the asylums, of the prisons, of the scaffolds upon either bank, I do not wonder that every thoughtful man is prejudiced against this damned stuff called alcohol. Intemperance cuts down youth in its vigor, manhood in its strength, old age in its weakness. It breaks the father's heart, bereaves the doting mother, extinguishes natural affection, erases conjugal love, blots out filial attachment, blights parental hopes, brings down mourning age in sorrow to the grave. It produces weakness, not life. It makes wives widows; children orphans; fathers fiends, and all of them paupers and beggars. It feeds rheumatism, invites cholera, imports pestilence and embraces consumption. It covers the land with idleness, misery, crime. It fills your jails, supplies your almshouses and demands your asylums. It engenders controversies, fosters quarrels and cherishes riots.

It crowds your penitentiaries and furnishes victims for your scaffold. It is the life blood of the gambler, the element of the burglar, the prop of the highwayman and support of the midnight incendiary. It countenances the liar, respects the thief, esteems the blasphemer. It violates obligation, reverences fraud and honors infamy. It defames benevolence, hates love, scorns virtue and slanders innocence. It incites the father to butcher his helpless offspring, helps the husband to massacre his wife and the child to grind the patricidal ax. It burns up men, consumes women, detests life, curses God, despises heaven. It suborns witnesses, nurses perjury, defiles the jury box and stains judicial ermine. It degrades the citizen, debases the legislator, dishonors the statesman and disarms the patriot. It brings shame, not honor; misery, not safety; despair, not hope; misery, not happiness, and with the malevolence of a fiend it calmly surveys its frightful desolation and unsatiated havoc. It poisons felicity, kills peace, ruins morals, blights confidence, slays reputations, and wipes out national honor, then curses the world and laughs at its ruin. It does all that and more. It murders the soul. It is the sum of all villainies, the father of all crimes, the mother of all abominations, the devil's best friend and God's worst enemy.

TOWER OF SILOAM FOUND?

News of the finding of the foundations of the Tower of Siloam was received by the Rev. Doctor Keller of the Episcopal Theological School from a friend in Jerusalem Friday. This tower is mentioned in Luke 13:4:

"Those eighteen upon whom the tower in Siloam fell and slew them, think ye that they were sinners above all men that dwell in Jerusalem?"

The excavators, according to the message, "have discovered a long, well cut Greek inscription which speaks of tthe presbyters and fathers with Simonides laying the foundation of the synagogue and the baths. These baths and the foundations of the synagogue are exposed. They have found the base of a circular building, the Tower of Siloam. They have found also a conduit leading from the spring. The conduit seen by Schinck in the '90s, wrongly believed to have been the oldest, is now shown to be above the spring."—Daily paper.

—Articles of clothing from wood fiber are being made in Europe. The material for a suit costs about fifty cents. Clothing made of this material, however, cannot be washed.

ROVER.

Rover is a big black Newfoundland dog, and he told us the other day which of four boys stoned him.

"Dogs can't talk," I think I hear you say. Can't they? The next time you see a dog, watch his tail and his ears and his eyes, and I am sure you will know just what the fellow thinks.

Why, our little dog Pink runs out on the porch every night at train time to watch for her master, who comes on the cars. The moment he is in sight, and long before I can see him, Pink tells me he is coming. How does she do it? She wags her bushy white tail with all her might and main. But Pink isn't Rover.

Rover lives in New Jersey. He is a very kind dog, and never runs at people passing on the road. But unkind boys often stone him, and he does not forget those who treat him badly.

His master's house stands near the public road, and in the front yard there is a well of pure, cool water. The kind master keeps a cup at the well that thirsty travelers may help themselves. Rover generally lies under the front porch, but he never offers to touch the tramps who come to the well.

I sat on the porch the other day when four boys came into the yard to get some water. They were all strangers. Rover walked out from under the porch and sat down by the well. I was afraid he was going to be rude and bark, but he seemed to be pleased with the visitors.

One boy drank, then the second, and the third. Roger wagged his tail and looked so kindly at them that I thought: "What a polite dog you are! You treat guests as handsomely as your friends."

Just then the fourth boy put out his hand to take the cup, when Roger gave a savage bark, which frightened the boy so that he screamed and took to his heels. Rover followed him some way down the road, dismissed him with a parting bark, and then came slowly home, wagging his tail, as much as to say, "That's pretty well done. I think that boy won't bother me any more."

I haven't seen the boy since, but he was badly frightened, and I think he will be very careful how he stones any other dogs. —The Nursery.

The Period Defined.

"What is a period?" asked the teacher.

"Please, I know!" said May.

"It is the little dot behind the end of what you say."—Little Folks.

—Three sons of Rev. G. W. Holmes are to be graduated from the State University this year.

THE CREAM-CANDY DOG.

Norris West and his sister Daisy were in the kitchen all by themselves making cream candy. Two-year-old Flora was there also, tindering as much as she could.

"Here's that dog again," observed Daisy. "That's the third time this morning. It's no use trying to shoo him away. I think he's hungry, Norris."

"You mustn't feed him," warned Norris, "you'll never get rid of him again if you do. He belongs to that family that have just moved into the old house down by the mill-pond. I think they're trying to starve him out, because they don't want him."

"I'll give him a ball of candy," laughed Daisy, rolling up the sticky piece she had been pulling "I heard of some one who gave a dog warm molasses candy, and it stuck his jaws together so that he had a dreadful time—and he was so offended that he ran away and never came back."

She stuck the ball of warm candy on a fork and held it out to the dog. He took it politely, with a droll expression that sent the children into fits of laughter. Next minute his jaws were stuck so firmly in the candy that he could neither open nor shut his mouth, and he made a piteous face as he struggled with the warm mouthful. He looked so funny that Norris rolled on the floor to laugh, but after awhile the poor creature's distress was too much for the boy's feelings.

"Come here, old chap," said Norris, sitting up on the rug. "Don't be discouraged, I'll help you out. There now, feel better?"

He helped the dog to get rid of the sticky mass and brought him a drink of water, after which the animal retired under the table with a reproachful look.

"There, now, we've hurt his feelings, and I shall just have to get him a doughnut to comfort him," declared Daisy, going into the pantry.

"Get him some biscuit, too," called Norris. "If we're going to begin feeding him, we might as well make a good job of it."

Daisy brought the food, and they stood watching the dog eat.

"He's starving," said Daisy, repentantly, "and look how thankful he is," as the hungry creature stopped in the middle of a biscuit to lick her hand. "I don't believe they're good to him down there, he's so pleased to make friends."

They were beginning to like the cream-candy dog, as Daisy called him. Even Flora came and danced around him, and buried her small hands fearlessly in his black curls.

"Say, I believe mother would let us keep him if we asked her," said Norris, suddenly. "He may not be worth much, but he's such a good-natured old fellow I'd like to have him."

"He doesn't mean to go away again, so we might as well ask her," added Daisy, as the dog stretched himself on the rug beside Flora, who had returned to her building blocks. "But she's down in the village taking care of the woman that broke her arm, and she won't be home till night. It isn't far, Norris. Couldn't we run down and ask her now?" Daisy was one who was never willing to wait for what she wanted.

"Flora couldn't walk so far, but of course she wouldn't come to any harm in just that little while. Come on, we'll be as quick as we can."

They were so excited over the idea of owning the cream-candy dog that they forgot to shut the door of the kitchen where the baby was building her house, with the new friend on guard beside her. Having got their mother's consent, they had to rush down to the old house by the mill-pond to ask the dog's owners. As Norris had guessed, they were only too glad to get rid of him, and the brother and sister started home well satisfied.

They were a little startled when they came to the open kitchen door and found that both Flora and the dog were gone.

"She must be somewhere near," said Norris. "Look, here's her track in the wet grass. She went off and the dog followed her."

They began to walk faster when they found that the trail led to the mill-pond. Flora was afraid of nothing, and the pond was deep, with low level banks.

As they came near they heard, from behind a thick clump of bushes, the anxious whimpering of a dog. They ran at full speed down an unused path to the water's edge, and then they saw what was going on.

Flora had started to walk out on the timbers of the old dam. They still rested on the shore, but they were broken short off just above the deep water in the middle of the pond. The dog had plunged in and clambered up on the timbers in front of the child. She was trying to pass him in order to walk out further on her dangerous way, but he had stationed himself across her path, and, though she was scolding and pushing him with all the might of her small hands, he would not move.

With a bound Norris caught the child from her dangerous position, and stood looking at the dog as he frisked joyfully about them.

"I guess Hero would be a better name for him than 'the cream-candy dog,'" said the boy.—Mabel S. Merrill in Zion's Herald.

Address of Welcome to the Executive Board of the W. F. M. S.

(By Mrs. W. K. Hartsell.)

As I rise to greet this highly intelligent audience, gathered from out of the noblest and best in the Kingdom of God in the Methodist Protestant Church, I am reminded of a little story which the great humorist, Mark Twain, once told on himself:

"On a certain occasion, early in his career, he learned that he was to be introduced to the then President of the United States. Accordingly he very carefully prepared a pretty little speech which he intended to deliver on that auspicious occasion, but to his great mortification and disgust, when he found himself confronted by the vast dignity and authority of this great man of affairs, his little speech vanished like the fading hues of the rainbow at sunset, and he was only able to say, "Good morning, Mr. President. I feel very much embarrassed, sir: how do you feel?"

You may draw the analogy for yourself. While there are many points of difference, I want you to bear in mind this one in particular: (holding up the manuscript) I do not propose to be humiliated and mortified as was Mark Twain.

I am sure you will pardon my changing one word in that familiar little verse of the dear old Scottish poet, Burns. It expresses somewhat what I have to say to you to-day.

"I lang ha' tho't my noble friends
O' something to ha' sent you,
And tho' it serve no ither end,
Than just a kind memento.
I dinna how my theme may gang,
Let time and chance determine.
Perhaps it may turn out a sang,
Perhaps turn out a sermon."

It is both a song and a sermon that I bring you all this morning. To our own coworkers in the Old North State do I offer the song of congratulation that this great opportunity and inspirational joy has come to you. The sermon I merely suggest to you. As our work progresses, listen closely and you will hear a clear, but still small voice in your heart whisper "Opportunity"—suggesting as it does its sterner note, duty. To our most distant friends and sisters in a common cause, do I bring the glad song of welcome. In behalf of our local auxiliary do I extend a most cordial welcome to our Executive Board, representing as it does the North, the South, the East, and the West, and uniting them in a noble cause. We extend to you a cordial southern welcome, and what more can we say? It means a welcome from a people that has always said to the stranger, "The latch-string is on the outside," whether it be on a worn and unsteady door, swinging to and fro, or whether it be a beautiful knocker or bell on the door of a handsome home, the cordiality of the southern welcome is just the same. And I believe, my friends and sisters, that the southern welcome is the best welcome in the world. We extend it to you to-day.

Most of you, no doubt, remember that old mixed dialogue and song called the "Arkansas Traveler." You remember that when the native discovered his visitor's musical skill his enthusiasm and hospitality burst beyond all bounds as he said, "Git down, stranger, and come in. Boy, take the stranger's hoss and put him in the corn house and stop the door with a stack of fodder. Come right in, stranger, and set down. Take a cheer—two cheers. Pull up to the table and pour out your coffee in two cups, sweeten it twice and stir it with two spoons."

That is the way we feel toward you to-day, and the paralleel is complete, too.

The Arkansas native's unbounded welcome grew out of the discovery that there was a sympathetic knowledge between them that brought them closer together. So our joy in having you arises from a similar impulse. You are our invited guests, and we would welcome and honor you for that alone, but deep down in our hearts, above the realm of subconscious thought, is the realization of a better reason, a stronger tie—you are here on "The King's business,"—your King and our King. For that you are thrice welcome. In the name of our Greensboro auxiliary do we extend to you a glad, Christian, southern welcome.

—Rome, March 15th.—(Special.)—The Duke of the Abruzzi has reported to the ministry of the navy at Rome that excellent results were obtained by William Marconi last week in his experiments on board the battleship Regina Elena with a new radio-telephonic apparatus. Communication was had with ships nearly forty-five miles away, and with ships thirteen miles away with land between the communicating vessels. Telephonic connection continued uninterruptedly between the ships for twelve hours, according to the report.

HOW HE FOUND CONTENTMENT.

Two souls started, each a contented heart to find,
And store there ease within the mind;
One, with luring thoughts of self,
Sought only this earthly gain of wealth.
From early dawn till late at night,
With might and main he labored right;
And many a sleepless hour he'd lain,
All for a hoarding wealth to gain.
A hoary head, a feeble hand,
A tottering step, owner of much land;
His greedy heart all filled with fear,
We find him,—with contentment never near.
The other one we find was wise;
No lure in wealth for his eyes;
Denying self, with a heart of love,
Sought he only for the riches above.
His duty to God he never neglected,
All for others his heart rehected.
By faith he lived in the word of light,
Through trust he soared and gained his might.
Every day found he joy with every need supplied;
For every precious longing his heart made satisfied.
He found contentment—the only one true way to live,
And far more than anything the world can give.

Gertrude Hanlin.

Portland, Ind.

—The Central Baptist Church here in Little Rock has expelled from its membership all members who signed the liquor petition. They seem not to have given any chance for acknowledgments. If there ever was a reason for summary dismission this is the time such a thing would have been justifiable. It would be a good lesson for the future. Yet knowing the craft of the agents of evil we are inclined to think that each case should be considered by itself; ant the more prominent the member, and the more wilful the act the more swift should be the exclusion and the less inclined a church should be to receive acknowledgments. "If the right eye offend thee, pluck it out." This is no time for temporizing and even the devil is watching to see what is going to be done in all our churches.—Baptist Advance.

—Ex-Pres. Roosevelt was in Washington on Tuesday and called on President Wilson. They did not discuss politics.

—William Johnson, aged 15, of Elizabeth City, died from peritonitis caused by eating peanuts, it is said.

WEST DORMITORY
ADMINISTRATION BUILDING
Elon College Campus View, Looking North-East From the Depot.
EAST DORMITORY
The New 52x100 Men's Gymnasium, the Gift of the Alumni Association
The Administration Building, Looking North West, Showing the West Dormitory in the Distance
West Dormitory. View, Showing Rear Porch and Annex Containing College Dining Hall, Women's Gymnasium and Art Studio

Elon College

For Both Men and Women

Elon College, North Carolina

For a quarter century Elon College has rendered the best families of the South a paragon service in providing young men and young women with the best mental, moral and physical training under positive Christian influences, tho entirely free from sectarianism.

Karl Lehman, of Boston, testifies that "of all the Colleges I have visited as International Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor during six years, the spirit of Elon College appeals to me as most genuinelu Christian." Elon College is situated in the delightful hill country, a section unsurpassed for beauty, with a climate far-famed for its healthfulness. There is no medical fee, for there is no necessity for it. Its campus, comprising twenty-five acres of native oak and hickory, shrubbery, winding walks and driveways, is one of the most beautiful in the South and, with its two unsurpassed gymnasia, provides abundant opportunity for recreation and relaxation.

The splendid equipment of Elon College was only made possible through liberal endowment. It maintains seven elegant new buildings, especially designed and appointed for college work. These are furnished with every known convenience; steam heat, electric lights, running water, baths and sewerage. The College plant is conservatively valued at $300,000.00.

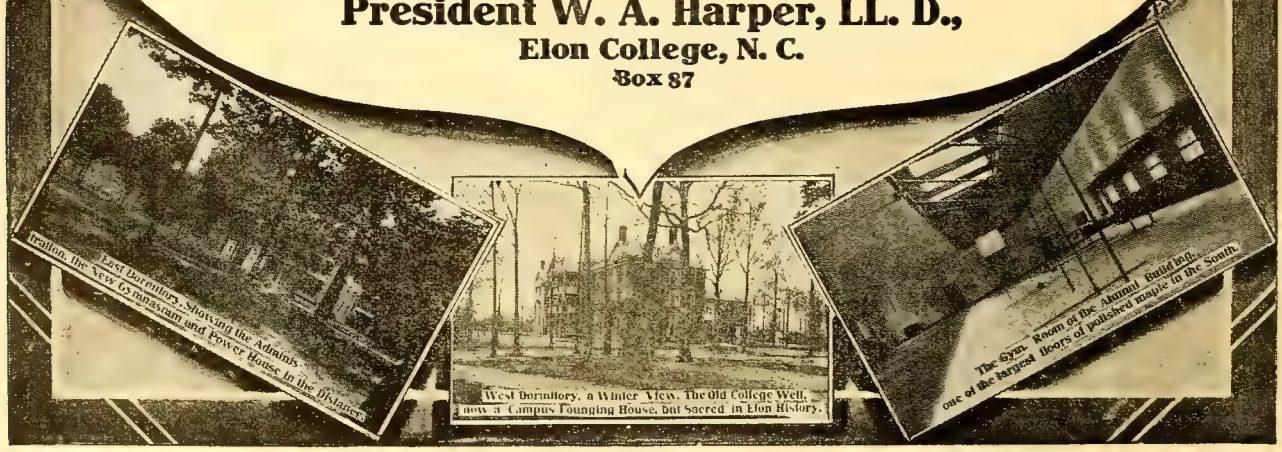
Elon College is distinctly a high-grade institution, though its charges are moderate. Its graduates are admitted to the graduate departments of all the great universities without examination. Its literary and scientific courses are arranged in various departments which lead to the degrees of Master of Arts, Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Philosophy, Bachelor of Pedagogy, and a three-years' course leading to the degree of Licentiate of Instruction, designed especially for teachers. This institution affords special opportunities for training in Piano, Voice, Expression, Fine Arts, Normal Training, Physical Culture and Commercial Practice.

The Faculty consists of twenty-one specialists; men and women selected not only for their superior teaching ability, but also for their exemplary character and manners.

The student body numbers nearly four hundred and comes from thirteen states.

The lowest Rates in the South, only $131 to $191 per College session of ten months. Fall Term always opens the first Wednesday in September. For full descriptive catalogue and view-book, address

President W. A. Harper, LL. D.,
Elon College, N. C.
Box 87



West Dormitory, Showing the Administration, the New Gymnasium and Power House in the Distance
West Dormitory, a Winter View. The Old College Well, now a Campus Lounging House, but Sacred in Elon History.
The Gym. Room of the Alumni Building, one of the largest floors of polished maple in the South.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SCHEDULE.

Greensboro, N. C.

N. B.—Following schedule figures published only as information and are not guaranteed.

1.00 A. M.—No. 29 daily, Birmingham Special, through Pullman sleeping and observation cars New York to Birmingham and Richmond to Birmingham. Luring car service.

12.48 A. M.—No. 32 daily, Southern's Limited, Pullman sleeping cars from Jacksonville, Augusta and Aikin to New York. Dining car service.

12.55 a. m.—No. 112 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Pullman sleeping car from Winston-Salem to Raleigh open at 9.15 p. m.

[illegible] daily, Birmingham special. Pullman sleeping and observation cars from Birmingham and Asheville to New York and Birmingham to Richmond. Dining car service.

2.25 a. m.—No. 31, the Southern's Southeastern Limited, Pullman sleeping cars from New York to Asheville. Day coaches. Dining car service.

3.45 a. m.—No. 45 daily local for Charlotte, connecting for Atlanta and points South.

7.10 a m.—No. 8, daily local for Richmond, connecting at Danville with Norfolk train.

7.20 a. m.—No. 37 daily, New York, Atlanta and New Orleans Limited Pullman drawing room, sleeping cars and club and observation cars New York to new Orleans. Pullman sleeping car New York to Asheville, Charlotte and Macon. Pullman chair car Greensboro to Montgomery, solid Pullman train. Dining car service.

7:30 a. m.—No. 108 daily local Greensboro to Goldsboro.

7.35 a. m.—No. 11, daily local through to Atlanta, sleeping car from Richmond to Charlotte and Norfolk to Asheville.

7:45 a. m.—No. 154 daily except Sunday for Ramseur.

8.15 a. m.—No. 237 daily for Winston-Salem and North Wilkesboro. Pullman sleeping car Raleigh to Winston-Salem.

9.30 a. m.—No. 44 daily for Washington and points North.

9.40 a. m.—No. 144 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro; handles Atlanta Raleigh sleeping car.

12.30 p. m.—No. 21 daily for Asheville, Waynesville and local points; handles coaches and chair car through to Asheville and Waynesville.

12.50 p. m.—No. 130 daily for Sanford, Fayetteville and Wilmington.

12 30 p. m.—No 21 daily for Asheville,

12.55 p. m.—No. 7 daily for Charlotte and points south.

1.40 p. m.—No. 36 daily U. S. Fast Mail for Washington, New York and points north; handles Pullman sleeping cars from Birmingham and New Orleans to New York and Pullman sleeping car Asheville to Richmond Pullman chair car Greenville, S. C., to Washington. Day coaches. Dining car service.

2.20 p. m.—No. 207 daily for Winston-Salem, and daily execept Sunday for North Wilkesboro.

2.30 p. m.—No. 151 daily except Sunday for Madison.

3:30 p. m.—No. 230 daily except Sunday for Ramseur.

2.30 p. m.—No. 132 daily for Sanford.

4.20 p. m.—No. 22 daily for Raleigh and Goldsboro. Handles chair car to Goldsboro.

6.10 p m.—No. 35 daily U. S. Fast Mail for

4.55 p. m.—No. 131 daily for Mt. Airy.

Atlanta and points south Pullman sleeping cars New York to New Orleans and Birmingham and sleeping car Richmond to Asheville which car can be occupied until 7 a. m. Pullman chair car Washington to Greenville, S. C. Day coaches. Dining car service.

6.35 p. m.—No. 235 daily for Winston-salem.

7.30 p. m.—No. 43 daily for Atlanta Sleeping car and coaches to Atlanta.

